It was a very great pleasure to me to be present during this meeting. It was a gracious revival indeed. Many hearts were made glad, and rarely, if ever, have I seen people more anxious to testify for the Lord than these were at Lowell. Our people have a good prospect for a love Church and one of the best Woman's Missionary Societies in the South. We hope some day in the near future to have a nice, comfortable house of worship here.

Our joint Home Mission Board is seriously considering purchasing a tent for revival work. I believe this would be a solution for many of our problems. I find a spirit of willingness among our people that is really commendable and loyal. Our people, many of them, are anxious for us to go forward; but many are hindered by the financial conditions that prevail here in the South. We are facing in this section of our Southland a serious condition, and everything seems to have its influence on the Church.

I am more and more convinced that if we would honor our Lord with our "substance," other matters would adjust themselves; but unless we should see fit to do so, we must abide the consequences. May the Lord help us to see ourselves.

YOUNG PEOPLE IN CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

Religious, or Christian, education is coming to have an increasingly important place in the program of the Church. Of late, religious leaders have made a careful study of the basic principles of Christian education. The definition prepared by the Jerusalem meeting of the International Missionary Council and adopted, with slight additions, by the International Council of Religious Education is the one which we hold as commonly acceptable. This statement reads as follows:

"Religious education in the Christian sense includes all efforts and processes which help to bring children, young people, and adults into a vital and saving experience of God revealed in Christ; to quicken the sense of God as a living reality, so that communion with Him in prayer and worship becomes a natural habit and principle of life; to enable them to interpret the meaning of their growing experience of life in the light of ultimate values; to develop a deepening fellowship with Christ which will find expression in attitudes and habits of Christ-like living in common life and in all human relations; and to enlarge and deepen the understanding of the historic facts on which Christianity rests and of the rich content of Christian experience, belief, and doctrine."

The Protestant denominations of North America, recognizing their responsibility to create the educational standards and programs, each for its own communion, welcome the co-operation of all interdenominational organizations and all other agencies functioning interdenominationally in the task of working out a comprehensive, full-rounded program of Christian education. In the building of a comprehensive, integrated and coherent program of Christian education for the youth of the Church, the type of training afforded by the young people's society must be recognized as an integral part of a total youth curriculum of religious education.

It is our conviction that in the successful working out of the program of Christian education in an individual Church, the type of work usually done by a young people's society has a definite place, namely: to share in achieving the following functions:

To challenge young people to allegiance to Jesus Christ and to the expression of personal Christian convictions and ideals.

To afford opportunities to consider together the problems of youth, to discover the Christian truths applying to these problems, and to practice with the helpful co-operation of fellow-members, the Christian way of living.

To enable young people to participate in the preparation and conduct of worship services.

To develop leadership through training by doing, thus preparing for future service in larger responsibilities in the Church and other fields.

To provide opportunities for young people to develop and express their own creative powers in program building.

Starting some fifty years ago (1881) and continuing for many years, the only organization of this type was Christian Endeavor. In some denominations similar organizations have come into existence, such as Epworth League, the Luther League, etc. Christian Endeavor has continued, however, as the one society working among young people of many communions, and today is recognized as having the largest number of local units and members of any organization in this field. With its growth have arisen problems regarding relationship with denominations and relationships within the individual Churches. These problems actually open larger opportunities for service, provided the solution to them is sought sympathetically and co-operatively. Here again certain basic principles need to be stated, a few of which follow.

Where there is a young people's society in any Church, its program should be an integral part of the total program of religious education for young people in that Church. Relationships with other organizations within the Church and necessary supervision may be secured through the educational committee of the Church. This committee should have certain members designated whose special responsibilities will be in the young people's field. On this committee should be a fair proportion of young people or their adult advisers, who should share in the building and supervision of the program.

It is further recognized that in the society type of work due recognition should be given to the differing needs and abilities of boys and girls, young people, and adults of different ages. Until better age groupings are discovered, the grading as adopted by the evangelical Churches participating in the International Council of Religious Education and by the International Society of Christian Endeavor is recognized as standard. This grading is based mainly on the physical and mental development of the individual. Wherever adaptations of the standard grading are necessary, the same adaptations should be made for all the organizations involved.

The Christian Endeavor type of organization adapted to the needs of the local Church is unusually well fitted to serve in helping to meet the religious needs of youth. The first society came into being because an observant and resourceful pastor understood the needs of his young people and devised a way to meet those needs through the activities of the young people themselves as they worked for Christ, the Church and other young people. The absence of theological partisanship in Christian Endeavor has made it possible for any Church of any communion to use the name and the plans of the organization. Furthermore, the authority and responsibility of the individual Church in the matter of organization, program, and leadership have always been recognized by Christian Endeavor. The same authority and responsibilit yare also accorded to denominational leadership with reference to recommendations to Churches within the various communions.

Christian Endeavor emphasizes loyalty to Christ and the Church, particularly to the local Church of which the society is a part. This pledged loyalty is to be expressed through the practice of personal devotions, participation in society and Church activities, and through consistent and aggressive Christian living. In the interest of conserving the educational values expressed in the basic principles of Christian Education as defined in the Jerusalem meeting of the International Missionary Council, the fundamental plans, purposes and programs of all agencies of religious education should be constantly re-studied and re-evaluated.

"One of the values of Christian Endeavor is the opportunity it affords for interdenominational and world fellowship. The encouragement found in working with larger groups, the success which accompanies united effort, and the sense of oneness which comes when serving and working with young people of all races and all nationalities are assets which must be recognized for their great worth."

Christian Endeavor has many characteristics which make it an organization peculiarly fitted for use by Churches in meeting the religious needs and in ministering to the spiritual development of the young people. It is an organization committed to the service of youth. As such, the society must always keep paramount the accomplishments of its distinctive phase of the educational program, and the organizational set-up must be considered primarily as a means to the achievement of these goals of Christian education.

GOD'S GIFT IS LIFE.

Easter morning in Jerusalem! Not amid the strident throngs of Oriental worshipers about the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, nor moving along the narrow, cobbled streets toward lesser shrines, but on Mount Olivet!

The city lay at my feet. With a single glance I could gather points as widely separated as the green hill near Gordon's Calvary outside the city walls, the Temple area, and the Kidron Valley below the craggy site of the ancient city of David. Christ must frequently have seen the city from this angle. I had risen early to be alone at dawn in the open as was His wont. I wanted to try to think some of His thoughts after Him, to let His spirit completely possess me, to catch the thrill of the first Easter morning when broke the great news about Him.

The immediate background of my experience at the time was the sessions of committee and council in which that great statement of "The Christian Message" had been born. "Our message is Jesus Christ. He is the revelation of what God is and of what man may ultimately become. In His life and through His death and resurrection, He has disclosed to us the Father, the Supreme Reality, as almighty love, reconciling the world to Himself by the cross, suffering with men in their struggle against sin and evil, bearing with them and for them the burden of sin, forgiving them as they, with forgiveness in their own hearts, turn to Him in repentance and faith, and creating humanity anew for an ever-growing, ever-enlarging, everlasting life."

"Creating humanity anew!" This really is good news. And it is good news because it is true. And it is as good news today as it was nineteen hundred years ago. God's gift is life. Life is God's gift. God is the giver. What He gives is in reality a gift. It cannot be earned or merited. It is a gift. We must not let words get in the way of our thinking. We must not stumble over phrases. We are challenged to understand with the eyes of our hearts as well as with the eyes of our minds that God's gift is life, life abundant. The Easter morn could bring us no greater blessing. It should bring us no lesser. "In Him was life."

With such thoughts as these stirring in my mind as I sat on that Olivet hillside overlooking Jerusalem, I began to turn the pages of my New Testament. Each page seemed to glow with new meaning. I seemed to have found the key to its innermost heart. Not only familiar passages like John 3:16: "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life"; and Romans 6:23: "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord"; but obscure verses like 2 Peter 1:3: "His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life"; and Romans 8:21: "The creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God"—seemed each to be a note in the harmony of the gospl symphony. More than that—the whole course of the history of Israel, with the coming of Jesus in the fullness of time, fell into a new perspective as I thought of it in the light of the message of Easter morning. Cut where I chose into the story told by the Old and New Testament, there flowed out like blood from a severed artery the message that God's gift is life. The risen Christ gathers up into His personality the fullness of God's gift of life to me and to all men.

Yes, to all men! I fell to thinking of the meaning of Calvary and Olivet to the missionary movement of the present day. God's gift of life is to all men. I began to mention slowly, aloud to myself, the names of some of the delegation to that

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A DAILY PRAYER.

JULY.

Father, Creator, we thank Thee that, in the capacity and aspiration of humankind, it is innate to learn. Both prophecy and promise decreeing "all shall be taught of God," we deplore prevailing spiritual ignorance and acknowledge its scope as within our own election. Turn us, O God, and give to Thy Church open ears and awakening minds, willing to study to show ourselves approved. In instruction of youth, give, we pray, to leaders and teachers the tongue of them that truly are taught of Thee, that each may know how to speak the word in season. Make us workers unashamed. In Jesus' name. Amen.

MISSION PERSONNEL.

While the number of new missionaries sailing in 1929 was a 24 per cent increase over that for 1928, and 48 per cent over the number for 1927 (a trend in the right direction), this gain does not offset the yearly loss due to retirement, ill health or death. It is estimated that the mission boards of North America need to send out approximately 1,000 new missionaries annually to maintain the present staffs.

Thirty per cent of the number sailing in 1929 are men, 18 per cent are married women, and 52 per cent are single women. Sixteen per cent completed seminary training, 10 per cent were physicians and surgeons, and 9 per cent nurses. Nineteen per cent are going out from Bible or missionary training schools, some of these are also college or university graduates, and 46 per cent have had college or university training, plus some experience. Only 7 per cent went to the field under a short-term appointment. It is interesting to note that the average age of these new missionaries is a little over twenty-eight years, actually four-tenths of a year older than the average of those sailing in 1928, revealing that the boards, for the most part, are accepting those with more training and experience.—Missionary Review.

LINKS WITH LIVINGSTONE.

Matthew Wellington, one of the faithful band who embalmed Livingstone's body and carried it to the coast to lie at rest among the great missionary's own people, was found to be living in poverty in Mombasa, an old man of 85 years. Although appeals from many quarters were made to the government of Kenya Colony, they failed to secure a pension for the aged servant, who was formerly foreman in the public works department of that colony. A general appeal was therefore issued in behalf of this loyal man, and his old age has been amply provided for.

Lazarus Raikane, a native of Africa, 104 years old, has been discovered living in the Transvaal. When he was fifteen years old, Livingstone engaged him as a herd boy, and later made him his personal servant. As such, he was with Livingstone when he discovered Victoria Falls, and he tells how the latter fell on his knees and prayed. —Missionary Review of the World.

LEADERSHIP THROUGH SERVICE.

I would like to see the missionary societies of America and England send to India a type of mind that is capable of being modified on the field. In Moffatt's translation of the epistles, St. Paul writes to his converts: "Don't be called fathers. Don't be called teachers—I know, and you don't. Don't be called leaders—I lead, and you follow—but set out to be called servants. That is the only attitude I can trust you with. The other attitudes work out in a non-Christian way."

If you train up young people to be leaders, and half a dozen come together, you get a series of clashes. It is only through service that we gain leadership. You cannot train people to be leaders. You can only train people to be servants. Leadership is a by-product; and renunciation is the path by which true leadership can be reached. If men come out to India self-renounced, ready to lose themselves so as to find themselves, they will become leaders. The day of the master in the East is gone, the day of the servant is just dawning.—Stanley Jones, in Missionary Review.

Missionary Programs for July.

Woman's Society.

Theme: "Peace."

(Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus. For one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren.)

Song.

Prayer.

Business.

Devotional period: Isa. 60:17, 18; Rom. 13: 1, 7; Rom. 12:9; Matt. 22:37-39; Zech. 8:16; Isa. 58:6; Eph. 6:13-18.

Heart-to-heart message.

"Progress Toward World Peace" (in Herald of Gospel Liberty).

"General Pact for the Renunciation of War."

A soliloquy: "Books, Books, Books."

Flag salute: Fourth verse of "America."

Missionary Society Suggestions.

Do not forget to take the offering for the literature fund. And, remember also that the Woman's Missionary Board is asking for at least 10 cents per member from your society. It is the literature fund that provides the free literature for you.

Stress the devotional period with earnest prayers for peace.

The heart-to-heart message will be sent to you in time for your meeting if you have the envelope of helps.

Assign the number "Progress Toward World Peace" to some one who will study the recent papers and magazines to gather the facts of interest on the subject and present them in an interesting way on your program.

A copy of the peace pact is found in the envelope of helps. This may be read and after the reading have some one tell how women can work for peace.

A copy of "A Soliloquay" is in the envelope of helps (other copies can be had at 3 cents per copy). This should be given by three younger women, and by careful thought and preparation can be made very effective and helpful.

Young People's Society.

The Christian Churches of Other Lands.

Purpose: To study the Christian Churches of other lands, to discover their extent and nature, and to learn from them.

1. Hymn: "The Whole Wide World for Jesus."
2. Psalm 100.
3. "Where Are Our Churches?"
4. "Building an Indigenous Church."
5. Debate, or open discussion.
6. "Learning From Other Lands."
7. Special music (if possible, number written by one of another land).
8. Report of the project committee.
9. Hymn: "The Church's One Foundation."

Poem: "I am the Church."

Prayer (for the Church at home, for the Church of the world).

Hymn: "Faith of Our Fathers."

Suggestions.

Poster: Prepare an outline map of the world, with lines drawn from your Church to Dayton, our national Church headquarters, and then from Dayton to all countries where the Congregational and the Christian Churches are now at work (as indicated in leaflet you may secure from our Foreign Mission Department). Below the map place the words, "Building the Church in All the World," with place, date and hour.

3. Secure information from the Foreign Mission Department concerning the enlarged overseas service which we hope to be rendering by this time, and with the map prepared for the poster locate world fields.

4. See Chapter X, Y. and W. O., pages 49, 50. Appoint some one to present facts here, and anything else available regarding the building of an indigenous Church, where the people of the land are leaders. "The Christ of the Indian Road" and "The Christ of the Round-Table," by Stanley Jones, will give suggestive material.

5. Question for debate or discussion suggested in questions on page 48, Y. and W. O., especially 1 and 2.

6. Ask one member to come ready to discuss this theme. Stress lessons regarding Christian unity which Churches of other lands teach us.

7. Include in report any facts regarding Christian or Congregational Churches in foreign lands which can be found.

Junior or Willing Workers' Society.

Theme: "Good Citizenship."

Song: "When Morning Gilds the Skies."

Call to worship (same as last month).

Offering. Vary by letting the children march forward by rows and drop their offering into basket. Then all stand while short prayer is made.

Talk on what it means to be a good citizen. Let the children suggest rules which a good citizen will keep. Write these on a blackboard. Let the children put them in their notebooks. Lead the discussion to show how ministers and missionaries aid people to be good citizens; ministers by helping us to find right laws here, missionaries by carrying the laws to other countries.

Begin a summer-time project. The boys may make the box which will carry the gifts you plan to make, or earn money to buy materials, etc. The girls will like to make little garments to send to Porto Rico. Co-operate with your vacation Bible school in doing this as a part of their handwork. If your treasure chest is not complete, this will be a splendid project. Write for full information if you have not already secured it.

Close with flag salutes.

American Flag salute: "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and the republic for which it stands; one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Sing first verse of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

Christian flag salute: "I pledge allegiance to the Christian flag, and to the Saviour for whose kingdom it stands, one brotherhood, uniting all mankind in service and love."

Sing first verse of "Fling Out the Banner."

Cross flags, Christian flag uppermost. Sing as a prayer with bowed heads, the last verse of "America."

LET'S BUY THE POST'S EDITOR A MOSQUITO NET.

"To Mr. Lorimer nothing alien is ever quite human. He wants all aliens finger-printed, all foreign ideas suspiciously registered, a high tariff not only on goods, but on culture. . . . He suffers a good deal from the parochialism of all the adjusted apologists for an arrogant culture. His gifts are narrower, tougher, and a good deal more telling. He always knows what he wants. He wants nothing beyond the knowledge he cares for. Except for his anti-intellectualism, he is emotionally and rationally at one and co-educated, and he carries his experience, which is not rich but very strategic, with enormous vitality. All this gives him a sure mastery of his opinions, especially when they matter to him, and then they grow muscular with ruthless prejudice. . . . He betrays the stunted intellectual within him by his hatred of all free intellectual expression. . . .

"On the whole, fiction in the Post is clever, craftsmanlike and deftly commonplace when the writer is a good workman. When he is not, when his material is too flimsy for skillful construction then we get merely neat trash, carefully piled into the requisite number of columns. And much, if not most of the fiction in the Post is nowadays just that. . . . Its own pictoral art is highly conventional and of meticulous draftsmanship. It is mentally geared to the mean average intelligence of the composite popular mind."—Benjamin Stolberg in "Portrait of George Horace Lorimer," Outlook and Independent, May 21, 1930.

Biography is a useful branch of literature when devoted to the enrichment of human experience. The poet philosopher indicated its true place when he wrote,

"Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime."

But what inspiration to nobler living can one find in the work of the modern gnats who look for nothing in an exemplary life but places to bite and sting. The more obscure the gnats, the more cocksure are their flings at the characters they select for attention.

George Horace Lorimer needs no defense against covert attacks in the name of biography. The millions who enjoy the clean, entertaining artistically told stories he selects for his publication will continue to find pleasure in them, in ever increasing millions, let us hope, in spite of Mr. Stolberg's assertion that they were only "bedtime stories" for the uncritical. In fact, Saturday Evening Post readers will feel justified in taking a little pharisaical pride in their mental superiority over those whose tastes permit them to read their hectic productions in such other story papers as the author insinuates are disputing popularity with the Post. If they represent "free intellectual expression," we will continue to glory in our "stunted intelligence."

The point, however, is not the fear that our magazines are becoming Menckenized, but that the reading public must be on its guard to detect subtle methods of creating prejudice against prominent figures who dare to express opposition to a return of the liquor traffic.—E. L. T., in American Issue.

Committee on O'Kelly Mem'l.

Every member of the Christian Church is proud of Rev. James O'Kelly, the founder of our Church, but we are slow to pay for a monument to his memory. Are there not 185 individuals, Sunday Schools, or Sunday School classes that will contribute one dollar to this fund? The Philathea Class of the Suffolk Sunday School has recently contributed five dollars. Friends, don't let this drag. The memorial should be paid for promptly.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson III—July 20, 1930.

Moses.

Golden Text: "By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king; for he endured, as seeing Him who is invisible."—Heb. 11:37.

Lesson: Ex. 1:8-14, 2:1-22, 3:1-14, 11:1-10, 32:30-35; Deut. 34:1-8; Heb. 11:23-29.

Moses is not only the greatest man of the Old Testament; he is one of the greatest men of all times. When we realize that the Ten Commandments are basic to civilization, and when we realize that these basic principles were given their expression through the mind and heart of Moses under the inspiration of the Spirit of God, we come to a better understanding of just what a large place this man has in world history. Here was a man great in mind and heart; a man with a grasp of universal and abiding principles, and at the same time a man with an humble spirit and a warm human sympathy.

Preparation.

Does the time produce the man, or does the man put his stamp upon the time? Whatever may be the answer to this question, it certainly is true that Moses came upon the scene at a time that called for greatness of soul. He was more than a product of his time, but the time certainly served to develop his tremendous potential abilities. His people were abject slaves in a powerful dynasty, ground down in manual labor, oppressed politically and socially.

In addition to the time and to the condition of his people, other factors entered into his preparation. He had a pious and noble mother. The man's strength of character was due undoubtedly to her wholesome influence and her sound training. He was educated according to the highest standards of the day at the court. He had a long period of meditation in the out-of-the-way places, a very important factor. Moses was just another of those boys who came from the country who have moved the world upward and onward.

Vision.

In addition to his training and his experience, Moses had a vivid and vital vision of God. It was not a God made of wood or stone; it was the "I am," the living, personal God. What a long step in advance the race took when this humble man came to this conception of God.

Commission.

Moses was given a great task, a task that was bigger than he was, a task from which he, with becoming modesty, withdrew. In spite of all his training, who was he that he should go in the name of this God before the Pharaoh himself? But the God who gave him a seemingly impossible task also promised him ample reserves of power. It is well to note that here, as elsewhere, the primary need was not for an orator or a great speaker. Many a minister would be far more fruitful if he would give more heed to his pastoral work and less heed to preparing finished but ofttimes lifeless orations. The wise Church will choose the faithful pastor and persistent worker in preference to the brilliant twice-a-week orator; that is, in general.

Procrastination.

Pharaoh, Pharaoh, how you teach us of our own ways! When the plagues fell upon his land, he made great promises, but as soon as the danger was past he returned to his own ways. How often we are humble and make all kinds of promises when we think that we are to reap the just reward for our sins, and how quickly we return to our old ways of doing when the danger is past.

Intercession.

Exodus 32:30-25 is an open window into the heart and soul of a truly great man. Here was this man pouring out his heart and asking to be blotted out himself unless his people who had so tragically failed him and God could be spared. Here was one who had already caught up into his life the meaning of that love which centuries later found fullest expression in the cross of Christ.

Moses did not enter the land of promise. Like many another pioneer, he did not see the consummation of his plans and his work. But he saw them afar off. He had laid the foundations and he knew that in due time others would complete the structure.

Consecration.

The secret of the man's life is to be found in the fact that he followed the one who was invisible, but who was very real. Here was a man who had chosen to walk in the path of unselfishness. He identified himself with his people and spent and was spent in their behalf. And because of this fact, God has highly exalted him and given him a name that stands at the top of the list among those who are truly great.

Topic: "Some Good Summer Reading."

Scripture: Eccl. 12:11, 12; 1 Tim. 4:12, 13.

One of our leading American educators has said that if a young person had to choose between a college education and the privilege of knowing the Bible, he would be better educated in the end to choose to know the Bible. Within the pages of this great divine Book is knowledge enough to make one a student all of one's days.

Different types of writing are found in the Bible. The daily Bible readings for the week will include several different types. Call for a report on these readings.

Monday—Great short stories (Luke 10:25-37).

Tuesday—History (Psa. 107:1-15).

Wednesday—Biography (Gen. 41:14-24). The whole story of Joseph's life is found in Gen. 37-50.

Thursday—Poetry (Psa. 82:1-8).

Friday—Nature study (Matt. 6:26-34).

Saturday—Devotional reading (Psa. 1:1-6).

We can get good summer reading from magazines and books that are available to us. Most of us take at least one magazine. Now is a good time, while we are thinking about it, to decide if we are getting the right kind of a magazine. Is the time that we spend reading it well spent? Do we get something for the time put upon it? Or is it "just another love story"? Today our best magazines are printing articles to help us with our work and to furnish us real recreation. Let's get the very best magazine we can.

Fortunate is the community which has a public library or can get books from a county library. Those who borrow books should try to read the best books. If you do not know the name of a book you would like to read but you know whether you like history, poetry, shrot stories, or fiction, let the librarian help you select your books. Learn to choose the best. Our reading helps to determine what we shall become.

Ask a member of your society to be prepared to review one type of reading material and to make some suggestions as to names of books and authors that will be available in your community for this summer's reading.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

GOD'S KEEPING OF HIS CHILDREN.

"I pray not that Thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that Thou shouldst keep them from evil."—Jno. 17:15.

There is no trace of the impurity of the world in God. Jesus is equally pure with God. Without the same holiness, none of us can enjoy communion with God. Therefore, it is the faithful who are chosen, cleansed by Him, and kept by Him for fellowship with Him.

In order that this might be possible, Jesus concentrated Himself by surrendering His will, walking in obedience, working the works of the Father, and suffering to die rather than deviate from this purpose. This is how He loved us and how He saved us, which is our chief faith and the source of our comfort. By this means, we may be made pure and holy, even as He is holy, and become separated from sin and the world.

The one thing that Jesus prays for in this lesson is that they (His followers) may be so filled with the Holy Spirit that they may willingly give themselves to a righteous and holy living, so that it may be thus with those who so believe in Him.

Prayer.—Blessed Father, may we be of those whom Thou dost take out of the sin of this world. Forbid that we shall reject Jesus or that we shall stray away by loving sin. Help us to seek and find the fellowship of Jesus, and give us to desire to follow Him all the way. And grant that we may tolerate no sin in ourselves. In the name of Jesus we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

GOD'S GLORY AND OURS.

"The glory Thou gavest me, I have given them."—John 17:22.

This passage is so beautiful that there is in it a blessing for any one who reads it. To read it every day would not be amiss. To do so would be daily enriching.

Note that Christ has given us the glory which the Father has given Him. Can this be a dream? Is there anything about us to support that belief? Are there not times when we feel in our hearts this glory? Are there not feelings of triumph and joy in the good things of life which are not of the flesh, but of God? What is it, then, but the love and glory of God?

When we reach our home and see His glory, we shall find that having fostered it in our lives, it is then being perfected in his presence. That is the time when we shall be like Him and shall see Him as He is.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, our hearts feel Thy glory, in that we are permitted to believe, to worship, and to live and love. Banish all contentious and factious among people. Unite them in one great heart. Make their lives ones of love. And let Thy love, which Thou didst give to Thy Son and our Saviour, be in us too. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

FAITH TO FAITH.

"Therein is the righteousness of God revealing from faith to faith."—Rom. 2:17.

There is a spirit in the world which seeks to make man ashamed to confess faith in Jesus Christ; and besides it seems that there is a proneness about us that shrinks from confessing Him. We often hear it said, and with the best intentions, "I'll live my life and have nothing to do with the other fellow." Can we have no concern for others and discharge our duty? Christ and His kingdom are in no wise glorious in the eyes of the world. It is up to believers to make it glorious. It is hard for us to differ from others. We like to cultivate agreement. The question is whether or not "the righteousness of God" is or is not of gravest importance. If we can understand that on "the righteousness of God" hangs our eternal salvation, or without it we are lost, we will overcome the feeling of shame, and esteem it an honor to differ from others for Jesus' sake. It is of grave concern that others shall see the light. They may see it through our concern.

Righteousness before God is not of our works, but of faith, and faith is proved by works. Righteousness and faith are not demands of God on us, but gifts of God on us. Martin Luther says this is what is meant by "The Jesus shall live by faith."

Prayer.—Help us, O God, to know sin and righteousness, and death and life. Give us true faith, that we may never be ashamed of the gospel of Christ. Amen.

THURSDAY.

KNOWING HOW TO PRAISE.

"Count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord."—Phil. 3:7-11.

He who knows most of God and His truth, knows most how to prize and praise Him.

When the would-be-wise ones disparage Christ and the gospel and set forth some shallow ideas their own wisdom and virtue, they come to hopelessness and despair. Paul seemed to praise God more and more every day. This was the result of his coming into closer fellowship with Him. A true business man rejoices in the growing of his business. A true Christian rejoices in his growing Christianity.

In Christ are hid all the treasures of wisdom, knowledge and happiness; and in Him are the deep sources of genuine life. The glorious feature of it all is that in finding these things in Him, we find exactly what our hearts need. Should we not study zealously to know the depth of the riches of His life for us? Anything that keeps us from knowing the true joys of His life, should we not throw it away as foul, uncleanness?

In Jesus is our wisdom, our righteousness and our real joys.

Prayer.—Blessed be Thou, Lord Jesus, who hath given us Thyself and Thy fellowship. Let everything die in us that is wrong, and let nothing but righteousness and love live in us, and preserve us blameless unto the coming of the Lord. Amen.

FRIDAY.

CHRIST A PRIEST.

"Called of God an High Priest."—Heb. 5:10.

A prophet is one who goes from God to man and divines the future. A priest is one who goes from man to God, a mediator for man.

Christ has been made our High Priest according to the eternal and all-wise counsel of God. Can He fail in this office? Our hope in Him as our Mediator is so sure that the gates of hell are powerless against it. The soul in Christ is so far above sin that it is out of the devil's reach. Christ satisfies every demand of love and justice, and in Him we have continual and full forgiveness of sin.

Prayer.—Give us, O God, the light and the strength of Thy Holy Spirit, that we may believe. Bend our wills and intellect to obedience, that we may build on the solid Rock, Jesus our Saviour. Amen.

SATURDAY.

GETTING CLEANED UP AND SET RIGHT.

"Create within me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me."—Psa. 51:10.

All of us are weak and make fatal errors almost every day; yes, many of us sin grossly. To be constantly watchful enough to keep from sinning or to keep from entering into temptation is one of our most urgent duties to ourselves.

If errors we must make, or if a fall we must suffer, to accept correction from the Spirit of God and to feel the sin with sincere regret, and go at once to Jesus with an honest confession, is our supreme privilege and duty. Then the joy of salvation is restored, and with it the willing spirit for the practice of holiness. Then we love and serve Him. Then, and only then, can we please Him.

Promise your God to do this, and to offer Him the best fruit of your life.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, keep us humble and give us ardent love, that we may give our strength to Thy service. Amen.

SUNDAY.

PRAYER IN SERVICE.

"Ask and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full.—John 16:23.

When we send a servant to a neighbor for something that he has promised us, the servant asks for that something in the name of the sender. He is in the service of the sender, and must say what he has been charged to say, and ask for only what he is sent for. In reply to that request, the neighbor gives what is asked without regard for the worthiness or the unworthiness of the servant. The sender knows this and does not doubt that he will have his desire granted.

We are in the service of our Master, and He has told us to go to the Father and ask for life and what life needs, and tell the Father "I sent you."

What our Lord has taught us to say in our prayers must be regarded as necessary to salvation, and these are the things we are to ask for in His name. We cannot ask "in His name" all those things that happen to be to our liking. Hold up before the Father that which Jesus has said. Remain a petitioner at the throne of grace until there is some answer, or until your soul has received the needful things, or the assurance it needs.

This is to pray in the name and service of Jesus, and this is to find the way to fullness of joy.

Prayer.—Eternal thanks and praise be to Thee, dear Lord Jesus, for Thy wonderful and precious promises. Give us grace to believe and to pray in faith and for His sake. Amen.

REDIGGING OLD WELLS.

"And Isaac digged again the wells of water which they had digged in the days of Abraham, his father, for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham."—Gen. 26:18.

Isaac was the son of Abraham. He seemed to be the victim of trouble and worry, even to the extent that he had more than seemed his share. In the chapter preceding our reading, we read of the disturbance that came even from his own sons, Jacob and Esau, in deceiving him in order to gain a birthright.

We see that even his wife, Rebekah, works against him and in favor of her favorite son as she takes skins from the goats and puts them upon the hands and the smooth of the neck of Jacob to make him appear like his brother Esau, who was hairy, and by this deceptive scheming, the younger son took from the elder son his lawful birthright. This seemed to trouble the good old father more than a little. Indeed, the writer of Proverbs was right when he exclaimed, "A foolish son is a grief to his father" (Prov. 17:25).

But Isaac had other trials and worries than those directly brought upon him by those who should have loved him. Sometimes our greatest hardships are worked by our own relatives and closest friends, but not always. Such should never be the case, but often it is so. That which seemed to worry Isaac was the fact that his enemies, the Philistines, envied him and thus were led to destroy his personal property. Some time ago I read the story carried in the Sunday School Times about a man who killed himself through envy. It happened that his fellow-citizens had erected a statue to one of their number who had won distinct honors in the public games. So strong was the feeling of envy which this honor had caused that the rival went forth every night with the purpose of destroying the monument to one whose success he envied. After repeated efforts to remove and destroy the statue from its pedestal, it finally fell, and in the fall crushed upon the man who was endeavoring to move it because he envied the man who had won valor and honor. This story illustrates the fact that envy is but a suicidal act, whenever allowed to harbor in any man's life.

Indeed, envy is not a modern-day vice, for the devil has long been using it as a tool of destruction, and by its use much unhappiness has been caused in the world. Going back to the story of Isaac, we find that in those days, wells for the watering of cattle were very necessary. In fact, since most of the wealth of the day consisted in a man's flocks, it was essential that every man care for his flocks in the best way possible. Now, it happened that Abraham was rich in lands, in flocks, and that he owned many wells. Because he trusted God and his faith was infallable, God directed his path along lines of continuous prosperity. To his son, Isaac, all this wealth was willed. And because Isaac was rich he was envied. "For he had possessions of flocks and possessions of herds, and great store of servants; and the Philistines envied him. For all the wells which his father's servants had digged in the days of Abraham, his father, the Philistines had stopped up with earth and filled them" (Gen. 26: 1-15).

Envy is one of the deepest roots of evil. It is imbedded in spite and malice. It finds expression in a feeling of discontent toward the person who prospers or inherits that which rightfully befalls him. Envy causes hard feeling toward the person who works hard to attain that which the other man will not seek. Envy, like jealousy, spoils all happiness and completely shrivels the soul of man into a wretched pigmy. Envy never accomplishes anything. The fact that the Philistines envied Isaac and stopped his wells with earth did them no good whatever; rather it promoted deeper misery in their own hearts and caused many herds of cattle to die from want of water. And that leads me to say that God never tolerates a person who harms a dumb animal. To withhold water or food from any of God's creatures is to hurt and starve him, for all of his creatures are a part of Him who created them one and all.

One day Robert Louis Stevenson was remonstrating with a person on the street who was mistreating a dog. "What business is it of yours? He ain't your dog," the man retorted. "No," said the great literary genius, "but he's God's dog, and I'm here to protect him." We ought to protect the dog that cannot protect himself. There is a saying that "He who beats his horse will beat his wife," and though this may not be true in every case, it is generally true that he who is cruel in one respect will be cruel in all his relations. The person who inflicts pain upon God's dog is out of touch with the spirit of our Heavenly Father without whose notice the sparrow does not fall to the ground. Besides, cruelty to dumb animals, whether by boy or man, one cultivates a brutal and coarse nature. Not long ago a farmer was fined because he would not keep the stables in which his horses and cows lived, clean and free from harmful insects. Surely the proverb is true that "The tender mercies of the wicked are cruel, but a righteous man regardeth the life of his beast."

He who shoots a bird or kills a rabbit for the sake of sport cannot figure how he has profited in the least by taking the life of one of God's happy little creatures. Let us not be guilty, as were the Philistines, of causing even the least of his creatures to suffer. Even a prairie dog has a right to live. Much more should the lives of cattle which furnish butter, milk, cheese and meat to the household of Isaac a right to live; but because the Philistines envied the owner of the cattle, they filled up the wells out of which the cattle were to receive water and which was very essential to their living during the hot, dry season such as is common throughout Palestine even today.

Not only did envy cause the cattle to suffer, but the Philistines themselves were taken further from God than if they had been liberal and rejoiced with Isaac in his prosperity. In addition to a lesson on envy and cruelty to animals, we find that this text teaches us patience even in spite of conflict and hardship. Let us look at Isaac, who as a pioneer patriarch of ancient Judaism, practices the Golden Rule which was introduced years and years after his time. Instead of going forth in battle to combat the wickedness of the Philistines, he patiently lets them go ahead, for he realizes that they are hurting themselves more than they hurt him, and we read in the text that "Isaac digged again the wells of water which the Philistines had stopped with earth."

Isaac was very wealthy and could have easily afforded to lose the cattle that were being destroyed by his enemies, but his great heart burned unto the cattle that suffered. He opened again the wells that had been willfully stopped, and thus kindly ministered to his herds. Just as fast within him and he stooped down and ministered as the wells would become filled with earth by the Philistines, Isaac would patiently go and redig them. The tendency would have been, had it been in our experience, to hit back. If an enemy fill our well, then go and fill his well. If he hit me then it is my duty to hit back. But not so with Isaac, even though he lived in a time when the old Jewish law declared an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.

Christian patience, such as was exercised by Isaac, is a practical virtue. It is close akin to faith, hope and love. It pays to be patient, even though it try one's nerves and test his temper. History is full of illustrations wherein patience has been the cause of winning many a battle. John Wesley's father once asked Mrs. Wesley, "How she could have the patience to tell John, the blockhead, the same thing for twenty times?" Her reply was that if she had only told him nineteen times she would have lost all her labor.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

I promised you, in a recent letter, to tell you how each Conference stood the first of July as to the number of Sunday Schools making a monthly offering to help support the one hundred and ten children in the Christian rphanage. The first half of the year ended June 30th.

Western North Carolina Conference—32 Sunday Schools, 5 not on our list, as follows: Antioch, Browns Chapel, Bennett, Needham's Grove, Pleasant Union; 84 1-3 per cent giving.

North Carolina and Virginia Conference—37 Sunday Schools, 5 not on our list, as follows: Belew's Creek, Concord, Elk Spur, Hopedale, Kallam Grove; 86 1-2 per cent giving.

Eastern North Carolina Conference—49 Sunday Schools, 18 not giving, as follows: Bethlehem, Beulah, Caroleigh, Ebenezer, Good Hope, Hayes Chapel, Lebanon, Moore's Union, Mt. Carmel, Mt. Gilead, Mt. Hermon, New Hill, New Hope, O'Kelly's Chapel, Pope's Chapel, Six Forks, Martha's Chapel; 63 1-3 per cent giving.

Eastern Virginia Conference — 46 Sunday Schools, 16 not giving, as follows: Antioch, Damascus, Eure, Hobson, Hopewell, Isle of Wight, Ivor, Johnson's Grove, Liberty Spring, Oak Grove, Ocean View, Old Zion, Sarem, Spring Hill, Webster; 66 per cent giving.

Valley Virginia Central Conference—23 Sunday Schools, 8 not giving, as follows: Bethel, Beulah, East Liberty, High Point, Mt. Lebanon, New Hope, St. Peter's, Whistler's Chapel; 65 per cent giving.

Georgia and Alabama Conference—13 Sunday Schools, 9 not giving, as follows: Lanet, Beulah, East LaGrange, Union, Enigma, Rose Hill, Oak Grove, First LaGrange, Hill Side; 30 per cent giving.

Alabama Conference—21 Sunday Schools, 11 not giving, as follows: Carver's Grove, Corinth, Christiana, Cragford, Dingler's Chapel, Pleasant Grove, Rock Spring, Rock Stand, Shady Grove; 47 3-5 per cent giving.

This report shows that quite a number of our Sunday Schools have forgotten the little children in their orphanage this year. The Southern Convention established the Christian Orphanage for the purpose of taking care of and training fatherless and motherless children and give them a chance in life to make good. It expected every Church and Sunday School to be loyal in helping support it. Don't you think it sad for a bright boy or girl to grow to young manhood or womanhood in ignorance and be handicapped all through life because in its young and tender years it had no one to help it and it could not help itself? If all Sunday Schools would only help us, how much easier our work of love would be! If your Sunday School is not on the list of monthly givers, won't you get on at once?

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

GOD'S GIFT IS LIFE.

council, men and women whom I was meeting on the grounds here and there, in the midst of whom I was sitting in the council chamber: Ahmad Shah and Chenchiah, of India; Bocobo, of the Philippines; Braga, of Brazil; Jabavu, of South Africa; Kim and Ryang, of Korea; Chao and Cheng, of China; Ba, of Burma; Kozaki and Uzaki, of Japan; Randzavola, of Madagascar; Subiyeh, of Syria; Sheikh Dewairy, of Egypt, and many others. Those faces, those voices, those spirits, mingling in spiritual fellowship, gave new meaning to the fact of Christ. These men and women and those they represented had come to share God's gift of life. They were eager to join forces with His children in all lands in making Jesos known. I was very deeply impressed as I thought of these friends with their sense of the complete appropriateness of Christ to them and to their people. He had become their sure possession. He was God's gift to them just as truly as to the Jews of the first century in Palestine or to the European and American of today. I can scarcely conceive of a more striking demonstration of the universality of Christ than that afforded by the fellowship of the Jerusalem Council. And yet the actual fact of Christ's hold upon the world today is but feebly pictured by that gathering. Not only do His cross and His resurrection form the living hope of the multitudes represented at Jerusalem, but in Him are centered all those larger hopes of humanity, for justice and kindness in industry, for complete international understanding, and for abiding and fruitful peace.

God's gift of life in the crucified and risen Christ is universal not only geographically, it is universal in its ministry to the deepest needs of men on all levels and in all relationships. As His disciples, we have just begun to take the measure of the task set by loyalty to Him. New areas of human interest to which Christ can bring abundant life are swinging toward the center of our consciousness. Rural problems the world over, industrial conditions East and West, regions where race relationships are critical, all these await the release of the creative Christ-spirit in their midst. That alone can bring life that shall be worthy the name.

Vision brings hope. Hope inspires loyalty. Loyalty multiplies effort. True love is born. The Christ appears and we see that we are serving no common Master. The Lord of Life bends over us, He rises within us, He goes before us, He reveals Himself to us in His surpassing beauty. —F. F. Goodsell, in Missionary Herald.

A PRAYING CHURCH.

A prosperous Church is a Church which prays. It is written, "My house shall be called a house of prayer." We must never lose faith in prayer. We must never abandon prayer. We must never lose the spirit of prayer. A Church can get on for a considerable time without singing, and can go on indefinitely with indifferent singing. A Church may do well with poor preaching, and even without preaching of any kind. But a Church without prayer is no Church at all. We might as well expect a man to live without breathing as to expect a Church to live without praying. Pray for the minister. Pray for the sick and afflicted. Pray for the children. Pray for the lost. Pray for the community. Pray for one another. Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that He may send forth laborers into His harvest. Pray without ceasing. Pray everywhere. Let the Church be characterized by prayer, filled with the atmosphere of prayer, and crowned with the trophies of prayer.—Southern Churchman.

NOTICE.

I am at leasure and would be glad to assist in revival meetings. Should any minister desire my service, I will be glad to hear from him.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

PSYCHOLOGY FOR RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL WORKERS. By Paul V. West and Charles E. Skinner. The Century Co.; $3.00.

Profs. West and Skinner are fully acquainted with all the schools of psychological thinking, but identified fully with no one of them. They have endeavored to appraise the several schools and to integrate the best and the abiding value of each into a working basis for practical living. That they have wholly succeeded will be denied by many, but to have measurably achieved success in such a mamoth intellectual feat is certainly cause for commendation. That their minds are open for yet further light to break forth is also cause for commendation. One does not lay down this book with any suggestion or conviction that here is finality. Rather, the impression is that here is pioneering, here is challenge, here is adventure, and that the future holds light and illumination for many spots now dark, but inviting investigation.

The book falls naturally into three parts—general psychology, applied psychology, and the application of psychology in particular to social and religious work and problems.

A more readable or useful book it would be difficult to find. It will be found especially valuable in colleges and seminaries and in advanced leadership training groups. The stimulating questions at the end of each chapter and the citations to the literature bearing on the subject are especially valuable features.

THE PRACTICAL AND PROFITABLE IN CHURCH ADMINISTRATION. By Arthur T. Brooks. The Judson Press; $2.00.

This book is the story of how a few years ago a pastor of vision and zeal came to Dudley Street Baptist Church, in Boston. He found it discouraged and ready to close. He made it a seven-day Church. It is today one of the outstanding Churches of the country. While Dr. Brooks has preached and practiced the social gospel, he has not neglected evangelism. His principles are sound, though every situation will call for different application of them. It is really a great book, growing out of the experience of a true Christian.

EDUCATING FOR PEACE. By Elizabeth Miller Lobingier and John Leslie Lobingier. The Pilgrim Press; $2.00.

Wife and husband have collaborated to fine effect in this very practical book. If we are to have peace, it must come by the process of education. The home, the Church, the school must take the matter seriously, and by example as well as precept create that state of mind which is peace. This book tells in very practical manner how it may be done. The chapters on the contributions of dramatization and of plays and pageants to peace are especially noteworthy.

D. L. MOODY. By W. R. Moody. The Macmillan Co., New York; $3.50.

When pressed for biographical material by friends, D. L. Moody once said to his eldest son, W. R. Moody, the author of this book, "It is time to write a man's biography when he is through. Wait to see what kind of exit he makes. Some of my friends think they know me better than any one else; but all will unite on you."

Dr. W. R. Moody was born in Chicago in 1869. After graduating from Mt. Hermon, and later Yale in 1891, he worked closely with his father in England and America as secretary and assistant. In 1924, he was awarded the Litt.D. by Rutgers University. With a rich and intimate experience, he is well qualified to deal with his subject.

ILLUSTRATIONS FROM ART. By William E. Biederwolf. Richard R. Smith, Inc., N. Y.; $1.50.

In no field of creative endeavor are better stories and lessons of life's worth to be found than in the field of art. The great paintings on which the illustrations in this book are based, such as "The Crucifixion," "The Last Supper," "The Transfiguration," "Archangel and the Devil," have always kindled the imagination and stirred the spirit of man. In the judgment of those who are speaking constantly on religion, any good illustration justifies the purchase of a book. Here is a book full of choice ones.

OBITUARIES.

GWALTNEY.

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear mother, who left us one year ago today, June 24, 1929.

Dearest mother, you have left us,
Left us with aching hearts;
Jesus has called you from us
To a home beyond the skies.

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave
Over the one I love so dearly,
In the lonely, silent grave.

Friends may think I'll soon forget her
And my wounded heart be healed;
But they little know the sorrow
That is within my heart concealed.

Oh, we miss you, dearest mother,
Miss each kind and loving word;
A place is vacant within our home
Which never can be filled.

Her daughter,
LAUNA MORRIS.

KERNODLE.

Walter L. Kernodle was born June 14, 1894, and departed this life June 27, 1930, age 36 years, and his body was placed in the cemetery at the Bethlehem Christian Church, Alamance County, N. C. He told his friends before his departure that he was ready and willing to go.

He leaves a wife, four children, his father, six brothers, three sisters, stepmother, and three half-brothers to mourn their loss. God bless the bereaved. Funeral by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. W. Patton and Rev. Bro. Phillips, of the Baptist Church.

REPORT ON PORTO RICO.—

The Brookings Institute, Washington, D. C., has just released the report on the economic and social conditions in Porto Rico. This report contains 700 pages under the title of "Porto Rico and its Problems" and is a survey made between October, 1928, and May, 1929, by a specially selected staff of workers. Dr. Victor S. Clark, director of the survey and a former commissioner of education in Porto Rico, had associated with him our own Prof. J. A. Dickey, of the University of Arkansas, and a number of other distinguished sociologists. This work would be a valuable study for those who are interested in our missionary work in Porto Rico. The other members of the staff of research were Dr. F. H. Newell, president of the Research Service, Inc., Washington, D. C.; Prof. Erich W. Zimmerman, of the University of North Carolina; Hugh J. Reber, former member of the American financial mission in Persia; Dr. Frank Tannenbaum, Henry P. Seidemann, of the Brookings Institute, and others, which insure a thorough study of the social and economic conditions of Porto Rico and furnish those who wish reliable information concerning these conditions a trustworthy source for such information.

UNEMPLOYED A MENACE.—

The unemployed of our country or any country is a menace to morals and is closely correlated to crime. Sociologists, social workers, economists and statisticians, by letters, are urging the passage of bills in Congress providing for a national system of employment offices, a program of public works planned to take up the slack of labor due to seasonal occupations, business depressions or other unavoidable causes, and a more satisfactory system of statistics regarding employment. It is difficult to deal adequately with any maladjustment in society until the facts are known.

The recent census report included more information than usual concerning employment and unemployment, but a decennial count of the idle people in the country is not enough. Everybody knows there is an immense amount of unemployment in the country. But how much? and where? and in what industries? Think of the armies of unemployed in the large cities, and of the families dependent upon them! Imagine the multitudes that face Saturday night with no pay envelope and no cash reserve; and then another, and another with still no income! Hungry, gaunt, perishing, with nothing to eat and no employment! Crime, murder, suicide would be a natural consequence under such conditions. A Christian civilization should study the causes of such crime and provide laws and methods of dealing with conditions and situations that will prevent crime, and not stand stolidly ox-eyed by and make no provision against such conditions.

RADIO POWER.—

One of the greatest agencies for the creation of public opinion, for the dissemination of truth, and for the propaganda of evil is the radio. The ability of the radio to reach every part of the earth almost instantaneously was recently demonstrated. Diners at the banquet, which was held in Berlin, heard President Hoover speaking in Washington, Mr. Edison in West Orange, N. J., Owen D. Young in San Francisco, and Signor Marconi in London. This was a marvelous demonstration of what can be done by this wonderful device; but more marvelous than this was the attempt on the part of Mr. Insull to censor the speech made to these diners in person by the American ambassador to Germany, Hon. Frederic M. Sackett.

Mr. Insull demanded that the ambassador cut out of his speech the part in which reference was made to the high cost of power to the consumer. Mr. Sackett had charged that the average price to the consumer was about fifteen times the cost of production, and charged that he knew of no other industry which made such a margin of profit. From his large experience as president of coal and utility companies, it is reasonable to suppose that he knew what he was talking about. The futile effort of Samuel Insull to censor the words of the ambassador of the United States has given the speech international hearing. As the radio becomes ever more and more effective, and its control in the United States is increasingly drifting into the hands of the utility and power corporations, how long will it be before its messages will be censored by such men as Mr. Insull to the detriment of the general public. Materialism ever seeks to crush out the assertion of idealism as represented by the brotherhood of man and a square deal to the general public.

HUMANISM ATTACKED.—

In discussing the topic, "Beyond Humanistic Control," at the Berkly Divinity School, New Haven, Conn., at commencement, June 4th, this year, Prof. Wm. E. Hoking, of Harvard, said that the psychologist who boasts that he has banished the mystical element from self-knowledge is not sticking to the truth. "It is a good working principle," he said, "to have unlimited faith in our scientific capacity, but it is not good sense to suppose that we have nearly fathomed the world formula."

Speaking of the "experiment" of humanism, he commented: "The question, 'What makes the worth of a human being?' is a vital one for humanism, but it has no satisfactory answer on humanistic grounds. Man's worth depends more on what he is capable of becoming than on what he is; on his function, participation and reaction to what is beyond him than on his present attainment. His value is measured by his horizon, and his relation to what is beyond him and to the ultimate in which he has his membership.

Whoever cuts off the fringe of the universe and ignores the invisible and spiritual beyond cuts into the organism of human values and destroys the sense of the ultimate equivalent which has made the moral and social world of today. Whoever adopts the humanistic religion is already in the mood of despair of finding the god of the wider world of nature. As a personal confession, this mood is serious for the mental and spiritual condition of the confessor. Man cannot evolve a god out of his own consciousness in whom he can have faith and worship, and the humanist is headed towards atheism and infidelity, which must ultimately end in despair.

MOVIE CODE.—

The movie code of ethics, which is to govern the making and advertising of the movies according to the action of Congress, is composed of twelve points. Many of these merit wide circulation and publication, whether they are observed or not. Point two states, "Good taste shall be the guiding rule of motion-picture advertising"; point three states, "Illustration and text in advertising shall faithfully represent the pictures themselves"; point eleven declares, "Nudity with meretricious purposes and salacious postures shall not be used"; point twelve says, "Court actions relating to censoring of pictures, or other censoring disputes, are not to be capitalized in advertising."

It is evident from the withdrawal of the fake film that the movies are beginning to feel the weight of public opinion and condemnation that has been stirred up against them. Whether there will be any attention paid to this code by the advertisers remains to be seen. Their attitude may be similar to that of the producers of the movies with reference to codes of production in the past. On the very day on which this new advertising code was published, there was discovered at the top of the movie advertisements in one Chicago paper a film called "Unguarded Girls," and the advertising reads in such fashion that it is unprintable in these notes. The public will watch with interest the effect of these new resolutions on the actual advertising of the moving-picture theaters, and parents, teachers and Christian leaders may easily and correctly infer that the pictures presented on the screen are not wholesome when the advertisement closes with a sentence like this: "On account of the delicate subject and scenes, adult men only will be admitted." Parents, beware! Criminals are made by suggestions like these.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Mr. C. D. Harton, of Henderson, N. C., spent several days in Richmond during the past week, visiting his sons, Messrs. W .R. and M. B. Harton. We were glad to have him call at The Sun office while in the city.

Our readers will be glad to learn that Mrs. W. A. Harper has improved sufficiently to be carried to her home at Elon College. While it may be some time before she is able to walk, the doctor reports that she is doing quite well indeed. The writer was quite happy to see Dr. and Mrs. Harper Sunday and find them both in such fine spirits.

FROM REV. G. D. HUNT.

We had a fine service at Old Providence Chapel (Red Hill), in Georgia, last Sunday. This is the Church established by Rev. Dr. Jubilee Smith. It was home-coming day, and was fittingly observed by a large congregation.

This old Church is located in a fine section of the good old State of Georgia. I mean to be there next week in a revival with Rev. Veazey. On last Saturday morning,, about 10:30, my home at Truitt, Ala., was burned. Most of the contents were saved, but many things of value were destroyed. We hereby express our thanks to our many friends who so heroically saved our goods. They were there from Truett, Wadley, Daviston, and surrounding country, white and colored. God bless them all, and may He keep them in perfect peace and safety. G. D. Hunt.

NOTICE.

The Waverly Christian Church and Sunday School extends a most cordial invitation to all delegates, visitors and friends who will come for the Convention, to be held July 22nd and 23rd. The Convention was without an invitation, and asked to be invited on the Harvard plan. You were with us five years ago, and we were delighted to have you, but we did not feel that we could undertake the Convention this year except on the Harvard plan, in view of our Sunday School building program now under way.

Lunch each day will be 50 cents; supper Tuesday night, 40 cents. The program Tuesday night will begin at 7 o'clock, and we are hoping those who have to return home that evening will remain over for the early night service.

Welcome to all! Come and help the Convention, and you will be helping us in our present undertaking.

LITERATURE.

It has been said that a nation can be judged by the literature it reads and the songs it sings. Thousands of years before Christ, pictures of objects were used to express ideas, words and sounds. The first literature in the form of hieroglyphics was in use about 6000 years B. C. There were phonetic sounds about 3800 years B. C. There were two running forms of hieroglyphics—the first known as the Hieratic, which was extensively used, being found in legal and government documents, and used by the priests. The second was known as the Demotic writing, mostly used by the people, and was in use 6000 years B. C., continuing down to the third century A. D. This was the last native form of writing to survive in Egypt, and was gradually supplanted by the characters of the Greek alphabet.

The Demotic writing is on the Rosetta stone, discovered in 1799 near Rosetta, at the mouth of the Nile River, the oldest stone we know of, and which is in the British Museum in England. There are three kinds of writings on it—hieroglyphic, used by the priests; Demotic, used by the people; and also in Greek.

In the earliest hieroglyphics there were twenty-four signs; now there are, in all, 1,700 different characters. The Egyptians, as early as 4000 years before Christ, possessed a system of numbers, science, astronomy, and geography. After the sixth century A. D., all knowledge of hieroglyphics was lost until about the beginning of the seventeenth century, when Athanasius Kicher endeavored to interpret them.

The author of civilization about 6000 years B. C. is accredited to Mermes Trismegistus, the Greek name for the Egyptian god Thoth. The Egyptians had an encyclopedia called the Hermetic books, which treated of hieroglyphics, astronomy, medicine, mathematics, etc. China used shorthand 2000 years ago. India has the oldest language in the world. Greece gave us the first written music. The first alphabet was written by the Phoenicians. Ancient literature has been preserved through the Indian, Persian, Egyptian, Greek, Latin, Assyrian, Hebrew and English. The romance languages are French, Spanish and Italian. The different types of literature are history, religion, poetry, modern forms of prose, novels, essays and short stories.

And what is literature? It is any piece of writing that gives permanent pleasure to men and women because of its artistic form and expression, and preserves the thoughts of man. Books which simply impart information are scientific rather than literary; books which appeal to our sense of beauty and to our imagination, and which stir our emotions, belong to literature proper. Literature is closely akin to what is called the fine arts—painting, sculpture and architecture. From age to age the poet, the dramatist and the novelist have gone on weaving their silken tapestry, which we call literature, out of the political, religious and social ideals of the people.

The first literature was mostly history, and was written on mud, stone, and wood tablets, then on papyrus, made from the fiber of a reed that grew on the banks of the Nile. The first Hebrew literature come to us through Moses in 1517 B. C. Moses could read hieroglyphics.

Literature influences the individual, the community and the nation. What would the world be without literature? Can you imagine an American home with out it? What a debt we owe to the writer! What a debt we owe God to read His literature, to distribute His Word! May we resolve that this may be the greatest year in our lives in reading Christian literature. May we enclose missionary tracts in our letters, and help to spread the good news in every way we can. C.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

NORTH GEORGIA ASSOCIATION will hold its annual meeting at Bowman, Ga., beginning Monday night, July 28th, and ending at noon on the 30th. In connection with it, there will be a Sunday School and young people's meeting. This is a feature copied from the meetings of Christian Churches in this district, and any who are members of that fellowship are invited to attend this association meeting.

MISS PATTIE LEE COGHILL has been released from her Florida work for two months of work in Alabama and North Carolina, after which she will spend a month's vacation at her home in Henderson, N. C. After the conference at Blue Ridge, she went to teach in the Summer School at Wadley, Ala., and later to teach in the Summer School at Elon College. She also is to conduct daily vacation Bible schools in Boscoe and Chapel Hill, N. C.

PROF. C. LISLE PERCY, of Piedmont College, is serving as temporary pastor of the Church at Demorest, Ga., for June, July and August, and as adviser for the North Georgia Association of Churches for the same period. Mr. Arthur G. Swartz, of Atlanta Theological Seminary Foundation, is serving as student assistant, working in the rural Churches of this district until September 1st. In September, Rev. H. R. Mowbray, of Hiram, Ohio, will assume the pastorate of the Demorest Church and will also act as adviser to the Churches of the North Georgia Association. At that time, Prof. Percy, in addition to his duties at Piedmont College, will serve as pastor of the Trinity, Macedonia and Liberty Churches.

A COMMUNITY CHURCH PLAN.

There is such close affinity between the Congregational fellowship and the community Church idea that any new plan worked out along that line may have suggestive value for definite situations. The following instance appeared in the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty for June 26th, and we quote it in full:

" 'The Community Church at the Circle' is the new name which was adopted by First Congregational Church of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Rev. Carl S. Weist, minister, at a business meeting of the Church May 25th. Full membership is given to those who wish to work with the Church locally but do not desire to give up their present denominational affiliation. Provision is made also whereby these members may send their world service contributions through the world service treasurer of the Church to the missionary societies of their choice. Fellowship is retained with Congregational-Christian Churches. The minister says: 'This change makes the Church neither non-denominational nor one-denominational, but rather multi-denominational.'

"At the same meeting, 'birth-membership of children' was adopted as a Church policy. The clause reads: 'All children of parents who desire such membership for their children shall be received into full membership in the Church at birth. As they are born into the family of the home, so are they born into God's spiritual family represented by the Church. Thus does the Church recognize and share with the home the responsibility for the unfolding of young life in accordance with the principles of God's kingdom of love."

NEW SEMINARY PRESIDENTS.

Two of the great Congregational theological seminaries will have new presidents this fall—Chicago and Hartford. Dr. Albert W. Palmer, formerly pastor at Oak Park Church, was inducted into the presidency of Chicago Theological Seminary at the seventy-fifth anniversary of the institution, thus undoubtedly beginning a new era in the life thereof. Dr. Palmer is a man of broad mind and sympathies, and is well qualified by training and experience to undertake the leadership of the seminary and its student life.

Dr. Palmer succeeds Dr. Ozora Davis, who becomes president-emeritus after an historic service to the institution. When Dr. Davis became president, it was a question as to its survival, but during his era the seminary has been moved to the University of Chicago and has equipped with beautiful buildings and is well endowed. Few men in our Congregational history have rendered a larger service and been personally loved by a larger number than has Dr. Davis.

The seminary has announced the appointment of Dr. Clare E. Powell to teach religious education and to supervise the field work of women students of the seminary. Two women have for the first time been elected to the board of trustees of the seminary.

The trustees of Hartford Seminary Foundation have announced the election of Dr. Robbins W. Barstow to the presidency to succeed President W. Douglas Mackenzie. Dr. Barstow is a young man who has made a notable success as the pastor of the Church at Madison, Wis., where his influence upon the student body of the university has been great. Dr. MacKenzie, whom he succeeds, has also guided his institution through an era of transition as the seminary and its affiliated schools of missions and of religious education have moved to a beautiful new campus with adequate new buildings. Dr. Mackenzie has been a great teacher and thinker.

BLUE RIDGE CONFERENCE.

The annual Missionary Education Movement (the M. E. M.) Conference at Blue Ridge, N. C., came to an end on July 5th. The conference was not so largely attended as in previous years, but there was a general feeling that the conference was a real success. The faculty and the curriculum were unusually strong, and there was a fine spirit of fellowship and co-operation.

For the last few years there has been some question each year as to whether this conference would be able to continue, owing to the fact that the larger denominations were centering in their own conferences. But this year there was a strong conviction that the "M. E. M." Conference must continue, as being the only interdenominational affair of its kind in the Southeast. Strong plans were worked out for the coming year's conference, and all went away rejoicing in the assurance that the problem had been faced and settled and that the future of these conferences was assured.

Dr. Franklin Cogswell, of the Missionary Education Movement, rendered great assistance in working out the plans for the future and also as a teacher in this year's course.

The director of this year's conference was Prof. C. C. Haun, of Vanderbilt School of Religion. Members of the Congregational-Christian group who were among the teachers and leaders of the conference were Dr. W. A. Harper, of Elon College; Dr. Malcolm Dana, director of the town and country department of the Congregational Church Extension Boards; Dr. George W. Hinman, of the American Missionary Association; Dr. Ernest W. Riggs, of the American Board of Commissions for Foreign Missions; Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, president of the Congregational Advisory Board of the Southeast, and Miss M. Priscilla Chase, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and Miss Marguerite Davison, members of the Congregational Church Extension Board's staff for the Southeast. President William J. Campbell, of Atlanta Seminary Foundation, preached the conference sermon and otherwise assisted in the conference.

There were seventy-three enrolled Congregational-Christian delegates in attendance, and there were about twenty visitors, mostly from Asheville and Albemarle, N. C. The latter Church sent their fine ball team from their young men's class to play a Blue Ridge team on the Fourth of July, and the Albemarle team won. The following States in the Southeast were represented as follows: North Carolina 19, Tennessee 15, Alabama 12, Georgia 7, Florida 5, South Carolina 5, Kentucky 2, and Virginia 1.

Sixteen college and seminary young people were commissioned in a very impressive service to "student summer service" in the Southeast. Seventeen others who were not present are also to serve in this area. The daily meetings of the Congregational group and of the student summer service group were a most valuable part of the conference.

Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, who is attending the International Congregational Council in England, was greatly missed, but he was re-elected chairman of the territorial committee, which has charge of the conference.

The whole conference deeply sympathized with Dr. and Mrs. Harper in the serious accident by which Mrs. Harper suffered a double fracture of the ankle. She was taken to an Asheville hospital.

CHANGING TURKEY.

No where else has so great an outward change been wrought in one decade as in Turkey. It is as if the new state wished wholly to forget its past, though it still finds it difficult to subdue the hate of centuries rising in its blood, and to love mercy. It has, at any rate, faced westward and made determined attempt to follow western ways. Many who cannot forget the past, with its barbarity and butchery, will insist that the old Turk has only put on new garments, but this view must be revised when one considers the reforms which are being pressed. They still come largely from above and have to contend with the force of age-old tradition and custom, but this is all the stronger proof of the sincerity of the leaders. Real progress toward western ideals has been made in these last few years. Most promising of all is the new system of education under which oncoming generations will grow up literate and familiar with the new national ideals. Following the order that every one must learn to read and write, and the compulsory adoption of Latin characters, 1,036,500 persons learned to read in six months. Today, in place of 3,850 primary schools where the Koran was taught without an understanding of the meaning of its verses, we have 6,580 schools. In the schools, 441,000 students learn history and geography. Since the merger of the Christian denomination with the Congregational Church, we have an interest in the mission work, which affords us great opportunity for service. C.

It often requires more courage to preach to one man than to a thousand. We must learn to reach men, one by one, by personal contacts.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

Our rural Churches usually hold their evangelistic meetings during the summer months, and very little evangelistic work is done during the rest of the year, except the underlying and fundamental work done in the instruction which comes through sermon, Sunday School, religious education, daily vacation Bible School, Christian literature, parental instruction, and the such like; but none of these can take the place of definite decision for the Christian way of life and regeneration of the soul by such committal to Christ. The evangelistic work of the Church is largely a matter of such definite decision and committal to Christ, with a belief that He accepts that which is committed to Him. This establishes a covenant, the Christian covenant, or agreement between Christ and the believer which is to endure through life.

The evangelistic work of the Church should receive the most careful attention by the pastor. There is so much heresy taught today by the humanists and other cults that there is great danger that many of our unregenerated, half-baked, religious educationalists will lead young people to think they need only to study some elementary course in order to measure up to the requirements of the world's Redeemer to enter into life eternal. Unless the evangelistic work of the Church can reach and save the young people of the community by the mysterious mystical method of the regeneration which Christ taught Nicodemus must take, but which Christ Himself did not explain, but about which He said, "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." It seems like presumption for unregenerated people to undertake to explain regeneration in terms of religious education, and thereby explain it away as unnecessary for the child who has had religious education from early childhood. Such instruction will finally fill our Churches with unregenerated members, and most Churches have too many of that kind of members already.

The ages from twelve to eighteen are the best ages of young people to make decisions for Christ and the Christian religion. Dr. Starbuck, in his "Psychology of Religion," gives the results of a scientific study of the phenomena of religious experience, showing that the best time to stress decisions for Christ resulting in conversion is during these ages. At this time, it seems that the religious capacity has a stronger tendency to find expression in decisions, conversions, and regenerations. Dr. William James, in his "Varieties of Religious Experience," confirms the conclusions of Dr. Starbuck with numerous examples taken from the history of religion and contemporaneous examples reported in his study. He would say, in terms of his great knowledge of human nature, "Strike while the iron is hot." "Work with nature rather than against nature" in your evangelistic campaign by urging decisions for Christ during this most promising age of young people, and you will realize great results. This would be taking "the flood at its tide."

The evangelistic campaign is the harvest-time of the entire year, and every effort should be made to bring about favorable conditions for a great harvest in the ingathering of souls into the kingdom by adequate and complete regeneration. This can come to pass in no other way but Christ's way, and that is through the preaching of the gospel, for it is the power of God unto salvation to all that believe. Following the evangelistic work, there should be careful and continuous instruction in the Christian life. This idea is not a discovery of recent times. There were schools of the prophets before the coming of Christ. The synagogues were Bible schools, which taught religious education, and Jewish children knew the Scriptures from childhood. Instruction will always have a large place in religion, but it can never take the place of regeneration in the Christian religion. The Christian religion is different from pagan and human religions in this respect. The initiation into this religion is like that of entering a family after which it is modeled; that is, by birth or adoption, by regeneration of the Spirit into newness of life. W. C. W.

"AND TO HEAL THE SICK."

When Jesus commissioned His disciples and sent them out to minister to humanity in His name, He called His twelve disciples together and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And He sent them to preach the kingdom of God and to heal the sick. The ministry of healing seems to have become a lost art in the history of the Christian ministry, or perhaps it would be better to say an abused art, except as the physician ministers to the body or physical needs. The practice of medicine has become a distinct and separate profession from the work of the ministry as a profession. In the constitution of man, there are body, mind and spirit, each of which may become diseased by failure to follow the laws of harmony and health. The physician and the practice of medicine take care of the health of the body in a reasonably adequate manner, but even the physician does not claim to cure people. He is simply practicing medicine and endeavoring to bring about such conditions in the body that it will have a better chance to regain health, he is helping nature to readjust the body to normal health and normal functioning, and they are doing a marvelous work to alleviate human suffering.

But man has a mind and spirit, both of which get out of harmony, out of adjustment to the laws of nature and fail to function normally. The mind, out of harmony with its laws, fails to function correctly, which results in conflict, discord, repression, anxiety, neurasthenia, hysteria, mental depression, discord, despondency, brooding, melancholia, manic depression, paranoia, insanity, suicide, and all the other ills that the mind is heir to in this modern age of stress and strain. The cause of these maladjustments is not in the body but in the mind, and cannot adequately be understood, diagnosed or interpreted without an adequate knowledge of the laws of the mind and its normal functioning. This is the field for the psychologist to investigate, and not the physician, whose study and preparation has been with mucle and nerve and bone, but is peculiarly the field for the student of the mind to investigate and to readjust to the normal mental conditions of health. The ministers whom Christ sent out were commissioned to heal the sick, and people were sick then in mind as well as in body, as they are now. Only since the World War has anything like scientific methods been applied to the healing of the mind in the treatment of shell-shocked cases; but throughout the history of the Church there have been sin-shocked cases that have needed scientific, psychological treatment and cure, resulting in the restraction of the self to unity, harmony and normal functioning.

The minister is the physician of souls, whether he will or not, and he should be so trained in psychology of healing that he may become master of this field as is the physician of the body or physical nature of man. The psychiatrist, when properly trained as is the physician, can render as great service to the minds of people as does the physician to the body. The minister is preeminently at home in dealing with the mind and spirit of man, and it is his function to deal with man's nature for healing in this realm. If he is not prepared for this kind of service, he should prepare himself as truly and as thoroughly for this field as should the physician for the healing of the body.

The minister has his pastoral work to do in this type of service. He should be prepared when he enters the homes of his people who are suffering from mental or spiritual trouble to make a thorough investigation of their trouble, get at its cause, understand its nature, and direct its cure upon the principles of adequate mental and spiritual treatment. He should treat the confidence reposed in him in making his diagnosis with the same ethical care as do other professional men in the practice of medicine or law, and keep his counsel as sacredly and secretely as do these professional men. This method alone will enable him to enter fully and successfully into the nature, origin and cause of mental and spiritual trouble and be prepared to deal adequately with such trouble for a cure.

Faith, confidence, expectancy and suggestion play a large part in the healing art of the physician of body or soul, and sympathy is conducive to the best mental attitude of those who are sick. Many troubles are both mental and physical, and the minister and physician can work to best advantage by co-operating sympathetically in their treatment. Christ had a great deal to say about healing, and did much for the sick in body, mind and spirit. W. C. W.

EVERY-DAY RELIGION.

II.

Every-day religion is needed in the home for family prayers, training children, and to bear the trials and bereavements that come in the spirit of resignation to the divine will. "Thy will be done," repeated only on Sunday, will not sustain the widow in her loss and strengthen her for every good word and work. She needs His grace every day, and His "grace is sufficient." Temptations are every-day experiences, and it requires every-day religion to overcome them. Sunday religion is the blossom and fruit of every-day religion. There is no spiritual Sunday religion where there is no every-day religion. The man in the field, the shop, in the train, the steamship, the school-room, the study, the office, the courtroom, the mine, the air, on the beach, needs the presence and help of the Holy Spirit to make him faithful in the every-day tasks of life. The woman in the kitchen, the sewing-room, the nursery, the store, the school-room, the hospital, the parlor, the club-room, society, everywhere, and every day needs a consciousness of the presence of Jesus Christ in her life, her home, and her work. It is the every-day revolution of the earth that gives day and night, sunshine and stars; and religion through the day makes hours of sleep safe and sweet.

Officials in high and low positions need religion every day. Temptations to neglect duty, accept graft, to carelessness in office, creep into the daily life, and it takes real, every-day religion to keep officials from doing wrong or neglecting right. The influence of officials over private citizens is a great opportunity for serving God every day, and nothing can satisfy that demand but every-day religion that operates all the time.

Servants occupy a place in life where religion may count most in daily service. The highest position is that of a servant. There are all grades of servants from the lowest menial position to the highest office. Servants can illustrate true religion in its obedient and saving form. Jesus was servant of all; and that was the highest position He filled while He went about doing good. Ministers of the gospel are servants not only on Sunday in the pulpit, but every day of the week. Their life counts more than their sermons. Their every-day religion means more than their rhetoric and oratory on Sunday. Ministers and laymen alike are measured by their every-day religion. One who will not perform his duty during the week need not try to praise God on Sunday. Sunday is the day to express religion in public worship, but the week is the time to cultivate the virtues and graces that make worship acceptable to God and profitable to men. W. W. S.

TO READERS OF THE SUN.

The following was enclosed in a letter recently received from Rev. Lester E. Huber and wife, from Paris, where they have been studying for nearly a year for their work as missionaries in Africa. Their letter suggested that SUN readers might be interested in what this paper contains.

They attended the Eastern Virginia Conference in Suffolk last November, and Rev. Lester E. Huber was licensed by the Conference. They are going to Switzerland in this month of July, and they will sail for Africa in August.

In their letter they send love and greetings to members and friends of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, and say that they have pleasant memories of their visit to and treatment by the Conference. W. W. STALEY.

Paris is a beautiful city, with its gardens, parks, boulevards, monuments, statues, museums, art galleries, public buildings, palaces, historical places and schools. It is one of the most interesting cities in the world, being a great center educationally, historically, politically and religiously.

From the missionary standpoint, the most outstanding thing in Paris is "sin." Our greatest danger is in getting used to seeing sin, because it is so open and free here. One is tempted to get accustomed to seeing it and not be affected by it. God forbid that we should ever become hardened to the sight of sin. We have found only one antidote for it, and that is in fellowship with the Lord Jesus Christ, the one who hates sin, and the blessed Holy Spirit whose indwelling presence ever makes us recoil from sin. "The name of the Lord is a strong tower, the righteous runneth into it, and is safe" (Prov. 18:10). This blessed fellowship with Him in prayer and the reading of His Holy Word has made us even more sensitive to the sight of sin. Pray for the salvation of precious souls in Paris.

Our stay in Paris has been blessed to us, because we have not only learned a new language, but we have learned to know our Lord in a new way. We expect to sail for Africa in August. "I will even make a way in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert" (Isa. 43:19). Pray that this shall be done in Africa.

NOTICE.

The Eastern Virginia trustees of the Christian Orphanage—Mr. C. D. West, Mr. A. L. Jolley, Mr. B. D. Jones, Mr. L. R. Jones, Mrs. W. H. Andrews, Mrs. M. L. Bryant and J. M. Darden—met in Bro. L. R. Jones' office, in Franklin, Va., on July 11, 1930.

After discussing the financial condition of the Orphanage, it was decided by the committee that we would visit each Sunday School in the Eastern Virginia Conference during the summer in the interest of the Orphanage. I certainly hope the Sunday School superintendents will welcome and receive the committee gladly.

The committee regrets very much to learn that thirty of the children at the Orphanage will have to be operated on for tonsilitis during this month. There are three vital things in rearing children—to watch and care for their physical, mental and moral welfare. We have a physician, therefore, to visit the Orphanage from time to time and go over the children carefully.

The above operations for these children will cost the Orphanage about $300. When a parent takes into consideration what it costs him to have the tonsils of one of his children removed, you can well see that the physicians and the hospital where the children will be operated on certainly contribute largely to the Orphanage, for which we are very grateful. J. M. DARDEN,

President Board of Trustees.

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Mrs. Barcia Nurney Duke, wife of Columbus John Duke, was born in Nansemond County, in the historic Cypress Chapel Christian Church community, on November 11, 1854. Her brother, John T. Nurney, who was a prominent business man in Suffolk, and a leading member and deacon of Suffolk Christian Church, died August 10, 1897; and his widow, Sarah C. Nurney, died at the home of their only daughter, Dr. and Mrs. P. J. Kernodle, in Richmond, Va., on January 6, 1929.

Columbus John Duke and Barcia Nurney were married November 23, 1883. One child was born to them, Charles Columbus Duke, who married Miss Edna Duke, of Baltimore. Their only son and his wife reside next-door to his parents. Father and son are in business together and operate, with A. I. Hines, the Southern Oil business in Suffolk.

C. J. Duke and his wife, Barcia, lived quietly and happily together for more than forty-six years. His wife had a fall that made her a cripple for a long time, and she sat patiently for years in a rolling-chair. During all that "shut-in" period, no one ever heard her complain. Always in a good humor, ready to welcome her friends, and, by her patience and resignation, taught visitors a good, religious lesson. It is often the case, that the helpless cripples teach strong people great lessons. This would be a reckless world if there were no afflicted people to teach patience and resignation. It would do many people more good to visit the shut-ins than to go to card parties.

Mrs. Duke passed out quietly, to meet dear ones gone before and to receive her crown, on May 17, 1930, at the age of 75 years, 6 months, and 6 days. The home is vacant, but filled with sweet memories of happy days that are gone.

Her husband showed me a little book entitled, "While They are With Us," given as "A prize awarded to Miss Barcia Nurney for excellence in spelling, by her teacher," James Crowder, July 26, 1867, when she was twelve years of age. It is a splendid little book of 144 pages. Poetry in the chapters are beautiful. This one:

> "Like the river, time is gliding,
> Brightest hours have no abiding—
> Use the golden moments well."

Mrs. Duke was not only a true Christian, an exemplary wife and mother, but she was true in her girlhood and school days, as the above prize shows. She had kept that good little book for more than sixty years. She had devoted much of her time and strength years ago to the care of her long-afflicted mother. Conditions were such that she was not a regular attendant at Church, but she was loyal to all of its interests, and lived worthy of a place on its roll. Attendance is very important, but loyalty is more important. The Nurney family is passing, but their works do follow them. Jesus left His Church, but it continues to grow in numbers, influence, service and power.

"THAT THEY MAY BE ONE."

BY REV. ALMON O. STEVENS
Moderator, Registrar and Treasurer of Kentucky Conference of Congregational Churches.
Pastor Community Congregational Church, Stearns, Ky.

Church union is in the air. The happy consummation of the union of the Christian and Congregational Churches is but one manifestation of a movement which is gathering force in Christendom. The noble witness which our Christian brethren have borne to this principle is a lasting credit to the Christian fellowship and has been an invaluable contribution to the Christian world. The meetings recently held in Raleigh were charged with the presence of the Spirit. Those of us who had the rare privilege of participating in that fellowship felt as certain men of old that it was good to be there. In view of this great interest in Christian union, it may be well to restate a few of the principles involved.

REV. ALMON O. STEVENS

Christian unity is more than Church union. Church union might be a benefit; it might be a harm.

Union might mean conformity. In the minds of some, it has so meant. Conformity is a doubtful benefit. Christian union is of God. Even visible Church union is of little worth unless it indicates and expresses a deeper spiritual unity. When Jesus prayed that the disciples might be one, He meant more than that they should act alike and be known by a common name. Conformity may make of us more agreeable neighbors. It might not make us better Christians. Conformity will remove many occasions of friction, and may open the door to real spiritual accord. Only as it does lead to a deeper spiritual experience is it of any special value. It is this deeper spiritual experience which we crave. This is the goal towards which Christian union must move.

Christian union is a spirit of sympathy, understanding and appreciation.

Of sympathy: We may tread paths separated by wide fields, yet feel the thrill of a common hope, a common purpose and a common love. The great war was fought by land and sea and air; fought on the frozen plains of northern Europe and on the burning sands of Africa; yet there was an ennobling sense of a common cause. In the agony of war, deep called unto deep, and alien peoples felt in their veins the blood of a common humanity. So whatever stirs our hearts deeply gives a new sense of human brotherhood.

Surely the love of God should accomplish this. What matters it if we worship with different symbols, so long as these varying symbols express a common gratitude to the Giver of all and a common joy in Christ! It is not so important that we act alike. It is more important that the Divine Spirit, like the tide of the sea, sweep through our souls, evoking a mystic harmony. Christians who sympathize with one another are not far apart.

Of understanding: We speak different languages of the Spirit; and strange speech separates what might have been close friends. If the world had one common tongue instead of many, it is quite likely that wars would disappear. Because we would know each other better. And "to understand all is to forgive all." Jesus said of those who took His life: "They know not what they do." If they had known, they would have done differently. Jesus understood; hence, He could put His finger upon the sore place and give the healing touch. To understand our brethren is more than to know about them—to know their history, their creeds, their achievements. To understand is to find the soul back of the history, the creed or the achievement. When we come to understand people, our prejudices usually vanish, because prejudice is mostly based upon lack of understanding. Once come to know people and we marvel at the unsuspected good which we discover in their hearts. Could we better designate the present notable trend towards Christian union than to term it a movement for a better understanding?

Of appreciation: We need to learn to value the qualities which our brothers possess, and in which we may be poor. A philosopher has declared that the basis of the love of man and woman is the discovery each in the soul of the other of qualities which are craved but not possessed. Thus in life's variety we supplement and complete each other.

Truth is wont to come in fragments—here a little and there a little. The man who is ready to appreciate the light which has broken upon other souls has the mind of Christ. Our Congregational heritage is rich. But we do not possess all of the riches. Our Christian brethren may supply that which we need. Christian union should mean the larger heart. Our hearts must be enlarged if they are to contain the greater treasure. As two torches burn more brightly when their flames are united, so in Christian union we may all receive, while losing nothing. As Scripture teaches us to give "not grudgingly," so let us receive "not grudgingly." It is perhaps a finer art to receive graciously than to give generously. This fine art we must practice if our union is to bear fruit.

Christian union requires that we practice consideration. We all have our weaknesses. Most of us have our sensitive spots. To touch carelessly the sore spot is to offend. Estrangement arises less from dissenting opinion than from dissent ungraciously expressed. St. Paul enjoins to "speak the truth in love." If love rules, the unpleasant truth will often rest unspoken. There are many thing true enough which the loving heart will consign to silence and oblivion. But if errors and weaknesses must be pointed out, let it be done "in the spirit of gentleness, considering ourselves lest we also be tempted." We Congregationalists and Christians are not going to find each other faultless. Once the honeymoon is past, we shall discover things that annoy and offend. We must be considerate. The only people who can walk life's difficult way in happy accord and Christian fellowship are those who freely concede to their companions the right to be one's self, to think one's own thoughts, to cherish one's own tastes and preferences without exciting resentment or criticism. The critical spirit is as un-Christian as the vicious habit.

We shall attain true Christian union if we stand upon high ground. An ancient Greek officer, encouraging troops who were marooned in a hostile country separated from home by impassable streams, explained that all streams could be crossed if followed far enough up toward their source. What a parable of life! The turbid streams of discord that separate us become singing brooks when we ascend the higher places "to which our God Himself is moon and sun." A danger to our hopes for union is that we shall waste our energy in adjusting machinery. Some adjustment will be necessary, but mere adjustment of Church machinery will lead into a blind alley. The world needs more prayer, more faith, more hope, more love. If our chief thought as a united Church shall be to show forth the spirit of Christ, adjustment of methods will proceed easily and naturally, and we shall find our reward in spiritual renewal and enrichment of life.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE LETTER.

America is facing three big questions. Are the American ideals which created our nation to disappear from all the American continent? Shall the only American-Anglo-Saxon group on the continent have the poorest educational chances in America? How can this disappearing Americanism be saved for America?

More than one-half of the people of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota are either of foreign birth themselves or the children of the foreign-born; while nearly one-half of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, Montana, Washington, Utah, Arizona, Nevada and California are of foreign stock; and one-third of Ohio, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho and Oregon are of the same stock.

Twenty-eight States have a population one-half foreign; six, one-fifth; one, one-eighth; four, one-twelfth; and the other States have so few that the Census Bureau does not take note of it. All the States which have a homogeneous, American-born white population, and all the other States whose foreign population is less than one-fourth foreign, with the single exception of Indiana, which was settled largely from the South, are in the South. The only American-born, homogeneous, Anglo-Saxon stock on the American continent is in the Southern States. In all other States this stock is rapidly disappearing.

In the Southern States, where practically all are American-born, we have nearly all the illiteracy of the nation. In the twenty-eight Northern States, where more than half are foreign-born, we have all the great colleges and universities of the country, with assets ranging from several millions to more than one hundred millions. New England, the size of an average Southern State, has forty colleges and universities, with assets of hundreds of millions of dollars, and thousands of students. Our foreign-born people are trained in the best public school systems and the best colleges in America, while our native-born group has the poorest public schools and colleges in America.

It is fine that we can offer our foreign-born these unparalleled opportunities, but are we proud that the only homogeneous, American-born, Anglo-Saxon youth in America have the most meager educational opportunities? Scores of our Southern colleges and universities would be glad of the equipment of many of the New England high schools; while the annual income alone of Harvard University would more than duplicate the combined endowment of at least forty of these universities and colleges.

There is but one way to save this disappearing Americanism for America. Give our American-born, Anglo-Salon group an educational opportunity equal to those we give our foreign-born groups. They are eager for an education, but have very limited resources. They beg for a chance to earn their way, but we have very little to offer them. Our colleges need larger resources. We need endowment and equipment. Piedmont College and Piedmont Junior College have a great field—this is our opportunity and responsibility! These aspiring American youth, thrilling with the finest Americanism in America, need educational training to enable them to play their part in the development of the vast untouched resources of the South and to contribute to the retention of American ideals.

BRO. FLOWERS' WORK.

Authentic reports from each of the Churches that Rev. A. R. Flowers has visited in his work among the young people of Georgia, Florida and Alabama since November of last year show results that are gratifying. Bro. Flowers is a man who is very unassuming, but a sound thinker and knows how to fasten his messages to the mind of youth by most appropriate illustrations. Bro. Flowers is non-sectarian in his work, and he has the confidence and the co-operation of other denominations, along with the Free Will Baptists of these States. Besides, he has acquainted us with the principles of other great Christian-spirited denominations that we knew very little about in other States; for instance, the Christian Church that holds almost identically the same principles as the Free Will Baptists of these States, was very little known here. Also there are others that we are glad to know about through the unselfish work of Bro. Flowers.

Hazlehurst, Ga. (Mrs.) Vernon Hughes.

NEWS NOTES.

The fourth Sunday in July is the day set apart for the dedication of our new Church building at Noonday, in the Alabama Conference, and we are expecting a great day. Rev. G. D. Hunt will preach the sermon, and we are expecting some of the former pastors of this Church to be present with us and take a part in the exercises of the day. Our revival meeting will begin on that date. Bro. Hunt has agreed to do the preaching through the meeting. Our people are in a fine spirit and are looking forward to a great meeting.

We are to go to Pisgah, in north Alabama, to do the preaching in a two weeks' union meeting, beginning on the first Sunday in August. Rev. J. H. Hughes is pastor of our Church at Pisgah, and he is one of our best preachers, a real good pastor and one of the best community leaders to be found anywhere. He is loved and honored by the good people of that fine section of north Alabama.

Yours for the building up of His kingdom,

J. H. Dollar.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A DAILY PRAYER.

JULY.

Father, Creator, we thank Thee that, in the capacity and aspiration of humankind, it is innate to learn. Both prophecy and promise decreeing "all shall be taught of God," we deplore prevailing spiritual ignorance and acknowledge its scope as within our own election. Turn us, O God, and give to Thy Church open ears and awakening minds, willing to study to show ourselves approved. In instruction of youth, give, we pray, to leaders and teachers the tongue of them that truly are taught of Thee, that each may know how to speak the word in season. Make us workers unashamed. In Jesus' name. Amen.

THE WILL TO CO-OPERATE—PLUS.

It is a day not only of international and interdenominational, but of interorganizational, activity as well. Co-operation is the word of the hour. It has been wisely stated that organizations as well as persons need more than the will to co-operate; they need to set up the mechanics for co-operation. With the very best will in the world toward each other, it is possible for organizations of similar purpose to stand in each other's way, and thus check progress in the very work they are organized to support. But when we link to a co-operative spirit, actual lines of co-operative endeavor, we find ourselves moving forward steadily and constructively.

Such a step toward co-operative endeavor in the field of missionary education was taken this year by the Council of Women for Home Missions, the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions, and the Missionary Education Movement and representatives of the International Council of Religious Education. It is known as the Joint Committee on Leadership Training. If one were to search through the correspondence and reports of these organizations for months back, it would be easy to pick out such phrases as "acutely feeling the need of leadership development in the local Church" and "on all sides the Church is calling for more leaders."

Why set up conferences and schools of missions if there are few trained teachers for them? Why write study books if leaders are not forthcoming to put them before our Churches? Such questions, striking deep into the very heart of the programs of each organization, were ever-present at executive meetings. Various committees had from time to time been appointed to study the subject; plans to meet the need had been discussed and tried out in the separate headquarters. The time was ripe for taking a forward step; so when, at the annual meeting held in January, 1930, at Atlantic City, it was proposed to work jointly on this great problem, the project was entered into with eagerness.

"To explore the whole field of leadership training in the missionary enterprise and to initiate the best plans and methods for training leaders for the missionary cause" is the expressed purpose of the committee. Three representatives each from the council, federation and movement, the chairman of the joint committee on conferences and schools of missions of these three bodies, and representatives of the International Council is the basis of committee membership. At the first meeting of this joint group, held on March 4th, Mrs. Orrin R. Judd was chosen chairman.

The committee has set itself as main tasks for the present: (1) Holding of training institutes for leaders in conferences and schools of missions and teachers of mission-study books in places already conscious of this need; (2) surveying the entire country to discover points where such institutes might be held in the future; and (3) seeking to stimulate interest and discover needs for this type of training in many sections of the country.

Two institutes have already been held, with results that justify them; the first at Indianapolis, Ind., May 5-6, and the other at Englewood, N. J., May 8-10. The Indianapolis institute had been partly set up by a State group and the committee helped in suggesting programs and leadership. The Englewood institute was entirely in the hands of the joint committee.

It is hoped that the committee will be looked upon not so much as an organizer and promoter of individual institutes, but as a counseling group and an assembler of experience in this line, standing ready at all times to be of service in setting up training institutes.

A very careful analysis of leadership needs throughout the country has led the committee to recommend that all training institutes include classes or discussion groups for three types of need:

1. For inspiration or missionary conviction, presenting the importance of missionary training, a survey of the literature available, and ways in which the missionary attitude can be developed in summer camps, vacation Bible schools and various summer conferences.

2. For background information on subjects with which otherwise experienced leaders are unfamiliar. Textbook courses would be amplified by survey address, and question and answer periods led by persons well posted on the various mission fields.

3. For specific methods in teaching missions to adults, young people and children, very practical sessions, including actual laboratory work in preparation for teaching the textbooks to all ages.

"To inspire, to inform, to prepare, to empower" was the slogan of the Indianapolis institute. These are keywords of leadership training. May the record of Indianapolis and Englewood, added to the valuable experiences of past years, serve to unlock doors all over our land and to point the way to larger effort and increased enthusiasm in this important part of our missionary enterprise. —Sue Weddell, in Missionary Review.

MISSIONARY PROGRAMS FOR JULY.

Woman's Society.

Theme: "Peace."

(Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus. For one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren.)

Song.

Prayer.

Business.

Devotional period: Isa. 60:17, 18; Rom. 13:1, 7; Rom. 12:9; Matt. 22:37-39; Zech. 8:16; Isa. 58:6; Eph. 6:13-18.

Heart-to-heart message.

"Progress Toward World Peace" (in Herald of Gospel Liberty).

"General Pact for the Renunciation of War."

A soliloquy: "Books, Books, Books."

Flag salute: Fourth verse of "America."

Missionary Society Suggestions.

Do not forget to take the offering for the literature fund. And, remember also that the Woman's Missionary Board is asking for at least 10 cents per member from your society. It is the literature fund that provides the free literature for you.

Stress the devotional period with earnest prayers for peace.

The heart-to-heart message will be sent to you in time for your meeting if you have the envelope of helps.

Assign the number "Progress Toward World Peace" to some one who will study the recent papers and magazines to gather the facts of interest on the subject and present them in an interesting way on your program.

A copy of the peace pact is found in the envelope of helps. This may be read and after the reading have some one tell how women can work for peace.

A copy of "A Soliloquay" is in the envelope of helps (other copies can be had at 3 cents per copy). This should be given by three younger women, and by careful thought and preparation can be made very effective and helpful.

Young People's Society.

The Christian Churches of Other Lands.

Purpose: To study the Christian Churches of other lands, to discover their extent and nature, and to learn from them.

1. Hymn: "The Whole Wide World for Jesus."
2. Psalm 100.
3. "Where Are Our Churches?"
4. "Building an Indigenous Church."
5. Debate, or open discussion.
6. "Learning From Other Lands."

7. Special music (if possible, number written by one of another land).

8. Report of the project committee.

9. Hymn: "The Church's One Foundation."

Poem: "I am the Church."

Prayer (for the Church at home, for the Church of the world).

Hymn: "Faith of Our Fathers."

Suggestions.

Poster: Prepare an outline map of the world, with lines drawn from your Church to Dayton, our national Church headquarters, and then from Dayton to all countries where the Congregational and the Christian Churches are now at work (as indicated in leaflet you may secure from our Foreign Mission Department). Below the map place the words, "Building the Church in All the World," with place, date and hour.

3. Secure information from the Foreign Mission Department concerning the enlarged overseas service which we hope to be rendering by this time, and with the map prepared for the poster locate world fields.

4. See Chapter X, Y. and W. O., pages 49, 50. Appoint some one to present facts here, and anything else available regarding the building of an indigenous Church, where the people of the land are leaders. "The Christ of the Indian Road" and "The Christ of the Round-Table," by Stanley Jones, will give suggestive material.

5. Question for debate or discussion suggested in questions on page 48, Y. and W. O., especially 1 and 2.

6. Ask one member to come ready to discuss this theme. Stress lessons regarding Christian unity which Churches of other lands teach us.

7. Include in report any facts regarding Christian or Congregational Churches in foreign lands which can be found.

Junior or Willing Workers' Society.

Theme: "Good Citizenship."

Song: "When Morning Gilds the Skies."

Call to worship (same as last month).

Offering. Vary by letting the children march forward by rows and drop their offering into basket. Then all stand while short prayer is made.

Talk on what it means to be a good citizen. Let the children suggest rules which a good citizen will keep. Write these on a blackboard. Let the children put them in their notebooks. Lead the discussion to show how ministers and missionaries aid people to be good citizens; ministers by helping us to find right laws here, missionaries by carrying the laws to other countries.

Begin a summer-time project. The boys may make the box which will carry the gifts you plan to make, or earn money to buy materials, etc. The girls will like to make little garments to send to Porto Rico. Co-operate with your vacation Bible school in doing this as a part of their handwork. If your treasure chest is not complete, this will be a splendid project. Write for full information if you have not already secured it.

Close with flag salutes.

American Flag salute: "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and the republic for which it stands; one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Sing first verse of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

Christian flag salute: "I pledge allegiance to the Christian flag, and to the Saviour for whose kingdom it stands, one brotherhood, uniting all mankind in service and love."

Sing first verse of "Fling Out the Banner."

Cross flags, Christian flag uppermost. Sing as a prayer with bowed heads, the last verse of "America."

LITTLE THINGS COUNT.

I always thought that a shoe-shine was just another clever way of getting rid of loose dimes. But that was before I found that gem of a bootblack, Jim.

Jim has a bootblacking parlor on a side street near the center of town, and I pass there twice daily. There was a particularly disgusted expression on my face when I entered his establishment for the first time and slumped down on the most convenient chair. There was a reason. My new pair of tan oxfords that had cost me in terms of corns and callouses, not to mention the customary filthy lucre, were fastly losing their brilliant orange color, and I was on the verge of having them dyed black.

Jim appraised them carefully with an experienced eye and waddled across the room, where he moistened a sponge in the bucket there. Thoroughly cleansing the shoes with water, a blower was next applied, and the warm air soon dried them nicely. The spots remaining were touched with a cleaning fluid; and then I discovered the poetry of motion in Jim's bootblack technique. His shine cloth traveled rapidly over my shoes again and again, and soon I could almost see my reflection in them.

Going over my next pair of tans (yes, there will be others, now!) with Neatsfoot oil before they are worn will, so Jim tells me, keep them waterproof and clean. And, with proper care they will retain their original color for a year or more.

Frequently now, when I pass Jim's place, I step in and have my shoes "gone over." They are looking great under his careful grooming, and he has profited somewhat by my usual trips, I know. I've even directed my friends there—and enthusiastically.

In business, or in anything else, it's the little things that count. Jim is blacker than the ace of spades, and his kinky wool is fast turning gray. Yet he has learned a little salesmanship in his thirty years of bootblacking, and he applies it well. He has turned a lowly occupation into a paying vocation by giving that "extra service."

Trifles, we are told, make perfection. One must pay attention to the little things to succeed.—Selected.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson IV—July 27, 1930.

Deborah.

Golden Text: "Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not."—Isa. 35:4.

Lesson: Judges 4:1-15.

The children of Israel had sinned, and the inevitable happened—they were defeated by their enemies. Sin robs a man of his power in dealing with moral and spiritual powers. Jabin the King of Canaan was making the most of the situation, too. It was not safe to travel on the caravan roads, traffic had almost ceased, the cultivated land had been plundered, the fighting men in Israel had been disarmed, a shield nor a spear was not to be found among forty thousand men, and paralyzing fear had laid hold upon the people. The situation looked bad.

But it was not hopeless. For there was at least one person in Israel who had not lost heart and who had not lost faith. That person was a woman named Deborah. She was evidently a woman of outstanding ability, for she "judged Israel"; that is, she performed the function of what we would now call a supreme justice, in a way. Deborah had not only ability; she had character, and she had faith in God. She believed that moral and spiritual force in the long run would always defeat physical force. She knew that there were resources that could not be seen with the naked eye. She was a woman of action, and she started things.

Barak was a good man, but he lacked aggressiveness. Deborah summoned Barak and told him to march against Sisera, the captain of the host of Jabin. She told him that he would be victorious. On the face of it, it looked like a wild boast. Here was a great leader with a large and well-equipped army, strategically located, and here was a man with a much smaller army, unorganized, and with practically no equipment. The odds were all in favor of Sisera—the human odds.

But there was a factor which neither Sisera nor Barak had reckoned with. God had the last word to say. And when Barak had gathered his scattered forces and from the wooded slopes had attacked Sisera, a great storm broke into the faces of Sisera's army, not only making it difficult for them to see, but what was worse, turning the plain into a morass so that the horses floundered and the chariots became mired. Confusion and then fright, and then utter and paralyzing fear followed. Sisera's great and proud army of a few hours before became a mob of fugitives. The Israelites made short work of them and utterly destroyed them. Sisera himself escaped for the time being, but when he sought refuge in the tent of Heber the Kenite, a member of a friendly tribe, he was foully murdered while he slept by Jael, the wife of Heber. Thus came to a disgraceful end his high-handed expedition.

In recounting the incidents in the fifth chapter of Judges, which is known as the Song of Deborah, the writer says, "The stars in their courses fought against Sisera." It is a poetic way of putting a great moral truth. In the "long run, the forces of earth and sky alike are hostile to the low type of life represented by Sisera. Cruilty, oppression, inhumanity are doomed to defeat. When nations or individuals cultivate those qualities, they are fighting the stars—and the stars will be too much for them."

"The forces of evil are sometimes victorious in a skirmish. Now and then they even win a battle, but the war goes always against them. When the end comes and the articles of capitulation are signed, the forces of evil are found biting the dust. There are all manner of forces, human and dviine, seen and unseen, perpetually at war with wrongdoing. The combination of all these mighty energies makes the outcome sure. The man who in any wise undertakes to live a wrong life is fighting a losing battle with the stars."

This is not a temperance lesson, but there is a lesson here. There may be something to be said for the liquor traffic, but there is nothing to be said for it morally. It is and always has been on the wrong side of abiding moral principles. In essence, it is an outlaw. It is, therefore, doomed. The stars in their courses are fighting against it, and it is doomed. There is still need for vigilance and aggressive campaign against it, but those who are opposed to it may be assured that it cannot win the war. In spite of all the ballyhoo of our day, the battle, and certainly the campaign, is going against the "wets."

The story of Deborah is the story of a talented, noble woman, who had the capacity of inspiring men to play their part like men. She is a representative of that long list of women, most of them very humble and most of them unknown, who have inspired in their sweethearts or their husbands or their children or their fellow-citizens the determination to do or to die. In fact, some one has said that back of the life of every good, as well as every great, man there has been the life of a good woman.

Topic: "Changing China."

Prelude: "O Zion, Haste."

Hymn: "More Like the Master," or "He Leadeth Me."

Opening sentence:

"Live and let live!" was the call of the old—
The call of the world when the world was cold;
The call of men when they pulled apart;
The call of the race with a chill on the heart.
But "Live and help live!" is the cry of the new—
The cry of the world with the dream shining through;
The cry of the brother world rising to birth;
The cry of the Christ for a comrade—like earth.

—Edwin Markham.

Hymn: "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Scripture reading: 2 Chron. 15:1-7.

Suggestions for Talks.

1. How China has Changed. The biggest problem in present-day China is that of the changing home. Formerly the family was the unit of Chinese life. Each home used to be a little principality. In this little kingdom, all types of work needed by the members of the group were carried on. All the sons of a man stayed in the same homestead of their father, with their own families until the father died. Then each of them sets up a home of his own. China was built up by this method of splitting homes. In such a unit, the individual does not count as such. He is merely a part of the family. He even refrains from crime in order not to disgrace the family name. The family punished its own members for crime. Police were not necessary.

Today, since industrialism is playing such a part in China, conditions are very different. The women have left the home and entered industry. Woman had full charge in the home, and now there is only an empty shell left. The home has crumbled. The old power of China is gone. The girls come from the seclusion of the home where moral conditions are good, away from family protection, to the city to work. They have a very difficult time getting adjusted to the new conditions.

2. Our Part in Changing China. (a) We send business concerns, movies, etc., to China in order that we may make money there.

(b) We send educational and religious missionaries.

(c) What part are we responsible for in China's present difficult position? Have we contributed anything that may help her to overcome the difficulties?

(d) Do you think some, if not all, of China's present problems would have come eventually without our part ever having been played?

3. Present-Day Missions. "The mission fields are ever opening up new opportunities of service. The world has become smaller, so that the mission problems of today differ from those of yesteryear, and the the missionary today must be prepared differently than he was a generation ago. Then the missionary might bury himself in a pagan atmosphere and there, with himself as the light, build up a Christian community which radiated the life and spirit of Christ. The only obstacle to the complete realization of the Christ-life in the community was the limitation of the teacher. His constituency never doubted his purpose; they never doubted his message; they never questioned his interpretation of Christ. They saw their religion lived out in his life and they never doubted that that was the way it was lived out in the lives of all whom Christianity might touch. Today this is no longer so. Tourists are constantly making their way into the most remote sections of the world. The business man is pressing into the territory made safe by Christian missions. Men from the farthest corners of the earth are making their ways into Christian countries. Radios and rapid travel are tying the entire world together. The missionary finds his work qualified and his example in Christian living modified by others who profess to be Christians also. He finds the good will which he would build up undermined by unscrupulous corporations. These influences he must meet and must in some way prepare his people for them.

"The whole field of industry is making its way into the Far East. It is being carried there by men who seek personal gain. The lives and the needs of the native peoples who are to work are not considered as so important as the money which is to be made. All the ills of industrialism are being transplanted along with any good there may be. Thus the whole field of industry becomes the problem of the mission field. This must somehow be Christianized. Yet we have not succeeded in Christianizing it at home. Many of the problems of industrial missions are set forth in 'Messages and Recommendations of the International Missionary Council,' held at Jerusalem in 1928. The February, 1930, issue of World Call carries the biography of Toyohiko Kagawa, a sainted Japnaese, who is striving to solve some of these problems for his people."—Christian Endeavor Guide.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

CHARACTER THROUGH CREATIVE EXPERIENCE. By William C. Bower. The University of Chicago Press; $2.50.

Critics of the teaching work of the Church have charged that the theory underlying the practice of religious education lagged far behind that of general education. That charge can no longer be truthfully made. Prof. Bower's book places religious education in the very vanguard of educational theory; and what is more, it is distinctively Christian.

Dr. Bower does not apologize for religion. He rather exalts it. To him, the religious teacher is no intruder. He is rather the rightful occupant of the citadel. Religion is a quality of every experience, or should be. It not only deals with values, but it evaluates all values, and so it is the integrating force, the rallying center, of all life's experiences. Until any issue has been disposed of and judgment passed upon its outcome in terms of the standards of religion, it has not been properly disposed of. Religion not only integrates experience, but it reconstructs it in spiritual terms. It further emphasizes the ideal aspects of experience and motivates conduct by a forth-reaching inner urge. And all of this it is able to achieve because of the reconstructive influence of the fact of God, "the most dynamic and heavily charged word in the human language." Religious education is, therefore, higher than general education, because it includes an evaluation of all that general education connotes in terms of God.

Creative experience, according to Dr. Bower, when integration has taken place, results in personality which is defined as "what a person is in the total aspect of his impulses, habits, attitudes and ideals." But personality differs from character, which is "what he (the person) is judged to be when that organization of impulses, habits, attitudes and ideas is subjected to criticism and evaluation in the light of the approved social, ethical and spiritual standards which he himself or the group of which he is a member accepts, in the light of the tested experience of the race and of the demands of the present situation." Experience is creative when the person faces an identifiable situation and, after searching his own experience and that of the race for light and insight, and after exploring all the possible outcomes through reflective thinking, evaluation and purposing, deliberately comes to a conclusion which he forthwith experiments with and, if found tenable and wholesome, reduces to habit. The mind of the learner is active throughout. Education is self-education, with such assistance as the teacher may give as guide and stimulator.

Education arises out of the person's own experience. Dr. Bower has small room for anticipating experience, a device or suggestion of those who would speak the language of education as a continuous reconstruction of experience, but have not the courage of their convictions. Since Bower is the recognized chief exponent of experience as the basis of the curriculum, it will be well to quote him at length on this point. He says: "In regard to this problem, three comments seem to be justified by a consistent theory, subject to actual experimentation. The first is that the conditions should be very extraordinary in order to justify the anticipation of experience. Other things being equal, things are best learned when they are motivated by felt need. The second is that except in the most remote instances, it will be possible to utilize the technique suggested in the foregoing paragraph, of setting these items in the context of a wider experience, so that the child can perceive that they are means toward ends, through the utilization of indirect interest. The third is that in moral education probably the only exceptions to the basic procedure of dealing with issues as they arise in current experience should be in case of experiences which involve considerable risk, such as sex experimentation and suicide. And even in these hazardous instances probably the most constructive approach to their solution is through building up in connection with other experiences standards and sets of values and organized purposes which may be trusted to guide the learner and sustain him when these issues do arise in actual experience. It is an open question whether there are not a number of situations which may be dealt with quite as constructively in this indirect way as in a more direct manner."

There is no such thing as teaching abstract ideas, such as honesty, truthfulness, and sincerity. Life is not a vacuum nor an abstraction, but an on-going process, a continuum of experience. A man may be honest in one thing and dishonest in another. The transfer of learning is limited to situations with certain elements of content and procedure in common, in which the thing to be transferred is raised to consciousness, and in which there is a desire on the part of the learner that such a transfer should take place. The only

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

THE TEST OF EASE.

"My yoke is easy, and my burden is light."—Matt. 11:23-30.

Our Lord was a carpenter. Doubtless, He spent far more time at His carpenter's bench than He spent in all the ministry which ended in His atoning death on Calvary. And a beautiful tradition of Him is that His carpenter's specialty was the making of yokes, that He knew how best to fit the cumbrous and heavy wooden collar on the neck of the patient best so that it would not chafe, so that the burden could most readily be borne and the plow most easily be pulled.

If that was the case, what loving memories He put into His statement about His yoke! For He has a yoke for every one's shoulder, He has a task for every soul, some weight to lift, some plow to pull.

He knows what yoke-bearing means, the unutterable joy of it, and that the joy overbalances the toil forever, and that the joy comes in no other way than through the toil. Therefore, he fits a yoke to every shoulder of His followers, and we should be glad of it, and wear it as a royal badge. Love made His yoke easy, and it will ease ours.

Prayer.—Dear Saviour, if we love Thee as Thou didst love us, we shall find Thy yoke no burden, but rather it will become wings to our soul. We accept Thy test with pride. We bend to Thy yoke with joy. It is a symbol—dare we not say it?—of the work which Thou dost share with us. Thy work, dear Saviour. And ours. Amen.

OUR S. O. S.

"They cried out the more, saying, Lord, have mercy on us."—Matt. 20:29-34.

The first report of the British Board of Trade regarding the sinking of the S. S. Vestris, with such terrible loss of life, stated that the S. O. S. from the ill-fated vessel was sent out six hours too late, and the complete report explains this tragic delay by quoting the instructions of the owners to all their captains, urging them, if possible, in case of disaster, to fight their way to the nearest port unaided. The owners know that salvage charges are high.

No such callous consideration withheld the two blind men at Jericho. The bystanders tried to quiet their shouts, but in vain. They began to send out their frantic S. O. S. as soon as they heard that the Great Physician was in the neighborhood, and they did not cease until they had gained His attention and received the priceless gift of sight.

So should it be with all who have not found the Saviour. Theirs is a world far darker than that of Bartimæus. They are sinking in a sea of death far more dreadful than that which threatened the passengers on the Vestris. Their pride urges them to send out no S. O. S. Worldliness and greed and selfishness and sense gratification combine to keep them mute. But what are these alongside the certainty of their fearful fate?

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, we need Thee! Come to our help this day, this hour! We cannot help ourselves, for sin has dominion over us. We know Thou art willing, and eager, so come at our call. Save! O save! Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

PLEASANTNESS AND HELPFULNESS.

"The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places."—Psa. 16:1-11.

In going through a large new hospital, I was most happily struck with the pretty window-hangings in the different private rooms. Each room had its own color scheme—soft, harmonious, delightful. It was a beautiful contrast to the glaring white walls and ugly opaque curtains to be found in most hospitals.

Doctors are now recognizing the curative value of lovely colors, and they will recognize it more and more. As a distressing color combination will retard recovery, an exquisite one will often accelerate it. Nor is the principle different in the cure of sorrow and of sin. Whoever wants to be helpful in the domain of the spirit must be pleasant. The old-time view that religion must be stern and solemn in order to accomplish its healing functions was altogether un-Christian and unsound. At times, of course, wickedness must be rebuked and severely punished; but that is only in emergencies.

So let us not only realize that God has laid our lines in pleasant places, but let us cast in pleasant places the lines of all we meet, as far as we can. Christianity is the heart of delight, and the Christian is a joy-dispenser first of all.

Prayer.—We will never associate the thought of Thee, O Christ, with anything but pleasantness. Be Thou our happiness, we pray Thee, and through us the happiness of many more. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

NO FUNDS.

"Behold, ye trust in lying words, that cannot profit."—Jer. 7:8-15.

A man, fined the other day in a Boston court, gave the court officer a check for $100 which was returned from the bank with the statement that the culprit had no funds there. Brought into court again, the man explained that he gave the wrong check and did not intend to deceive; but the court, just the same, increased his fine to $150.

All hypocrisy, all pretence of being or possessing what one is not or does not own, is a most serious offense against society and against God. Making one's self out to be more learned than one is, more skillful, more beautiful, more upright and noble—and this acting may take a myriad forms—all of this is condemned by the strict honesty of our religion.

No lie is profitable. No hypocrisy in the end commends the hypocrite. It is sure to be discovered by men, and of course it is instantly noted by God.

Prayer.—Thou who wilt be our Judge, Thou who art our Judge daily and hourly, help us to be completely true. May we have bank deposits to meet every check which we may issue in speech or action. May we put no trust in lying words. Amen.

FRIDAY.

CHRIST'S FIRE.

"I came to cast fire upon the earth."—Luke 12:49-59.

Our Lord is the Prince of Peace, but He never cries, "Peace, peace," when there is no peace. He came, He said, not to bring peace, but a sword. He came not to unite, but to divide. For God has said that there is no peace to the wicked.

There is a time for fire, and there is a time for the casting of water on the fire. The time for fire is when the seeds of pestilence are to be burned out, when a region is to be purified. A man with a passion for purity such as Christ had, rejoices in the purifying flames. It is not a fire of destruction but a herald of regeneration.

Nothing in the spiritual realm is worse than stagnation. If you are smugly content with your condition, how Christ longs to cast fire upon your life! Let us not ask for peace, but let us ask for purity.

Prayer.—Saviour of sinners, become flame in our souls! Burn out every evil thing! Pierce to every secret corner! Purge and purge and purge, till we are clean every whit. We ask it in Thy holy name, Lord Jesus. Amen.

SATURDAY.

SORROW SPREADS.

"If any hath caused sorrow, he hath caused sorrow . . . to you all."—2 Cor. 2:1-11.

Among the Christians at Corinth there was an instance of a terrible and most disgraceful sin. Paul grieved deeply over it. He felt it personally, and he felt it for the Church as a whole. He forgave the repentant sinner, and urged the Church to do the same, but he was obliged to emphasize the spread of sorrow from a single point of shame.

That is the worst of sin. It would be bad enough if the effect were confined to the sinner, for it is an eternal effort, its end is death. But the effect of sin is never confined to the sinner. A single sin has endless, infinite results, and that is why we need an infinite Saviour to overtake it.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, show us the selfishness of sin. Show us the contemptible meanness of sin. Show us the exceeding sinfulness of sin. May we be so ashamed to injure others with our sin that it will cease to allure us. Not in our own strength can we gain the victory, but in Thine infinite power. Amen.

SUNDAY.

LIBERTY.

"For freedom did Christ set us free."—Gal. 5:1-13.

Few words are more abused than "liberty." The wets, when they urge "personal liberty," mean liberty to do all the harm that can be done by intoxicants, to themselves and others. Certain loud-mouthed advocates of "free" speech mean speech that is "free" to destroy all law. Other advocates of a "free" press mean type that is free to corrupt, degrade, and inflame. The liberty thus prated of is nothing but license.

But let us not allow our disgust at such utterances to end our reverence for freedom. Christianity has set its divine stamp on that word. Christ, by His death, has set us free from sin and death. That statue in New York Harbor has an eternal meaning, and we should ever be grateful to the French for one of the most significant acts that ever bound two free peoples together. By all our reverence for true liberty, we should resent the present tendency to exalt the liberty which is only a mockery of the real.

Prayer.—We long, O divine Emancipator, to cast off every chain of the spirit. We long for the liberty of all our brothers and not only of ourselves. And we pray for the speedy enfranchisement of all this groaning world. Amen.

REDIGGING OLD WELLS.

"And Isaac digged again the wells of water which they had digged in the days of Abraham, his father, for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham."—Gen. 26:18.

(Concluded from Last Week.)

Patience is a vital factor in strengthening our faith. Patience enables us to do God's work as it should be, which is a day at the time, ever looking to Him to guide and care for the morrow. This thought is illustrated in the experience of a certain lady who met with a serious accident recently. As a result, she was confined for a long time. Just after the doctor had completed the work of bandaging and ministering to her wounds she asked him, saying, "Doctor, how long shall I have to lie here?" His reply was, "Only one day at the time." So it is that God expects us to do His work, just one day at a time. Let us be patient in well-doing, even though the enemy stop up the wells we have completed.

It is always true that he who does a good work will meet opposition. Because of this fact, that Jesus came to establish a kingdom of love on the earth, He was crucified. Because Isaac tried to provide water for the thirsty herds and flocks that inhabited the pasture lands of Palestine, the wells were stopped up. Every person who digs a well of truth, a well of good water, or even maintains a well by the side of the road, as did Jacob, may expect to have some enemy come and stop it up. There are some people who delight in throwing stones into wells for the amusement thereof. Indeed, some people have a very poor conception of what a good time is, anyhow. Be it remembered that anything that works a hardship on some one else is not a good time. Anything that one can do in the name of Christian service is a genuine good time.

I wonder how many of us have the patience to busy ourselves for a while in redigging some of the old wells that we have stopped up ourselves. Many of us came into possession of some most valuable wells by inheritance, and as we have grown old we have been like the Philistines, i. e., our enemies have stopped them up with earthly things. Let us think of a few of the wells that we might well redig.

1. The well of playfulness. Play is an instinct. It is just as essential to life as work. Play is preparation for work, and without play, work would become drastic drudgery. Man was born into a world of play, and during the first few years of his life, he, as a child, enjoyed the world of play and make-believe, and then he begun to fill up the well with thought of work and prosperity. The well of play needs to be opened again in the lives of most of us. Were we to play with children, keep vitally in touch with their interests, read their stories and never cease to forget the fact that once we were boys and girls, then life would take on a new atmosphere.

One of the finest things a father ever does is to play ball with his boys. But most daddies have forgotten how to even pitch a ball. The well needs to be cleaned out—and to learn to play all over again will require patience, but remember Isaac redigged again the wells that the enemy had stopped. It is a sad fact that most men and women have forgotten how to play. Some of them sit down and play games of cards now, but they get little enjoyment out of it, because they are striving to win a prize. Men who play golf do not always play golf. They go forth on the links to bet, to argue, and contend. Play should be diverting, recreational, i. e., play should re-create a newness of life.

Play is not play unless it comes up to the following requirements: (1) Does it rest and strengthen the body, or does it weary and weaken? (2) Does it rest and strengthen or does it weary the brain? (3) Does it increase or lessen love for virtue, purity, temperance and justice? (4) Does it make temptation easier or harder to resist? (5) Does it give inspiration and quicken enthusiasm, or stupify the intellectual and harden the moral nature? (6) Does it increase or diminish respect for manhood and womanhood? (7) Does it remove one from God or draw one closer to Him?

2. The well of cheerfulness. We came into a bright world, and for years we were cheerful, and as age crept upon most of us we begin to fill up the well of cheerfulness. Today we are lacking in happiness and joy because we have been an enemy against ourselves. No one filled up the well of cheer but yourself. You let worry have a chance, and with his assistance all the cheer of a lifetime began to cloud your face and wrinkle your brow. Brethren, these things ought not to be. Maybe this little poem will help many of us:

If you are on the gloomy line,
Get a transfer.
If you are inclined to fret and pine,
Get a transfer.
Get off the track of doubt and gloom;
Get on the Sunshine Train; there's room—
Get a transfer.

If you're on the worry train,
Get a transfer.
You must not stay there and complain,
Get a transfer.
The cheerfulness cars are passing through,
And there's lots of room for you—
Get a transfer.

If you are on the grouchy track,
Get a transfer.
Just take a happy special back:
Get a transfer.
Jump on the train and pull the rope
That lands you at the station Hope—
Get a transfer.

Inner sunshine, such as cheerfulness, creates, warms not only the owner of one's heart, but all those who surround him. The habit of viewing things cheerfully and thinking about life hopefully, may become a well-established habit in any life. It must be practiced, and correct practice leads to perfection. There is an art in being glad just as much so as there is an art in music, poetry and painting. However easy it may seem to develop the talent for any kind of art, it is to be remembered that much effort must be put forth at all times to become well-versed. All of us could not be great painters or musicians, no matter how hard we tried, but all could attain the art of just being cheerful and glad.

On the matter of keeping open the well of cheerfulness, our Lord had much to say. In his ministry, He spoke very directly concerning three good cheers—listen to them: (1) The good cheer of forgiveness, "Be of good cheer, thy sins be forgiven." (2) The good cheer of companionship, "Be of good cheer, be not afraid, it is I." (3) The good cheer of victory, "Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world."

Cheerfulness is a friend to hope and love. It puts the heart in tune with God. Uncheerful Christians, like spies, bring evil reports. Let us all be serious, yet cheerful. Always rejoicing in the Lord. Some Christians look at their failures, some look around at their hindrances. Others look up at their Saviour. There is nothing that should be coveted any more than the ability to—

Brighten the corner where you are;
Brighten the corner where you are;
Some one far from harbor you may guide across the bar—
Brighten the corner where you are.

3. The well of restfulness. As children, we used to rest a part of each day. Now that we have grown older, we are too busy to come apart from the attractions and rest these weary bodies of ours. As the bow cannot always remain bent, neither can the human nature subsist without some rest apart from the hum of life and duty. In some parts of India there are provided along the roadside little resting-places for those who carry heavy burdens upon their heads and shoulders. Such a resting-place is called a "sumatan-

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

During the school term, the State furnished a graduate nurse to visit our school and give all the children an examination as to eye, teeth and throat. She reported those who needed attention, and in her examinations she found about thirty-six whose tonsils needed to be removed. Just a small number whose eyes needed attention, and some with bad teeth. Two doctors in Burlington have kindly agreed to come to the Orphanage two days each week and give our children a thorough examination, taking about ten each day until the task is finished. We have another doctor who is a great friend to the Orphanage who performs these operations six per day two days each week. The Rainey Hospital, Burlington, has been kind to us, too, and have made a very low rate for hospital expenses, so all working together, we hope to have all the children treated who need it. God is good to us, and gives those who help us a real joy in the service rendered. One of the real joys that come to us is the loyal friends we have who come to our rescue in the time of need. It makes our work easier, our burdens lighter, and our joy more complete.

If you want to get a real joy out of life, just help the helpless and those who are unable to help themselves. Then will a real joy fill your heart that has not been there before. If you don't believe it, just try it out and see. A number of years before I became superintendent of the Orphanage, I undertook to support a little child in the Orphanage, and of all the contributions I made, I got the most real joy out of supporting that little child. I was so interested in it that I could hardly wait until the end of the month to mail my check. It was a joy to me.

ga." These rests have a shelf upon which the traveler may place his burden and a bed on which, in the middle of the day, he can rest his weary bones and thus refresh himself for the remainder of his journey. Referring to one of these resting-places one day, a native Indian woman spoke of Jesus as being her "Sumatanga." Our hearts and lives may be willed with genuine peace and restfulness if we dig again the wells of rest and once more open our hearts unto Him by obeying His command, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

All of us may have a satisfying peace which passeth all understanding if we let Jesus come into our hearts. When He puts His protecting arm around us, the storms of life are caused to become a calm. Within our lives there is a quiet and a restfulness. The man who does not redig the well of Christian restfulness is like the troubled sea which cannot rest, but goes moaning and tumbling, rolling and heaving, monotonous and salty, barren and misty. It is the true emblem of every man who will not heed the call to come apart into a desert place and rest.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS.

way to get a person to do the thing he knows he ought to do but does not want to do is to motivate him within. This the method of teaching through creative experience achieves, and so it holds the keys to the future of education.

But how is the teacher to know the vital experience of his group, upon which all fruitful education must depend? Techniques for the discovery and organization of such units of learning are described. Such instruments as that for recording situations and responses, analysis of human relations, interest analysis, life-history, the time-activity analysis, and co-operative self-exploration are explained and criteria for judging such techniques of discovery are outlined. Space is even given for the effect of unconscious issues.

An elaborate teaching technique of thirteen steps is described, showing that "the development of Christian personality functioning through a Christian institution and the spiritual reconstruction of society" is no matter for novices or to be lightly undertaken. These steps, not to be slavishly followed, are, realizing the situation, the definition of the issue involved, the search of the learner's past experience, the search of the racial experience, analyzing the situation, analyzing the response for outcomes, the identification of possible outcomes, the evaluation of possible outcomes, the choice of the outcome, appreciation, experimentation, generalization of the outcome, and reducing the outcome to a habit. All of this is the outcome of the pattern set by the scientific method, which is conceived to be universally applicable in all experience.

One problem Dr. Bower does not solve, but he clearly recognizes it. He says: "The practical processes by which religion may be made available for the purposes of character education in direct relation to the total educational experience of the child and youth without violating the principle of the separation of Church and State is a problem too complex to be elaborated in this discussion. The problem of how to make religion available for character education under the conditions of American life lies partly in the field of education, partly in the field of technique, partly in the field of content, and partly in the field of organization. It must suffice for the present purpose to point out the available resources in religion for assisting the young to achieve the good life through the processes of creative experience."

Some day, let us hope, he will address himself to the solution of this problem, upon which the future of the American people so inescapably depends.

Here is a book destined to exert a profound influence on education—education of every realm. It is not too much to say that it marks an epoch in the development of educational philosophy, rounding out as it does the theory of education already projected, but not fully developed in the author's "The Curriculum of Religious Education" (Scribner's; 1928), and his "Religious Education in the Modern Church" (Bethany, 1929). Educational prophets may not wish to endorse Dr. Bower's new technique, but they will undoubtedly applaud his new ideal, and they will as certainly be forced, whatever their own philosophies of education may be, to pause and give consideration to this challenging volume.

OBITUARIES.

THRALL.

The many friends of Dr. J. Brainerd Thrall, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Asheville, N. C., were grieved to learn of the passing of Mrs. Thrall on Thursday, June 19th, after an illness of six weeks. The funeral was held at the Church on the following Saturday and was conducted by Rev. John Brittain Clark, D. D., of Tryon, assisted by the pastors of Asheville Churches.

Mrs. Thrall was born in Litchfield, Conn., in the old Wolcott mansion, erected before the Revolution, and later the birthplace of two Governors, both of the Wolcott family. Her father was a distinguished lawyer of Connecticut, and her mother a daughter of Governor Henry Dutton, who for many years was dean of the Yale Law School and Supreme Court judge. She and her husband came to Asheville from Leicester about seventeen years ago, when Dr. Thrall, ably assisted by his wife, organized the Congregational Church in Asheville. Mrs. Thrall organized the Ladies' Aid Society of the Church and had served as its president continuously. She was a woman of leadership and ability and possessed a kind disposition and charming personality. She will be mourned by a host of friends. She is survived by her husband and seven children.

AERINGTON.

Hebron Christian Church has lost its oldest and one of its most respected men during her history. William Aerington, son of John and Elizabeth Aerington, was born March 12, 1840, and died May 25, 1930, age 90 years, 2 months and 13 days. Nearly fifty years ago he united with Hebron Church. When a young man he was married to Miss Mary Yancey, who lived only a few years. One son, Hammett Thomas, was born to them and survives. In 1876 he married Miss Fanny Perkins, and born to them were three children, Mrs. Blanch Rice (deceased), Mrs. Annie Belle Hite (deceased), and Raleigh Lee. There are eleven grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Bro. Aerington was a soldier in the Civil War. He was a successful farmer, accumulated property, a man of natural intelligence and sound, practical judgment. For forty years he had walked by aid of crutches, yet was of a genial nature and splendid company. It has been the writer's privilege to visit in his home for twelve years, and many a pleasant hour has been spent in conversation with him. He was devoted to his children, and they to him. His friends were many. His faith in God was firm. His influence for good was great, and his reward in heaven, I believe, is a glorious one.

The funeral and burial were held at his Church on Monday, May 26, 1930. The Church was filled with relatives and friends, and flowers were profuse. At the grave a colored minister, a close friend for fifty years, at the request of the deceased made several years before death, gave one of the finest eulogies I ever heard. The Confederate Flag was placed on the grave, and Mrs. Slagel and Mrs. Wright, representing the Daughters of the Confederacy, sang a beautiful duet.

May the Lord comfort the family, and may the mantle worn so nobly by the deceased in performance of duty rest in spirit upon sorrowing survivors.

C. E. NEWMAN.

TRUITT.

Mrs. Amanda Albertine Truitt, wife of W. H. Truitt, departed this life May 28, 1930, being 68 years, 11 months, and 5 days of age. She was the daughter of the late Capt. Yancey and Sally Tickle, of Alamance County, N. C. To this union eight children were born—Mrs. H. L. Barham, Egbert and A. P. Truitt, Mrs. C. W. Whitaker, Mrs. E. B. Roscoe, Mrs. C. E. Greeson, C. J. Truitt, and Mrs. H. H. Zimmerman; also twenty-nine grandchildren, three great-grandchildren, one sister and two half-brothers. She was the first of the immediate family to depart.

In early life, she united with Friedens Evangelical Lutheran Church, of which she remained a member until death. After marriage, she became a regular attendant of Shallow Ford Christian Church and here she entered into the life of this Church in such a whole-hearted way that she was considered a member in reality though not in name.

A goodly woman, a devoted wife, a loving mother has gone in person, but she lives in the hearts and lives of those who came under her blessed, hallowing influence. The 31st chapter of Proverbs so beautifully describes her character, her life. Truly, her husband and her children called her blessed.

The large audience from a distance and near filled even to standing room the Church at Shallow Ford, for her burial, attested their devotion to and love for this dear good wife, loving mother and devoted Christian. May God's richest benediction attend the bereaved husband and sorrowing children. The burial services at Shallow Ford were conducted by Rev. G. W. McClanahan, pastor of Friedens Church; Rev. G. O. Lankford, of the First Christian Church, Burlington, and myself.

STIGALL.

Mrs. Ella Taylor Stigall was born February 22, 1866, and died May 27, 1930, age 64 years, 3 months and 5 days. About twenty years ago she married Farmville Stigall, who died a few years ago. Early in life she professed faith in Christ and united with Purley M. E. Church, but later transferred to Lebanon Christian Church, where she was a member at the time of her death. For several years she had made her home with her nearest kin, Bro. Walter Jeffress, of Milton, N. C., R. F. D. Brother and Sister Jeffress were very kind and attentive during Sister Stigall's long illness and intense sufferings. She was a Christian woman and esteemed by all. While she will be missed from the home and her circle of friends, all feel that she died in the faith.

PILAND.

Mrs. Julia May Piland, wife of B. F. Piland and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Milteer, died at the home of her parents, Portsmouth, Va., June 11, 1930, at the age of twenty-seven. The funeral was conducted at the home by the writer, assisted by Revs. W. C. Hook, of Holland, Va., and Rev. T. A. Russel, of Portsmouth, and the body interred in Holland Cemetery.

Beside the husband and parents mentioned, Mrs. Piland leaves three sisters—Mrs. Charles Briggs, Misses Gertie and Virginia Milteer, of Portsmouth; six brothers—W. P. Milteer, of Newport, R. I., and Roger Lester, Wilson, Elliott and Robert, of Portsmouth; three uncles—A. T. Milteer, Quitiman, Ga.; Lloyd Savage, Portsmouth, and Clyde Costin, South Norfolk; and seven aunts—Mrs. Phenie Pearce, Lawley, Fla.; Miss Emily Milteer and Mrs. Etta Doughtie, Holland; Mrs. Beulah Bennett, Buckhorn; Mrs. Waltie William, Portsmouth; Mrs. Annie Williams, Winston, N. C., and Mrs. Maggie Proctor, South Norfolk.

The deceased was a member of Whaleyville Methodist Church, and passed out of long and severe suffering with Christian faith and resignation. May our Heavenly Father bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

A NEW CHRISTIAN CHURCH.—

"The beginning of the first Christian Church has historic importance. The beginnings of a new Christian Church in our day are of more vital significance. . . . There is a tarrying in divine instruction, a human readiness in love of truth for life, a new adjustment of interest by focus upon things spiritual, and then a transforming descent of the Holy Spirit, breathed upon eager men by the Lord Jesus Christ in His divine humanity. Zeal, inspired by complete loyalty and guided by experienced wisdom becomes the mark of a new discipleship." The ideal yearning for a new day in religious experience should be in the direction of a perpetual Pentecost for the entire Church, preaching the truth fearlessly, condemning sin boldly, stressing evangelization perpetually, saving souls continuously, and adding to the Church daily such as are being saved. This kind of a Church would perpetuate the pentecostal spirit and take the world for Christ in this generation. These things come by prayer and sacrifice, and faith, and tarrying in hopeful expectation of the Holy Spirit until the entire Church is baptized afresh from on high.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.—

If the National Educational Association stressed the work of the school as an ally to the Church and home in building character, the Christian colleges of our country has emphasized with equal force the great contributions that are making to this same objective. The Church-supported colleges in Ohio alone graduated two thousand students this spring with the impress of religion and character upon their formative life. These colleges have not confined their service to the denominations supporting them, but all denominations have been served in the influence of education at Christian colleges. The undergirding strength of American life is the Christian religion and Christian character which it promotes, supported and administered by Christian education. Each denomination attracts a certain proportion of its students from its own denomination over a comparatively wide area, but each also draws a large number of students from other denominations; sometimes a large majority come from other Churches. This causes a better understanding among the denominations, cultivates a spirit of appreciation for others, and develops a solidarity of Christian activity.

DEDICATION OF CHAPEL.—

Dedicating the memorial chapel of Syracuse University, the gift of Senator Francis Hendricks, on June 8th, Chancellor Charles W. Flint uttered these words: "For the worship and service of Almighty God; for the diffusion of the spirit and ideals of Jesus Christ; for the moral and spiritual welfare of the generations of young men and women at Syracuse University; to God the Father and to American youth, His children—we dedicate this chapel." The chapel, dedicated at the time of the sixtieth anniversary of Syracuse University, is to be the heart of the newly planned school. In keeping with this spirit of wide brotherhood in religion, at the dedication service eight men, representing different faiths, received degrees of honor. The following were the leaders thus honored: Bishop Adna W. Leonard, Rabbi Steven S. Wise, Lucius H. Bugbee, William Lyon Phelps, Charles B. McAfee, Frederick H. Knubel, Fred B. Smith, Bishop Charles Fiske. These several distinguished leaders in their respective Churches receiving the doctor's degree for their eminent service for the Churches represented expresses a wide spirit of fellowship and appreciation of such service.

EDUCATIONAL SERVICE.—

The western coast has made some great contributions to education. California has been noteworthy for her achievements in this respect. She has sent forth such men as Howison and Royce, in phylosophy; David Starr Jordan, Kofoid, Caruth, Hale and Millikan, in science; the Hoovers, the Wilburs, Benjamin Ide Wheeler, Harry Ward, George Albert Coe, and many others, and her universities at Berkley and Stanford have long been in the front rank. The University of California, which is the State university, has the largest student body in America, except Columbia, which has 36,000, while California University has 26,000 students. It spends between eleven and twelve millions annually for its program, but recently the University at Los Angeles, which is affiliated with the State university; California Institute of Technology, and the University of Southern California have moved into the front rank of institutions of higher learning. Little less than phenominal, and especially for a strictly technical school, has been the development of this technical school under the leadership of Dr. R. A. Millikan. With great universities growing by leaps and bounds, with Church colleges stressing Christian education, and our leadership acquiring better preparation as time passes, it seems that all Christian peoples should take heart and hope for better times and greater growth in the kingdom of God.

PEACE-MINDEDNESS.—

A. O. Thomas, president of the World Federation of Education Associations; Camilio Osias, resident commissioner from the Philippines to the United States, and Judge Florence E. Allen, of the Supreme Court of Ohio, contributed to a symposium on creating peace-mindedness. "The Art of Living," "The Enrichment of Adult Life," and "Creative Learning" were viewed as vital points of value in education to create peace-mindedness. Many of the educational devices which are being used today look toward the materialistic side of education without considering the building of character and attitudes towards world conciliation. Education which neglects the building of character and leaves this side of man's nature to fail of its normal development is one-sided and will result in educational maladjustment. Our altruistic attitudes with reference to individuals, socities, and nations will determine in a large measure our fitness for a happy life. Teaching young men to struggle in physical combat in athletics, constant practice in these contests throughout college life will not be conducive to peace-mindedness except toward members of one's own team. Christ would hardly have spent His time in physical combat as preparation for world peace, and yet He was the Prince of Peace. Our Christian people and Christian colleges will have to follow Him before we shall have Him reign in His own right as the Prince of Peace.

PRISON REFORM.—

Prison reorganization, embodying principles advocated for years by welfare workers, is at last becoming a reality in the State of Ohio, as a result of the public interest aroused by the disastrous fire at the State penitentiary last April, in which 300 prisoners lost their lives. The basic principle of the plan is to classify the prisoners of penal and reformatory institutions with regard to their personal attitude and mental condition. Hardened offenders in need of long, continued, perhaps permanent, confinement will be segregated from those younger, relatively minor offenders, who can be set on the right track by brief periods of confinement under proper supervision, followed by release under an improved system of paroles. Feeble-minded, insane and psychopathic cases will be separated more thoroughly than in the past. A new unit, manned by a force of psychiatrists, has been set up in the State welfare department to administer this classification program. With the completion of construction now under way, and with the more effective use of parole as a means of keeping Ohio's prison population down to a level comparable to that of other States, it is expected that the State's present prison facilities will be adequate to meet the needs without overcrowding." It is a wise policy to seek to reform prisoners, providing methods of reformation do not encourage more people to engage in crime to be followed by reformation. Too great laxity in the enforcement of penalties for crime tends to make more criminals. Laxity in law enforcement tends to mob-rule on the part of the multitudes, and toward greater crime on the part of persons with criminal tendencies.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Dr. W. A. Harper and Dean Hook, of Elon College, were in Richmond for a short while last Monday.

Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Ryan, of Richmond, are spending some time in Ohio, where they are visiting in the homes of their children and with friends.

President Butler, of Columbia University, is known all over the country as an ardent anti-prohibitionist. Some of his attacks have been quite vitrolithic, though we have yet to learn of any of his criticisms being of a constructive character. It is indeed gratifying, however, to know that not all of Columbia's professors share his views. Haven Emerson, of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, is quoted as saying, "Neither at my family table nor elsewhere in this country have I used alcoholic beverages since the passage of the Volstead act"; and James C. Egbert, of the Columbia University School of Business, has this to say: "I am a strict observer of the law, which, I believe, is already proving itself to be fraught with inestimable blessings to the American people."

BEREA CHURCH.

The series of special meetings at Berea Christian Church closed last Sunday night. Dr. C. C. Ryan, of Richmond, Va., had been engaged to do the preaching, but owing to an operation in his throat which had not yet cleared up, he was unable to come to us. We counted ourselves very fortunate in being able to secure the services of Rev. J. H. Dollar, of Reidsville. The meeting began on July 6th, the pastor preaching both morning and evening. Bro. Dollar came for the meeting on Monday night and preached for us throughout the week. His messages were highly appreciated by the people, and they were truly gospel messages that did not spare the truth, but went home to both saint and sinner. We enjoyed very much working with this preacher of righteousness. About twelve made confessions of faith in Jesus Christ and there was one reconsecration. Seven were received into the Church, six on confession of faith and one by letter of transfer. There are others who have indicated their intention of transferring their membership in the near future.

Some of the young people who made confession of faith have not yet made a choice of membership. We enjoy the fellowship of these Bereans and the harmonious way in which they work together, but our aim and desire is to have this Church assume a larger share of kingdom responsibility than is being assumed at the present time.

W. M. Jay.

MONTICELLO CHURCH.

On Saturday night, June 28th, we closed a two weeks' meeting. Bro. L. A. Nall, of Elon College, assisted the pastor. We had about twenty-five professions and several additions to the Church. The Lord wonderfully blessed us and gave us the best meeting the Church has had in many years. Our Church people were greatly revived and many expressed their desire to do a greater work for the Master.

Our Sunday School is going fine under the leadership of Mrs. Cumby. We have had a steady growth so far and hope to reach 125 by Conference.

The pastor had the pleasure of being present at the missionary society meeting last Friday night, July 11th. A large number was present and a fine program given. Miss Mable Michel had charge, and made a very interesting talk on "What Missions Mean." Mrs. J. L. Neese read Dr. Atkinson's address on "Missions, a Spiritual Task." Miss Russell McKinney talked on "The Why in Home Missions"; Mrs. Michael read an article on Miss Adams' furlough; Miss Myrtle Rudd read a letter from the Philippines; Mrs. W. R. McKinney read a letter from Porto Rico; Mrs. W. F. Burton read a letter from Miss Graham Rowland. Our missionary society is doing a great work, and we pray God's blessing upon them and the great cause they represent.

J. L. Neese.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were passed by the Western North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, 1930 session, after being presented in the form of a report of the resolutions committee:

We, your committee on resolutions, wish to submit our report as follows:

1. That, by rising vote, we express to this Church and to the people of this community our hearty appreciation for their kindness and hospitality in entertaining this session of the convention.

2. Due notice should be taken upon the part of all of our Sunday Schools and Churches of the fine, unselfish and constructive service being done by the Board of Christian Education, and we would urgently call upon our people throughout the Conference to give the board their thoughtful, prayerful and financial support, suggesting that by all means at least an annual offering be received in each Sunday School for this purpose.

3. Especial attention is called to the Summer School for Leadership Training which is to be held at Elon College, July 26th to August 2nd, of this year, and we most earnestly suggest the importance of each Sunday School in the Conference having one or more representatives in the school this year.

4. The Christian Publishing Association, our own, official publishing-house, at Dayton, Ohio, is able to supply various and suitable and abundant helps and supplies for Sunday School officers and teachers and for leaders and directors of missionary and Christian Endeavor activity. We wish to urge the Sunday Schools in this Convention to make use of these helps.

5. The State Sunday School Association, at Raleigh, N. C., sponsors a circulating library of valuable and up-to-date books touching upon the various phases of Sunday School work, the same being available upon application by any person in the State. It is felt that this library is capable of rendering a real service, and we would urge the use of the same.

6. The Southern Christian Convention, in recent session, enthusiastically and unanimously invited the young people of the Convention to organize themselves into a body as a constituent part of the Convention with the view to their having a larger and a more definite part in the program and the work which shall be undertaken hereafter by the Convention in general.

7. There is a felt need for the organization and the successful operation of Young People's Missionary and Christian Endeavor Societies in our work, and we would prayerfully suggest that every effort possible be made in our Churches to this end.

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

DR. E. S. ROTHROCK: Defiance College, the Christian college of Ohio, has conferred the degree of doctor of divinity upon Rev. E. S. Rothrock, superintendent-emeritus, "in recognition of his unique service in merging the Christian and Congregational Churches of Ohio."

KEY WEST: This Church, under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. E. Richard Evans, is making extensive repairs and improvements to the Church building. The Church is a good brick building, and there is, in addition, a parsonage and Sunday School and social building.

TAMPA: The Tampa Daily Times of July 7th carried an interesting sermon by Rev. Walter Metcalf, pastor of First Congregational Church, the topic being, "The Surprises of the Christian Life." Mr. Metcalf succeeded Rev. Milo J. Sweet as pastor of the Church when the latter became pastor-at-large for the Southeast. Mr. Metcalf reports that seven were received into membership of the Church on July 6th.

MARRIED: Miss Betty Lincoln, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. C. Arthur Lincoln, of Daytona Beach, was married to Mr. Clarence Elmer Bittner on July 6th, at Westfield, N. J. Mrs. Bittner had recently graduated from Mt. Holyoke College. Dr. and Mrs. Lincoln and family had gone North to attend these two important and happy functions—the graduation and marriage of their daughter. After September 1st, Mr. and Mrs. Bittner will be at home at 270 New Litchfield Street, Torrington, Conn., where Mr. Bittner is in Y. M. C. A. service.

REV. HARRY THOMAS STOCK, secretary for young people's work of the Congregational Education Society, wrote a friendly and appreciative letter concerning the Florida Young People's Conference at Camp Immokalee. Among other things, he said: "Your conference is in many respects unique, due partly to the geographical situation and partly to the experienced leadership which it had from the beginning. It seemed to me that the rather strenuous program was carried out with the most sympathetic type of leadership and in such a way that the total experience will remain in the memory of the young people as a most potent illustration of what Christian social living is like." Mr. Stock was a great contributor to the success of this year's conference.

VACATIONS: Among the vacation plans that have come to our knowledge are the following: Dr. Kerrison Juniper is supplying the Central Church at Honolulu, and in his absence the pulpit is being supplied by Dr. George L. Hanscom, of Melbourne, and Rev. O. T. Anderson, of Fort Myers. Dr. Clarence A. Vincent is at his country home at Henniker, N. H., and the Church at Winter Park is being supplied by Rev. C. DeW. Brewer, of Interlachen, and by Rev. A. Craig Bowdish, of Babson Park. Dr. Lillian B. Fulton, of Lake Worth, is on a Western motor trip with her family, and during August the pulpit will be supplied by Rev. Walter Metcalf, of Tampa. Dr. H. Samuel Fritsch, of Jacksonville, is spending the vacation at his summer cottage in Illinois, and in his absence Rev. Robert G. Harbutt, of Penney Farms, is supplying the pulpit. Rev. Thomas H. Derrick and family are at their summer cottage at Asbury Grove, Mass. Dr. E. A. King, of Miami Beach, is in Mexico with the Mexican Seminar, and the pulpit of the Community Church is being supplied by the assistant pastor, Rev. Orville D. Ullom. Dr. J. Delman Kuykendall and family are at their mountain home at Cloudland, Ga. Rev. George D. Owen and family, of Ormond, are spending the summer in New England. Rev. and Mrs. George B. Spalding, of Miami, are spending the summer at their home at Stonington, Conn.

NOTABLE PASTORATE ENDED.

The thirty-two-year pastorate of Rev. Dr. Chas. E. Jefferson at Broadway Tabernacle (Congregational), New York City, came to an end on June 30th, when Dr. Jefferson preached his farewell sermon and was given the official title of "honorary minister" and a yearly pension of $3,000. This long pastorate on the busy and distracting Broadway "must be regarded as one of the most distinguished pastorates in our generation," as expressed by the ecclesiastical council which met to dissolve the pastoral relation. We quote the following from the resolutions adopted by the council:

"For thirty-two years Dr. Jefferson has held forth the Word of life from his conspicuous post on Broadway. He has been a Christian leader to whom men of all faiths have looked for guidance, courage and hope. During all these years he has never retreated, never compromised, never abated one jot of what he conceived to be the whole gospel of God.

"He has been an unfaltering and inspired builder of his Church, until it stands today like a rock amid the swirling currents of the life in our great city. After the fashion of his vision, Broadway Tabernacle has become a genuine brotherhood in which all the members rejoice, a hospitable home for Christians from every rank and class and from every State and nation, a family remarkably instructed in a constructive faith and a Christian ethics, a fountain of philanthropy and missionary service, a powerhouse pouring its energies out in support of all brave movements to make a better world."

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The thirty-sixth annual session of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, held at Liberty Vance, July 15-16th, closed with the honor of being one of the best sessions ever held. Despite the rainy weather and the revival at the local Baptist Church, we had large crowds each session. There were 19 Churchse represented by a good delegation, and the following ministers were enrolled: Revs. J. Lee Johnson, J. A. Denton, J. E. Franks, M. T. Sorrell, R. L. House, H. C. Hillard, T. F. Wright, Herbert Scholz, and H. E. Crutchfield. Each of these contributed towards making the convention a success. We regret that more of our pastors could not be present and more Churches represented.

We were indeed fortunate in having with us each day Rev. J. F. Mitchener, local Baptist minister, and Rev. Paul Caudell, of Raleigh, who assisted in revival. They were given a hearty welcome and privileges of the floor. Each of them spoke words of appreciation and inspiration, and we were indeed glad to have them.

A real spirit of harmony and co-operation prevailed throughout the Convention. Rev. R. L. House proved himself a very efficient president, and his address was indeed fine. By request of the Convention, the same will be furnished The Sun for publication.

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, of Durham Church, gave the Convention an excellent address on "Building Stewardship in the Sunday School." Rev. Harrell is an eloquent speaker, and always has somcthing to say. His messages are inspiring and upbuilding. We regret that, owing to illness of his mother, Prof. H. E. Spence, of Duke University, was not able to be here.

Wednesday A. M. was given to the various enterprises of the Church. Mrs. R. M. Rothgeb, of the Raleigh Church, presented missions by reading very impressively an address, "Missions, a Spiritual Task." We regret so much that our Mission Secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, could not be present, but rejoice in his good-will tour to Europe.

Our college was represented by Dean A. L. Hook and Dr. W. A. Harper. They were both good speakers and thoroughly interested, endeavoring to show the need of Christian colleges for leadership training. Mr. C. D. Johnston presented the Orphanage and The Christian Sun. Mr. Johnston told the Convention how the Church paper needed their support and that our goal was, "The Sun to shine in every home." Rev. J. E. Franks had already made a strong appeal in behalf of The Sun and endeavored to present the depressed conditions of some at present. (May we awake to our duty and unitedly support The Christian Sun.) He introduced one of the Orphanage boys, who spoke in behalf of same. A class of girls gave a splendid program that was much enjoyed.

At this time we were reminded of that old saying, "Behind the dark cloud there is a silver lining." The Convention had been very much disappointed, in that the Higgins sisters had failed to arrive; but finally the clouds rolled away, and O my, such singing we enjoyed! We were again reminded of that song, "The Half Has Never Been Told," for while we had heard so much of these famous singers, the half had not been told. You must hear them to appreciate them, and, in passing, we say to all, when you have a chance to see and hear these four sweet singers, don't fail to do so.

Miss Jewel Truitt represented the Board of Religious Education in a fine way. Rev. T. Fred Wright, in his address on "The Place of C. E. in the Church," endeavored to show the importance of training for our young people, and proved himself to be vitally interested in them.

The worship program put on by the C. E. Society of the Henderson Church, and the pageant presented by the local Church were very good. The Convention was held without cost, save one dollar for registration blanks. Through the kindness of the First National Bank of Henderson, our programs were printed and presented to the Convention free.

The executive committee presented no bills, and the treasurer reported more money collected than was last year. Therefore, we felt much encouraged under depressed conditions that exist most everywhere.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Rev. R. L. House, president; Mr. W. A. Newman, vice-president; Mrs. R. J. Newton, recording secretary; Mrs. F. M. Harward, corresponding secretary; Mr. C. H. Stevenson, treasurer. The Convention adjourned to meet Tuesday following the second Sunday in July, 1931, with Amelia Christian Church.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist; and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

THE POWER OF PERSONAL INTEREST.

The one most potent force of modern life that is unappreciated, under-estimated, and unrealized is the power of personal interest in a cause, a movement, or a condition. I mean that the power of this personal interest is unrealized in most cases by the individual that wields it. The power of personal interest is all too well known by those who would exploit it for selfish and sinister purposes. The unscrupulous criminal lawyer knows very well that the fate of his client often depends upno public sentiment, which is but the combined effect of personal interest. The partisan politician frequently turns the course of elections by the skillful exploiting of personal interest. The liquor forces of this country are bending every effort at this present time to kill the personal interest of the people in the success of the prohibition movement.

The power of personal interest is very like unto the power of water, or fire, or any other elemental force. We see a small mountain stream babbling along its course, and it seems an inconsequential thing. But let a heavy rain pile up the water that must traverse this same course, and it becomes a raging torrent that sweeps everything in its course. The National Geographic Magazine recently carried the picture of a mountain lake in Norway that in 1905 was the scene of a terrible disaster. An enormous landslide plunging into the waters of the lake caused a mighty wave to sweep the shores that drowned sixty-one persons and lifted a small steamer and left it stranded three hundred feet up the side of a mountain.

If there were nothing to be considered save the force of this personal interest, it would not be worth our time to discuss it. But there is nothing in all the world that is so contagious as this personal interest. Inconsequential affairs can be elevated into positions of magnitude if enough people take an interest in them. And when personal interest begins to center around causes of grave import, a power is generated that is well-nigh irresistable.

Disinterest is dangerous and deadly. There are Churches whose influence and power for good is all but nullified by the fact that a few individuals have lost interest in the work of the Church. This indifference has spread from one individual to another until the entire Church is affected with a sort of creeping paralysis. It is entirely possible, and it frequently happens, that one or two individuals who have the interest of the Church at heart can not only stem the tide of indifference, but they can convert a despairing cause into a splendid success.

One frequently hears the complaint that our Church is just dragging along and nothing much being accomplished. Too often the individual making such a complaint is doing nothing but just letting it drag. The Master said, "A little leaven leaveneth the entire lump." It is not possible to set a flaming soul into the midst of a Church without some other soul taking fire. Lamentations can be turned into peans of victory if those who are now wrapped in cloaks of indifference would but arouse themselves to a deep sense of personal interest. Your cause is not a lost cause until you have lost faith and abandoned hope. S. C. H.

JEZEBEL AND RELIGION.

I.

Royal blood in Jezebel's veins did not prevent the stain which her life gave to the fair name of woman. Religious education has cursed the world, and false religion is the worst form of evil. Buddhism, Confucianism, Mohammedanism, Mormonism, and, in this case, Baalism, are striking examples. Religious education abounds in these cults. The time has come to emphasize Christian education. The reason why people are more devoted to false religion than to the Christian religion is because false religion permits self-indulgence in its grossest forms. Jezebel represents education in a false religion, and exhibits hostility to the true God and His people. She is a worldly woman under the guise of religion. The most seductive influence over Israel was idolatrous women, and Baalism was founded on the most brazen licentiousness. The worship of Baal and Astarte rested on rites of the most disgusting sensuality, which, through women, finally destroyed the Phonician family, State and race. It was to preserve the Jewish race as well as their religion, that intermarriage with these idolators was prohibited by their law, except in cases like Ruth, who abandoned the alien faith for the true God. Jezebel brought into Ahab's palace and the nation of Israel the inheritance and training of her father, Ethbaal and the Tyrian capital; and she determined that Baalism should not only be tolerated, but adopted in Israel. It is, no doubt, true that this alliance was sought by Ahab for political purposes, as the kingdom was menaced by Assyrian forces; but his marriage to Jezebel brought into his nation more religious poison than political strength.

Jezebel was very religious and very wicked. She is not one of the good women of the Bible. Astarte was the ideal of sensuality in Baalism, and she was the female goddess of that religion.

Has any mother named her daughter after Jezebel? Why not? Has any father named his son after Judas? Why not? Has any poet written great poems about Jezebel? Why not? Is there not at the very core of humanity a keen and universal recognition of the chaste, the virtuous, and the noble? Jezebel was a woman of great beauty, great intellectual endowments, and sincere devotion to her religion; yet she was determined to rule Israel. But her ideals were false and her ambition misguided.

Ahab's marriage to this Zidonian princess, no doubt, brought to him great wealth, national and social recognition in Tyre, the capital and queen of Phonician cities; but it introduced into his nation idolatry, sensuality and a false dignity and security. It is true that under her influence he built cities and an ivory palace; but he yielded to his queen in the worship of Baal and Astarte, erected a temple and altar to Baal, and an image of great beauty to Astarte. Under the patronage of Jezebel, Baal had 450 prophets and Astarte 400 priests, who fed at Jezebel's table. Jezebel was hostile to the prophets and priests of Jehovah in Israel, and sought to destroy them. It seems that all the priests were killed,, and one hundred prophets were saved by the kindness of Obadiah, the governor in the palace, who hid them in a cave and fed them with bread and water. The nation was finally under the power of Baalism, through the influence of this queen. The art of designing woman to change the affairs of her husband is revealed in the success of Jezebel in breaking down the religious convictions of Ahab and the setting up of the worship of Baal in the palace of the worship of God. W. W. S.

WHY SOME FOLKS GIVE.

We often hear the Jew spoken of by the average citizen as selfish. If we know the facts in the case, we are compelled to say that they are at least more generous than the Christians of the Protestant Churches. The only reason for this existing condition is the training the orthodox Jew gives his children in the home. The Jewish children are taught to give a portion of every bit of money it receives to the Lord's work. We Protestants boast of the tithers we have. But the Jewish child is taught to exceed the tithe. I have evidence from good authority to show that in every pious Jew's home each member of the family has a group of boxes for the purpose of receiving a portion of all his income—one box for his local synagogue's expenses, another for their mission work, another for the orphanage, and still another for benevolences. They do not stop at putting a tenth in one, but their sharing with others far exceeds the tenth.

As a result of this home training, there is never a word said at public worship about money. A visitor never knows anything about the finance of the religious work. On the other hand, there is always money in the treasury of the synagogue. They bring their tithes into the storehouse and commit them to the Lord.

It is interesting to note that many of the outstanding philanthropists of our country are Jews. Mr. Julian Rosenwald and many others who give of their wealth annually for betterment of society do not do so as a happen-so, but because they have been trained to give. For the past twelve or fifteen years there has been some great financial drives in the Christian Churches of America. The Southern Baptists had their campaign for seventy-five million dollars. They never got what was pledged, which caused them to fall far short of their goal. The Methodists had their centenary drive and fell short of their goal. The Christian Church had her drive in the South for two million dollars, but failed miserably in her efforts. The Jews of America have raised and sent back to Palestine more than one hundred and seventeen million dollars since the World War ended. They raised this as a religious obligation on a similar plan that we put forth our efforts. There are only a little over eight million Jews in this country. They have far surpassed the three Protestant denominations mentioned above in their gifts.

They did this not because they have more. They do it not because they are by nature different from our people, but because they have been trained in giving in the home. J. E. McC.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP INCREASES.

Out of every hundred persons over thirteen years of age in the United States, there are today fifty-five Church members, just as there were ten and twenty years ago; only 52 per cent of the rural inhabitants belong to Church, as compared with 58 per cent of the people living in cities; and nearly half the Protestant ministers are not graduates of either college or seminary.

These facts, and many others that upset commonly held opinions regarding the status of the Church have been brought to light in an extended independent analysis of both published and unpublished census data made for the Institute of Social and Religious Research by Dr. C. Luther Fry, who also prepared the official analysis of Church figures for the summary volume of the "1926 Census of Religious Bodies."

In his report of his findings issued by the institute under the title, "The U. S. Looks at Its Churches," Dr. Fry shows that at least 62 of every hundred adult Church members belong to a Protestant Church, while 30 are Roman Catholics, and 6 are Jews. Women predominate in Church membership; 48 per cent of the males of the country over 13 years of age, and 63 per cent of the females being members.

There is not a single State in which either Jews or Roman Catholics constitute a majority of the inhabitants, but there are nine Southern States in which the Protestants make up more than half the population. The record, however, is held by Utah, where more than 82 per cent of the people are members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

One of the most arresting discoveries made by the study is that so large a proportion of ministers have had little or no academic training. More than three-eighths of the ministers of the 18 largest white denominations, including the Roman Catholic, and more than three-fourths of the ministers of the three leading negro bodies are not graduates of either college or seminary.

In its investigation of the training of ministers, the institute caused an analysis to be made of hitherto unpublished census returns from the 105,000 ministers of the 21 leading denominations, representing three-fourths of the Churches in the United States, including those of the Roman Catholic Church.

Of the 71,500 ministers of the 17 white Protestant bodies studied, almost 29,500, or 41 per cent, did not claim to be graduates of either college or seminary, while only 33 per cent claimed to be graduates of both.

The Roman Catholic Church," the report says, "makes a far better showing, and the negro bodies a far worse showing. Instead of 41 per cent falling into the group of non-graduates, only 6.6 per cent of the Roman Catholic priests were so classified. On the other hand, 68 per cent of the priests claimed to be graduates of both college and seminary.

"Of the ministers of the three negro denominations, 78 per cent reported themselves as not graduates of either college or seminary, while only 7.4 per cent claimed to be graduates of both."

Among Protestant bodies, rural-urban differences are especially striking. Of the 25,000 city ministers among the 17 white denominations, only 20 per cent reported that they were not graduates of either college or seminary, as compared with 53 per cent of the 46,000 country pastors; while 52 per cent of the city, and only 23 per cent of the country, pastors were graduates of both.

In 1926, when the last religious census was taken, the value of Church edifices, not including Church-owned property used for purposes other than religious service, was equivalent to an investment of $48 for every person over 13 years of age in the United States, a seven-fold increase in the preceding 76 years. In 1850 the investment was only $6.44 for every adult.

Yet, in relation to the population, the number of Churches has been decreasing. In 1906, there was a Church for every 270 inhabitants over 13 years of age; in 1916 there was one for every 300, and in 1926 one for every 334.

Nevertheless, the analysis of the census returns from the 172,000 Churches of the 21 selected denominations shows that only half had pastors with but a single charge, while 4,130 reported that their pastors were serving seven or more Churches.

Church expenditures, which represented $8.70 per adult member in 1916, amounted to $18.44 in 1926; and even when this figure is adjusted to allow for changes in the price level during the past decade, it becomes $13.06, or an increase of 30 per cent in the purchasing power of the Church member's average annual contribution.

Sunday School enrollments have been increasing less rapidly than formerly. In 1906 the pupils in Sunday Schools were equivalent to 40 per cent of the youth population under 19 years of age. By 1916 this per cent had reached 48, but is now 44.

The Roman Catholic Church has had a decided decline in the number of Sunday School scholars, along with a definite increase in the enrollment of its parochial schools.

Within recent years there has been a significant tendency for Protestant bodies to combine. Between 1916 and 1926, no fewer than 18 denominations were involved in mergers and amalgamations.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

On Tuesday, July 14th, a great meeting was held at Lake Prince, in Nansemond County, Va. Lake Prince is the property of the Norfolk Water Department, and the water is piped more than twenty miles under pressure of a high standpipe. The lake covers hundreds of acres, is deep, and the distance around it is many miles. It is open during the fishing season under the laws of Virginia, and many enjoy the Isaac Walton recreation by buying permits to fish. It was an occasion of this kind that made the great meeting and the great enjoyment of that occasion.

For four or five years the men of Liberty Spring Christian Church, of which Dr. I. W. Johnson has been pastor for more than twenty-five years, have taken a day off from their regular work and enjoyed fishing and a fish dinner on the shore. This year the meeting was held at Lake Prince. There were forty-two men in the party, and among them the following guests: Rev. J. M. Roberts, Lon Fausette, Jesse Taylor, Prof. L. E. Pettyjohn, Sheriff E. B. Rawls, and the writer.

There were forty-two men, and they spent the forenoon in fishing. Perhaps there were eighteen boats, for some of them carried three, though most of them were occupied by two. There was some rain, but not enough to stop the party from fishing, and they pulled in many of the tribe. Fishing is great recreation, as it furnishes fresh air, exercise in rowing the boat, and absolute forgetfulness of business and the regular duties of life.

Just before noon, yells began to call the willing men to one place on the shore, and soon all were in the woods by the lake. There in the woods a fire was built and the dressing of fish begun. Sitting upon the ground, with scalers, the men soon had the fish ready for the pan. Bacon was sliced, the salt was sprinkled on the fish, and soon the air was filled with odors that aroused the appetite and drew the hungry men near the buckets of fried fish. Cornbread, light bread, iced tea, lemonade, plates and cups soon found their place in the hands of hungry men. Scattered about in the woods, but none far from the tempting food, all was quiet and the feast was enjoyed. At least two or three hundred fish came from the pans and looked as good to the men as they did coming from the water into the boats. Big cans of good iced tea and lemonade added to the enjoyment of the feast. The champion fish-eater was Horace Savage, and his second was Rev. J. M. Roberts, and many others were not far behind. After dinner the crowd went back to the boats and renewed the good time catching perch and chub.

The value of a day spent thus is hard to estimate. It ties the men of the Church to the pastor and to one another, and begets a community interest that no other one day can produce. It has its religious and Church value as well as its recreational and social value to the community and the Church. Men and nature unite in recognition of God as the source of life and happiness. It was a great day, a great dinner, and a great time for all who were there.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

A remarkable change of attitude toward the place of religion in higher education has occurred during the past quarter-century. When I was a student at Elon, we were required to study the Bible, but we got no credit for it. The reason was that the graduate schools and universities would not accept Bible as a part of the required work for a degree, and forced Elon graduates to make up the number of hours devoted to Bible study before they could be admitted for graduate work. Now any graduate school or university accepts our Bible study just as it does our Greek or our mathematics.

Not only so, but even the State universities are using various methods now to make Bible study available to their students. They do not feel that they can use public funds to teach religion, but they are accrediting work offered by the denominations on an individual or co-operative basis. Some of them are securing private endowments with which to support professors of religion.

President Alderman, of the University of Virginia, has just secured an endowment for religious instruction at the institution founded by Thomas Jefferson. It will be recalled that Jefferson felt that the several denominations should provide teachers of religion for their young men who were studying in the university, and arranged for them to use the university class-rooms for such instruction, but he was in advance of his time. President Alderman has really logically completed the ideal of his great predecessor in securing an adequate endowment, guaranteeing religious instruction on a professional basis and in perpetuity.

Former President Chase cherished the hope that he could locate permanent funds for similar work in the University of North Carolina, and it is known that President Graham is not unsympathetic with the same idea.

The reason for this changed attitude is the teaching of modern psychology that religion is not something added to life, but a necessary quality of all life, and that the life which lacks religious culture is permanently impaired.

These facts are encouraging to Elon, because, from its beginning, this college has insisted on the teaching of religion as an inalienable right of each student. It is inspiring to see this faith vindicated and justified.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE LETTER.

History tells us that Periclean Athens was the great age; but it was not the only great age, for the years of youth between sixteen and twenty-five is a still greater age. During this period the whole educational world seeks to work a miracle. and, if wrought, transforms youth, and youth in turn transforms the world.

The transforming of youth during this great awakening of the intellectual passion did not always take place in the most popular educational institutions, for the words of wisdom uttered from the class-rooms and rostrums of humble institutions have come ringing down through the centuries, and they have sired authors, senators, governors, and chief justices.

The current idea is that you must have guilt-edged equipment, but one thing needful is delight in hard, mental exercise as well as sharp, physical exercise. If theologians of our day could look into the heart of modern youth, they would find youth's religion not Hebraic, but Hellenic, with but two articles of faith—one is athletics, which George Meredith has pronounced "The best philosophy youth can pretend to"; and the other is the passionate delight of the awakened mind.

It is a stupid, superstitious idea that youth naturally detests study; it is true that they detest a bore. Youth is a hero-worshiping age. Give me a hero schoolmaster and I will guarantee that the intellectual passion gets kindled in any mind that is combustible. Reticent, self-contained, a mind of a stoic housed in the body of an Olympian athlete, whose look is his discipline, without intimidation, who despises cowardice and meanness, yet not demanding perfection or even success, but a worthy effort; a personality as dynamic as this cannot help but generate action.

We need to learn to comprehend and appreciate in our faculty members in our small denominational colleges the fine, unworldly ambition and determination to succeed, the resolution to reject a career of property-getting in order to dedicate their lives to an aim much higher than getting and spending—the building of Christian character.

VALLEY LETTER.

Revival meetings have been held this spring and summer at Newport, Dry Run, Joppa, and Timber Mountain. These meetings have not resulted in any large ingathering, though there were a total of thirteen conversions, and we hope much good done aside from these visible results.

I learn from other ministers of our Conference and elsewhere that their experience is not widely different from my own. By figuring a little on reports in the last "Annual," I find it takes an average of twenty Church members in the Southern Christian Convention to bring one soul to Christ, and takes a year in which to do it—one conversion to every Church member and nine conversions to every minister in the S. C. C. And yet Jesus said, "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men." It looks as though we are rather poor fishermen, for the fish are neither scarce nor far away.

More and more I am convinced that the Church must set itself definitely and heroically to the task of soul-winning, and make it an all-the-year-'round job if many souls are to be won for Christ. The usual methods of a few years ago will not meet successfully now the many counter-attractions and allurements that are present on every hand. I am urging upon my Churches that they select unsaved friends and make them a subject of definite, earnest, daily prayer until either conversion or death ensues. I fear too often we begin revival meetings with the Church cold and prayerless, and not especially interested in any one.

Memorial services were held at Leaksville on the first Sunday in June, and at Timber Ridge on the third Sunday in June. This was the first memorial service ever held at Leaksville. A good congregation was present, and an enjoyable day wa sspent. The memorial service at Timber Ridge is a custom of long standing, and always draws a large crowd.

Our Conference will be held at Newport, August 6, 7, and 8th. We are expecting to have with us Mr. Hermon Eldredge, of Dayton, Ohio; Dr. W. A. Harper and Prof. A. L. Hook, from Elon College; Mr. C. D. Johnston, from the Orphanage, and perhaps Rev. C. C. Ryan, from Richmond, Va. We are expecting, by the help of these brethren and the co-operation of our own people, and all under the blessings of our Heavenly Father, to have a great session. Delegates should plan to be there at the opening and stay through to the close. Don't plan to go just one day or, worse yet, to stay at home and work all the time. And don't forget to bring the full amount of the Conference apportionment along when you come, and the Church report, too, all filled out in full. Bring also a deep interest in everything pertaining to the Conference and the Church at large.

May we remember the words of Joshua as he and his people were facing some great and difficult tasks: "Sanctify yourselves: for tomorrow the Lord will do wonders among you."

WORTH THINKING ABOUT.

The Chicago Tribune has been the most bitter and the most unfair journalistic opponent of prohibition in the Middle West, if not in the nation. The character of its cartoons and editorials has been atrocious; its handling of any news relating to prohibition has deserved unqualified censure. Its abuse of the Churches which have opposed the re-establishment of the liquor trade and its support of such men as Mr. Tinkham, who have appealed to religious bigotry in efforts to arouse prejudice against certain Protestant Church groups have provoked indignation in the city of Chicago. Recently, in an editorial making a personal attack, the Tribune insinuated that a secretary of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals was loath to file a statement of the receipts and expenditures of the board, and that a possible explanation of this might be found in the experience of a man engaged in public work who had been convicted of crime in court. This statement was made at the time when the audited accounts of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals were a part of the records of the so-called Senate Lobby Committee, which had investigated its books, minutes and correspondence files and which had full information as to all of its receipts and expenditures for a term of years.

Whether or not the conduct of the Tribune during the last few years has caused violation of law by the ignorant or reckless is a matter of opinion; but it is not a matter of opinion that the recent murder of Jake Lingle, a reporter for the Tribune, disclosed the direct connection of this Tribune employee with racketeering in the city of Chicago. It is a strange and remarkable incident, and the people of Chicago should not be left in ignorance of its full significance. If any one other than Lingle profited in any way by his dealings with racketeers, the people should know it. If the influence which Mr. Lingle was able to sell to such great advantage was wholly his own, the people should know it. Every innocent citizen of Chicago and particularly every innocent person connected with the newspapers of the city should insist that all of the facts be revealed.

Meanwhile, it is an excellent time for the responsible owners of the Chicago Tribune to consider seriously the significance of the policy which has been pursued by that paper during the past few years. Recently it printed, in common with other newspapers, an advertisement of "Vanity Fair," quoting Mr. Corey Ford as saying:

"I should like to call on every free-thinking American, who can think at all, to break this law; break it repeatedly, break it whenever he can. Drink what you please, when you please. Urge others to drink. Don't betray the bootleggers who are smuggling liquor for you. In every way possible, flaunt your defiance of the eighteenth amendment. Render it inoperative. Ignore it, abrogate it, wipe it out. Whilst it stands there, let it be disobeyed." Crime must flourish in such soil.—Methodist Board of Temperance.

The encouragement of drunkenness for the sake of the profit on the sale of drink is certainly one of the most criminal methods of assassination for money hitherto adopted by the bravos of any age or country.—Ruskin.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A DAILY PRAYER.

JULY.

Father, Creator, we thank Thee that, in the capacity and aspiration of humankind, it is innate to learn. Both prophecy and promise decreeing "all shall be taught of God," we deplore prevailing spiritual ignorance and acknowledge its scope as within our own election. Turn us, O God, and give to Thy Church open ears and awakening minds, willing to study to show ourselves approved. In instruction of youth, give, we pray, to leaders and teachers the tongue of them that truly are taught of Thee, that each may know how to speak the word in season. Make us workers unashamed. In Jesus' name. Amen.

THE MISSIONARY SITUATION.

Probably there never has been a time when the Churches, through their missionary boards, have made more extensive efforts to inform laymen on the missionary situation. The best field missionaries have been kept at home overtime to report the conquests of the cross of Christ, to tell of distressing retrenchments necessitated by lack of sufficient support, and to describe conditions in non-Christian lands, proving conclusively that there is "only one name under heaven given among men by which we may be saved—Jesus Christ."

The distress caused by the retrenchments can be visualized when we think of the numerous groups of believers who have been deprived of the ministry of the gospel preacher, the suspension of many forms of charitable work and the closing of hospitals, dispensaries, schools, asylums and other Christian institutions. The extension of such work, which would be considered imperative if related to our own communities, has, of course, become out of the question.

Much activity has animated a theory that personal evangelism at home offers the ultimate solution to our missionary problems. In some cases, missionary leaders have aligned themselves with local Church leaders in this position, but in spite of their efforts the situation seems virtually unchanged.

Others hopefully supported the plan of consolidating all missionary and benevolent appeals, but they have found only temporary relief, followed by recurring and continuing distress. The community chest principle of "painless financing," where adapted to Church budgets as an easy way to meet missionary obligations, seems in many cases to have been just as disappointing as in its civic application.—Laymen's Missionary Movement.

CHINESE MAKE GIFTS TO CHURCH.

The congregation of the Church of Our Saviour (Episcopalian), Hongkew, Shanghai, has sent a gift of $200 toward the rebuilding of the Church of Our Saviour, Montpelier, Va. The bond between the two congregations arose from the fact that the Rev. Robert Nelson, of Hanover County, Va., one of the earliest missionaries to China, was for many years rector of the Church of Our Saviour in Shanghai, and his ministry is still held in loving memory. Being compelled to return to America, he labored in a neglected rural section, organizing a mission congregation which he named the Church of Our Saviour, after his Church in Shanghai. When the members of his congregation in China heard of his missionary endeavor in Virginia, they sent a generous gift toward the erection of a Church, which was destroyed by fire early in 1929. When the Shanghai congregation heard of the burning of the Virginia Church, they at once proceeded to secure subscriptions toward its rebuilding. In spite of the fact that the congregation had just been through a campaign that fairly exhausted their resources, a sum amounting to considerably over $500 in Chinese money was contributed for this object. Owing to the high rate of exchange, this sum amounts to $200 in American money.—Missionary Review.

GRIMMEST MISSIONARY TASK.

The Salvation Army has undertaken many difficult tasks, but none more so than the opening up of work on Ile du Diable, or the "Devil's Isle," the French penal colony to which political prisoners and desperate criminals are exiled for life. Devil's Isle is no misnomer. The horror of life in this prison cannot be imagined, and conditions are terrible beyond description. The new undertaking has been called "the grimmest missionary enterprise in the world."

These little islands lie like green leaves on the surface of the tropical seas off the coast of French Guiana. It was here that Captain Dreyfus spent five years of his life. A more complete isolation it would be impossible to imagine. No ship, other than one flying the flag of France, may sail nearer to them than a mile and a half, and no visitor is ever allowed to set foot upon their shores without official authorization. There are few doctors and no welfare workers for these human beings who, through inhuman treatment, have become, in many cases, closely akin to animals. Statistics have shown that no man has ever returned from Devil's Island sound and healthy; few have ever completed their sentence before death or insanity has brought their incarceration to an end. The French government, which in the past has been reluctant to give its consent to any religious order, has at last realized the fact that spiritual forces alone can alter the lives of even the hardest criminals.—Missionary Review.

"My practical attitude toward prohibition is in harmony with my expressed opinion as to the value of the prohibition law. I do not use alcoholic liquor."—A. S. Warthin, professor of pathology, University of Michigan.

We insistently challenge the men who are financing the effort to prevent enforcement of the prohibition law to announce to the American people for just what policy of dealing with the liquor traffic they are willing to take the responsibility. It is very well to criticise what exists; it is more courageous to propose a constructive policy.

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4¼ inches x⅜ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson V—August 3, 1930.

Naomi and Ruth.

Golden Text: "And he made of one every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth."—Acts 17:26.

Lesson: The Book of Ruth.

The Book of Ruth is probably unsurpassed as a short story, not only in the Bible but in all literature. There is a charm and a beauty about it that has a tremendous appeal for those who read it with an open mind and a sympathetic heart. It is the story of Elimelech's migration to the land of Moab because of famine; of his sojourn there with his family—his wife and two sons; of the marriage of the two sons to two women of Moab; of the visit of the death angel, who took first the husband and then the two sons; of Naomi's return to her own land, accompanied by Ruth; of Ruth's gleaning in Boaz's field and of the romance that developed thereby, and of the culmination of that romance in marriage. Back of these details, however, there are inspiring truths with a modern and practical application.

1. The friendship beautiful between Naomi and Ruth.

The story of Ruth is the story of the wholesome, and in large part unconscious, influence of a good, older woman over a young woman. Naomi's religion and her manner of life profoundly influenced Ruth. There was a genuineness about Naomi's religious life and a warmth of sympathy for the younger girl that counted for a great deal in the life of the younger woman. It is all the more remarkable when we remember that Naomi was a foreigner.

Now, this story has its counterpart in many modern instances. There are older women—Y. W. C. A. secretaries, Girl Scout leaders, teachers in the public schools and in the Church schools, social workers and missionaries—who, by their manner of life and their measure of service, are molding the lives of the young women with whom they come in contact. And in many instances they are not even conscious of it. They are simply concerned with living normal, Christian lives and in rendering Christian service, and their lives have a rich fruitage in shaping young lives after the one who said that He had given us an example.

Of course, the supreme instance of this friendship beautiful should be between mother and daughter. Blessed is that young woman who has in her mother a godly woman who has sympathy and who enters whole-heartedly into the younger woman's life.

2. The friendship beautiful between Ruth and Naomi.

This story is also the story of the response which a young woman made to the wholesome influence that touched her life. There was in that young woman something fine that beat in response to all that was best in the older woman's life. Here was a response to the confidence and influence and love of the older woman on the part of the younger woman. In other words, Ruth followed that which she knew was the best. There was in the religion of Naomi that which was superior to the religion of the Moabites—there was a call to higher and deeper things—and Ruth responded with all that was in her. There are perhaps no more thrilling words in all literature than the words of Ruth when she says, "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest, I will go, and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God. Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried; the Lord do so to me, and more also, if aught but death part thee and me." This is something more than an inspiring friendship—this is an expressed loyalty to life's finest and highest ideals.

And of course this part of the story has its counterpart in our modern life and among our own young women. There are young women who have flaunted high ideals in the face and who are having their fling. There are those who apparently have made little or no response to the wholesome influences with which they have come in contact. But they are not in the majority. There are in our towns and cities and rural sections large numbers of young women who are "following the gleam." There has come to them a vision of high ideals of life and service, and they have set themselves to follow those ideals. Consciously and unconsciously, they are giving themselves to the finer things of life. They are trying to reproduce in themselves the best things which they see in those with whom they come in contact, and especially to reproduce the character of him who has given them an example.

It might be well to state, in conclusion, that this young woman Ruth, who belonged to a race that was considered as inferior to, and hated by, the Israelites, became the grandmother of David; and it was from the house of David that Jesus Christ Himself came. In other words, this young woman, a foreigner and a heathen, according to the Jewish thought and religion, became an ancestress of Jesus. Let no man look lightly upon the peoples of other races. What God hath cleansed, let no man call unclean.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, August 3, 1930.

Topic: "Chances to Serve Christ in the Summer."

Hymn: "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life," or "He Leadeth Me."

Prayer.

Scripture reading: John 6:1-14.

Hymn: "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Poem:

"But once I pass this way,
And then—and then, the silent door
Swings on its hinges,
Opens . . . closes,
And no more
I pass this way.
So while I may
With all my might,
I will assay
Sweet comfort and delight
To all I meet upon the pilgrim way,
For no man travels twice
The great highway
That climbs through darkness up to light,
Through night
To day." —John Oxenham.

"There are strange ways of serving God:
You sweep a room or turn a sod,
And suddenly, to your surprise,
You hear the whirr of seraphim,
And find you're under God's own eyes
And building palaces for Him."
—Herman Hagedorn.

Leader's introduction: "The Real Spirit of Service."

Talks on the following topics: "Why Serve?" "What is Christian Service?" and "Some Opportunities for Christian Service in the Summer."

A dramatization: Have one or two members of the society write out in play form a little story of how some girls spent their summer, and then let members of the society be prepared to dramatize their story. Do not require memorization of the play, but let the characters put the meaning of the play in their own words. The following story may be helpful:

Margaret meets one of her girl friends, Sue, on her way to see a group of girl friends after the summer vacation is over. Sue invited Margaret to go along. On the way she tells her how each of her girl friends had planned summer vacations at the beach and the mountains, and had declared that they were not going to attend Church at all, until one of them, Eleanor, called their attention to the fact that they must not forget that they were Christians and cheat Christ out of three months of their time and talents. So they organize a little society called the "Ins and Outs," and set a day, after vacations should be over, for reports.

At the meeting, every one is very enthusiastic and eager to hear from all the others. Eleanor tells how she spent her vacation in the mountains, and about visiting in some of the homes of the people, who were very poor. She paid the board of a little crippled girl in order that she might attend a boarding-school and get "l'arnin'."

Dorothy went to the beach. She had courage enough to leave golf and attend Church on Sunday. At first, the others laughed at her, but toward the last some of them went with her to Church.

Molly stayed at home. She went to Sunday School, Church and Christian Endeavor every time. She made a practice of going in her car for half a dozen children every Sunday morning and taking them to Sunday School.

Ruth stayed at home, too. She made old folks her specialty. She read to one old lady, and did errands for another, and spent whole afternoons reading to an old gentleman while the rest of his family had outings. She declares that she enjoyed it as much as the old folks themselves.

And Sue spent her time in the country, because of doctor's orders. But she raised flowers and sent them in to folks in the city hospitals. She received several nice letters from people who received her flowers.

Margaret feels ashamed of herself for the way she has spent her summer, and asked to be allowed to join the "Ins and Outs" in their endeavor to spend their summers in a worth-while way.

The whole group may sing, "I Would Be True" at the close of the dramatization.

FRIEND OF HOME MISSIONS.

The death of Mr. Mortimer H. Alling, on June 14th, at his home in Providence, R. I., means the loss of a devoted layman in the cause of home missions and of the Congregational Church Extension Boards. Mr. Alling has been a member of the administrative committee of the boards for a number of years, and his service as an able and successful business man has been deeply appreciated. He was a devoted member of the Central Church in Providence.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

THE ART OF JESUS AS A TEACHER. By Charles Francis McKoy. The Judson Press; pp. 185; $1.50.

Here is a scholarly book, pulsing with spiritual devotion and animated by spiritual insight. Jesus lifted teaching from professionalism to the highest art. He is not only the Master Teacher, but the Master Artist in teaching. Minister and teacher alike will find Dr. McKoy's book a well-spring of information and of inspiration.

RELIGION IN THE AMERICAN COLLEGE. By Edward S. Boyer. The Abingdon Press; pp. 105; $1.25.

Since 1916 there has been a remarkable growth of interest in the teaching of religion in American colleges and universities. Prof. Boyer has made a first-hand investigation of the facts, and in this book interprets what he discovered. He believes that the teaching of religion should go beyond the presentation of information to the realm of motivation of life.

THE PENTECOSTAL FIRE. By J. C. Massee, D. D. The Judson Press; pp. 150; $1.50.

Dr. J. C. Massee was for several years pastor of First Baptist Church, Raleigh, N. C. He has held other strong pulpits. He is recognized as a strong evangelistic preacher. In this volume are comprehended thirteen sermons in his characteristic style and vigor. Any one of these sermons is worth the price of the book.

PURITAN PRINCIPLES AND AMERICAN IDEALS. By Henry Hallam Saunderson. The Pilgrim Press; pp. 255; $2.00.

Dr. Saunderson has already established himself as an interpreter of character and racial trends. In this book he undertakes to appraise the Puritans, and accredits them with the establishment of constitutional government in America, with the development of the public school system, with the founding of self-governing Churches as an expression of religious liberty, with the founding of Christian colleges in order to provide an intelligent citizenship, and with the promulgation of the publishing business that good books might be readily accessible. The town-meeting was a specialized form of democratic government developed by the Puritans. Of late, we have rated the Puritans down as grim and relentless. Dr. Saunderson makes them intensely interesting as the progressives of their day—progressives in religion and in politics. Not all will be convinced by the author, but his book is certainly worth reading.

WORSHIP IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL. By J. Sherman Wallace. The Judson Press; pp. 168; $1.

Dr. Wallace is editor of young people's publications of the Northern Baptist Convention, and so is eminently qualified by experience as well as by professional preparation to write this book. The book is not merely a manual of methods; the methods are adequately handled, but also a philosophical discussion of the motive and reason for worship. It is one of the best worship books on the market.

IF WE CONFESS.

Confession is a stepping-stone to the kingdom. The spirit which prompts it is one of the chief elements of Christian character. Only a weakling, or a person possessed with a false conception of dignity or honor, will refuse to acknowledge his faults or confess his errors. No one will ever make wrongs right if he is unwilling to confess his own wrongs. No one will go forward unless he is willing to confess that he has not yet gone all the way. Plato reasoned that the essence of wisdom consists first of all in the consciousness of one's ignorance. Groping his way in the cold twilight of unguided reason, he beheld the dim outline of a great truth, spiritual as well as intellectual. Confession proceeds from a sense of need, of dependence, of sinfulness, and only in that state is the soul capable of receiving help.

"If we confess," God will forgive; not because our confession makes Him more willing to forgive, but because it opens the way for His grace to gain access to our hearts. There is a vital difference between confession and the mere acknowledgement of sin. Confession is the act of pouring out, of giving up the thing which is wrong, just as the conquered soldier surrenders his arms to the conqueror. There can be no merit in acknowledging a wrong unless we intend to break with it forever. David acknowledged his sin, but the sin was as a stalking ghost in his thoughts, a hideous monster from which his soul shrank, until God's grace swept it out of his life.—Telescope.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD.

"Above all things, have fervent charity among yourselves; for charity shall cover the multitude of sins."—1 Peter 4:8.

The word "charity" here is translated in the later version as "love," and it is spoken of as the greatest gift of the Holy Spirit. You can bear witness to that yourself. Isn't love the greatest "comforter," healer, pacifier, harmonizer, the greatest blessing known to mankind? In this is the greatest glory and honor to the Lord Jesus Christ.

Unless the spirit of love leads us, that which we do is nothing but dead works. It may have the form of godliness, but in actuality it is nothing but "stubble," says the Scriptures, and our hearts say so, too. The whole call of Christian living is the exercise of love.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, pour out Thy Spirit into our hearts, that we may feel all the harmonies and comforts of life in the midst of the wickedness, troubles and afflictions of life; and help us to bear in our lives all the love we should. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WHAT TO EXPECT.

"Because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore, the world hateth you."—John 15:19.

It is far from being pleasant either to hate or to be hated by any one, but we cannot avoid being hated when we have to take a stand against some one, and often the Christian way impels us to take a stand against others.

We sometimes become the object of the world's hatred because we follow Jesus. But we must remember at all times that the distinctive feature of God's people is love, and the distinctive feature of the world is hate. We must remember also that the distinctive desire of the true Christian is to pray for the enemies, even with the most lowly of morals, for Christ died for them as well as for us.

Though we cannot take part always with the world, we should never feel too good to associate with them as Christ did. This truly is no easy matter. Yet we are imperfect ourselves. We often are tempted to neglect our duty, to be hasty and injudicious, to commit blunders which injure others, and we do many things for which we can blame ourselves for the unbelief of others. This itself should humble us to a spirit level where we can love souls and help them.

We are sorry to be hated by others, but it is a comfort to believe that Christ Himself is hated; and, if we are actuated through holy motives, we can be comforted further, that we are hated because we claim Christ as our Lord and that what we do is for His sake and not because of our wisdom and sanctimoniousness.

Let us make sure that it is not for these reasons, and that, if there are those who should hate us, it is because they do not love the Father.

Prayer.—Give us, O God, the love of Jesus Christ in our hearts, that our whole life may bear witness that we are the children. Give us the courage to be right and stand by the truth. Give us the spiritual vision to see the blessings that may be disguised in tribulations. If it be possible, lead others to Christ through our lives. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

ANOTHER EXPECTATION.

"My soul, wait thou only on God; for my expectation is from Him."—Psa. 62:5.

David, a man after God's own heart, was compelled to flee from Saul as a chased roe from the hounds. The revolt of Absalom, his son, and his miserable fate was typical of many incidents in his life that afflicted him. But he emerged from it all the sweet singer of Israel and the servant of the Lord to comfort all succeeding generations with songs of the Psalms. He could have become this in no other way.

When one does not have God to rely upon and to pray to, no stormy sea is as turbulent as the human heart. There are misfortunes, sorrows, impatience and terrors that beat upon the ship of the soul like a mighty sea until, in wretchedness, it sinks into the depth of despair.

How we need God, and how we need the Psalms to give our soul the quiet sea! He is our only hope, and our only help. All that we are must center in Him. The psalmist lays so much stress upon this that he emphasizes the word "only," and keeps on repeating it.

Prayer.—Merciful God, we thank Thee for all which Thou doest for us in Thy dealings with us. If it seems good that we should be chastened, heal us for Thy glory. Teach us to hope in Thee only and to trust firmly in Thee at all times. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE SUPREME EXPECTATION.

"Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure."—1 John 3:3.

Jesus loved us unto death, and we love unto life. By love we conquer sin and keep down sin within us. By love we become sons of God and shall be known as such before the angels. By love we have daily regeneration like the affluence of a tree in spring-time putting forth its buds and foliage and fruit. By love we are partakers of divine nature and are His and like Him. By love we shall grow into a full understanding of truth. By love we shall reach that condition where there is 'fullness of joy . . . and pleasures forevermore." By it we shall, in His presence, attain holiness ourselves. By love we shall prove to the world that God is and that there is a salvation from sin.

Prayer.—Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for Thy great love. We confess our shortcomings and unworthiness. But we thank Thee that Thou dost lift us up and doth give us this hope of eternal bliss. Help us to come before Thee every day to be purged, that we may stand before Thee face to face in heaven that great day. Amen.

FRIDAY.

INFLUENCES AFTERWARD.

"I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thy offspring."—Isa. 44:3.

To reach heaven and be perfected ourselves in the presence of God is not all there is to the Christian life. Read the text. It should make us rich and happy. Longing for God and having a fervent desire for a heart full of love is the work of the Holy Spirit, not only to perfect us, but to transmit that same blessing to our posterity. In this way, faith is kindled in the hearts of humanity and Pentecost is felt, though the seed be scattered far and wide.

Prayer.—Our faithful and merciful God, give us grace to believe Thy word, trust in Thy goodness, and rely on Thy love and power, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

SATURDAY.

PRIESTLY FUNCTIONS.

"If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink."—John 7:37.

This passage is figurative of the function of Christ, both now and in that great day. The language is taken from the priestly functions of the synagogue.

At the Feast of the Tabernacles, a priest brought water in a golden bowl, and carried it to the inner court of the temple. Here it was received by the other priests by the blowing of trumpets while the people sang: "With joy shall ye draw water uot of the wells of salvation" (Isa. 12:3). The priest thereupon carried the water to the altar and mixed it with the wine of the drink offering; and then it was poured out, and ran through underground tubes into a brook, or a take-away.

Christ is our Priest. The water is the love of God. It has passed through the sacrifice on the altar of the cross, and it flows over the earth as living water, and they who drink shall never thirst. This is what Jesus was saying when He talked with the man at the well. It is what He was saying when He said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." It is what He was saying when He said, "If any man hear my voice and come unto me." It is what He is saying when He said, "He that believeth on me, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water."

Christ is here, and we all stand on the banks of this river. He will pour out for us.

Prayer.—Help us, dear Lord, to come and drink and live. Amen.

SUNDAY.

PURE RELIGION.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep one's self unspotted from the world."—Jas. 1:27.

"Christianity is not knowledge nor learning, nor virtuous conduct and good words, nor the habit of going to Church and attending devotional exercises; but it is the communion of the heart with the Lord, brought about by the Holy Ghost," to keep us unspotted from sin and to do good to all men.

Prayer.—We heartily beseech Thee, O God, to make us clean, keep us clean, and make us living witnesses for Him. Amen.

"I never drink alcoholic beverages, so that I have never been tempted to violate the Volstead act."—E. A. Ross, professor of sociology, University of Wisconsin.

The Republican party had a warning of real import when Henry W. Taft, brother of the late President and Chief Justice, resigned as a member of the advisory committee of the New York County Republican Committee in protest against a resolution cpposing the eighteenth amendment. Any anti-prchibition activity by Republicans in the North is exceedingly injurious to the interests of their party, and the same thing is true of Democratic opposition to prohibition in the South.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

A PARENT, PATIENT AND PHYSICIAN.

A great English preacher was once asked by members of the clergy the following question: "Doctor, if you were to put into one sentence a message of counsel to your brother-ministers in England and all around the world, what would that sentence be?" Now, every man in the group was in a state of wonderment until the venerable old soldier of God spoke. He said: "Oh, brothers in the ministry, make it plain to the people whom you minister unto, the way of salvation." Such a sentence indeed is vital, for all need to know the way of salvation. We need to know how we were saved, for some day some one might ask any of us the question, "How were you saved?" Some of us might feel a little lost in making a complete and satisfying answer to so important a question. Could you, O fellow-churchmen, make it clear to some one outside the fold, the way of salvation? Do you know enough about the means and the ways of the cross to lead another person to the Master, who gave His life for all men?

The lesson read for our evening devotion, taken from the fourth chapter of Saint John's gospel, is nothing more than a brief statement of how a man came to Jesus, stated his case, and from Him received the needed blessing. The way of salvation is herein clearly illustrated. The several steps are made clear enough for any one to step therein and become a hundred per cent Christian.

"There was a certain nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum. When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went unto Him and besought Him that He would come down and heal his son, for he was at the point of death. Then Jesus said unto him, 'Except ye see signs and wonders, ye shall not believe." The nobleman said, "Sir, come down, ere my child die." Jesus saith unto him, "Go thy way; thy son liveth." And the man believed the word which Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way. And as he was going down, his servants met him and told him, saying, "Thy son liveth. Then enquired he of them the hour when he began to mend, and they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him. So the father knew that it was at the same hour in which Jesus said unto him, Thy son liveth. And the father himself believed and the whole house" (John 4: 46-54).

The way of salvation is so clearly marked in this story that a child can easily see the remarkable power of God exemplified in bringing about a cure for a troubled soul. There are three individuals mentioned that stand out plainly in this remarkable story which is recorded by John alone. They are (1) the parent, (2) the patient, (3) the physician. There is manifest a sense of pity and an example of power. Let us first turn to the parent, or petitioner.

1. The parent: "And there was a certain nobleman whose son was sick at Capernaum."

The fate of illness selects not its victims. One is chosen to be ill, without respect of wealth or fortune. Here we find that a man of great means, even a nobleman, who was greatly troubled because his son was very sick. Now this parent had much of the world's goods, but he was bearing a cross and as he bore it he suffered. His little boy was at the point of death, and no doubt all that medical science could do was done for him. But there are certain desires of the heart that money cannot buy. Health of one's family is one of those cherished longings. This nobleman was willing to do anything to preserve the life of his little boy, and by chance Jesus came from His own city of Nazareth, where He was not received; for, said He, a prophet is without honor in his own country. He knew he would be well received in other cities, and so He had been in Cana of Galilee, and now was nearing Capernaum. At once this wealthy man, who had heard of His miracle at Cana, wherein He had turned water into wine, went forth to seek Jesus in behalf of his son.

It is evident that this parent loved his son so devotedly that he would spare nothing, if he could restore him to health again. He could, therefore, have sent his servant to Jesus, who was then in Cana, a distance of fifteen miles away, and requested that He come. But that was not the way in those days to obtain help from Jesus, and it is not the way today. One must go in person. And so the nobleman himself went to Jesus. This parent truly believed that Jesus could cure his sick boy. He had heard of other instances wherein He had worked miracles, and so in faith he went to Jesus. And even though the distance was great enough to go a day's journey, the man willingly went forth. How reasonable is that act. He sought Jesus where He was. He did not delay in reaching Him. He sought Him, just as a business man today seeks trade. He doesn't hold his hands and say, "If trade is to be mine it will come to me"; but, "I must go out and find my customers, and when I find them I must sell them my goods, my ideas. Too much is at stake for me to remain here alone without going out in search." If one has sickness in the family, he does not hold his hands and say, "If my child is to get well, it will get well . . .if my wife is to be restored, she will be restored." No, no; but, "I must get the doctor, and that right early." Just as one seeks the physician to cure the ills of the body, so we must seek the Great Physician if we would find cure for our sins.

The Bible is full of great statements relating to the need of seeking Him. Listen to this commission, "Seek ye the Lord while He may be found; call ye upon Him while He is near." Again, "In the day that thou seekest me with thy whole heart, I will be found of thee." The man in the story had purposed to find Jesus to help him out of his trouble, and with that purpose in his mind, he found Jesus. There was none other to whom he could go; none other to whom he should go. I seem to see him now as he stands before Him, saying, "My boy is down yonder in the little town of Capernaum, and he is sick. I'm in trouble. He may die. And I have come to you, for I believe that you can be a source of help to me in my trial. All the medicines we have used so far have been worthless, and you alone have the power we seek in our home. Won't you come? I'm ready to go all the way with you; all that I have in life I trust to you, if you will come down and heal him."

I imagine the man prayed to Jesus and earnestly besought Him. So ought we to pray to Him when there is any kind of trouble in our homes or our lives. Prayer is no more than approaching Him and saying, "Jesus, I want you to help me. I am willing to leave all to you." Anybody can pray, and everybody ought to pray to Him. Think of the one prayer that led Jesus to exclaim, "This man went down to his house justified." The poor publican had prayed out of his heart just such a prayer as we need to pray." "God, be merciful unto me, a sinner." This parent prayed in earnest, and really believed that Jesus would come to his home. In our praying we should regard our words as matter of life and death, "Come now, lest my son die." "Come to me, lest I go astray."

It is interesting to notice that the man dictated to Jesus in his conversation. He told Jesus what to do. "Come down to my house ere my child die." Then said Jesus unto Him, this being the first time Jesus spake to him, "Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe"—you are putting boundaries on me as though I had to be present to perform God's work; in other words, you want to see me do it before you believe. In substance, Jesus said, "Oh, nobleman, I can heal your boy; won't you let me do it my way?" So Jesus, in His own way, is waiting and willing to show mercy upon all of us who will go to Him in faith just believe in Him.

2. The patient: "He besought Him, that He come down and heal his son, for he was at the point of death."

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We had hoped to reach the ten-thousand-dollar mark in our report this week, but just lacked a few dollars—just a little disappointed. We feel sure we will reach and pass it next week, which will be the last report for July. Then we will be one-third of the way to our goal of thirty thousand dollars for the year.

Thirteen of our little children enjoyed a trip to the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention held at Liberty Vance Church July 16th. They rendered a little program representing the Orphanage on the Convention program, which the people seemed to enjoy.

Our children always enjoy the trips and are glad to get an invitation to a convention or Church to render a program.

We want to appeal to every Sunday School to give us a liberal support from now until the end of the year. Our general fund is exhausted, and it will be necessary to borrow money from now until the end of the year to meet our bills unless our friends and Sunday Schools come to our rescue. For thirteen years we have been able to finance the Orphanage and pay our bills without going to the bank for accommodation; but it looks as though we will be compelled to break that long record this year unless our Sunday Schools will take a pride in increasing the monthly offering and help us bridge across the rough places. The North Carolina and Virginia Conference stands the nearest a hundred per cent Conference on monthly support. The Western North Carolina Conference stands second. Let every Sunday School take a part in helping these little children.

TEACH THE YOUNG.

Shall we teach prohibition? The answer is: Shall we teach law enforcement and respect for the Constitution of the United States. To the teacher with backbone and character, there can be but one answer. We must teach prohibition because it is a part of the Constitution and the law of the land. Moreover, all vociferous wet propaganda to the contrary notwithstanding, it is the earnest desire of a vast majority of the citizens of this country that this law be enforced. We must teach prohibition because prohibition is desirable; it has brought immense benefit to us in wealth, in health, and in happiness. A much smaller percentage of our people indulge in the use of liquor than ever before. We can make the law much more effective by teaching the values of prohibition. The gangster, the beer-runner, and the beer-runner's friend will object, of course, but the manufacturer of alcoholic drinks and the saloon-keeper objected to the enforcement of liquor laws and the teaching of abstinence before prohibition went into effect and the objections of the later gentry should have no more effect than did theirs. In conjunction with what we may all hope will be an honest attempt at law enforcement, teachers should do their duty.—Idaho Journal of Education.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

When Jesus saw that the father was willing to turn the case over to Him, He said, "Go thy way; thy son liveth." And yonder in Capernaum a boy, sick on his bed, was made to sit up. The fever left him and life sprang with new joy and hope. The father, as he neared home, believing in the power of Jesus, was met by his servants, who came forth rejoicing and saying, "Thy son liveth."

It was hard for the parent to believe that Jesus could be near, even though He be far. It is difficult for us to think of Him as a personal companion and one who hath power to do for us just what He did for the nobleman's son. In other words, many of us are not willing and ready to go all the way with Him. We are not ready to trust our all in His care. The Word says, "Commit thy way unto the Lord." But many of us do not feel like committing a way unto the Master that is so marked by sin and abused by doubt and fear." The little boy who was sick and afflicted was committed to Him, and the great Physician healed him. He can do just as much for you and for me if we will put our all in His hands. But many are not one hundred per cent Christians tonight, because we have been holding back—some difficult problem is in the way. Will you not place your all on the altar, whatever your fear, doubt, anxiety, temptation, weakness, your past, present or future? Surrender all to Him, and He will care for you. Jesus never has saved a person who held back from Him, and He never failed to save one who came unto Him. It is so easy and so plain; but you say, "I can't do it, it is hard." What do we mean by committing all to Him? A child is asked to take a letter and commit it to the postoffice. The letter is then put in charge of the government and is cared for accordingly. Just commit your life, your problems, to Him and see if He will not save and care for you.

3. The Physician: "Go thy way, thy son liveth."

The great Physician said, "Go thy way, thy son liveth." You just trust your boy to me, or any other problems, and they shall be handled for you. The man, therefore, left all in the care of the great Physician, and as he neared home the servants came to him, exclaiming, "Master, the boy is well." And the father asked the servants at what hour the boy was made well, and they exclaimed, "Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him." And the father knew that at the same hour yesterday it was that Jesus said to him, "Thy son liveth." And the man had believed all that Jesus had said to him. So must we believe in the great Physician if we would benefit by His healing power. If we would expect Him to say, "Thy son liveth, or thy sins be forgiven," we must come to Him believing that He will do for us what He hath done for countless others.

Wonderful words were they when Jesus said, in substance, "Now that you have trusted your boy to me, you may go home in peace and there find him well." When the father, who believed, arrived home and saw that his faith was real and the Master's words were true, he was happy. As we apply this truth to our own lives, we discover that many of us are unwilling to trust all to Him. We usually want to see and know all before we trust. Christ says, "If you will trust me, I will save you." We say, "If you will save me, I will trust you." Before we become a hundred per cent Christian we must accept Him and let Him work with and for us as He sees best, remembering that God's ways are not man's ways. If you had a candle in a darkened room and wanted light, you would not stand before the candle and exclaim, "Little candle burn now, so we can see," before you struck the match; but having struck the match, you would light the candle and the house would be aglow with light to all who were therein.

The very essence of being one hundred per cent Christian is that we take Christ at His word, and to Him surrender all. Let none of us say, "Lord, I cannot, because I cannot see how salvation is possible." Certainly you cannot see or understand His ways. One cannot explain the mysteries of the physical birth; then, why demand an explanation of the spiritual birth. Jesus, the great Physician, came to care for the ways and means of the second birth, and though Nicodemus, a learned man of long ago, became perplexed, Jesus continued to say, "Ye must be born again."

Just as the little boy was suddenly cured of his fever, so our lives, so sinful and faulty, may be cured and healed in the twinkling of an eye. Because the boy was cured by the great Physician, other members of the family were saved for Christ. If each one of us who have been cured would testify of His power, others, seeing that we have been with Jesus, would believe also in His wonderful work.

OBITUARIES.

ROUDABUSH.

Mrs. Maggie Roudabush was born on March 21, 1854, and died June 5, 1930, making her age 76 years, 2 months, and 14 days. Sister Roudabush was a widow for many years, and made her home with her brother, S. E. Hinton, at Massanetta Springs. She was a member of Antioch Christian Church, and an upright Christian woman, enjoying the respect of a host of friends.

Funeral services were conducted at Frieden's Church, June 7, 1930, and the remains laid to rest by the side of her husband in the adjoining cemetery.

A. W. ANDES.

CROVEN.

Archie Calen Croven, son of Glen and Verdie Croven, was born July 22, 1926, and was called to be with Jesus on July 4, 1930, being 1 year, 11 months, and 12 days of age. He is survived by his parents and one brother. His life in the home was short, but most beautiful.

Funeral services were held at Preasant Ridge Christian Church on July 5th, conducted by the writer, and the body was laid to rest beneath a beautiful mound of flowers. May the Heavenly Father comfort the bereaved family.

B. H. LOWDERMILK.

LUKE.

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst our beloved co-worker, Mrs. Howard A. Luke, whose death occurred May 30, 1930; and,

Whereas, we can realize to some extent the grief of her husband and other relatives at the early passing of a life which meant so much to all of our religious and community activities; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Mrs. Luke, the Ladies' Aid Society of the Holland, Va., Christian Church has lost one who was faithful in all of its undertakings and who so generously gave of her time and means to the various enterprises of the Church.

2. That while we feel so keenly her loss, we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, and may we strive to emulate her good example by being more faithful in our duties to God's cause.

3. That we extend to the bereaved husband and family our heartfelt sympathy and point them to the One whose grace is sufficient for all their needs.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, a copy be sent to her husband and parents, and a copy be placed on the records of our Ladies' Aid Society.

MRS. W. C. HOOK.
MRS. CHAS. DAUGHTREY.
MRS. B. J. BEALE.

DUKE.

We, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Holland, Va., Christian Church, feel very keenly the passing of one of our faithful members, Mr. A. T. Duke, who departed this life May 3rd.

Therefore, be it resolved, That while we mourn the departure of our loyal brother, who had been a patient sufferer for some time, we feel that our loss is his eternal gain, and we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father and extend to the family and loved ones our deepest sympathy in their great loss. May they look to the One whose guiding and sustaining hand is able to keep them in life's darkest hours.

We recommend that a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, a copy be sent to the family, and a copy be placed on the records of our Ladies' Aid Society.

MRS. W. C. HOOK.
MRS. CHAS. DAUGHTREY.
MRS. B. J. BEALE.

BLYTHE.

Inasmuch as it has pleased Almighty God, in His wise providence in dealing with man, to call from our midst and from labor to reward one of our number; and inasmuch as we feel very keenly our personal loss of a true friend and, as a Church, realize the loss of an esteemed and faithful member of Union (Southampton) Christian Church; and whereas, in the going of Bro. Louis Blythe, our loss to the Church on earth is gain to the Church in heaven; be it, therefore, resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to Him who, in wise providence, "doeth all things well," and say, "Not our will, but Thine be done."

2. That we extend and express to the bereaved family and loved ones our deepest, heartfelt sympathy, and commend them to the sympathizing care of God.

3. That we who still journey in the flesh live so that our lives may emulate the goodness and love of his life, and in so doing reflect credit on his memory made dear by our associations with him.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of Bro. Blythe, a copy be recorded on the Church records, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

BOSWELL.

Mrs. Fannie Walker Boswell fell asleep in death at her home in Alamance County, N. C., on June 26th, aged 68 years and 3 months. She was a granddaughter of Rev. Albert G. Anderson. On November 27, 1881, she and John A. Boswell were united in marriage, and to them were born six children, all of whom are living. Her husband preceded her to the spirit land twenty-seven years ago last January. She was a charter member of Bethel Christian Church, true and faithful. A good woman, a devoted wife and mother, and one loved by those who knew her has passed from labor to reward.

The funeral services were conducted from Bethel Christian Church by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. S. Carden, a former pastor, and Dr. J. O. Lankford, in the presence of a large audience, and her body was laid to rest by the side of her husband in the Church cemetery and the grave was banked with beautiful flowers. May the Heavenly Father comfort and keep the bereaved.

FLOYD.

Whereas, we, the members of the Oak Grove Church, do realize that in the death of Mr. J. H. Floyd that we have lost one of our most faithful members; and whereas, we know that his place shall be forever vacant, yet while we shall always miss his presence, we will cherish his memory. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we submit our will to our Father's, and that we trust Him to do all things well.

2. That we strive to cultivate the same willing heart and ready hand that was his for the work of the furtherance of God's kingdom on earth.

3. That we extend to his family our deep sympathy and point them to the Great Comforter, who is able to heal all broken hearts.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy recorded in our Church book, and a copy published in The Christian Sun.

BOURNEMOUTH CONFERENCE.—

This assembly of Congregationalists includes many distinguished Americans, among whom are Dr. Fred B. Smith, Dr. Jay T. Stocking, who preached the council sermon, and Dr. Albert W. Palmer. Among the many guests from Europe attending was the patriarch of Alexandria, who is taking part in the Lambeth conference. His full title is, "His Holiness, His Beatitude Meletios II, Pope and Patriarch of Alexandria, Third Prelate in Christendom." I am sure that Christ would have worn no such high-sounding title. He has been through many perils in his life at the hands of the Turks; he has been stoned, imprisoned, starved, flung down a steep staircase. His presence shows how close is the relationship between Canterbury and the Orthodox Church.

SALT.—

Salt plays a multitude of roles on the world's stage just now. A great gathering of dentists proclaims it the best dentifrice (a bit of wisdom known for centuries by certain primitive peoples noted for their good teeth). Salt has the double power of destroying and preserving, for it is germicidal and destroys that which causes disease and decay, and preservative in that it preserves that which is worth while. The Christian is called the salt of the earth because he is to destroy evil and save that which is good. This double meaning of salt as a germicide and cleanser, and also a preserver, suggests its symbolic meanings in the Bible as applied to the Christian life. We are taught to have salt in ourselves, which means spiritual power to cleanse and preserve that which is good.

RADIO SERVICE.—

In England the radio service is growing in contrast with the service rendered here. The British Broadcasting Corporation, although it labors under what the Americans would regard as the disadvantage of government control, is exhibiting an extraordinary result of experimentation and a great source of ideas. Rather than losing freedom and initiative on account of official connections, it is showing far greater aggressiveness and unrestrained liberty than the so-called independent stations of this country. For example, this corporation will devote Sunday afternoons, beginning next fall, to a series of talks on "Science and Religion," and the speakers will be drawn from many fields. The series will be introduced by Mr. Julian Huxley, and among those who will follow him will be Eddington, Streeter, and Betrand Russell. There will doubtless be objections in certain quarters, but nothing would stimulate interest in religion more, and also for broadcasting, than full and free discussion of vital issues in such freedom and fashion as to be available to any man who wishes to listen. If they teach error, such service will expose it to the critics of the entire world; if they teach truth, it will be given to the whole human race; and the result will further the kingdom of God.

REGULATING RELIGION.—

In China the restrictions placed on the teaching of religion makes it almost prohibitive. The executive authorities have recently published the following rules of regulation respecting religion. First, organizations founded for the purpose of studying religions shall not permit non-adults of Chinese nationality to become members. Those disobeying this order shall be closed immediately. Second, the Young Men's Christian Associations in the various provinces which are supposed to be founded for the promotion of the four virtues, but are actually engaged in propagating the Christian religion and seducing young people, are evidently organizations of imperialistic cultural invasion and shall therefore be taken over and controlled by Chinese educational organizations.

Party leaders in the city of Nanking have issued a regulation forbidding Christian Churches from holding public services for preaching Christianity. Students proposing to come to the United States for graduate work have been informed that they will not be granted a passport if their studies include any religious subjects. The Chinese Nationalist government may not at present be able, on account of its precarious authority, to put these regulations into full effect, but they show which way the tendency is moving in China with reference to missionary work and the teaching of Christianity. Their publication, however, should serve notice to Christian missionaries that the anti-Christian movement is seeking to counteract the influence of Christianity in China.

SIX DAYS TO CHINA.—

Aviation is coming into its own in China. Already there is regular passanger and mail service between Shanghai, Nanking and Hankow. The China National Aviation Corporation of the National government will shortly sign a contract with a representative of the Lufthansa interests, in Germany, in connection with the inauguration of a Sino-European air mail, passenger and foreign service. Soon China will find that Europe is but six days' distant.

China is truly making rapid strides, and it is easy to see where these strides will lead. Not only is China accepting from the West modern facilities for peace-time pursuits, but she is also learning military tactics from the West. Such strides can lead only to Armageddon. They are but the fulfillment of prophecy. The "kings of the East" are to come up well prepared for battle, according to the prophecies in Revelation 16 and Joel 3, China is making preparation with the rest of the world.

These are tense days throughout the entire East. The student of the world events is driven to a searching of the prophetic word for the meaning of these things. Only the Scriptures can give us the answer to the questions, "Whither China?" or "Whither Europe?" and "Whither America?" Unless the Christian influences of these countries shall rise above materialism, we shall be plunged into war again and again in the future as we have done in the past. The only power that can save the world from itself is the power of God through the Prince of Peace.

REFORMED MOVIES.—

In the reformation of the movies, the advertising was to be a true representation of what was to be presented on the screen. Here are some of the results. In Variety, Warners proudly presents these announcements: "The Sex Appeal Sextet"; another entitled, "A Soldier's Plaything," written by Vina Delmar, who is responsible for "Kept Woman" and "Bad Girls" and other literary masterpieces so dear to the readers of salacious literature; another called, "The Matrimonial Bed." According to the advertising, "He could not remember in which boudoir he belonged." Another entitled, "A Husband's Privileges," all about a gutter sheik to be crudely realistic; another entitled, "Ex-Mistress," to be produced under the title of "Just an Hour of Love." Quoting from the Christian Century, "Will Rogers and John McCormack and Admiral Byrd this week, and you can't hang much of sex appeal on them; but here's 'Sweetie becomes the Bernhardt of the screen! Dimpled dynamite . . . professional good-time girl . . . She 'took' suckers, sinners and saints until one made her beg for love.'" And here's "Surprising adventure of a beautiful salesgirl who preferred sin in silks to love without luxury." Another, "She defied convention—took love where she found it!" Another, "An untamed tropic siren! She loved wildly, hated fiercely!" And a plenty more of the same kind may be found on the screen.

What are parents, teachers and Christian workers doing to save the younger generation from such moral filth and corruption? Exposed to such corrupt and corrupting pictures, no wonder that crime among the younger generation seems on the increase and more of our young men are serving time in the county or State prisons. The movie sows the seed of crime, the movie-goers cultivate the harvest in unsuspecting hearts, the newspapers publish it to the world and counteract in a great measure the work of the Church and home in guiding the younger generation in the paths of peace and righteousness.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Dr. W. C. Wicker, assisted by Bro. Dollar, is in revival services at Belew Creek, N. C., this week, and will be at Pleasant Grove, Va., next week, assisted by Dr. C. C. Ryan, Richmond, Va.

Cultivate the thankful spirit. It will be to thee a perpetual feast. There is, or ought to be, with us no such thing as small mercies; all are great, because the least are undeserved. Indeed, a really thankful heart will extract motive for gratitude from everything, making the most even of scanty blessings.—J. R. MacDuff.

Rev. J. W. Patton, pastor of Bethlehem Christian Church, was in a revival service at this Church during the past week, assisted by the Rev. L. A. Nalls, of the Baptist Church. They have had a great meeting, with about twenty professions. The Church has been greatly revived, and the outlook for the future is bright. The pastor and Church are both happy over the prospects.

The sawmill is cutting the lumber for the new Church building at Pleasant Ridge, and it is hoped that the new Church building will soon be going up. The plans for the new Church provide for four Sunday School rooms, opening into the main auditorium. The building will be erected with brick-veneer walls and will present a pleasing appearance on the beautiful location. The membership of the Church are enthusiastic over the prospects of the erection of this larger building. When it is completed, the Church will be adequate to entertain the annual Conference, or other Church bodies that may wish to meet here. At the recent session of the Sunday School Convention, the sessions, part of the time, had to be held in the school building for lack of room, but this will not be necessary when the new Church is completed.

Revival services are in progress at Pleasant Ridge Church, of which Dr. W. C. Wicker is pastor. Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, of the Reidsville Church, is assisting, and the interest on Tuesday night of the meeting was good. Many reconsecrations were made, and the Church seems ready for a great revival. Dr. Wicker has been pastor of this Church for five years, and the work has been steadily improving both in membership and conservative interest. The Higgins sisters, members of this Church, are conducting the singing in the revival, which adds greatly to the success of the meeting. Victor records of several of their songs have been made for the phonograph. Recently they received a letter from the heart of China, expressing appreciation for these records. Those of our own Church people who wish to hear their songs can secure them from these records.

REV. G. D. HUNT'S LETTER.

We closed our meeting at the Pleasant Grove Church, in Chambers County, Ala., last Sunday at 11 A. M. We had a fine meeting, and in many respects it was a success. At each service the attendance and interest increased, and on Sunday a fine Sunday School group came together and delighted their teachers. The Christian Endeavor Society was to entertain the society from New Hope Church last Sunday night.

I am now at Roanoke, First Church, in a meeting for this week. Rev. Veazey is in Columbus, Ga., his sick baby being under the care of a specialist in that city. At last report there was not much hope for the child. Special prayers are being offered for the home at each service.

We have a fine prospect for a meeting, and good attendance and good attention is being given. It is quite a pleasure for me to be here, and it would be more so if Rev. Mr. Veazey could be here also, as he has the work so much better in hand than I could have; but I am doing my best and am expecting a great service.

Rev. George Staley Hunt has gone to Pisgah, Ala., where he is connected with the high school for next term. He plans to carry his Churches in this section of the State until Conference.

I am having, it seems, about all I can do now. I am trying to assemble material to rebuild my home, which was burned, and also carry my revival work, for which I have engagements until the 13th of September; and in the meantime I am trying to care for my wife, who is suffering from a broken arm. We will appreciate your prayers. Yours truly,

G. D. HUNT.

WINDSOR, VA.

"Truly, my soul waiteth upon God: from Him cometh my salvation" (Psa. 62:1).

To me, the greatest wonder of the ages is the wonder of redeeming love. Our Blessed Heavenly Father, whose wisdom is infinite, whose power is unlimited, and whose love is boundless, devised the wonderful plan of salvation. Before a single star was planted in the firmament, that they might stand perpetual beacons upon the fields of heaven, forever declaring the "glory of God" and publishing to the world His handiwork, God entered into sacred covenant with His only begotten, holy Son to become the atoning sacrifice, the Ransomer, the Redeemer. Yes, beloved brethren, God, who created man in His own image, "so loved the world (the whole family of man) that He gave His only begotten Son," that He might become "the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey Him." It was a gift undeserved, unparalleled; the highest gift of His boundless, indescribable love. The apostle calls it "God's unspeakable gift." So it was.

In the "fullness of time," the glorious Sun of Righteousness rose in the spiritual firmament and shed light and life upon this fallen, sin-trodden and sin-cursed world. Thus the types, the sacrifices, the scapegoat, the brazen serpent, the cities of refuge, and all the rest stand forth illuminated in the marvelous light of their great ante-type—our Lord Jesus Christ. All the prophecies concerning the "ancient of days," the Messiah of prophecy, the Anointed One, the King of Glory, from Eden to John the Baptist, are gloriously fulfilled.

Just think of it: the Lord of Glory laid aside His royalty and came from heaven, that beautiful abode, to this region of darkness and shadow of death; from the throne where He was equal with the Father, and became incarnate and entered into the circumstances of guilty men to redeem them. How great the condescension of the Holy Son of God! The sacrifice of Christ, the Lamb of God, is the central truth of the mediatorial system. Here, law is honored and sin forgiven, justice vindicated and the sinner saved. Calvary opens to us the great deeps of everlasting love. When a man accepts what Christ has thus done for him, his sins are washed away in the blood of Christ and the man stands forgiven, acquitted, justified. His blood is the sovereign remedy by which the dreadful disease of sin can be removed. It is the only cure. "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin"—it never fails! No sins are too deep a dye for the blood of our Lord Jesus Christ to wash away.

There is no question about the sinner's needing salvation, neither is there any doubt regarding who the sinner is. Rom. 3:23 says: "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God," revealing the fact that all mankind are by nature sinners, and, being sinners, need salvation.

Our Heavenly Father, in this day of grace, is pleading with all to repent and be saved. Beloved, doth it not awaken and amaze thy soul to think that we have but this hasty life to win or lose eternal glory in? Remember, endless joy or misery is the certain reward and consequent of the spending of your present time. Oh, the tragedy of neglect, the danger of drifting, and the peril of resisting God! No unholy soul can enter that Holy City. How necessary, then, that we be washed in the precious blood of Christ!

The Holy Bible shows that sin is profitless. "The wages of sin is death." Beloved, what does it profit to gain the things that are temporal at the expense of a right life, peace with God, and the hope of glory? You must, if you want the blessings of God to come into your heart, be willing to forsake every known sin. The Bible makes it plain that there is not the slightest hope of salvation except through genuine repentance and faith in Jesus Christ. Only Jesus can save.

I plead with you to repent, believe in Him, trust Him, walk with Him, and you pass from death to life instantly.

NOTICE.

Since checking up on reports, I find that several Sunday Schools sent a fine delegation to the recent Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, held at Liberty Vance, but failed to turn in their report. Now, perhaps your delegates forgot to give me their report, or your secretary failed to let the delegates have their report. Any way, I failed to receive it. I am asking that you send me your report at once, as I am asked to turn in the minutes by August 20th. Please bear in mind that if I do not have your report your Church will go up as blank and your delegates cannot count for you. Now, I am hoping that all schools will send in a report of work being done. In this way, my report will be more complete and the Convention record will be far better.

Thanks. MRS. R. J. NEWTON,
Secretary.

NOTICE.

The Virginia Valley Central Christian Conference will meet at Newport, seven miles north of Shenandoah, Va., August 6-8th. Those coming by rail will be met at Shenandoah, Va., on the N. & W. Write Vernon Fultz, Stanley, Va., to meet you.

Those coming by auto from the North will leave the Valley Pike at New Market, taking the Luray road to the intersection at the foot of the eastern side of the mountain. It is eight miles from New Market to the intersection, and six from there to Newport. These six are sometimes muddy. Bring your chains along.

Those coming from the South will find the best road by Staunton, Harrisonburg, Elkton and Shenandoah.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

MISS BARBARA CHASE is working at Flint Hill and Sophia, with marked success, in student summer service work.

A NEW Sunday School is being organized at Providence Chapel, Spies, with first supply of literature being supplied free by the Pilgrim Press.

AN IMPORTANT meeting of the trustees of Country Life Academy, at Star, N. C., will be held Saturday, July 26th. Policies for the ensuing year will be determined.

MR. ROBERT BLAKESLEY, who has been working with Rev. George N. Edwards at Charleston for the last month, will go to Columbia to be associated with Rev. Mr. Sperow during August.

DR. & MRS. ROBERT MacDONALD are spending the summer at Methuen, Mass., but will return to the First Church, Miami, about November 1st. They were recently entertained by Rev. and Mrs. George B. Spalding at their summer home at Stonington, Conn.

DR. EDWARD M. NOYES, formerly of Newton Center, Mass., has been invited to return to the Tourist Church at Seabreeze, Daytona Beach, Fla., for the coming season, and will have charge of the services beginning December 1st. This Church has a beautiful new building in the Spanish style, and last season Dr. Noyes had large and very appreciative audiences.

MISS PRISCILLA CHASE has just completed a most successful vacation Bible school at Albemarle. The pastor, Rev. George Penn, assisted. More than eighty pupils kept these people busy afternoon and morning for nearly three weeks. Miss Chase now goes to the Young People's Conference at Elon College, where she has charge of a course for young people.

SUPERINTENDENT GILLETTE of Florida will spend the month of August at Canaan, Conn., where he was for several years pastor in the earlier years of his ministry. He has spoken on the extension board work in the Southeast, and especially on the progress of the merger with the Christians at Plainville, Conn., where he was formerly pastor, and at Talcottville, Conn., where Mrs. Gillette has been spending several weeks at her old home.

MISS MILDRED E. TAYLOR and Miss Azilee Johnston have spent two weeks at Southern Pines in a most successful summer Bible school. They are now at Spies, working with three Churches in a similar capacity. Providence Chapel (Congregational), Brown's Chapel (Christian), and a Presbyterian Church are working together in this fine piece of co-operative endeavor. It is hoped by some that these three may become one in the providence of time.

THE PASTOR-AT-LARGE has just returned from Waycross, where he conducted services in an Independent Presbyterian Church. Rev. T. J. Ponder is the able pastor, and the new Church building under his direction is about to be started. After conducting a course of studies on "The Minister," at the Elon College Young People's Conference, the pastor-at-large will take a month's vacation. He contemplates a trip to his old home in Michigan for two weeks. The rest of the time will be spent in the Carolinas.

FIRST CHURCH, ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.: During June and July, this Church was supplied by Dr. George L. Hanscom, of Melbourne, and during August the preacher will be Rev. O. T. Anderson, of Fort Myers. In spite of the bank failures which occurred early in the summer in St. Petersburg, the Church is not seriously affected. Mr. Waldo H. Sherman, business manager of the Church, writes: "So far this year, 1930 has been one of the best in every way, financial as well as in the spirit and work of the Church. I think the best year since I have been with the Church." He also says that Dr. Kerrison Juniper is having a wonderfully interesting and beneficial time at Honolulu, where he is supplying the beautiful Central Church for three months this summer.

WORD FROM DR. BLOOM.

In a personal note, Dr. W. Knighton Bloom, Secretary of Missions, Eastern Division of the Congregational Church Extension Boards, writes from Bournemouth, England:

"Just four weeks tomorrow since the Adriatic left New York City. That memorable June 14th brought to me on the wide Atlantic messages from the wider fellowship of those left behind, including the much-loved members of my 'staff.' May I be able to measure up to the place I am privileged to have in the hearts of those who share service with me.

"The International Council is over, and the one function left is that of the Guildhall banquet, at which the lord mayor and his sheriffs will be present. It will be a gathering of international meaning. I am looking forward to my return. Meanwhile, I am doing just what I was charged to do —making the most of the trip and getting ready for the coming days physically and otherwise."

DR. KING IN MEXICO.

A letter was recently received from Dr. E. A. King, of Miami Beach, Fla., who is with the "Mexican Seminar," which is under the leadership of Dr. Hubert Herring, of the Congregational Education Society. Dr. King writes from Mexico City, under date of July 15th. We quote as follows:

"I am having a good time in an odd way. I brought with me a number of letters of introduction that have opened many doors. I am now assured of forty wonderful pictures of Mexico—given to me with the compliments of the American Chamber of Commerce.

"I have met some of our missionaries and have learned much about the work. The seminar is good. Have had one week-end trip of one hundren miles to Pueblo, and it nearly finished me. Long ride from 7 A. M. until 3 P. M. without anything to eat, and then, starved, tired and sore, ate too much and some Mexican food, and I have been several days trying to get over it. On our way over, we stopped and climbed a mountain at Cholula, where the Aztecs erected a temple for human sacrifice in front of Mt. Pope. The Spaniards erected a Church on the spot where the Aztec altar was. That was the one spot I wanted to see—and I saw it; in fact, stood on it. From there, one sees 365 other Churches.

"I find the people here very cordial and hospitable. This city is a big, cosmopolitan city, modern and much like Paris. There are a great many Americans here, and people of importance speak English. We have been to the castle and have been received by President Rubio and his wife in a most delightful fashion. Tomorrow Ambassador Morrow receives us at the embassy. We are on the go all the time, although I have decided to go slow. At first the altitude made me short-breathed. We are 7,300 feet above sea level. The other day, when we went to Pueblo, we went over the mountains up to about 10,000 feet. It is rather hard on those who have lived ten years at sea level."

COLLAPSE OF THE CHURCH.

The Church is a miserable failure. It does not stop war, graft, race prejudice. It does not secure industrial justice, nor prohibition enforcement. It does not silence the blatant ignoramus nor curb the ravings of the novice with a new theory in some sphere of learning. It does not make mid-Victorians of sheiks and kappers. Nor does it accept the bunk handed out by the debunkers of history concerning the heroes of yesterday.

What is the use of the Church at all? It does not get everything for everybody. So we give it up. It is inefficient—and that is the unpardonable sin.

But an ancient Jew, a proud Pharisee, an honored member of the Sanhedrin gave up all his prestige and even the fellowship of his kindred that he loved more than life for the Church. What did he see in it? Not many mighty, not many noble. It shamefully desecrated the Lord's Supper till it was not a Lord's Supper. It argued itself out of a belief in the future life for the sake of heathen orgies. Yet Paul saw it as the Church glorious.

Peter had to deal with an Ananias and Sapphira, but he counted it a glory to be a Christian, even to suffer as such.

Jesus lost one out of his select twelve. Another was a fierce son of thunder. Three of them slept in stupid incomprehension through the climax of his suffering. And that is the stuff the Church is made of!

Let us get it straight. The weakness is in humanity, not in the Church. The Church is the means of transforming the son of thunder into the apostle of love; the denying disciple into the martyr of faith.

Great bridge spans are built of pig iron, but only after it has been Bessemerized into steel. Ignoble humanity may be gospelized into the sons and daughters of God. The Church finds humanity in the raw, applies the gospel of the power of God and leaves us fit for His presence.—I. J. Cahill, in Christian Evangelist.

THE TRANSFER.

Responsibility for prohibition enforcement has passed from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice of the United States. The Attorney-General, Mr. Mitchell, has indicated his sympathy with the law and his purpose to place its enforcement in the hands of men smiilarly sympathetic. Mr. Youngquist, his assistant, is also a dry. The director chosen, Mr. Amos W. W. Woodcock, of Maryland, is a convinced prohibitionist from a State where there are few prohibitionists in public life. Mr. Jones, his assistant, and Mr. Yellowley are men of integrity, courage and ability.

Many problems must be solved in securing coordination and co-operation of all agencies connected with prohibition enforcement. The organization under the Treasury Department insures that these problems will be approached with intelligence and sincerity.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

IMPROVING OUR COUNTRY CHURCHES.

Some of the best people on earth are found in our country Churches. Nowhere else can we find a higher type of genuine Christianity. Here the Sunday School and Church service play a large part in the development of the character of young life. From the country Churches a stream of the brightest young people go into the cities to engage in business, law, medicine, the ministry, and furnish the best leadership in every line of industry. Take the country people out of our cities and business and religion would be paralyzed. Since the success of our religious and civic life depends so largely upon the country people, it is extremely important that our country life and country Churches should be improved in every way possible. The country pastor, the Sunday School teacher in country Churches, the Church itself and the Sunday School are all important factors in the life of the nation.

Christ recognized the value of the obscure, retiring, humble, uncultured people when He could tap resources of power which are potential in the common people in their native integrity. His great contribution to the world, among other things, was the discovery to the world that genuine personality without culture, without learning, without worldly wisdom, without conventionality, is the genuine worth of man. All these other improvements, attainments, achievements amount to little without the native value of personality. In our country people, in our rural Churches, it is possessed of the qualities that make great souls and develop great characters. Appreciation and recognition of this truth is the great task of the country preacher and Sunday School teachers. An atmosphere of religious freedom, sympathetic encouragement, genuine appreciation of worth recognition of merit, and guidance in doing the simpler things of Church and Christian life will bring out the best that is in man and reveal him to himself.

Many of our Churches in the country are not doing as much as they might do because of lack of proper plans and methods of work and organization. Our Sunday Schools would do well to study the best methods of conducting Sunday Schools. This information may be had from some of the good manuals published on this subject. The Sunday School is the basic work of the Church among the young people from whom we recruit our leadership and membership. If they are well trained as they grow up, any Church will develop a competent leadership and membership.

Lack of financial system in supporting the Church places the burden on a few of the members and allows the mass of membership to go without giving any financial aid to the Church. This is detrimental to those who do not contribute and discouraging to those who do. If a systematic canvass of all the membership of the Church is made, so as to report the results at the beginning of the year, plans can be made to do the Church work to better advantage when the pastor begins his work with the Church. The Church should be content with nothing less than each member contrbiuting according to his ability. This should be done not primarily for financial reasons, but rather for spiritual help to the membership. The finances will not suffer if voluntary pledges are made for spiritual reasons.

Pastors should be acquainted with all the members of the Church and visit them and discuss their troubles, their doubts, their difficulties, and their spiritual needs with them. The relationship between pastor and people is as that between physician and patient, or between lawyer and client, and just as sacred, confidential and private. The Church membership should feel free to pour out their spirits to their spiritual advisers, with the assurance that their counsel will be sacredly kept; and if the pastor should betray their trust, they should be regarded as having violated their highest Christian obligation as a pastor and repudiated as unworthy of their profession. When Church members can enter into such counsel, an open door will offer country pastors great opportunities for a larger and a more efficient service to their parishioners. W. C. W.

JEZEBEL AND RELIGION.

II.

This was interrupted by a message from God through Elijah that there would be no dew nor rain, but according to his world. Then followed the famine, the suffering of people and beasts. At the worst, Elijah appears again with a challenge to Baalism. The challenge was accepted. Elijah and the 450 prophets of Baal met on Carmel, in the presence of the assembled multitudes. An altar was erected, the bullock was slain, the prophets of Baal pray to Baal to send fire to consume the sacrifice, but no fire came and no answer was given. Then Elijah built his altar, slew his bullock, has water poured on the altar, and offers his prayer. Fire comes down from heaven and consumes the sacrifice, the altar, and licks up the water. The waiting multitude is convinced and cries out, "The Lord, He is God; the Lord, He is God." The 450 prophets of Baal are slain, rain returns, Ahab reports the result to Jezebel. She becomes furious and sends a message to Elijah: "So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of them by tomorrow about this time." Jezebel was not at the Carmel meeting. If she had been, she would have understood better and would not have been so furious. But Elijah took fright and fled for his life. Religious reactions are frightful.

One incident will show how far Jezebel carried her will into the rule of the Ivory Palace. Ahab came in one day, lay down and looked sad. Near the palace was a vineyard owned by Naboth. Ahab wanted it for a garden. Naboth would not sell it, nor exchange for another. The beautiful queen went to the bed and said, "What is the matter?" "Naboth will not sell me the vineyard nor exchange it for another. Dost thou govern the kingdom?" "Do not worry, dear, I will see that you get it." Then she wrote letters in Ahab's name, sealed them with his seal, and sent them to the elders and nobles, commanding them to proclaim a fast, set Naboth on high among the people, get two men of Beliel to witness against him, saying: "Thou didst blaspheme God and the king." Then carry him out and stone him to death. They did as commanded and reported Naboth dead. Jezebel reported to Ahab, and he went to take possession of the vineyard, as all the heirs had been killed. As Ahab entered the vineyard, he met Elijah, and said unto him: "Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?" Elijah replied: "I have found thee, and because thou hast sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the Lord, I will bring evil upon thee and will take away thy posterity." Wars continued, and in three years the end came. Ahab conducted two defensive campaigns with success, but in the last he was killed.

Jezebel was a widow fourteen years, during which time she really controlled through her reigning sons, Ahaziah for two years, and Joram for twelve years. But the fatal days arrived when Jehu came and Ahaziah was slain, and all of Ahab's sons were no more. It was a trigic hour when Jehu drove up to the Ivory Palace. When Jezebel heard of his coming, she painted her face, tired her head, and looked out of the window. As Jehu entered the gate, she said: "Hath Zimri peace, who slew his master?" Jehu looked up at the window and said, "Who is on my side?" Two or three chamberlains looked to him, and he said: "Throw her down." They threw her down, and some of her blood was sprinkled on the wall and on the horses, and she was trodden under their feet. When Jehu came in, he ate and drank, and said: "Go now and see this cruel woman, and bury her, for she was a king's daughter." When they went to bury her, they found only the skull, the feet and the palms of her hands. The street dogs had eaten her up.

Beauty, talents, station, power may all end in food for hungry dogs, but the God of heaven still reigns and loves, and His Church still teaches the virtues and graces that satisfy the life that now is and that which is to come. Woman holds the reins of power in the home, the Church, the school, society, and the State, and the world goes the way she leads. Christian womanhood is the crowning glory of mankind. W. W. S.

President Seaton, of Albion College, says: "For twenty-four years as a teacher, administrator, and college secretary, I testify that there is less drinking among college students than there used to be when saloons circled the campus and much less of collateral vices. The students of today are stronger in body and mind, cleaner in habits than they were when I was young—and that in spite of the great changes made by the war, the world-wide unleashing of ugly passions after a period of ten years, and the very reactions which are loosely described as the revolt of youth!"

HISTORY OF MEBANE CHURCH.

On May 16, 1915, in the assembly hall at Bingham School, with Rev. W. G. Clements as pastor, the Mebane Christian Church came into existence. The charter members were Mr. J. O. Fowler, Mrs. J. O. Fowler, Mr. A. A. Lynch, Mrs. A. A. Lynch, Mrs. H. L. Jones, Mr. Robert Jones, Mrs. Winnie Phillips Bear, Mrs. N. B. Stroud, Mr. N. B. Stroud.

The officers elected were Mrs. J. O. Fowler, secretary, and Mrs. H. L. Jones, treasurer.

The Sunday School was organized May 23, 1915.

Pastors: Rev. W. G. Clements, May 16, 1915, to September, 1918; Rev. J. F. Apple, September 6, 1918, to November, 1919; Rev. L. L. Wyrick, November, 1919, to November, 1920; Rev. Herbert Scholz, November, 1920, to November, 1921; Rev. P. T. Klapp, November, 1921, to November, 1923; Rev. T. F. Wright, November, 1923, to October 1, 1925; Dr. W. C. Wicker, November, 1925, to November, 1928; Rev. H. Geo. Robertson, November, 1928, to March 17, 1929; Dr. W. M. Jay, April, 1929, to November, 1929; Rev. R. A. Whitten, November, 1929.

Upon the resignation of Rev. Geo. Robertson to take up work in Richmond, Va., Dr. W. M. Jay, of Elon College, kindly consented to finish out the year 1929.

Deacons: Bro. A. A. Lynch came into the Church as a deacon from Mt. Zion; on September 6, 1916, Robt. Jones was ordained deacon by Rev. W. G. Clements, assisted by Rev. J. F. Apple; on July, 1922, J. O. Fowler was ordained by Rev. P. T. Klapp, assisted by Rev. John Truitt, who was conducting service in the Church at that time; September 23, 1928, T. C. Farrell was ordained deacon by Dr. W. M. Jay, assisted by Rev. Alfred Hurst, of Elon College.

It was decided to build a brick Church, putting up the Sunday School-room first. The lot for the Church was given by Mrs. Mary E. White. The building committee consisted of Bros. A. A. Lynch, Robert Jones, and J. O. Fowler.

Up to 1920 there had been only one morning service each month, but at this time it was decided to have both morning and evening services. In 1921, under the able administration of Bro. P. T. Klapp, the Church building was erected. Bro. Robert Jones was the faithful chairman, and Miss Lillie D. Fowler was asked to assist in this work. The Church building being enclosed, the first service was held July 22, 1922. In 1923, through the efforts of Mr. E. Y. Farrell, a devoted friend of the Church and the united efforts of the membership and friends, the Church was painted and the inside work was completed. In the summer of 1918 pews were purchased for the Church, and in May, 1930, cement steps were erected which add greatly to the looks and value of the Church building.

As we look around us today, we see woven into each brick, piece of timber and stone, the love and sacrifice of the members of this little band. We note with gratitude the following gifts: The lot on which the Church is built, Mrs. Mary E. White; the Bible, Mr. E. Y. Farrell; the table, Mrs. H. L. Jones; the pulpit, Fitch-Riggs Lumber Co.; the partition doors, Mrs. Anna Newlin; the pulpit furniture and memorial window, the Fowler family.

With gifts from neighboring Churches, friends, the Mission Board, and by the loyal support of each member of this little congregation, the Church has been brought to the place where it now stands, and we have a building and equipment valued at $7,500.

During the fifteen years of our existence, we have been favored with pastors of unusual strength, and during the times of special services we have been highly favored by having the privilege of hearing some of the strongest men of the Church explain the wonders of the great Word of God. In a small way, we have tried to help by contributing to all the causes of the Church and respond to calls that come from time to time. We have striven to meet our obligations in full and have never failed thus far, when sending our report into Conference, to have all obligations paid.

Be it far from us to think for a moment that we have finished the work, now that we have come to our dedication; but with God's help let us feel that we are just getting to the place where we can begin to work. May it be the earnest resolve of each one here today that we will not let up, but that we will strive more earnestly, that our work here may truly be a light that shall shed its brightness through this entire community and town and to the uttermost parts of the world.

(Miss) Lillie Fowler.

I verily believe that if strong drink could be wiped out of the earth tonight, humanity would wake in the morning with more than half its sins and sorrows gone.—Hall Caine.

ANTI-NARCOTIC BILL.

It is very hard to get a unanimous vote in Congress, but such a wonder has really come to pass. It was in the enactment of a bill to create in the Treasury Department a bureau of narcotics. A commissioner will be appointed by the President. The bill was supported by many organizations of physicians, druggists, drug manufacturers, and social workers in all parts of the country.

Under this new law, narcotic enforcement will be separated from prohibition enforcement and consolidated under responsible and vigorous leadership. New and more effective machinery will be set up to suppress drug smuggling. Medical needs for narcotics will be scientifically determined, and excessive supplies will be eliminated. Causes and cure of drug addiction will be made the subject of scientific study.

This bill is almost on a par with prohibition in its social value. It will be harder to enforce, but, like prohibition, it is intended to keep people from suffering, from slow and tortuous suicide, and to save them from being the prey of fiends in human form who would profit by their bondage.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The sixty-first annual session of the Sunday School Convention of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, and with it the Christian Endeavor Convention, which has been joined with the Sunday School Convention for several years, was held in the Waverly Christian Church, Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor, July 22-23, 1930, J. F. West, Jr., president, W. H. Baker secretary, and other officers.

The weather was extremely hot, but the attendance was good, and great interest was taken in all the proceedings. Reports from executive committee, and superintendents of departments made reports that showed interest and work; and so complete was these reports that they were all adopted without serious discussion.

Report on Christian Orphanage, by J. M. Darden, in the absence of Chas. D. Johnston, who was detained by sickness, was unique and impressive. Cardboards had been labeled with the name of the school and the sum given to the Orphanage through the monthly offering, and a member of the school holding the card and all standing in a double row in front of congregation, so the congregation could see the name of the school and the sum given. I think Mrs. M. L. Bryant prepared the cardboards, and the exhibit was interesting and a good lesson. Rev. J. L. Foster made an inspiring address in the place of Superintendent Johnston, and reported that Mr. Johnston was improving.

Among the many addresses that stirred the audience and called for publication in THE CHRISTIAN SUN were those of President J. F. West, Jr., Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, Mrs. W. B. Williams, Dr. W. A. Harper, and Pastor F. C. Lester.

Report on missions by Mrs. M. L. Bryant, and address by Rev. H. C. Caviness spiced the evening session and made all feel that missions is the major word of the Church and of the Sunday School.

The forenoon of the second day was in charge of Christian Endeavor leaders—C. E. Barfield, Mrs. W. B. Williams, and W. H. Baker, officials of the State Christian Endeavor Union, Newport News leaders in the Christian Endeavor work of this Conference.

Reports on home department and adult department were presented by Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoon and Dr. N. G. Newman. Dr. Newman reported on other subjects.

The Harvard plan of entertainment proved very satisfactory to the Waverley congregation and the delegates and visitors who attended the Convention. The dinners and suppers, served at 50 cents and 40 cents, were fine specimens of the culinary art and the hospitality of the Wakefield congregation. This method of entertainment proved so satisfactory to hosts and guests that the Convention adopted, by unanimous vote, a resolution that hereafter the Harvard plan of entertainment be the only plan of entertainment. That means charge for dinner and supper, with lodging and breakfast free. W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

I have had the pleasure to attend the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions recently of the Eastern North Carolina and of the Eastern Virginia Conferences. Rev. R. L. House and Mr. Jesse F. West, Jr., are the respective presidents, and better presiding officers it would be difficult to imagine.

So much depends upon the president of a Church organization that the greatest possible care should be exercised in the choice of such an executive. The Eastern North Carolina Convention is growing in influence, and more money was raised this year than last. Eastern Virginia has always had a strong Convention and continues to have. Mr. West's ability as an executive was particularly evident in the program he had planned and executed.

Both Conventions gave their unqualified endorsement to the Southern Christian Convention plan of asking each Sunday School, on fifth Sundays, to send their offerings to Elon. Mr. West has planned to undertake a campaign among his schools to put them on the regular list of supporters for the college. The Sunday Schools are part of the Church's educational program and should be definitely linked up with our college.

The Summer School at Elon begins July 26th and will continue for a week, with Rev. F. C. Lester as dean, and Miss Jewel Truitt as registrar. It is expected that it will do thorough work.

The Department of Christian Education of the Southern Christian Convention is co-operating most helpfully with the college in an effort to bring young people of our Church to Elon this fall. The prospect for the college is excellent at this time. A large freshman class is already signed up, and more are expected.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE LETTER.

What Canaan should the modern Church be conquering, and what is holding it back?

Palestine presented to the Hebrews four parallel zones running north and south. The eastern tableland, the Jordan Valley, the central highland and the maritime plain. While all of these zones were possessed by the Hebrews, in part at least and for a longer or a shorter time, the central highland through the struggle for conquest finally became their home.

The conquest was not an act, but a process, which placed them in very dangerous circumstances. The first danger was the possibility of extermination; the second lay in the change of occupation that the conquest made necessary, and the consequent adjustment to new conditions of life; the third was a political one, from that of a democracy to a monarchy; and the fourth and greatest danger lay in the realm of religion. Coming fresh from the desert, with enthusiasm still burning for the God who had delivered them from the perils of Egypt and the wilderness, they had at least this difference from their neighbors—they were Jehovah worshipers, but now they had come to a land over which Jehovah was believed to have no jurisdiction.

There was not a feature of the new life the Hebrews had to lead that was not connected with Canaanite religion, for religion in those days was not a separate function, but a vital part of all living. Is it any wonder that the poor Hebrews forget Jehovah. The danger lies just here: If they forget Jehovah they have nothing left to distinguish them from their neighbors. The modern Church is facing just such dangers, and she must conquor her foes or be conquored. Our civilization which grew out of Christianity established by the Church is facing the following dangers: materialism, lawlessness, indifference, private interests being held above community and national interests. America needs statesmen and citizens with the vision and spirit of Jesus, doing all things in the terms of the kingdom. To live for one's country is more imperative and noble than to die for it.

The failure to conquor the enemies which are confronting the Church and imperiling our civilization lies in the Church itself. A crisis confronts religion in the modern world. A new reformation is necessary within the Christian Church. The crisis in religion in the modern world has been brought about by the failure of the Church to adapt itself to the two outstanding facts in our civilization—science and democracy. The Church must learn to adapt itself to these two mighty forces which are building our civilization. Of these two, science is the more outstanding and dominant. It is the foundation of our views of life and the universe, as well as our material progress, and so it has largely created the conditions which have favored the rise of democracy. We need shift from the theological to ethical monotheism, from a metaphysical to a social and scientific conception of religion.

The real religious problem of the Church is to secure a general acceptance of a religion adapted to the requirements of continuous progress toward an ideal society, consisting of all humanity. If humanitarian ethics is to succeed in overcoming the conflicts between classes, nations and races, which are now tearing asunder our world, it must have the support of a religion of humanity.

This is the age of a new social consciousness. A religion to be of value must register in conduct. What is needed in the pulpit today is a religious interpretation of all life. Every human relationship raises a moral question, but to many it has never occurred that moral issues are involved in their industrial and economic and social relationships, or even that there is such a thing as the social problem. I would have the minister of Christ call men's attention away from the question of rights to that of duties—to be a worker with men rather than things. The Christian conscience is staggered by how much is meant to be a Christian today. How to live together is the problem of society stated in its simples terms. The preaching and living the social gospel is the answer to this question.

DEFEATED.

After an infidel had concluded a lecture in a village in England, he challenged those present to discussion. Who should accept the challenge but an old, bent woman, in antiquated attire, who went up to the lecturer and said:

"Sir, I have a question to put to you."

"Well, my good woman, what is it?"

"Ten years ago," she said, "I was left a widow, with eight children utterly unprovided for, and nothing to call my own but this Bible. By its direction, and looking to God for strength, I have been enabled to feed myself and family. I am now tottering to the grave; but I am perfectly happy, because I look forward to a life of immortality with Jesus. That's what my religion has done for me. What has your way of thinking done for you?"

"Well, my good lady," rejoined the lecturer, "I don't want to disturb your comfort; but—."

"Oh, that's not the question," said she; "keep to the point, sir. What has your way of thinking done for you?"

The infidel endeavored to shirk the matter again; the meeting gave vent to uproarious applause, and the champion had to go away discomforted by an old woman.—Anon.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER.

We should realize that God's work demands the best. Especially is this true touching Sunday School work, because of its vast, spreading influence throughout our great republic. Every Sunday School should have a good superintendent, one chosen and set apart to lead the school. It is a most important office, but, of course, his office is subordinate to that of pastor.

In my judgment, the most important person of all in the Sunday School, with whom the pastor has to deal, is the teacher. The success of a Sunday School class depends entirely, or almost entirely, on the teacher. No greater task was ever assigned to any individual or group of people than that of our Lord and Saviour when He said unto His devoted disciples, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." That royal command stands today. The Sunday School teacher has been given this mission as much as any one else. Soul-winning should not be left to the pastor alone, but members of every local Church should share with the pastor the responsibility of winning souls to Christ. Our blessed Lord sought to save individuals rather than masses of men. We should follow His example, as well as that of the apostles. The one business of the Church is to win souls to Christ. It is such a pity that so many Church members get so busy with the material things of the Church that they forget the one essential thing; the one thing for which Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God, died and for which His Church exists, namely: to save and bring men to Him for salvation and enlist them in His service—the greatest business in the world. Not only is the Church for this, but the Sunday School is also for this very purpose, and the teacher is the one to begin this work.

Before a teacher can be successful, there are two essential things, namely: preparation and teaching. In order to be able to teach successfully, one must be prepared. There are several things I would like to mention in this connection.

First: Familiarize yourself with the main ideas of the lesson. If there is an important character in the lesson, study that character. Trace the person studied from the first mention of him in the Bible to his death. Compare the good and evil characteristics of him or her, whichever it may be. Pardon me for this personal suggestion, but I suspect some of you would be surprised if you compared, unprejudiced, the lives of Saul and David. I'm sure you would not find Saul the black character he is thought to have been. He was only doing the very things thousands of business men do today to save their position. Only today it isn't made public. Of course, it isn't honorable at all.

In preparing the Sunday School lesson, be sure and plan so as to be able to apply the main theme of the lesson to modern life. This is very important, especially when we study the question of missions. We believe that if we are to accomplish greater things for missions and hasten the day when the saving power of Jesus shall be known by all nations, it is very essential that the Sunday School teacher teach the importance of liberality and soul-winning. The theme of love can be used always among the smaller pupils, and the Sunday School teachers can use their opportunities to make lasting impressions on the minds of those in her class, which may be done by telling of the heroic deeds of great men and women in their work of love. It seems to me that if we leave ideas like these with them, it is the nearest we can come to teaching in parables as our Lord did.

It is important for each teacher to secure good books that will furnish helpful information on the Sunday School lessons. We recommend the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty and THE CHRISTIAN SUN. There are none better. In the preparation of the lesson, the Bible must be given first consideration. There are other books which are uplifting and educational, but the Holy Bible is second to none.

Every teacher should, if possible, attend some good school for instruction of Church workers. Don't forget those to be held by our great Church this summer.

Teachers, be prepared to answer any question you may ask. Be sure and give proper time to the preparation of the lesson. Many teachers fail to do this, and therefore make a failure of teaching.

One other very, very important thing. When you know that you are not to be at Sunday School, get a substitute to teach in your place. Nothing will make a class become indifferent quicker than to go to Sunday School and find no teacher present to teach. I've known junior boys and girls to refuse to attend Sunday School because they were afraid they would be called on to teach.

As we pass from preparing the lesson to teaching it, I will add just this thought: don't try to teach unless prepared.

Now, as to teaching. One of the finest things I believe that has helped our class is the devotional at the beginning and the ending of the class. Each Sunday one member is appointed to open the class with a short prayer, and one to close it the same way. Those who come from Christian homes seem to experience no difficulty in praying in public. Religion in the home does pay large dividends.

Teachers, if you expect the members of your class to respect you, then you must live daily the lessons you teach. You must set the right example at all times.

I do not think it wise to ask individual questions unless you feel sure that you are going to get a correct answer. This saves a lot of embarrassment for the pupil and the teacher. Many a time when a person has neglected to study his lesson he will stay home for fear of being asked a question. There are other and better methods of teaching besides having to ask questions, I think. Personally, I believe a teacher does this when they don't know what else to do or say.

Let each member of the class know that you feel a personal interest in them. Let them know that you are glad that they are there; that they are as welcome as some one else. Be sure and look after the indifferent pupils. Somehow they seem to need a little more attention than the others. All of you know those pupils—the ones with that indifferent air and look as if they only go to fill the benches. Do your best to impress upon them that there is something else to go to Sunday School for rather than duty. Teach them the importance of reverence.

When a pupil is absent, it is always a good policy to call on them or send them a card. Don't neglect the absentees under any conditions.

In conclusion, let me say this to you, Sunday School teachers: Be sure to give the lesson thorough preparation, and do your very best to find the best method of presenting the truth; for teaching a Sunday School class is like every thing else in life you undertake—if it is worth doing at all, it is worth doing well.

HERE IS YOUR CHRIST.

Life is varied. Men are variously employed. We look out upon life through the familiar window of our daily occupation. We are appealed to by conceptions akin to our daily round.

Now, the amazing thing about our Lord Jesus Christ is that He fits into every one's thinking. He is kin to every man in his day-by-day round of duty. He is so many-sided that each can find his Christ in the mold of his own occupational life.

To the artist—the one Altogether Lovely.

HOME-COMING.

For many years it has been the custom of New Elam to have a "Memorial Day" on Saturday before the third Sunday in May. This is the one long-looked-for day of all the year with the entire membership and community. Last Sunday, July 20th, was "Home-Coming Day." There came up from many cities, towns and hamlets members and friends of the Church for the occasion. They came early, and before time to begin the services the house was almost full of people who, with eager hearts, sat throughout the day to enjoy the talks, which were interspersed with music by the choirs of New Elam and Hank's Chapel. We were fortunate to have Bro. Mann, of Catawba Springs, with his hand-saw and auto harp, which added much to the occasion.

The only set talks by the program committee were those of welcome and home-coming by the pastor. These came before noon, with many volunteer talks by members and friends. The noon hour was a delightful occasion. The long table, which had been arranged in the grove, was filled with wholesome food and afforded a sumptuous repast. Then there were the greetings of friends of days gone by. At 1:45, the people refilled the large house, and the services were continued until about four. It was a day long to be remembered, and we are hoping that our friends will come again. Come and be with us for the revival meeting during the week following the third Sunday in August. E. M. CARTER.

A DAILY PRAYER.

JULY.

Father, Creator, we thank Thee that, in the capacity and aspiration of humankind, it is innate to learn. Both prophecy and promise decreeing "all shall be taught of God," we deplore prevailing spiritual ignorance and acknowledge its scope as within our own election. Turn us, O God, and give to Thy Church open ears and awakening minds, willing to study to show ourselves approved. In instruction of youth, give, we pray, to leaders and teachers the tongue of them that truly are taught of Thee, that each may know how to speak the word in season. Make us workers unashamed. In Jesus' name. Amen.

CHURCH WORK FOR CHURCH-WOMEN.

So many things that used to be done by the Churches are now being done by non-ecclesiastical agencies that the distinction which formerly attached to Church membership has been substantially whittled away. The neighborhood theater, the extensive system of business men's clubs of which Rotary was the first, the elaborate development of women's clubs, the community chest —these are some of the more obvious ways in which the function of the Church to provide forms of charity and fellowship and culture and service, and even entertainment, for the participation of its members has been thinned down to something almost imponderable. Once it was the lodges which claimed first the men and later the women, but now the community is honeycombed with agencies each embodying some function traditionally associated with religious organization. If, instead of looking back over a single generation, our observation were extended to cover several centuries, we should see that this process of differentiation from the rich and inclusive functioning of religion has been going on for a long time. The whole system of education, once a major function of religion and now completely severed from it, is a conspicuous illustration.

But we are now concerned only with the shorter perspective. Every thoughtful pastor is hard pressed by the practical necessity of "finding something for the members to do," something that will give the tang of reality to their association with the Church. There remains, of course, the worship service, in which, so far, no non-ecclesiastical agency has sought to compete with organized religion. But ethical religion cannot survive on worship alone. Yet that is practically what the Church is coming to. If we allow the concrete interests of life to be split off from religion one after the other, the act of worship itself will surely lose its reality. It will take place in a vacuum, and that kind of worship is artificial and decadent.

These observations are made in order to suggest that the problem of woman's relation to the Church must be considered as a part of the total problem of investing Church membership itself—that of men as well as women, the old and the young—with significance. There is no value in considering women by themselves. What is needed is a conscious definition of the function of the Church in the actual world of today. Only when we can come to terms with the larger problem can we have confidence in attacking any part of it. In a general way, the leaders of religion are fairly well agreed as to the Church's function. It is both social and personal, not in the sense of two separate activities, but of two aspects of a single activity—the building of a Christian society. The old appeal of a salvation which takes the individual out of the world and sets before him rewards and satisfactions in some other world, while the world of every-day reality is regarded with relative unconcern, falls on increasingly deaf ears. If religion is to survive, it must demonstrate itself in this complex and concrete social order in which the individual finds his life. This basic concept underlies most of the vital co-operative movements of the Church, of which the Federal Council is the outstanding illustration.

But the concept is not getting itself women into the understanding and the activities of the rank and file of Church members. It does perhaps infiltrate vaguely into their minds from the sermons of their pastors, but mere preaching is not sufficient. Something must be done about it. The local Church itself must be wholly reoriented in relation to its function as the builder of a Christian society. Church membership must be re-examined and redefined, and invested with a significance appropriate to the task which the Church as a whole conceives for itself. A man's membership in the Church must carry with it a more definite and richer meaning than an amiable attendance on Sunday morning worship and a generous check for the support of the institution. Youth's relation to the Church must be reconsidered and appriate activities and responsibilities defined. Women's membership must be lifted to a level of action and purpose consistent with the dignity of the Church's function and the peculiar contributions which women can make of it. —Christian Century.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR AUGUST.

By MRS. W. M. JAY.

WOMEN'S SOCIETIES.

All aboard for the Woman's Missionary Society picnic! Fill your baskets with goodies and your hearts with love, and hie away to the lake, park, woods or vale for a real evening of fun and pleasure, seasoned with a spirit of good will. Such meetings mean much to the spiritual life of a society and to the members also. The theme for August is "Fellowship," and it should be a well-planned meeting and the spirit of fellowship should be carried out throughout the entire meeting. Whether you make it a meeting to which all the women of the Church are invited and have at least a part of the time devoted to acquaintance and sociability.

Theme: "Fellowship."

If I knew you and you knew me,
And each of us could plainly see
And with an inner light divine
The meaning of your heart and mine,
I'm sure we would differ less.
We'd clasp our hands in friendliness,
Our hearts would pleasantly agree,
If I knew you and you knew me.

Familiar hymns.
Our Lord's Prayer.
Business.
Devotional period: First Psalm repeated in unison.
Heart-to-heart message.
Current news.
Dialogue: "Every Grain of Corn Counts."
Mizpah.

For the opening of the program, sing just a verse or two of several familiar hymns. The dialogue, "Every Grain of Corn Counts" can be given out of doors as well as in the house, and can be made very interesting (extra copies can be had for 5 cents each).

Some preparations for the September meeting should be made in August. You will notice on your September program the item, "Letters to a Missionary." You make your own selection as to the missionary who is to receive your letter, and should this be done at the August meeting and also in this meeting, assign the writing of the letter to some member, so that the letter can be read at the September meeting and signed by all the members present; then immediately after the September meeting mail the letter to your missionary.

The theme for the September meeting is "Faithfulness." Has your society been faithful through the year? Do not neglect the roll call at this meeting, a testimony meeting with it would be good.

The exercise, "The Ghost," can be made very helpful as well as amusing if time is given to the preparation of it. (Send for extra copies, 3 cents each.)

The last heart-to-heart message for the year is from the President of our Woman's Board, Mrs. Howsare. Do you remember the challenge she gave us in the first message of the year? If you have kept the message on file you might refer to it again. I am sure that the message for this month will be helpful and give us courage to go forward.

(These suggestions are taken from the News Bulletin.)

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES.

Theme: "My Group and Its World Service."

Purpose: To formulate for the coming year a program of service.

1. Hymn: "Day is Dying in the West."
2. Hymn: "For the Beauty of the Earth."
3. Project report.
4. The question.
5. What other groups have done.
6. Our plans for the year.
7. Hymn: "He Leadeth Me."

Scripture: Psa. 90:1-3.
Friendship circle, sentence prayers.
A moment of silent prayer.
Taps.

Suggestions.

Poster: A group of young people; from them a line going out around a globe. Printed, "Help Plan Our World Service." Time, place and date. This meeting may be held out-of-doors.

3. Committee will call attention to the fact that only one more service will be held in this series. Any one having material he wishes put into the record book should turn it in immediately.

4. Pass around a long piece of paper and pencil. Ask each person to write on this paper one thing which your group might do in its program of world service. Each person is to fold under his answer, so that the next person will not see it. Leader will read answers.

5. Assign incidents given in chapter 11 of Y. & W. O. to be told.

6. Missionary committee or executive committee should report its plans for the coming year, the congress goals, and how you intend to reach them.

Holman Jewel Testament

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2¼x4¼ inches x⅜ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2¼x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson VI—August 10, 1930.

Hannah, a Godly Mother.

Golden Text: "My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother."—Prov. 1:8.

Lessons 1 Sam. 1-28, 2:1-11, 18, 19, 3:1-18.

Time: Birth of Samuel, B. C. 1171; call of Samuel, B. C. 1160.

Place: Ramah, Samuel's birthplace; Shiloh, the location of the tabernacle. Both located in Ephraim, in central Palestine, the Samaria of Christ's day.

The lesson divides itself into three parts: (1) Hannah's Prayer; (2) Hannah's Prayer Answered; (3) The Godly Son of a Godly Mother.

1. Hannah's Prayer. This is not the first instance we have in which a Bible woman prays that she may have the, to her, greatest of all blessings. Only recently we have had the story of Sarah. Hannah was a great woman, in that she was a good woman. She was a woman of prayer and a woman of good works. Her husband, as was common in those days, had two wives, and the other wife had borne him several children. It was a great sorrow to Hannah that she had no children, so finally she went up to the tabernacle at Shiloh and prayed to God there that He would bless her. She also vowed a vow that if God would answer her prayer she would dedicate her son to the Lord's work.

2. Hannah's Prayer Answered. God hears our prayers always; and if it is best that they should be answered, He answers them in his own time and way. When the baby Samuel came to Hannah he was a double joy, because he came after long waiting and sorrow and because he was a direct answer to prayer. When Samuel became four or five years of age, Hannah remembered her vow to God and carried him up to the tabernacle at Shiloh. She left him there with Eli, that he might be brought up as a priest of the Most High. But before she carried him thither, she had instilled in his heart and life the truth that was to follow him throughout his life.

3. The Godly Son of a Godly mother. We are not told what Samuel did in the temple. Possibly he kept the lights bright and burning, and made himself useful in many ways. We do know that he led a godly life, for when God wished to send a special message to Eli, it was through the boy Samuel that it was done. Samuel was called early into divine service. We hear the thrice-repeated call of God, and Samuel's quick response. We honor Eli for his willing perception of the fact that Samuel had the close contact with God that was formerly his. And we rejoice in the lad's prompt response: "Speak, for thy servant heareth."

Bishop Francis J. McConnell says:

"The lesson today gives us a chance to honor parenthood by thinking of what a devout parent can do in shaping the life of a child for the largest benefit of a community. We sometimes speak as if all the important truths concerning childlife had been discovered within the past few years. Men are announcing to us today, with an air of tremendous discovery, that the significant processes in a child's training must be those of the earliest years or months. It is quite interesting to notice how the emphasis of the Church in its work has today placed 'the child in the midst' as the object of Church effort. We are told by scientifically minded teachers that beneficial or harmful forces can work upon a child's sensitive organism long before the child knows anything about the meaning of the forcest themselves, and long after he has forgotten all about them.

"A most intelligent mother said to me some time ago that if she could have undisputed control over her children for the first seven years of their lives she did not care what forces they had to encounter after that age. Well, Hannah did a little better than that. She seemed to feel that if she could have her son Samuel for not more than three years she could then send him away from home. To be sure, she was sending him up to the temple, but according to the narrative, she did not put him out of spiritual danger in so doing. Nor was Hannah insuring the moral safety of Samuel in personally turning him over to the priest, for the priest appears to have been a well-meaning but weak-willed individual who could not control his own household.

"The entire course of Israelitish history from Samuel on was profoundly marked by the activities of the prophets. It was through the channels of prophecy that the Lord increasingly revealed Himself to the people of Israel. The prophets were souls of special sensitiveness to moral evils and to the wrongs done against the ideals of humanity by those evils. Now, Samuel is always spoken of as a prophet in the Scriptures. In his case, the sensitiveness seems to have come from the early influence of his mother upon him. She set the stamp upon him in the beginning which was to be his until the end. She did not see him often in the after-years, but when she did visit him she probably brought more of divine influence to bear upon his life than anything which came to him out of his companionships in the temple service.

"Again and again in the course of the treatment of the lessons we have had occasion to remark upon the fine human qualities which appear everywhere under the old Hebrew conditions of living. At the center of the religious requirements of the Hebrews was a never-failing emphasis upon simple fundamental duties ni human contacts. Obedience to the old Mosaic law did not make the people hard and stern. There flowered out of their obedience some of the gentler and more winsome human traits. Her piety did not make Hannah an iron disciplinarian. It made her a kindly and devoted mother, with the law of God interpreted by her kindliness. It must have been an unspeakable sacrifice for Hannah to send the boy away, but in that sacrifice she seized at least a glimpse of the truth that her people were to set on high a type of religious living which should be for the benefit of all nations."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, August 10, 1930.

Topics "How to Become Truly Popular.

Hymn: "Faith of Our Fathers."

Opening Prayer.

Hymn: "More Like the Master" (sing prayerfully).

Scripture reading: Phil. 4:6, 8; 1 Peter 3:8-11.

Leader's Talk: Contrast the popularity of the prodigal son while in the far country with the good Samaritan.

One way to be popular:

"Like yourself first in all you say and do—
Be proud of you!
Be such a man as you would choose for a friend,
And in the end
You will look back on all that may have been Contented and serene.

"Like yourself first. Cut not your standard down
To please the town;
Never for gain or pleasure make one move
You can't approve:
Better it is to suffer any fate.

The secret of Popularity:

"Forget each kindness that you do
As soon as you have done it;
Forget the praise that falls to you
The moment you have won it;
Forget the slander that you hear
Before you can repeat it;
Forget each slight, each spite, each sneer,
Wherever you may meet it.

"Remember every kindness done
To you, whate'er its measure;
Remember praise by others won
And pass it on with pleasure;
Remember every promise made
And keep it to the letter;
Remember those who lend you aid,
And be a grateful debtor.

"Remember all the happiness
That comes your way in living;
Forget each worry and distress,
Be hopeful and forgiving;
Remember good, remember truth,
Remember heaven's above you,
And you will find through age and youth
That many hearts will love you."

The world's most popular man:

"If Christ had thought of just Himself,
No lowly manger bed
Would once have held a King divine,
Or pillowed Jesus' head;
For far above the skies of blue,
In heaven's endless day,
His Father had prepared for Him
A better place to stay.

"If Christ had though of just Himself,
Our blessed Saviour, Friend,
Would not have trod the bitter path
Up to the very end.
He never would have borne the cross
Up there on Calvary,
Nor paid salvation's cruel price,
Nor died to set us free.

"If Christ had thought of just Himself—
But, ah! that was not true.
He made the wondrous sacrifice
For love of me and you;
Then He gave for us, now we Must pattern after Him
And give, that those in darkened lands
May find true light in Him."

NEWS NOTES.

By Mrs. W. M. Jay.

A splendid bit of news comes from the Holy Neck Society as follows: In the beginning of the year they made as their goal, or aim, that they would have some special feature, both financially and socially, each quarter. In October each member was asked to donate $1.00 as talent money, to be used and multiplied as many times as possible. Some brought material and made dresses, aprons, fancy work, etc.; others made cookies, salads and other eats; while some bought fruit and sugar and made articles for exhibits for the school fair. They report much fun, pleasure and experience, and realized a neat sum as well.

In November, they held a very interesting thankoffering service under the direction of their spiritual life superintendent.

They celebrated the fourteenth anniversary of the society in the second quarter, when they invited their husbands and friends for a social. A very enjoyable time is reported, and a good attendance.

The world's day of prayer for missions was observed on March 7th in a joint service with the Holland Christian Church. They have a splendid method for studying the mission books. They had a lesson a week and met in the home of their teacher. Much interest was shown, and the enthusiasm kept up well because of the lessons being close together. They are using the Book of Acts for their devotionals at their regular meetings. They assign one chapter each to different members, and then all are asked to bring their Bibles to look up references. This has proven to be a very interesting phase of the meetings and is one they commend to other societies. Mrs. E. T. Holland is the efficient president of this society and is doing a splendid work as a leader.

The Young People's Society of the Liberty Spring Christian Church has been studying as a mission study book the "Ann of Ava" and find it very interesting. They report good missionary programs at every meeting and a good attendance. A splendid dialogue, written by their superintendent, was given on Easter Sunday, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all and furnished special parts for the members. They are planning to give the playlet, "Aunt Tillie Learns to Tithe," soon. Miss Mamie Smith is the president of this thriving society.

A BABY MEMORIAL.

Attention! All women please read. All men skip on to next article. During the biennial session of the Southern Christian Convention, which met in Raleigh, N. C., this year from April 29th to May 2nd, Mrs. J. A. Williams called a meeting of the Woman's Board. At this meeting it was moved and carried that the babies who die who are members of the missionary cradle roll at the time of their death should be honored in the same way as the members of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Only in the amount of money sent in will you find the difference. For our women, it takes $10. For our babies, it takes $1. Their memorial cards will not be as large as the ones for the women, but they will be pretty and appropriate. Mrs. Williams is to have them printed.

When you become a member of the Woman's Missionary Society you are expected to pay 10 cents a month dues, which, for a year, is $1.20; for literature fund, 10c; for contingent fund, 10c; for Ellen G. Gustin fund, 10c—total, $1.50, besides mite-box offerings and special gift on apportionment.

When you become a member of the missionary cradle roll, you are expected to pay 15 cents a year dues, besides your mite-box offering. On this basis, we set the memorial for the missionary cradle roll members at $1, or one-tenth as much as for the women. The dollars to go for the same purpose, as the memorial paid in for the women; that is, for our retired or incapacitated missionaries—and this is a worthy and imperative need.

So, if you should be unfortunate enough to lose a member of your missionary cradle roll department, you can perpetuate their memory (1) by sending $1, (2) with the child's name, (3) date of birth, (4) date of death, (5) also parents' name and address to your Conference treasurer, and she in turn sends it on to Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle, Convention Treasurer for the women. She will in urn call me and give me th einformation, and I will fill in the memorial certificate and mail it to the parents at the given address. It will be signed by the President of the Woman's Board and the superintendent of the cradle roll department. There is an old saying, "The old must die; the young may die."

Here is hoping our cradle roll babies may be spared many years, so we may have their increasing interest in missions, but if the dear Lord needs them with Him, let us honor their memory in this way.

Mrs. I. W. Johnson,
Sup't Cradle Roll Department.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

TALK IT OVER.

"In the multitude of counsellors there is safety."—Prov. 11:5-14.

The Governors' Conference has now held twenty-one annual sessions, and has established itself as a most helpful element in our national system of government. As the governors come together from all parts of the country, as they engage in full discussion of difficult problems, as they hold frank and intimate conversations, and especially as they form friendships through delightful social events, misunderstandings are removed, co-operation is assured, and the forty-eight States are more closely bound together. After the first of these conferences, the Governor of Kentucky remarked that there would have been no Civil War if such a meeting of governors could have been held in 1860.

It is the Christian way of doing. It is the method of Christ. It is the practice of brotherhood. And we should make use of the plan constantly in our individual lives.

Prayer.—Thy ways, our Father, are kindly ways, pleasant ways, friendly ways. We walk Thy path when we go to other men's houses to hold counsel. May we do it often, and go Thou with us. For Christ's sake. Amen.

TUESDAY.

BIRDLESS SANCTUARIES.

"By their fruits ye shall know them."—Matt. 7:15-23.

A brisk newspaper writer amused his readers recently by describing a beautiful bird sanctuary which he had visited; a sanctuary with a most artistic sign at the entrance, a charming bird-bath, an open-air theater, and every other alleged comfort and attraction for the birds, but the reporter could not see a bird—only a solitary squirrel.

Bird sanctuaries are lovely and useful institutions, and that one may not have been so unfortunate as it seemed, if only the reporter had known how to see the birds that were there; but certainly a bird sanctuary without a bird would be an anomaly.

No less a curiosity is a Christian barren of the fruits of Christianity, and of these there are unfortunately a large number. Bird sanctuaries are supposed to contain an especially abundant lot of birds, and Christians are persons who possess and show to the world an especially abundant store of Christ-like qualities.

Prayer.—May we never fool ourselves, O Christ, with imagining we are Thine when we are not like Thee. Draw near to us, live in us, we pray Thee, and create in us Thine image. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

A FORCED LANDING.

"It is better to go to the house of mourning than to the house of feasting."—Eccl. 7:1-7.

Up in Ontario an aviator was obliged, because he ran out of gas, to make a landing on a strange lake, and through this mishap discovered a band of Indians whose existence had never even been suspected. The incident is a striking illustration of the way in which trouble brings people together and discovers them to one another.

In a great conflagration, in time of famine or flood, or pestilence or war, artificial barriers are quickly broken down, and men learn to know and love each other who before were not even acquaintances. This is one of the uses of misfortune, and it is a great gain. Trials are not altogether bad if they result in forced landings amid new human relationships.

Let us employ the wings of love to transcend worldly barriers, overleap all hindrances, and make landings of fellowship in our brothers' lives.

Prayer.—May the Holy Spirit of all grace introduce us to our brothers and sisters. May He render us neighborly and friendly. May the wide world be one. Amen.

THURSDAY.

FORGET THE CROWD.

"Forgetting the things which are behind, . . . I press on toward the goal."—Phil. 3:7-14.

Francis Auimet, the well-known and well-liked golfer, has written a rather pathetic article about the handicap of popularity. When a golfer has become famous, crowds of many hundreds flock around him as he plays, crowding him on the tees, pressing into the fairways, obscuring his view, and sometimes even forcing him to shoot over their heads. The time they take in settling down breaks into the flow and continuity of his strokes. The most experienced players sometimes lose games because of the attentions of the throngs, and even those with the most complete command of their nerves find their scores cut down by the "gallery."

We cannot ignore our friends, and would not if we could; but we must learn to forget them when they impede the tasks God has given us. There are times when, as Christ said, we must even hate those dearest to us if they set themselves in opposition to our Christian goals. It is fine to have a large "gallery," but we must shoot onward with superb concentration just as if we were alone in the field.

Prayer.—Our Master, we stand or fall to Thee. We look to Thee. We seek Thy applause. We follow Thy course. We aim at Thy mark. We have no other goal. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE CATHODE RAY.

"Each man's work shall be made manifest; for the day shall declare it, because it is revealed in fire."—1 Cor. 3:10-15.

The General Electric Company uses every year more than one and a half million sapphires for bearings in meters and other delicate apparatus, and it becomes necessary to detect synethetic gems and separate them from the natural ones. For this purpose a new cathode ray tube has been developed by a member of their research staff. If in a dark room the rays from this tube are thrown for a few seconds on a trap of stones, they all glow, and when the rays are turned off the artificial sapphires continue to glow and may be picked out of the tray, while the natural sapphires cannot be seen. Diamonds, under these rays, turn brown if they are artificial, but remain unchanged if natural.

So let every one of us be certain that whatever is unreal in his life and character will be disclosed by the analysis of heaven. The true nature of work is sure to be made manifest in time. Imitation virtues deceive the casual eye, but not the cathode ray of the universe. There is no safety but in the truth.

Prayer.—Thou God seest us. Thou God knowest us altogether. Thou art acquainted with all our ways. No pretence, no hypocrisy passes Thy scrutiny. We will not attempt to cheat ourselves or the world, for we can never deceive Thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

CONTENTMENT THAT CONVERTS.

"I have all things, and abound."—Phil. 4:10:20.

Paul, in his Roman prison, could write to his friends in Philippi that he had all things and abounded. Christ to him was "all and in all." Having Christ, Paul needed nothing else, wanted nothing else, and his contentment with Christ was one great recommendation of Christianity.

Marshal Feng, that remarkable Chinese Christian general, was profoundly moved by two experiences with missionaries. In 1900 he saw a young woman die joyfully for Jesus Christ. Then a madman tried to kill Feng, but instead his bullet killed an American medical missionary. The widow refused to ask for compensation for her husband's death, and when Feng offered her $7,000 she said that the mission supplied all her needs.

Practical unselfishness, manifest unworldliness, evident satisfaction with the Christian life and its rewards, these are the best advertisements of our religion. We can make our lives the most powerful of evangelistic sermons. The world is being won to Christ by the Christians who in Christ have all things and abound.

Prayer.—Thou, O Christ, art all we want, more than all in Thee we find. No blessing surpasses Thee. All joys are less than Thee. Thou completest every desire. With all thanksgiving we thank Thee most for Thyself. Amen.

SUNDAY.

SIN NEVER PAYS.

"I will render vengeance to mine adversaries."—Deut. 32:35-43.

A man who made a business of picking pockets for twenty-three years, and who robbed people to the extent of $350,000, has become a lecturer and is telling his audiences that, after all, it does not pay. He found it necessary to employ a lawyer, for he was arrested twenty-six times. He found it necessary to give many bribes and to pay out large sums to blackmailers and threatening informers. He "made" much money, but he could not keep it. The "expenses" of the "business" absorbed the "profits."

And the pickpocket seems to have left out of account the heaviest expense of all, the loss of his character, the loss of his happiness, and his eternal ruin unless he repents and, through Christ, makes his peace with God. All sinners suffer endless loss. Nothing they can possibly "make" compensates for what they unmake.

Prayer.—Forgive our sins, Thou Ruler of the universe, through the mercies of Thy Son. And grant that, having certain knowledge of the entire folly and fruitlessness of evil, we may no longer fall into that emptiness, but may ever walk on firm ground with our Saviour. In His name. Amen.

The liquor traffic tends to produce criminality in the population at large and lawbreaking among the saloon-keepers themselves.—Theodore Roosevelt.

SURPRISES OF THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

By Rev. Walter Metcalf

The Christian life is exuberant in youthfulness. Old age lives in the past; youth in the future; and Christianity is the religion of youth! In such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh! The Christian stands on the verge of an appealing expectancy. The future has no charm for the aged; but for youth it means graduation, or the Fourth of July, or a birthday—some adventure all the time. So when Jesus said, "Watch, therefore," He anticipated no dull, languid tarrying, but a wide-awake thrill at the thought of a bridal party. John the Baptist played funeral dirges, but Jesus attended weddings, and rejoiced on many festive occasions.

Some people think of the coming of the Son of man in the somber garments of death, but today we think of Him appareled in the blithesome attire of life. He comes to give life and to give it more abundantly. Watch, therefore, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man will come to you with innumerable surprises.

He will come with the surprises of strength. As thy day is so shall thy strength be. Many persons have repeatedly said, "I did not think I could do it." But they did. Whence came such strength? The Christ within answers even the unconscious cry for help, and we are saved. He came in such an hour as men thought not at Bethlehem. Just one Mary and a few wise men were conscious of His presence; while the rest of the world had ceased to expect prophetic power. But the Christ came, and He will come again, every day, just when you need Him most. You will be able to carry that heavy load, because He walks beside you all the way. That bereavement? Yes, He will be there. That financial crisis? You will be surprised to learn how little the terrible blast affected the real you. Your strength will be redoubled for the impending struggle. There is reserve power in every-day life; but the one who a double portion of divine strength.

There is also the surprise of explanation. Why did Turner have to mix his paints in a broken teacup? Why did John Bunyan spend years in Bedford jail? Why does a mother go down into the shadows and then live the sublimely sacrificial life for her brood? Why this bereavement, this loss, this reverse? The Master Himself once cried knows the secret place of the Most High receives, out in anguish of spirit, "My God, My God," etc. We do not understand. After the fire and whirlwind come the still small voice of explanation. Then we know why there were clouds instead of sun after the Master comes to us with the surprise of explanation.

Surely the gods were not propitious to Simon of Cyrene as he walked into the ancient city in the years that are long ago. Going in, he paused to watch the milling, surging crowd going out. No opportunity here surely! As fine looking child of God as ever walked earth's pathway fainted beneath a cross, and a rough soldier, possibly in the spirit of horseplay, compelled Simon to carry that new cross. It looked as though Simon was going to his own crucifixion. Opportunity? A million men would gladly take Simon's place today. The alien had carried the Redeemer's cross. What a contact! In such an hour as men thought not, opportunity came.

Less spectacularly opportunity comes to all of us. A cup of cold water; an act of kindness; a Boy Scout's thoughtfulness. Yes, in a thousand unexpected ways the Christ comes to us with endless opportunity. That Sunday School class calls you. There is opportunity for righteous living at the club. Business needs high adventure. There is the call for life service. It came to Lindbergh. His head was not turned by the applauding millions, and he stands today as a type of the finest of young Americans. In such an hour as men think not comes the surprise of gracious opportunity.

Of course, the Master will come to us in the surprise of death. And after death—the judgment! We never know what an hour may bring forth. "Be ye also ready." But when we find ourselves beyond the vale, we will still be in the land of surprises. "When saw we thee sick, or in prison, and ministered unto thee?" The righteous will be surprised that their little "unremembered acts of kindness and of love" have been actually recorded. Others of us will be bitterly surprised to discover that we have failed to achieve God's standard of character.

May we not, therefore, give a present-day application to those beautiful words quoted by Henry Drummond?

"So I am watching quietly every day,
Whenever the sun shines brightly I rise and say,
Surely it is the shining of His face!
And when a shadow falls across the window of my room,
Where I am working my appointed task,
I lift my head and watch the door, and ask
If He is come!"

He comes with strength, with explanation, with opportunity, and with great reward.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM.

WILLING WORKERS OR JUNIORS.

Theme: "Vacation Days."

Song: "This is My Father's World."

Follow suggestions of last month for call to worship, prayer, offering.

Plan for a picnic. If possible, invite some group of foreign children to this; use this as a period of encouraging friendship between the races. If there are no people of different races near at hand, think of some way to which we may send them a part of our good times. Examples: gathering such wild flowers as will press to use in scrapbook to which will be added pictures showing "The country we live in," or "The town we live in," or "The clothes we wear." These may be cut out of daily papers or magazines.

Close with flag salutes.

For Junior Leaders.

(By Miss Carrie Robison.)

If you are unable to have a picnic for August, the children will like to listen to the stories in "Jumping Beans" while they are making the scrapbooks. We are to have some work among the Spanish-speaking people in Arizona, and these stories will help get acquainted. I hope that there will be lots of fun making scrapbooks.

A number of gifts for the children's memorial of the merger have been received. The gifts have ranged from one dollar to five. Most of it, so far, has come from one conference whose conference superintendent wrote to the junior leaders. More societies will send in their gifts soon, and by the end of our year, September 30th, I am sure that we shall have money enough to translate a good book for the Japanese boys and girls.

It would be interesting to have your children tell of the books each one would like to have the Japanese children read, and why. Of course, Miss Bosanquet will decide which one of the books our money will pay for, she feels that they need next.

In your September meeting it would be well for you to make some plans for the study of the new books for next year's study. Possibly new programs for next year will be outlined by that time.

I wish you all a happy vacation, with lots of fun and some work.—News Bulletin.

The most honorable and the most useful career that is open to any man or woman is to be a Christian. No life that any man or woman can live is as conducive of good to others or brings so much peace and happiness to the one living it as the Christian life. Honor and glory cannot be rendered to God, to whom all honor and glory belong, except by living the life that the Spirit of God, speaking through inspired men, marks out for the Christian.—Exchange.

Germany last year spent $1,075,000,000 on drink. The bill would have been greater, but for the fact that drink is very cheap in Germany.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

I am very happy that our financial report carries us across the ten-thousand-dollar mark this week. We are always happy to reach one-third of the way. Happier still, when we reach one-half of the way, and our heart is full to overflowing when we reach our goal at the end of the year.

No one can realize the mental strain through which one goes who stands at the head of an institution of this kind and meets the problems from day to day, and especially the financial problems. Bills to meet, and sometimes no money to meet them, and it keeps our thinking cap on all the time to figure out just how it can be done.

If all our Sunday Schools could be superintendent of the Christian Orphanage for one month they would be so sympathetic ever after that they would double their monthly contributions; and if they were not on the list of monthly contributors, they would be so sorrowful because of the neglect that they would get on the list at once and make their contribution liberal. Schools are joining our list each week, and we hope ere long all will help us.

The rains are making our crops take on new life, and we truly hope the long-continued drought has broken. Quite a number of our children are out on vacation now. We try to give each one a ten-day vacation each year if they can get somewhere to go. It does them lots of good to get out and mingle with people and see how other people live.

When we give to keep a homeless child, it may be like casting our bread upon the waters; but we may be made to feel happy some day to see that little fellow we helped filling some responsible position of trust.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

WAYS OF SHARING WITH OTHER FAITHS. By Daniel J. Fleming. Association Press; $1.75; pp. 268.

Prof. Fleming has long been recognized as an authority in the field of comparative religion. He feels that those of us who undertake to do missionary work should do so in the spirit of sharing our experience of God with the adherents of other faiths. We will be none the less sure of the validity of our own religion, but far more successful in winning members of other religious creeds to Christian standards. We should encourage good will, understanding and respect; we should offer those whom we would win to Christ a program of joyous, unselfish living, without ulterior objectives; we should present religion as an adventure in showing our experience of God. In conclusion, he gives a very suggestive code of ethics for those who would undertake this process of sharing.

STUDIES IN THE ORGANIZATION OF CHARACTER. By Hugh Hartshorne, Mark A. May, and Frank K. Shuttleworth. Macmillan; $2.75; pp. 503.

This is the third volume issued by the "Christian Education Inquiry," in the effort to reduce to precise measures the character tendencies of boys and girls. A more subtle or intricate problem it would be difficult to select. Yet the investigators, while necessarily including a large amount of technical matter, have also incorporated in their study not infrequently passages of great illuminating value. This concluding volume will prove especially valuable to non-technical readers.

TWO-MINUTE STORIES. By Carl S. Patton. Wittlett, Clark & Colby; $1.25; pp. 131.

The great preacher who gave up the presidency of the Chicago Theological Seminary to return to the pastorate of First Congregational Church of Los Angeles, has here collected fifty-three inimitable stories for boys and girls. Dr. Patton does not preach to boys and girls. He tells them stories. They return again and again for more. These stories exhibit the marks of genius, and the world will not be content until more like them are given to it.

CONFLICTING PSYCHOLOGIES OF LEARNING. By B. H. Bode. D. C. Heath & Co.; $1.50; pp. 305.

Dr. Bode recognizes the confusion and disagreement that now is the outstanding characteristic of psychologists. His book concerns itself centrally with the question of the nature of the mind. Mind and soul are identified in the book throughout. There is no substantive mind, immortality is hypothetical, and mental states are the raw material of the educational process. For those who would understand the physiological concept of the mind, this book will be exceptionally valuable.

BUILDING FAMILY FOUNDATIONS. By Rev. Harold Holt. Morehouse; $1; pp. 85.

A very practical discussion of economic, parental, sex and spiritual relations of the modern home. Chapter 1 discusses the changing family, and chapter 10 shows what the Church can do to stabilize this primary and foundational institution of our social order. Common sense and devout attitude—these are the appropriate descriptions of this very sensible treatise.

CRITICISM.

One should try not to be too fearful of criticism. Persons who disagree with views one expresses will yet be just to him, if they have the spirit of Christ. Those who are not—well, would it not be better to be like John the Baptist in the Wilderness, or Paul, against whom the exalted Sanhedrin plotted, than to try to mediate the gospel with materialism or systems that reject our Lord? They "got" Paul—had him put in a Roman prison in lieu of their failure to have him murdered. Few of us may think of ourselves as even remotely in the case of the great apostle. Yet we may remember that the open and "effective" antagonism he aroused by his unterrified witness to the revealed supernatural gospel and by his stripping the mask of the enemy teachings, was within the purposes of God for him, and though it meant prison and a chain, did not stop nor make ineffective that witness. Whatever pitiful persecution, from high or low quarters, may be involved in one seeking to speak the truth of Christ is far better, if such be God's will, than any safety and praise one might gain by speaking words of softness and peace where supreme loyalty to Christ is involved. Such is the principle. God teaches each of His ministers how, with meekness, in his own place and in accordance with his own responsibilities, he may make application of it. —Western Recorder.

OBITUARIES.

BOTTOMS.

Mrs. Susianna Chandler Bottoms was born December 3, 1880, and died at her home in High Point, May 29th. She was married to E. L. Bottoms December 5, 1896. She leaves her husband, four sons, and four daughters, of High Point, and a son of Surry County; also many friends and loved ones. She will be missed at home and in the community. She professed faith in Christ in early life and united with the Church in Surry County and lived faithful to the end.

She was a true mother, and was very much devoted to her family. Burial service was conducted at her home, in High Point, and the interment was at Mt. Airy. May the good Lord bless the sorrowing ones. W. J. EDWARDS.

DUKE.

We, the ladies of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church, feel very keenly the passing of one of our most loyal members, Mrs. Barsha Ann Duke, who departed this life on May 17, 1930 (born November 11, 1854). While we mourn the loss of our dear sister, who had been a patient sufferer for months, we feel that our loss is her gain. Though hindered by illness, she was always willing to respond to any cause when called upon. May we strive to imitate her good examples by being more faithful in our duties to God's cause.

We bow in humble submission to God's will, and extend to her loved ones our deepest sympathy, and recommend that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy recorded in the minutes of our society.

CHURCH UNION AND EVANGELISM.—

Dr. Poling said he believed that world evangelism waits on Christian union. Beyond the work of the commission on Church union, he expressed a hope and belief that the work of Church union should go on in wider extension with the commendation of the Christian world. The spirit with which it had proceeded, the poise of its leadership and the definite progress that it has made justify a continuation of the efforts of communions in advocating a closer fellowship. In addition to this, the United Church of China, the rising indigenous Church of South India, the United Church of Canada, the new Presbyterian union in Scotland, the Congregational-Christian amalgamation in the United States, and many other similar projects cheer us on our way. He says, "Let us reaffirm our endorsement of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and let us join with our fellow-Christians on every occasion when in community, State, national and international affairs the kingdom of God should have a united command."

COMMUNISTS.—

From various sources come warnings to America of a Communist threat against our institutions. The Pope of Rome, in a conference with Father James Ryan, who is an arch-enemy of the Communists in America, is credited with saying, by way of warning to the United States, "to beware lest Bolshevism spread in America at this moment of financial depression and unemployment." About the same time, a congressional committee to study Communistic activities in New York was busily engaged at work. What has been uncovered up to the present is not revealed. Spurred on by these activities, various radical organizations have resumed their agitations. Notably, Ralph N. Easley who has been seeing red for years, has gone again into action.

Such policies on the part of society, governments, and communities makes the Communists pose as martyrs and magnify their cause in the public eye. The best answer to the Communists' cause and propaganda is industrial justice. Without industrial justice, the Communists will win in spite of all forms of forced police control. With industrial justice, the Communists agitators will fail and democracy will win, as it should.

POPE vs. PROTESTANTISM.—

Recently, Pope Pius XI protested vigorously against what he termed favoritism for the Protestant sects at work in Italy. From his point of view, Italy is a Catholic preserve. Other faiths may be tolerated, but not encouraged. The Fascist government, on the other hand, has gone to the point of encouragement. Protestant ministers now have the privilege of performing marriage ceremonies; they have political standing, and are otherwise treated as equals with the Roman priests. Following the Pope's statement comes an editorial from one of the Roman Catholic papers at Rome, which resents the pending visit to Rome of a group of Methodists. The caption of the editorial is, "Undesirable American Pilgrimage." The editorial says, "This does not seem a very opportune time to have this Protestant Italo-American pilgrimage with us, in the eighth year of the Facist regime which composed differences between the Church and the State.

"Protestants in alliance with Masonry gladly availed themselves of that difference until the day when Fascism, restoring the fortunes of Italy, restored its full value to the Catholic faith, which is so large a part of the history of civilization of Italy, and dismissed all adulterations which, in darkness and in light, were poisoning the life of our country." Such intolerance!

GANDHI'S TERMS FOR SETTLEMENT.—

In a conference with the representative of the Daily Herald, of London, Mr. Gandhi, in the Poona prison, has raised hopes in many quarters of the possibility of arranging a settlement. He made it clear to this representative that he was prepared to recommend to Congress the suspension of civil disobedience and co-operate in the round-table conference on the following terms: (1) The terms of reference of the round-table conference must include the framing of a constitution, giving India the substance of independnece. (2) The repeal of the salt tax, prohibition of liquor, and ban on foreign cloth. (3) Amnesty for prisoners convicted of political offenses to coincide with the end of civil disobedience campaign. (4) The remaining seven points in Mr. Gandhi's letter to the viceroy to be left for future discussion. After this interview, the London representative was convinced that conciliation will be met with conciliation on the part of Gandhi, who, in his opinion, "now incarnates the very soul of India."

These terms of settlement as elicited from Mr. Gandhi have been received with a chorus of approval even by the leaders of the moderate political party, who have been opposed to Mr. Gandhi's methods of civil disobedience.

OUR MONEY.—

The Christian Herald says, "The United States now boasts of 108 philanthropic foundations whose work reaches for the benefit of mankind in every corner of the globe. The funds controlled by these foundations amount to more than $1,000,000,000; as much as the capital of the four American leading industries—shoes, baking, rubber and clothing." These foundations, together, give annually to world improvement $60,000,000. Over $30,000,000 of this amount is given for education. The largest of educational givers is the General Education Board, a Rockefeller philanthropy, which contributes annually $18,000,000 to the support of colleges, universities, medical schools, etc. The J. C. Penny Foundation, which devotes most of its energies to industrial and vocational training, is prominent in the same field. To individuals, $9,000,000 is dispensed annually in the ancient manner. Philanthropists have shown a marked unwillingness to devote their funds to politics, only $500,000 annually being devoted to political problems. Religious problems engage $600,000 annually, but the contributions to education are devoted, in many of the colleges and universities, to religious education and the study of religious problems. We need more philanthropists who would devote their wealth to improving the moral and religious life of America.

THREE POINTS OF AGREEMENT.—

A joint conference of representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, North, the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., and the Protestant Episcopal Church, at Atlantic City, these communions found themselves in substantial agreement on these points in their pronouncements: "(1) So far as other than theological and ecclesiastical facts were causes of the original separation of the bodies we represent, we are agreed that they are no longer operative in any such degree as to block the way to an organic unity. (2) We find complete agreement upon the importance of the principle of the separation of Church and State as guaranteed in the Constitution of the United States. With emphasis differing somewhat in our three bodies upon the values attached to the various expressions of social and moral ideals, we find the common conviction that the Church of Christ has a definite responsibility not only to guide the conscience of individual Christians, but also to infuse through society the principles of God's will as revealed in Jesus Christ. Utterances of the highest representative bodies in our three communions reveal, however, the equally certain conviction that function of the Church is not govern or to seek to govern political action, but to further the influence of Christian principles in society. (3) Our three communions are as one in recognizing the authority of the Church to back and guide the individual in the development of his Christian life and to exercise discipline in cases of violation of the fundamental precepts of that life. We find, however, that in all three communions the tendency is obvious to substitute for such disciplinary methods as culminate in excommunication, the methods of love, persuasion and voluntary penance as being more consonant with our Lord's teachings."

NOTES-PERSONALS

Dr. C. C. Ryan, pastor of the Richmond Church, has been assisting in revival services in Halifax County during the past week. He is expecting to leave for Ohio next week, to be gone for several weeks.

We learn with deep regret of the death of Master William Staley Wicker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Staley Wicker, of Atlanta, Ga., and grandson of Dr. W. C. Wicker, news editor of THE SUN and acting editor. Our sympathy goes out to them in their bereavement.

We understand that Rev. E. B. White has been unanimously recalled to serve as pastor of the Windsor-Antioch-Isle of Wight pastorate, at an increased salary. We congratulate Bro. White. He also begins his fourth year of service with Damascus Church, Sunbury, N. C.

This is the season of many evangelistic meetings. The object of these meetings transcends in importance all others for which we labor—the salvation of souls, the bringing of human lives over from the dominion and rule of Satan into the glorious and everlasting kingdom of Jesus Christ. Surely all of our hearts should be in this matter of the conversion of people of the world into saints and servants of God. If we are not much interested in this, we may well doubt whether we are Christians. May the spirit of Christ fill us all and prepare us for our part in this momentous work.—Methodist Protestant Herald.

A FORWARD LOOK.

In the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, which met at Waverly, Va., July 22nd and 23rd, there was launched a campaign for efficiency. From year to year our convention has the various reports which take a good deal of the time in being read. Quite often there has not been very much accomplished in the various fields which the different reports are supposed to cover. This year it is the purpose of the convention to try to be 100 per cent efficient in a few of these convention endeavors. The following are some of the undertakings that the convention voted to attempt to perfect:

First, through the medium of leadership training, get as large number as possible to take training either at the summer school at Elon, the local training school, or in the local Church.

Second, get all the Sunday Schools within the bounds of the Conference to make regular monthly offerings to the Orphanage and missions and to make the quarterly offering to Elon College.

There are other objects for which we are to work. But these are especially mentioned here, so that the pastors and officers of the schools may start now to work toward that end.

This action by the convention does not by any means intend to minimize the work of the other departments. It is interested in them and will expect the reports to come in next year, showing that there has been renewed and added interest to the work. But it is the desire of every one to see 100 per cent efficiency in those departments, as mentioned. These are a part of our objectives. Will you, Bro. Pastor and Sunday School superintendent, be one to see that your school is in this list? J. E. McC.

FANCY GAP LETTER.

To THE SUN readers and those who are interested in our mountain work, I wish to say that we are still striving toward the great goal set up by our Lord and Master.

Mr. M. Price Webb, of Hillsville, Va., recently taught a singing school at our Rocky Ford Church. This school ran for six Saturdays from 1 to 6 P. M. Then we had practice on Sundays with our Church service. We had a fine singing class. Mr. Webb said that it was as good a class as he had ever taught. The people of the community entered into it with a whole-hearted spirit. Some of our friends from Elk Spur co-operated with us also.

Through the courtesy of Bro. W. E. Lindsey, of Mount Airy, N. C., we made an engagement with the First Baptist Church of that city, and on July 20, 1930, we had the pleasure of going with our singing class and putting on a song program in this Church from 10:10 to 11 A. M. The people of the Baptist Church gave us a hearty welcome, and showed us that they really appreciated our visit. We feel that this association with our Baptist friends has meant much to us.

Beginning with August 11th, Miss Lillie Spain and Miss Jewel Truitt, of Waverly, Va., are to put on a two weeks' daily vacation Bible school at Fancy Gap. A morning session will be held at Elk Spur, and the afternoon session at Rocky Ford. We are hoping to have a good school, and may much good be accomplished in the name of Christ. S. E. MADREN.

PUBLIC EDUCATION ADVANCING RAPIDLY.

The most rapid growth in American public education has occurred during the past forty years, the specialist in the secondary education, United States Office of Education, Carl A. Jessen, stated recently.

A glance at statistics between 1890 and 1928 on the number of students enrolled, the number of days in attendance annually, the number of schools and the value of all school property, discloses amazing advances.

In 1890 a total of 12,722,581 children between the ages of five and seventeen were enrolled in the public schools of the nation. This number increased to 25,179,696 in 1928. The total population of the country in 1870 was 38,558,371, compared with a school enrollment in excess of 25,000,000 in 1928.

Mr. Jessen called attention to the fact that 68.6 per cent of the children between the ages of five and seventeen in 1890 were enrolled, compared with 81.5 per cent in 1928.

IF THE ORGANIZED DRYS QUIT.

BY ERNEST H. CHERRINGTON, LL.D.

Gen'l Sec'y World League Against Alcoholism.

Prohibition would be erased from the Constitution and quickly blotted from the statute books if the organized efforts of its friends should cease. Eternal vigilance is the price of freedom from the debauching, corrupting and enslaving liquor traffic.

So long as a group of wealthy men, some of whom control immense distilleries while others are interested in other possible phases of the exploitation of the people at large, heavily finance the assaults made upon this beneficent social legislation whose values are distributed to the bulk of the American people, it will be necessary for those who are concerned about American high-speed industrial civilization to guard their hard-won liberty from the return of the liquor traffic.

Should the friends of prohibition abandon those organizations through which alone they present an effective front to the enemy, the liquor consumption in this country would, unquestionably, far exceed any record set in the past. The wealth of the land which has been so greatly increased under prohibition would make possible larger consumption of intoxicants. The increase in population during the dry decade would offer more potential liquor customers. Like that man from whom seven devils were cast out and to whom they later returned, the last state of this nation would be worse than the first.

The discouraging effect of a repeal of the prohibitory laws would break down inhibitions which have been built up during the dry period. Repeal of the eighteenth amendment would be equivalent to a confession that the theory of prohibition was wrong, that the use of intoxicating beverages was right and proper, and that society deliberately placed its seal of approval on their consumption.

Coupled with the return of the licensed liquor traffic under whatever system might be adopted, there would be a like return of that political corruption which seems to be its inevitable accompaniment, whether legalized or illicit. There would also return those vice centers which were plague spots in the life of our great cities. Inevitably, slum sections would develop. The standard of living which has been raised so high under prohibition would be lowered, since the diversion of large sums of money to the liquor trade would make it impossible for hundreds of thousands to continue payments upon homes they are buying, to meet rentals in desirable neighborhoods, to continue that scale of living which has been possible to the great body of the people only since the licensed liquor traffic.

The effect of the return of this traffic would be felt throughout our whole economic life. A large part of our business structure is built on the deferred-payment plan, or installment buying. We have erected an inverted pyramid by spreading out the purchase price of costly articles, such as automobiles, radios and the like, over extended periods of time. Through this system we have made possible a much greater consumption than could have been, had these been purchasable only for cash. Prohibition has made this inverted pyramid stable. It has strengthened the credit of nearly every man and woman in the country. That credit would be shaken and that inverted pyramid would topple if the supporters of prohibition should disband and their organization no longer function effectively.

The death rate, whose decrease under prohibition has been equivalent to saving approximately 200,000 lives per year, would increase if more liquor stores were allowed to purvey this narcotic habit-forming drug. Alcoholic insanity would increase. Deaths from alcoholism would reach the preprohibition ratio. Drink cures reduced from 275 to a score of institutions, mostly small, would revive. In brief, that long chain of evils fostered by the liquor traffic would again plague the American people if they do not present a united front to the assaults made by the liquor element.

Only through organized effort can the supporters of an alcohol-free civilization give to men in public life that assured support to which they are entitled. Legislators, administrators, judges, police officials and the great body of public servants who are related to the enforcement of prohibition have a positive right to that whole-hearted popular support which is only possible through organization. The foes of prohibition are organized. The friends of prohibition must continue and reinforce their orgnaization.

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

In some rural evangelistic meetings in Alabama, group prayer-meetings are held out in the grove preceding the Church service and are found to be helpful.

The Mountain Creek, Ala., Union Church has made a substantial addition to its Church house, increasing the size of the auditorium and adding two rooms for classes. It has two protracted meetings each year, and will have a daily vacation Bible school, led by Miss Davison, in connection with the second meeting.

The trustees of Thorsby Institute, of Thorsby, Ala., in regular annual meeting, voted to attempt to raise their institution to the rank of a junior college at the earliest date that finances and organziation will allow, and to begin by the addition of the freshman college year as soon as that may be done. This action is the result of an insistent and continued local demand, and is in line with the repeated advice of the Congregational Advisory Board of the Southeast.

The student summer workers are in the midst of their activities and are happy in the service. From Kentucky, one writes about the hard physical and financial life of the coal miners. On the Cumberland Plateau, another is trying to place promising young people in good schools for the coming year. Others are having teacher-training classes for Sunday School teachers. In Alabama a young man with a gift for lettering is repainting the Church sign-boards on the Churches in which he and his wife have daily vacation Bible schools. In West Florida a young man has used his knowledge of medicines, obtained in war service, to cure sufferers from malaria. He is preaching in protracted meetings and conducting daily vacation Bible schools in several of the Churches.

The United Protestant Church, of Thorsby, Ala., celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of its founding on July 9th. Eighty-five sat down to a supper on the institute campus. A vesper service took place there, and the night program was held in the Church. During the quarter-century, the Church has rendered fine service because it had faith to attempt each task as soon as the need was felt, and has had the most fraternal relations with other Churches all along the way. In its second year, with the assistance of the Birmingham Church, it started Thorsby Institute, which is widely known for its accomplishments and efficiency. The Church has been thorough in religious education. It has been fortunate in its ministerial leadership. Rev. J. E. Each is the present pastor.

One of the most interesting groups of Churches in Alabama is a cluster of four under the ministerial leadership of Rev. Nathaniel A. Long, himself the son of a minister who is moderator of the South Alabama Association. The four Churches are near Dothan, Ala. Young people from these Churches are continually going out into larger service. One Church has now several leading school principals and teachers. A second has a full-time worker in our Extension Boards. A third has a summer worker and a teacher in Thorsby Institute at the present time. The fourth has, besides several capable teachers in consolidated schools, a son in Birmingham who is the Church editor of the Post and is a candidate for the State Legislature. Bro. Long has attended rural Church school at Vanderbilt University and is planning larger and more far-reaching service for his Churches.

West Florida Congregationalism centers in Crestview, where Rev. W. H. Tillman is pastor. The Churches of the association have good houses of worship and the majority of them are rich in young people. A week-end Christian life conference at Cottonville demonstrated the benefits of these annual get-togethers in the religious life of youth. They attended in numbers and showed by their participation in worship, classes, dramatics, discussions and recreation that religion is an important and absorbing interest in their lives. It is astonishing to observe how quickly our young people who have had some training get to the heart of a matter and how willing they are to work for great objectives. Most of these young people are from country Churches. It was interesting to observe that some of the leaders were the grandchildren of a pioneer pastor of West Florida, the Rev. Willie G. Miller.

There was a fine fellowship at the Summer School of Christian Education at Piedmont Junior College, in Wadley, Ala., the faculty being evenly divided between Christians and Congregationalists. The latter were represented by Rev. Edwin E. White, who inspired the young people to high responsibility as followers of Christ, and who made the needs of India a concern of ours. Miss Marguerite Davison had classes in dramatics and helped with the recreation and the social side of the Summer School. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, who is in membership in both Church groups, taught daily vacation Bible school, conducted worship services, and cheered every one. The young people of the Summer School were interested in the joint conference meetings of the Alabama Christian and Congregational bodies which are to be held at the Noon Day Christian Church, near Wedowee, on October 14-16th. They will have an important young people's program and rally there under the direction of Miss Jewel Truitt and Miss Marguerite Davison. Piedmont Junior College has entertained these summer schools since the second year of its organization. Congregationalists are glad to have an equal part in the work of this school, which is led by Rev. F. C. Lester and Miss Truitt.

The passing of the Rev. Mark Napoleon Sumner marked a stage in Congregational work in the mountains. He was the earnest young man who went to Oberlin Seminary at the wish of Dr. William E. Barton, and who succeeded him in his work in northern Tennessee and southern Kentucky. Having a parish "forty miles square and thirty years long," a man of spiritual power, preaching ability, and flaming earnestness, he campaigned for souls and moral standards and established a number of Churches. His conversation was elevated, his English choice. A few weeks before his death, his pastor, Rev. George L. Day, went up to Mill Creek to have the Communion service with him. He was laid away in the corner of a high field of his mountain farm with the sentinel mountains not far away. Four sons who honor his life and ideals, and his widow carry on the name. There are seventeen grandchildren of the Sumner name. It has been a worthy life. His autobiography is a choice record which would be enjoyed by many. Bro. Sumner was asked to accept the honorary degree of doctor of divinity by the seminary, but had so depleted his strength by his ardent labors of thirty years that he could not take the trip to the institution as requested. He was unable also to be present at the dedication of Sumner Chapel, the Church-house named in his honor, at Pine Knot, Ky., near his birthplace. We think of him now as emancipated from earth's burdens and in fuller fellowship as a result of a triumphant life.

FROM REV. G. D. HUNT.

I was with the First Christian Church, at Roanoke, Ala., from the third to the fourth Sunday in July. Rev. G. W. Veazey is pastor, but on account of the sickness of his little child, he was prevented from attending the meeting. The little one, at this writing, is in a critical condition. The people prayed earnestly during the meeting for the recovery of the sick child, and we earnestly desire the entire brotherhood to remember the family at a throne of grace.

The people of this little Church have shown such a sweet spirit of loyalty to Bro. Veazey and his family during this period of affliction—they have helped them in every possible way.

The meeting here increased in interest at each service, the attendance was good, the music was inspiring. They have a fine choir of singers, and with a little practice would be able to do great things in a musical way. It is great for a Church to have the privilege to develop its talent. In every line of Christian service, this proves the power of the Church, and it proves also that God is with His people.

I am now engaged with Rev. J. D. Dollar at Noon Day Church, in a revival meeting, which is being largely attended and much interest manifested. Last Sunday was a great day with this Church, it being the occasion of the dedication of the new Church building. It was indeed an inspiring service, and a large congregation assembled. The musical program was great, being directed by Bro. Kirby, of the local Church. At 11 A. M. the dedicatory sermon was delivered by the writer. Rev. J. D. Dollar, present pastor, read the dedicatory formula. Rev. J. E. Amason, of the Congregational-Methodist Church, led in the dedicatory prayer.

This Church is located in one of the most prosperous and progressive sections of Randolph County, Ala. The membership of the Church and the citizens of the community have shown remarkable skill and loyalty in the erection of such a modern, up-to-date building. I think it is the best house of worship the Christians have in the Alabama Conference, and it was completed in just a few months and paid for when completed, for the people had a mind to build. Everybody seems to enjoy the opportunity, and worship seems to be a real pleasure.

This community also has a fine, consolidated school, with more than two hundred pupils, and the citizenship is composed of energetic and progressive farmers, and crop prospects here are better than I have seen anywhere in this country.

Our united annual Conference is scheduled to meet with this Church next October, the program of which is now under construction and will be published in due time.

I go next week to New Harmony Church to assist Bro. W. G. Meacham in a revival meeting.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

REVIVAL IN RURAL CHURCHES.

The rural Churches of the Christian denomination in the South needs special attention along several lines. Many of our Churches are neglecting a careful and thorough work of their fields. Many of them are failing to work these fields by pastoral visitation, personal contact in the homes of the membership, and intimate acquaintance between the pastors and people through pastoral work. Too often all the pastors do is to preach on Sunday, once or twice a month, and return to their homse, at a distance, and never come into personal contact with their membership so as to cultivate a sympathetic and friendly acquaintance. The pastor by this method cannot know his people and their spiritual needs. As a result, only few of the members attend the Church regularly, only a few contribute to the financial support of the Church and its institutions, Churches are neglected, members find attraction and interest in other things which crowd out the kingdom, and the Church takes a secondary place in the interest and affections of the people. The religious life of the Church community is reduced to a low ebb, the homes of many are influenced very little by the religious values of the Church, children grow up with worldly influences dominating their minds, and become the young people of the community with indifference to religious life, and many drift off into crime and become a charge to the State, a care to the parents, a menace to society, and a liability to life of the community.

By reviving the systematic and thorough work of the rural Churches, we must require pastoral visitation in a systematic way, cultivate the restoration of the family altar, teach devotional life in the home, conduct family worship, pray with the sick and sorrowing, attend to the duties of the pastor at the marriage altar, and sanctify the marriage relation by marrying the young. The pastor should teach and cultivate the idea of systematic methods in handling the financial problems of the Church, plan for systematic support of the Church, stimulate all the members and even the children to contribute regularly to the support of the kingdom, and direct an every-member canvass annually for the spiritual value of the membership, and show personal interest in the poorest as well as the richest members of the Church.

Too many of our Churches have been satisfied with unprepared, untrained and uneducated student-preachers who could not devote their time to pastoral work, visiting the sick, burying the dead, marrying the young, promoting the spiritual life, instructing in the deeper spiritual values, and growing a sympathetic spiritual interest with the Church life. Many of them are served more for the help of the student-preacher than for the Church, and the Church becomes a means for ministerial education rather than for the promotion of the spiritual life of the community, as it should.

Such a system is injurious to the Church as well as to the student. The former is neglected because of the inability of the student to render as good service as a well-trained, educated minister, because of lack of preparation, lack of time, lack of major interest in the Church, and inability to live with and among his people; the latter is injured because he is forming his habits of preaching before he has been prepared in his education, it robs him of valuable time he should devote to study in academic and theological preparation, and the result is that many of the young preachers make mediocre men when they might make masters in the ministry by devoting all their time in the development of their powers before they enter the active work of the ministry.

Churches in which a thorough preparation is required before licensure and ordination have a strong ministry and render a higher grade of service, build up their organizations, strengthen their denominations, and support their institutions, and have a bright outlook for the future; but Churches that require little preparation for licensure and ordination lower the dignity of the ministry, have poorly prepared ministers who devote their time largely to other things, resulting in weak Churches and poorly worked membership and waning strength. The Church is the fundamental organization of the denomination, and should, by all means, be the center of interest for its own growth and development, and then all other institutions and auxiliaries will receive adequate support; but without this, all other dependent organizations will wane and die. LESSONS FROM DEBORAH.

The International Sunday School lesson for July 27th, the lesson about Deborah and Barak, contained some truths of such vital import for present-day conditions in the Church that they deserve more than passing notice. If the lesson was well studied and well taught, those who followed it most closely will be the better prepared for the ideas which we shall try to suggest. For we are most appreciative not of those subjects which we know least about, but of those with which we are most familiar.

There is a rather wide-spread conviction that the major portion of the Church work of this present day is done by women. Like most popular ideas, this one is, doubtless, overemphasized. I know of no Church where the men who are members are doing anything like what they might be doing in the way of service for the Church and kingdom; and yet I know of no Church that would not be irreparably crippled if the men were to stop entirely the work that they are doing. But, granting that the Church women are doing a magnigcent work for the kingdom, what lessons are there which they might learn from Deborah?

It is interesting to note that Deborah was not elected to her position of leadership, neither was she self-appointed to the place that she occupied. She was elevated to the judgeship because of her sound common sense, her faithfulness in hard work, and her irreproachable life of righteousness. Deborah wielded an influence more because of what she was than because of what she did. It is a sore mistake to elevate persons to positions of leadership on account of their ability to do things. It is indeed a sore temptation. There are so many things that urgently need to be done, and so many people that are unwilling to undertake the tasks, that when some one will undertake the tasks it is but natural to welcome the doer. Experience, however, shows that it is sometimes wiser to let the Church's work wait awhile longer than to have it done by some one whose lack of spiritual character discounts the deeds which they do.

The outstanding fact about Deborah is that she had enough faith, not only to keep her busy at the things which needed to be done, but she had sufficient faith to inspire others also. The most valuable faith in the world is contagious faith. And I am persuaded that contagious faith differs from faith which might be called individual and personal only in the matter of degree. You may believe in a cause sufficiently to work for it yourself, but if you believe in it deeply enough to put your whole soul into it, others will be inspired to an exercise of faith.

Deborah not only had sufficient faith to inspire others, but she also had the wisdom to share responsibility. There are plenty of good women who are working themselves to death for their families, carrying their own and the responsibilities of others. And I am persuaded that the same thing is being done in the Church. The fine work that is being done for the kingdom by women is being done by a comparatively small group of the women who make up the membership of the Church. Woman has not come into the fullness and crowning glory of her service until she has set others to work.

Some one will doubtless ask, how is the task of getting others to work going to be accomplished? It seems to me that the answer is peculiarly a woman's secret. Nobody ever saw a good and wise mother who did not have some mysterious ability to get her children to do things that they were not especially anxious to do. And not even the child was able to tell just how the mother accomplished the desired end. Every husband of a good wife knows perfectly well that he does scores of things in the course of a year; things that, for the life of him, he cannot see the desirability of doing, but which he does because his wife knows that they ought to be done. Nor is this mysterious power of woman exercised exclusively over the opposite sex. In every community there is some woman or group of women who plan for the community, and other women work for the furtherance of their plans.

It is to the everlasting credit of Deborah that she not only was able to get accomplished the things which urgently needed to be done, but she also made it possible for a man to develop the possibilities that were within him and placed his name among the immortals. If the women of the Church who are working diligently for the enterprises of the kingdom will bring their sisters to share in their interest, enthusiasm, and activity, they will have rendered to womankind the finest service of this century. S. C. H.

ATTENDANCE.

One of the great factors in producing desired results is attendance. Nothing hinders the work of a school and retards the progress of students like poor attendance. Repeated absence means loss of place in the class, if not in the school. The factory requires regular attendance. Much of modern manufacture is so connected that individual workers fill a single place, as a link in a chain, and to be absent means stopping the mill. The same is true in music; all the parts must be rendered or the music is not complete. In the conduct of a train, the engineer and conductor must both be present. Neither can do the other's part. Down the line in a big lumber plant, each man must be in his place to make the mill go. In a store, the salesmen must be in place or lose their job. When one fails to attend in a store, mill, train, shop, school, post-office, or any office, the vacancy means loss of position and loss of pay.

The Church is a big business, and attendance is essential to success. There is no greater weakness in a local Church than the non-attendance of its members; and there is no greater asset in a local Church than the regular attendance of its members. If members would attend regularly, the Sunday School, the prayer meeting, and the regular services of the preaching hours, finances would be settled, spirituality would bear fruit, friendship would prevail, souls would be converted, and the pulpit would utter a new message with power. There is little response from empty pews, either to the pulpit or the choir. Regular attendance not only increases the spiritual character of the individual, but the worship of the congregation and the songs of praise. "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching" (Heb. 10:25). The individual can help by reminding others of the time when all ought to come together for worship. It is important to pay, but it is equally important to attend. If all the members of the Church would attend regularly, outsiders would go to Church, too. As long as the members leave the Church after Sunday School closes, nonmembers will not remain for the Church services. As long as Church members hang around cold-drink counters on Sunday, outsiders will not go to Church; but there are enough members of the Church, if they would all attend, to influence the majority of the community to attend Church. That would mean interest, love for the Church, new converts, increase in membership and greater enjoyment for all. Many people go into the moving-picture shows because they see others going in. If a few people on the street look up into the heavens, everybody that comes along will look up, too. You go to Church every Sunday, and somebody will go because you do. W. W. S.

Dean Thomas Clarke, of the University of Illinois, says: "There is less rowdyism, drunkenness, and shiftlessness in the students of today than in any other college generation with which I have been connected."

You are more likely to fail in your career from acquiring the habit of drinking liquor than from any of the other temptations likely to assail you. I have known of but few exceptions to the rule. —Andrew Carnegie.

CHAPLAIN ROUNTREE IN EUROPE.

Enroute from Cherbourg, France, to Kiel, Germany, July 3, 1930.

Dear SUN Readers:

There is something attractive, if not to say fascinating, in writing aboard ship in a foreign country far away from our home. But the most of our literary tourists are doing it, and being the vogue, it appears not to be out of order here. There remains the fact, however, that tourists are so busy when they are ashore, there is no time at all for writing elsewhere. When sightseeing, there is no time, night or day, for anything else. One does not even get the time to sleep. Time goes on and the tour goes on, and when the last word has been said, I suppose it will be after we have returned to the States and have settled down to the usual routine of duties there.

We have just concluded our tour through France, including Paris, and I wish I had space to tell you about everything. In addition to the things of historical interest, perhaps you would like to know some of the social customs of the French people, about the American girl whose marriage to a count turned out badly, or about the French girls whose marriage to a soldier did not materialize and now she's a grass widow in Amiens or somewhere else. But we will have to leave all those details to the future, and then let them be what they may.

So far, our voyage has been delightful. We could not ask for better weather across the sea. The fifteen days taken in transit was packed full of duties, the training of midshipmen, and all hands engaged in making seamanship what it should be. Our visit to Cherbourg and Paris was all we could ask for. It has been a wonderful voyage and packed full of thrilling experiences. We will give you here just a little glimpse of Paris.

Paris is just about all it is cracked up to be in every detail. It is a city of forty miles square, with a population of 2,871,429, and is said to be the gayest metropolis of Europe, the capital of the world of pleasure, fashion and elegance. Its unique charm and distinction are universally recognized. It effectively typifies the pre-eminence of the French nation in architecture and the fine arts. No other city in the world affords such a variety and abundance of attraction, or such a range of pleasure. It is an ancient city with the remains of the medieval days, and at the same time it is the most beautiful and luxurious of modern capitals.

The avenues, public gardens and parks of Paris are magnificently planned and sumptuously adorned with the triumphal glory of flowers, shrubbery and trees and punctuated elegantly with arches and statuary. Among its Churches are numbered some of the most beautiful in Europe; such as Notre Dame, The Madeleine, and the exquisite Sainte Chapelle. Many of its public buildings are world-famed and are objects of universal interest. At the Hotel des Invalides, now the home for war veterans, is the impressive tomb of Napoleon and the million-dollar cathedral where King Louis XIV worshiped alone.

At Fort Valerian, on Mt. Valerian, is the highest-powered searchlight in the world—100,000,000. This was the light used to guide Lindbergh to Le Bourget Field when he made his flight across the Atlantic.

At the old Church at Raiel is the tomb of Josephine, the first wife of Napoleon. This is the wife whom, for political reasons, he had to divorce. Nevertheless, he loved her to her death and lavished much upon her during her lifetime. There is nothing else particular about this Church except its contribution in manhood to the World War. There is a monument erected there which says, "Four hundred and eighty men from this Church paid the supreme sacrifice in the World War." At this point we were reminded that France gave more than 50 per cent of her manhood between the ages of twenty and forty who never came back.

Mal Maison (Home of the Sick) was Napoleon's favorite palace. It is now a museum of Napoleonic relics. Among the most interesting things are his campaign camping outfits and a specially constructed carriage which he used as a kind of Pullman affair while traveling. In this he could sleep and rest. The lawns around this Maison are all set with designs of rose-beds and these have become so famous during the ages that they have given rise to the expression, "Like the roses of Mal Maison."

Versailles, a city about twenty miles' distance from Paris, is well known to the people of the United States as the place of signing the peace treaty after the World War. The chatteau here is one of the most gorgeous palaces of the world, reflecting the glory of Louis XIV. It was begun by Louis XIII and was not finished until well in the sixteenth century. There are one hundred and ninety-six different kinds of marble used in its structure. It shows the signs of age and still bears the battle-marks of revolutions. It is now a museum to the glories of France. The peace-room, where the peace pact was signed, was once the war room. It is now converted into the peace room as a symbol of the transformation from war to peace.

Notre Dame, in the city of Paris, is rich with contemplations. The glass in the windows is of the thirteenth century. Their quality has never been duplicated. This was demonstrated to us by the shining sunlight through reparations, where pieces had been destroyed. It was in this Church that Napoleon was crowned. And it is here, we were told, there is kept under lock and key a piece of the cross of Jesus Christ, including the nails that were used. Being near the closing time, when we were there, was given as the reason for not being able to see it. The faithful believe it to be genuine.

As we passed through the streets, damages done by the bombing and by projectiles from the Big Bertha behind the German lines, were pointed out to us. None of these stories were hard to believe when we understand that the Germans came within twenty-five miles of Paris.

The famous Pantheon contains fifty-four tombs of famous men of French history. It was with peculiar interest that we stood before the tomb of Voltaire, Miribeau, Jean Jaques, Victor Hugo, and Charlemagne.

We were surprised that the battlefields had so completely restored themselves from the ravages of the war that but few signs remained to tell the story. Those signs are such as the trenches and the damaged buildings here and there afford. Some buildings have never been restored; others show the signs of the repair. Perhaps scattered here and there are the implements of warfare, such as cooking utensils, old helmets, old blankets and shoes, tin cans, machine guns, etc. But even these are upon reservations now being cared for as memorials to the great sacrifices that were made and the victories won. Belleau Woods, the point of the fifteen-day decisive battle, is now the property of the United States as a national memorial. This is a plot of one-half mile square. The temporary trenches are there and many of the above-mentioned equipment scattered around. The cemeteries are beautiful and are not only being guarded well, but are being improved all the time. As we con-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Three things control America at the present time: education, business, and pleasure. Education is cardinal in preparation for service, but it may be overdone and reduce real service. It may supersede the essential thing that it porposes to help. That is especially true in what is called "religious education"; or more properly expressed, "Christian education." The first step in preparation for "Christian education" is regeneration, or the new birth. The intellectual school cannot educate boys and girls till they have been born and had some experience in human living. It is equally important to become children of God by the new birth as an experience for Christian education. In other words, Christian education is the education of Christians, and not the making of Christians. The intellectual world is the most dangerous world for spiritual beings made in the image of God. Ignorance has never been the menace to society that intellectual unbelief, in its expressed doubts, has wrought in the minds of men. It is easier to win the ignorant to Jesus Christ than the intellectual atheist. Ignorance does not write books, but intellectuals do. What the Church needs is simple gospel preaching, a great spiritual revival and then a protracted session of Christian education. "Ye must be born again," and then, "Learn of me." Christian education is the training of Christians, and not the making of Christians. Schools exert great power over society, and officials and teachers ought to be Christians.

Business is the big word in America, and it touches society at every point. Politicians, and even statesmen, place the major emphasis on business prosperity. The word "business" includes all occupations and all material interests from the tilling of the soil to the steel plant and the operation of the railroad. More is said in these days about the unemployed than the unconverted. If more men had spiritual religion, fewer men would be without work. If all men had the spirit of Christ, that spirit would co-operate between employer and employee. Hard times is the result of false lives. If people were better, business would be better. The nations where people are best, business is best.

Pleasure is provided for and sought on a larger scale than ever before in the history of mankind. Moving pictures and resorts tell the story of pleasure provisions and pleasure seekers. The poor seek doubtful pleasures as well as the rich. Moses set a good example. He "refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season" (Heb. 11: 25). That passage admits that there are pleasures in sin, but only for a season. Real religious life is satisfactory and permanent. The Egyptian palace furnished pleasures beyond modern life, but Moses left it for true service for his people; and God and the people rewarded him for his wise choice; and his choice is our example.

ELON LETTER.

The Summer School of Leadership Training, under the direction of the Board of Christian Education of the Southeast Convention of Christian and Congregational Churches, met at Elon College July 26th to August 2nd. Forty-five persons, including faculty members and administrative officers, registered, and twenty-four of these received credit for work satisfactorily completed.

From the standpoint of numbers, the school disappointed its friends; but from the standpoint of efficiency and spirit, it was a pronounced success. So many religious summer schools this season have been disappointing in attendance. It is so easy to curtail expenses for religious improvement in times of depression. One Conference at Blue Ridge, N. C., it is said, had fourteen faculty members and twenty-five boys, or vice versa, I forget which; but in any case the relationship was out of proportion. The same is true of our Elon Summer School, where a faculty and administrative group of seventeen persons had been provided, on the basic expectation of at least one hundred registrants. These times of depression come periodically, but, as I have said, except for attendance, the summer school was a splendid success. Dean F. C. Lester and Registrar Miss Jewel Truitt certainly deserve hearty thanks and appreciation for their services.

Only credit courses were offered this year; five in number, as follows: "Young People's Materials and Methods," by Miss Pattie Coghill, 7 credits; "Primary Materials and Methods," by Miss Clair Gill, 4 credits; "The Message of the Christian Religion," by W. A. Harper, 5 credits; "The Principles of Teaching," by Rev. G. N. Edwards, 7 credits; "Missionary Education in the Church," by Miss Priscilla Chase, 1 credit—totals, 5 instructors and 24 credits.

Since only four students other than faculty members and administrative officers failed to receive credit, it is evident that the Summer School was really a school. The work, too, in the several groups was of a high order.

In addition to the credit courses, there were a series of lectures on Spanish Protestant missions by Rev. Wayne H. Bowers, of the American Board; a series of evening lectures, or special programs, by several qualified persons; counseling groups for young men and women each afternoon; vesper service each evening by Rev. W. T. Scott; two sermons on Sunday, with a Sunday afternoon organ recital; recreation and social opportunities; a play hour at night—all of which combine to make a week spent in the Summer School here rich in personal enjoyment and spiritual uplift.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

There is so much learning of all sorts in the world today that there is a constant temptation to try to know a little about everything. The effort to accomplish that usually results in not knowing very much about anything. The task of the educator is to find the means of grounding his pupil firmly in first principles, and then of inspiring him to spend not only his school years, but his whole life, in educating himself.

A democracy is effective only in proportion to the number of its citizens who have been trained to master themselves, both as individuals and groups. The chief aim of a liberal education is to gain the power to understand and interpret the minds of men.

The real difference among men is between those who are prepared to give more than they get and those who want to get more than they give. We need statesmen of industry instead of captains of industry. These men must be prepared to take a long view ahead. They cannot decide questions merely on the basis of immediate advantage because their company is going to be in business long after they are dead.

Honesty is not now merely the best policy; it is the only policy. More and more we encounter men of the highest ability who regard business not as a means to acquire personal wealth, but as a fascinating profession and an opportunity for accomplishment. They do not seek more money from it than enough to give them comfortably only those things worth having that money can buy—freedom from financial worry, security for their families, books, art, and travel. But they do want an outlet for their energies, exercise for their brains, and, above all, they genuinely want to be useful.

The true secret of achievement in life lies in the achievement in scholarship. We talk much about education and know but little. What we need in this country is a wide diversity in educational experimentation. We should not seek to provide our students with ready-made solutions for current questions, but to make them resourceful in themselves by equipping them with the capacity to solve problems yet unknown, whose nature cannot now be conjectured.

We are driven to the conviction that a great part of our education must rest on the cultivation of the imagination. That means the stimulation, the upbuilding, the training of the mind. The modern student demands far more variety and a greater width of interest than his predecessor, and is more imaginative. By dividing his interests, it is true, he does not reach that level of knowledge in any particular study attained by his predecessors, who concentrated on a narrower field of work. The present generation has a far greater interest, for example, in art, drama, and musical appreciation, which is reflected in the curricula of our public schools, and the life of educational institutions throughout the country. These new interests were, no doubt, the latent possession of his predecessor in the nineties, but they were allowed to remain undeveloped, and no appeal was made to them.

This important movement shows itself in the fact that there are many more types of advanced education to be found now than was ever the case before. The general principle of any large institution today is that the student of average mental ability and development has a choice of between seven and eight different kinds of special study, all recognized, equipped and accredited; whereas, forty years ago he would have been lucky to have had even two.

We speak too often about giving our boys and girls an education. It is a debt due them, and not a gift.

Wadley, Ala. S. L. Beougher.

As we have said before, we repeat now, that, in our opinion, nothing in American civilization has been so instrumental in tearing down and utterly destroying Christian ideals and standards as has been the moving picture as it exists today. If this seems an extravagant statement, weigh it well. Think it over. Name any institution in the country that has been so hurtful to the ideals of marriage, the sanctity of the home, the purity and modesty of young womanhood, the religion of the Church. The old saloon, in its worst days, was the nearest approach to such, but it lived largely upon mature men, while the movie has its tenacious and diabolical grip on multiplied millions of young people, and upon uncounted thousands of mothers who have become veritable slaves to the screen. It is the world's greatest setter-forth of ideals—such ideals as they are—to young people. —Alabama Christian Advocate.

BUILDING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

By Rev. Robert Lee House.

I have selected for discussion four factors which I consider essential to an ideal Sunday School—education, evangelism, encouragement and enthusiasm. There are others, but let us consider these four today. Now, I am perfectly willing to admit that ancient Gaul was divided into three parts, and I realize that from time immemorial it has been orthodox to divide a speech into three parts; but since we are now living in a highly civilized age—an age in which the streams of education and enlightenment have permeated our society—perhaps it might not be considered rank heresy or pert audacity to slightly complicate our time-worn mathematical formula by letting X equal 4, rather than 3. We are familiar with the three R's of the common school. These might be called the four E's of Sunday School.

1. Education. A few weeks ago, as I happened to be glancing through the News and Observer, I noticed a column headed, "Janitors' Summer School." I first though it was a joke. Whoever heard of a janitor going to school? But here the unbelievable was happening. A college professor was to teach janitors how to be better janitors.

Why is it that our Sunday School teachers are not better trained?

(1) Is it that there is no room for improvement? Surely not! Why, we have almost all to gain and very little to lose.

(2) Is it not desirable that they should be trained? Some do not think so. Now, if it were to come to a choice between religion and education, of course I would choose religion. But that is not necessary. It is possible for us to have religion interwoven with education, so that the one may supplement the other. And religion needs education, just as education needs religion. If trained people are needed to operate the material things of life, how necessary it is that those who administer the eternal verities of life and minister to things spiritual and eternal should be equipped with all that education can offer.

To be sure, moral and spiritual life is a gift of God, but, like many other gifts, it is offered conditionally, and is bestowed only when the conditions are fulfilled. It rains upon the just and the unjust. But God gives increase of spiritual life and efficiency in His vineyard as He gives the increase of the harvest. And it is the business of the Sunday School, as far as it lies within its power, to see that those who are entrusted to her care are supplied with whatever is required for their full and harmonious development. It is for her own interest to do so, for the trained teacher offers an opportunity to enlarge the scope of the Church's influence. Therefore, it should be the duty of the pastor to encourage teacher-training. By calling into the work of Bible teaching a company of Christians variously gifted, a wider and deeper impression is made than could be produced by any one man. Through the personalities of trained teachers, the gospel comes with a wide variety of richness and persuasiveness, supplementing the work of the pulpit and teaching recesses in the community into which sermons could not travel

Men seem to have forgotten that Jesus was a teacher—the greatest that the world has ever seen. Some people talk as if the one and only purpose of the coming of Christ was that He might die on the cross, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God. The view seems to be held that the total work of redemption was accomplished on Calvary. "All the light of sacred story gathers round its head sublime." And I would not have it otherwise. But this need not blind us to the no less obvious fact, namely: that Jesus was the world's greatest Teacher of ethics. "In the cross of Christ I glory, towering over the wrecks of time"; but that does not lead me to discredit "Whatsoever things are true, . . . honest, . . . just, . . . pure, . . . lovely, and of good report." The death of Christ is supremely redemptive; but the teachings of Jesus are themselves of redemptive value. What would the death of Jesus on the cross have meant to the world without the teachings of Jesus? Christ had a purpose in life, and when He lived, He lived for it, and when He died, He died for it.

(3) But I believe that the answer to our first question is not that there is no room for improvement, or that it is undesirable to have trained teachers, but it is rather a result of two conditions.

(a) People are largely accustomed to having almost any one to teach the Sunday School; hence, the public conscience does not demand a trained Sunday School teacher. There is a sore need of awakening the public conscience in regard to the duty and opportunity of a Sunday School teacher. Then we will witness the dawning of a new day—a day in which people will not be so recklessly willing to assume the responsibility of teaching a Sunday School class without adequate preparation.

(b) An adequate system of teacher-training has not yet been devised. A great many teachers feel their lack of efficiency, but there is no system to render it possible for them to acquire such preparation. This is so lamentably true in our denomination! It is one of our crying needs, and so many having ears, hear not. Therefore, my friends, leaders in the Sunday School, I call upon you in the interest of the kingdom to rally to the support of the Convention and of the Board of Religious Education, and let us demand that the cause of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ be directed by those who conform to the ideal of Paul: "A man of God, furnished completely unto every good work" (2 Tim. 3:17).

2. Evangelism. Evangelism has come upon an evil day in certain sections; but it should be opposed only when it is carried on as an end within itself, rather than a means to an end. It should

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A DAILY PRAYER.

(August.)

Our Lord Christ, in whose fellowship there is happiness and holiness, turn us, Thy anxious followers, from sin unto Thine own pure righteousness. So keep us enfolded within the bosom of Thy companionship that Christian conscience and consciousness may be aroused against the evils that constantly assail and entrap many who have given Thee a habitation in their heart and yet are weak and wandering. Thou, only, O God, canst put away iniquity. Except Thy grace overcome, the iniquity that is in us is our utter undoing. Reveal ourselves to ourselves and give us this day a fresh sense of Thy forgiveness. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

THE INDIAN PROBLEM.

The position of English missionaries in India during the present disorders is one of the utmost delicacy and difficulty. That of American missionaries is affected by the fact that some of them have been required in advance to sign an agreement not to participate in political activities; but such an agreement cannot free them from responsibilities for the placement of their sympathies on issues which are moral rather than political. A Lahore paper prints a statement signed by a group of English missionaries engaged in educational work. While disapproving of the campaign of civil disobedience at this time, and recognizing that a government that is attacked must either defend itself or abdicate, they assert their sympathy with the Indian people in their passionate desire for freedom. "We should wish that claim (to freedom) to be clearly and authoritatively recognized, as has not been done hitherto, and we believe that one act would go far to restore mutual trust. We would like to see the government putting aside all pride, enter upon a very bold policy of reconciliation, based on the explicit recognition of the right of India to settle her own destiny. Nothing but a positive infusion of good will can end the mutually provocative clash of civil disobedience and repression."

The last sentence states a truth which is pertinent to this and every such deadlock. There has been enough resistance to the government to provoke repression, and there has been enough repression to provoke resentment and further resistance. This sort of "mutually provocative" tactics, if persisted in, can lead only to some ruinous conclusion, and the crushing of the revolt will be no permanent solution of the problem. There is positively no untangling such a snarl of reciprocal resentment except by "a positive infusion of good will," and that cannot come without some definite promises on the part of the government and a disposition to trust those promises on the part of the Indian people—Christian Century.

DAILY BIBLE SCHOOLS.

Daily vacation Bible schools present a unique opportunity for religious education among the children and youth of the Philippines. The daily vacation Bible school movement began in the islands about 1924, and since that time great progress has been made. Last vacation there were 338 schools, 686 teachers, and 12,665 pupils. We are proud of such a record, but, knowing that there are thousands of children yet unreached, we realize that we must push forward this vacation.

No opportunity can be realized, however, unless there is some responsibility. In order to respond to a great challenging task, one must be trained. March 12th to 15th, eighty-one workers from twenty-one different provinces attended the first national daily vacation Bible training school, which was held at Union Theological Seminary. The school was conducted under the auspices of the Philippine Council of Religious Education.

The first day of the training school was devoted to organization and administration, general methods of story-telling, teaching songs, memory work, prayer and games. The three succeeding days were spent in a study of the kindergarten, primary and junior departments, respectively.—Mrs. Allen R. Huber, Manila, in World Call.

MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR AUGUST.

By Mrs. W. M. Jay.

WOMEN'S SOCIETIES.

All aboard for the Woman's Missionary Society picnic! Fill your baskets with goodies and your hearts with love, and hie away to the lake, park, woods or vale for a real evening of fun and pleasure, seasoned with a spirit of good will. Such meetings mean much to the spiritual life of a society and to the members also. The theme for August is "Fellowship," and it should be a well-planned meeting and the spirit of fellowship should be carried out throughout the entire meeting. Whether you have a picnic or not, we suggest that you make it a meeting to which all the women of the Church are invited and have at least a part of the time devoted to acquaintance and sociability.

Theme: "Fellowship."

If I knew you and you knew me,
And each of us could plainly see
And with an inner light divine
The meaning of your heart and mine,
I'm sure we would differ less.
We'd clasp our hands in friendliness,
Our hearts would pleasantly agree,
If I knew you and you knew me.

Familiar hymns.
Our Lord's Prayer.
Business.
Devotional period: First Psalm repeated in unison.
Heart-to-heart message.
Current news.
Dialogue: "Every Grain of Corn Counts."
Mizpah.

For the opening of the program, sing just a verse or two of several familiar hymns. The dialogue, "Every Grain of Corn Counts" can be given out of doors as well as in the house, and can be made very interesting (extra copies can be had for 5 cents each).

Some preparations for the September meeting should be made in August. You will notice on your September program the item, "Letters to a Missionary." You make your own selection as to the missionary who is to receive your letter, and should this be done at the August meeting and also in this meeting, assign the writing of the letter to some member, so that the letter can be read at the September meeting and signed by all the members present; then immediately after the September meeting mail the letter to your missionary.

The theme for the September meeting is "Faithfulness." Has your society been faithful through the year? Do not neglect the roll call at this meeting, a testimony meeting with it would be good.

The exercise, "The Ghost," can be made very helpful as well as amusing if time is given to the preparation of it. (Send for extra copies, 3 cents each.)

The last heart-to-heart message for the year is from the President of our Woman's Board, Mrs. Howsare. Do you remember the challenge she gave us in the first message of the year? If you have kept the message on file you might refer to it again. I am sure that the message for this month will be helpful and give us courage to go forward.

(These suggestions are taken from the News Bulletin.)

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES.

Theme: "My Group and Its World Service."

Purpose: To formulate for the coming year a program of service.

1. Hymn: "Day is Dying in the West."
2. Hymn: "For the Beauty of the Earth."
3. Project report.
4. The question.
5. What other groups have done.
6. Our plans for the year.
7. Hymn: "He Leadeth Me."

Scripture: Psa. 90:1-3.
Friendship circle, sentence prayers.
A moment of silent prayer.
Taps.

Suggestions.

Poster: A group of young people; from them a line going out around a globe. Printed, "Help Plan Our World Service." Time, place and date. This meeting may be held out-of-doors.

3. Committee will call attention to the fact that only one more service will be held in this series.

Any one having material he wishes put into the record book should turn it in immediately.

4. Pass around a long piece of paper and pencil. Ask each person to write on this paper one thing which your group might do in its program of world service. Each person is to fold under his answer, so that the next person will not see it. Leader will read answers.

5. Assign incidents given in chapter 11 of Y. & W. O. to be told.

6. Missionary committee or executive committee should report its plans for the coming year, the congress goals, and how you intend to reach them.

WILLING WORKERS OR JUNIORS.

Theme: "Vacation Days."

Song: "This is My Father's World."

Follow suggestions of last month for call to worship, prayer, offering.

Plan for a picnic. If possible, invite some group of foreign children to this; use this as a period of encouraging friendship between the races. If there are no people of different races near at hand, think of some way to which we may send them a part of our good times. Examples: gathering such wild flowers as will press to use in scrapbook to which will be added pictures showing "The country we live in," or "The town we live in," or "The clothes we wear." These may be cut out of daily papers or magazines.

Close with flag salutes.

For Junior Leaders.
(By Miss Carrie Robison.)

If you are unable to have a picnic for August, the children will like to listen to the stories in "Jumping Beans" while they are making the scrapbooks. We are to have some work among the Spanish-speaking people in Arizona, and these stories will help get acquainted. I hope that there will be lots of fun making scrapbooks.

A number of gifts for the children's memorial of the merger have been received. The gifts have ranged from one dollar to five. Most of it, so far, has come from one conference whose conference superintendent wrote to the junior leaders. More societies will send in their gifts soon, and by the end of our year, September 30th, I am sure that we shall have money enough to translate a good book for the Japanese boys and girls.

It would be interesting to have your children tell of the books each one would like to have the Japanese children read, and why. Of course, Miss Bosanquet will decide which one of the books our money will pay for, she feels that they need next.

In your September meeting it would be well for you to make some plans for the study of the new books for next year's study. Possibly new programs for next year will be outlined by that time.

I wish you all a happy vacation, with lots of fun and some work.—News Bulletin.

CHAPLAIN ROUNTREE IN EUROPE.

template the memory of those who rest here, we are reminded of Kipling's words, "He alone is fit to live who does not fear to die."

The shops of Paris are very attractive. They are quite as elaborate as we know our own in New York; I mean, rather, "extensive," but they are not so elaborate in show. The show-windows are not so gorgeously decorated and lighted as New York, and her display is uniform and plain. The city itself bears the same characteristic. There are no flashing electric signs at night. The city is even almost dark compared with our own cities. The theaters and places of amusement, of course, lead the world, and these are magnificently lighted.

But, after all that is done and said, the greatest fascination of France is her people, especially in Paris. The streets are thronged day and night. There are but few simple traffic regulations. The first one getting there is the one who has the right of way. Being of conservative temperament, this reacts to a great advantage. Nobody dashes to get there first. All seem to drive with caution, and when arriving at corners or at junctions, the situation is under control. We were told that there are but few accidents. Along her beautiful boulevards and thoroughfares, the full tide of the incomparable life of Paris flows day and night—a marvelous living picture. Here and there and everywhere are the celebrated cafes, open at all hours. It is in front of these Paris spends its leisure and takes its recreation in public.

Of course, one could not see Paris without also seeing, in an honest way at least, something of its night life. As we do so, one would think that Paris frolics a lot and never sleeps. This is when it is at its gayest, and one can find any sort of amusement and pastime that he may desire. We are frank to tell you that we visited, in groups, some of her well-known cabarets, from the lowest underground to the highest, where the most fashionable people go. In some of these we engaged box seats and saw all that there was to see. We witnessed some of the most wonderfully attractive shows it has ever been our privilege to see. Everything was with order and decorum. Contrary to what is often said about these places, be it to the credit of the management, we saw nothing of which we were ashamed. On the other hand, there are places that are a disgrace and do disgrace those who frequent them, perchance they are capable of disgrace.

We heard one man give an account of his experience. He said that he came away from his rendezvous feeling that he had gathered stain to his soul. And he was a man who makes no pretensions to piety. After all, cannot these same things be said about any big city? It is to be said that the French people do not think of morals as we do. They take nudity, for instance, philosophically—just every-day, ordinary sort of thing—and they think that those who think of such things as immoral are narrow and prudish.

The custom of the people are simple, and yet elaborate. Time does not matter to them as it does to us. A dinner consists of nine or ten courses of the best-cooked foods, and may take two hours. They are a very kind and courteous people. Even the employees, when reporting at business in the morning, take the time to walk around and shake hands with all the others who have preceded them.

Cherbourg, though not very attractive, was a gay place. The city joined with the American officers and seamen in several functions. Our stay closed with a banquet given at the City Hall by the city of Cherbourg and the French maritime prefect in honor of the American officers. And while these were banqueting, a ball, reserved for the non-commissioned officers and bluejackets, by hundreds of French girls of Cherbourg, was in swing till late in the night. While dancing was in progress, the bands from the ships offered a splendid concert in the park close by. This was a very good farewell reception accorded us. We sailed away, hoping that we have made favorable impressions upon our host.

Elaborate arrangements have been made for the entertainment of the American officers and bluejackets during the stay at Kiel, Germany.

Very truly yours,

H. E. ROUNTREE.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson VII—August 17, 1930.

Saul—A Man of Great Possibilities Who Failed.

Golden Text: "Wherefore, let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall."—1 Cor. 10:12.

Lesson: 1 Sam. 9:15-17, 25-27; 10:1; 19:9-11; 31:1-4.

Time: 1102 to 1063 B. C.

Place: Samuel's house in Ramah. Assemblies at Mizpah and Gilgal. Saul's home at Gibean. The battle at Michmash. The witch of Endor's. The battle at Mt. Gilboa.

I. Saul's Opportunity. No young man ever had a more glorious opportunity than did Saul, and few have made more disastrous failures. The story opens in Samuel's old age. Samuel, despite his own goodness, was unable to train his children as his successors; so despairing of a successor to Samuel from his own family, the people asked him to appoint them a king, as had all the surrounding nations.

Samuel protested vigorously, but the people insisted, and finally Jehovah told his prophet to grant their request. The person selected by Jehovah, through Samuel, was Saul, the son of Kish, a Benjaminite. Saul had one qualification that appealed especially to the Israelites—his commanding statue, for he was taller by a head than any one else in the country. He had other traits still more royal, for he was trustworthy and vigorous. When first made king, he served well, and God's spirit was with him.

II. Saul's Disobedience. Saul soon came to the point, however, that he thought himself powerful enough to disregard God in his schemes. He refused to be guided by Samuel, and soon he was at war with the nations 'round about him. However, he was finally able to overcome most of his enemies, and went out against the Amelikites, whom Jehovah told him to destroy utterly. Yet he refused to destroy these people or their goods after they were defeated. The Amalekites were doomed when they cruelly sought to bar the way against the Israelites as they fled from Egyptian slavery. It was not Saul's mercy that caused him to spare their goods, but his greed. It was not mercy that saved their king, but that Saul might add to the impressiveness of his triumphal procession.

III. Saul's Failure and Death. From the time of his disobedience, Samuel saw Saul no more. Things went from bad to worse, and finally Saul went to enquire of the Witch of Endor. The witch was found, and a vision of Samuel obtained. This was granted him, even through the unlawful medium of a witch, that he might know the punishment that was to come on the morrow—the destruction of himself and his sons in the battle at Mt. Gilboa.

Under the title, "The Broader Outlook of the Lesson," Bishop Francis J. McConnell has this to say:

"The title of today's lesson is intended to convey the suggestion that Saul was rather markedly a failure in his attempt to serve as King of Israel. Such a suggestion in the title is entirely warranted by the facts of Saul's career, but I think it is not out of place to call attention to some good qualities in the tragic life which we are studying in today's lesson. I think there can be no doubt that Saul honestly aimed at making Israel a God-ruled land in those days before the increased nervous strain had upset his mental balance. It must be remembered that even biblical authors, writing after the event and with full knowledge of the way things worked out, could easily lay more stress on the faults of Saul than upon his excellences. At the outset, Saul was confronted by a terribly hard problem. The tribes of Israel were separated by a wedge of alien territory which cut the north and the south into two parts. It was hardly possible for an Israelite of the south to pass to Israelitish territory in the north without going through some land foreign to Israel. Saul made an honest effort to be king over these separated lands. By the very temper of his people he knew that he could not be a king like unto the kings of the nations 'round about. Israel was intended to be a theocracy. The king of Israel was to be merely the instrument through which the Divine will was to be revealed. As soon as Saul had been installed in the kingship he seems to have set himself earnestly to discover the will of God.

"The final break with Samuel came over Saul's not being obedient to what Samuel considered a divine command. Here again there is reason for larger charity toward Saul than is sometimes manifested. Samuel believed that it was the religious duty of Saul to execute Agag, a captured king. Saul drew back from such an execution. The reason for Samuel's apparent ferocity was his fear of tarnishing in any degree the purity of the religion of Israel by leniency toward Israel's enemies. It is easy enough, of course, to conclude that Saul's hesitancy was due to a desire to keep the captured booty and to preserve Agag's life for political reasons. It is not necessary to attribute to Saul a predominantly unworthy motive. Probably he shrank from the extreme rigor of Samuel. He might have killed Agag in hot blood in the moment of victory, but he could not do so in cold blood. In one sense, to be sure, Saul was disobedient. At the same time, he may have been obedient to kindly and humane influences.

"I have written thus to suggest that it is possible to think more kindly of Saul than we have done. Nevertheless, he failed. When he failed, he dropped back into the very practices which he would have forbidden and condemned in his own better days—as for example, his resort to witchcraft. Yet, even so, our minds go back to the nobler qualities of the man. He was given a commission more difficult than any ever put upon the shoulders of a king before his time. He was to be a king, and yet not to be a king. He was to give himself to all manner of detailed practical tasks and yet to be a leader of his people in their approach to God. In spite of his failures, he aimed to keep the idea of God uppermost in the minds of his followers. The Scripture writers unhesitatingly say that he failed through self-will. A tragic failure, Saul no doubt was; but his mistakes helped at least some of his followers to a triumph which Saul himself was doomed never to know."—Bishop F. J. McConnell.

By Miss Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, August 17, 1930.

Topic: "The Call of the Christ."

Prelude: "Jesus Calls Us," played softly.

Opening sentences:

We are so young! If we should choose today
To loiter on the self-road for a while,
What would it matter?
Could we hope to cure
The old ills of the world?
We, who are young?
This is our playtime, these our days of mirth!
(If Thou, O Christ, wouldst turn away Thine eyes!)

We are so young! We have a right to play!
And yet—above our willful murmuring
Thy voice, O Christ, sounds ever sweet and clear.
"I, too, was young! Oh, if you will not give
Your youth to me—then I have come again
Unto my own—and they receive me not."

Scripture: First boy, Matt. 4:18-22—The call of the four.

Hymn: First stanza, "Jesus Calls Us."

Scripture: First girl, Mark 10:17-22—The rich young ruler.

Hymn: Second stanza, "Jesus Calls Us."

Scripture: Second boy, Matt. 9:9-13—The call of Matthew.

Hymn: Third stanza, "Jesus Calls Us."

Scripture: Second girl, Matt. 8:8-22—I will follow Thee.

Hymn: Fourth stanza, "Jesus Calls Us."

Sentence prayers (by three persons):

1. For willingness to listen to the call of the Christ.

2. For understanding to interpret our life-call as disciples of Christ.

3. For readiness to follow Christ in every life-situation—at home, at school, at work, at play.

Solo: "Who Is On the Lord's Side?" or duet, "Give Me Thy Heart."

Poem:

"The Church seeks earnest men:
Men of vision, spirit led;
Men whose selfishness is dead;
Men to send the Master's word
Till the farthest soul has heard.

"The Christ is calling men,
Men to consecrate their all,
Heeding but the Saviour's call;
Men with faith in strength above,
Filled with patient, fearless love.

"God shares His work with men—
Work dispelling darkness drear,
Work to bring His kingdom near,
Work for men firm, valiant, true;
Noble work for men to do."

Four four-minute talks by members of the society:

1. "Training for Service in the Church."
2. "Giving to the Church."
3. "Speaking for the Church."
4. "Loyalty to the Church."

Offertory prayer: O God, our Father, and Jesus Christ, our Master, we bring these gifts as an acknowledgment of Thy mastery over our lives. As we bring our money, so help us to bring our lives unto loving obedience to Thy holy will and purpose for each one of us. Amen.

Hymn: "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee."

Closing prayer and Mizpah benediction.

This program was given at the Elon Summer School on Sunday evening, July 27th. Eighteen young people took their parts in a fine way on this program.

BUILDING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

be prohibited when it is merely a mechanical process, for under such conditions there is no depth of soul-surrender, there is no mighty conviction, there is no sense of sin and need of salvation.

But when we remember that "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever," and that "He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death and shall hide a multitude of sins," the evangelistic opportunity begins to fascinate us and we realize that there is no bigger business on earth. The great motive and purpose of evangelism was declared when the coming of Jesus was prophesied: "His name shall be called Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sins"—not only from the consequences of sin, but from sin itself. As long as sin is a reality, evangelism is a necessity. Oh, the reality of sin! A day in which thousands have never bowed to confess His name nor risen to call Him blessed. And not only is there sin round about us, but there is sin in our own lives. "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. And every evangelist has within his reach a remedy that can—

"Minister to a soul deceased.
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the heart,
And by some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the stuffed bosom of the perilous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart."

To feel that one has power like that within his reach is to make him mighty with a strength not his own and fill him with a wisdom which is like to that above.

And this leads me to say that the Sunday School is one of the most fruitful fields of evangelism. There will be found the most fertile ground for the evangelistic seed. It offers a splendid opportunity for the pastor to gain contacts with, and consequently the confidence of, the children. Some young people are good evangelists. And even though the objection be raised that they are not competent, we must admit that people learn by doing, and no one learns more quickly than a child. The best way to win the friendship of a young person is to get him to do something for you. "Young people can reach hearts which are closed to the preacher. They can speak with an accent which the preacher does not possess. No one has sufficient compass to his voice to reach all classes of people. There should be a varied appeal coming through the tongues of many consecrated teachers. The Sunday School is an evangelist, and the evangel ought to break into music on a multitude of tongues."—Chas. E. Jefferson.

3. Encouragement. It is interesting to study the psychology of a farmer. He walks out into the field one bright, sunny morning, and finds some of the little plants discouraged. Then he begins to wonder just what it will take to tickle the taste-bulbs of their enthusiasm. We see him go back to the barn and then reappear with a bag. He then begins to encourage the little plants by spreading some nitrate of soda. What happens? Why, each little plant begins to grow as if in competition with his next-door neighbor, and all the plants start on a great crusade for maturity.

How many Sunday School superintendents have been laboring these many years without a word of encouragement! How many Sunday School teachers are about to give up the fight because they feel that their work is a failure and no one appreciates it! How many young people there are trying to follow in the straight and narrow way and are hungering for a crumb off the table of encouragement!

It is not a good policy to encourage people, did some one say? Was it not the Master who said, "Well done, . . . thou hast been faithful," "Blessed art thou, Simon," "Thy faith hath made the whole," "Blessed are the poor in spirit," the "peacemaker," the "pure in heart," etc. There came a time in the life of Apostle Paul when it was necessary for Christ to say to him, "Be not afraid, . . . for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee" (Acts 18:9, 10).

Probably Christ is trying to encourage some one through you. I do not mean to say that we are to be mere John D. Rockefellers in the distribution of 10-cent "soft-soap" flattery, nor are we to go around whitewashing people indiscriminately. But I do mean to say that the workman is worthy of his hire. We are to follow the example of the Master, and, as wise master-builders, we are to be able to recognize and acknowledge constructive service. And let us remember that such service always has potential, as well as present or actual, value. You and I may help to determine whether this potential service becomes actual. To recognize a success is better than to call attention to a failure. To blow a trumpet over a victory is better tactics than to play a flute over a defeat. Fix your eyes on the best things. Trust the people, gvie them work, encourage them and be patient with them.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

SALVATION FOR THE RICH.

"How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God."—Matt. 19:23.

According to Matthew, it is with difficulty that a rich man shall enter into the kingdom of God. It is understood that this difficulty is not because he is rich, but that a rich man is sorely tempted to independence, to worldliness and to unbelief. He has a terrible pull on him to worldly-mindedness and self-righteousness. He fares so sumptuously and receives so many good things in his lifetime that a personal recognition of God slips away from him and faith, as a way of life, is not important. It is not even necessary to be rich in this world's goods to be this way. If one minds earthly things, things he is "it," and that salvation belongs to him, and to just decent people like him, he is a rich man's comrade, whether he has much of this world's goods or not. To be sure poverty and afflictions are not to be taken as the way of salvation, but these things help one to hearken to the word of God, and turn the heart away from the world. Lazarus did not go to heaven because of his sufferings, but because he believed in God and remained steadfast in his belief, and his rest was in the "bosom of the Father of the faithful."

We cannot enter into life unless we have believing hearts and endure the afflictions and sufferings of this world as Christians. All genuine Christians will be blessed, and their tears will be seed from which will spring eternal joys.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, give us earnestness in the concerns of our soul, notwithstanding our position in life and what we may happen to possess. Whatever our station or wealth, in all, help us to do good and to help those who need, that they may endure. Save us from unbelief and give us a blessed end. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE CONQUERING EXPERIENCE.

"As he is, so are we in this world."—1 John 4:17.

God is Love. How blessed are they who are that much like God—who love God and who love everybody? They are more blessed than those who have honor and riches. And that God loves us and bestows this love on us is our greatest pride.

We have been fashioned to receive this love and enjoy its bliss, and we have been given the power to distribute it to others. If there is any one whom we hate and with whom we would not like to fellowship in heaven, we can remember that the Lord has made us kindly affectioned toward them and inspired us to view them in the light of Jesus. For he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, bestow upon us this most glorious and blessed gift of thine—the noble, rich, beautiful, and pure life of love. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE LIGHT OF THE SANCTUARY.

"When I sought to know this, it was too painful for me, until I went into the sanctuary of God; then I understood."—Psa. 73:16, 17.

When the wicked defy God and challenge Christianity and still prosper and flourish, it is natural for the pious to be tempted to ask, "Is God righteous? Why doth the wicked prosper? Wherefore are they happy that deal treacherously?" It is hard to explain.

It is a fact, however, that events shape themselves in this world beyond life; beyond the visible things there is another world. In Christ we are children of that world in which we have our portion either in heaven or hell. But it is only in the sanctuary of God that we come to understand these things. The parable of the rich man teaches that the ungodly are set in slippery places; and if they continue in sin, they have their reward, and that reward will be according to their sowings in life.

Our lesson is, to let not the carnal mind control our feelings, but the Spirit; then the prosperity of the foolish will have no meaning to us.

Prayer.—Give us godly hearts, dear Father, that we may know Thy ways, and that we may not regard the wealth of this world, but Christian character as of supreme importance. For Jesus' sake we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

WHAT DOES IT MATTER?

"Happy is he whose hope is in the Lord."—Psa. 146:5.

We are seeing falsehood prosper. It takes the name of truth. It accuses the saints of being enemies to happiness. We are tempted to become bitter and become impatient about it.

But we are told that the visible things will pass away, and the invisible shall become the real. To live with the Lord means to be guided by His counsel, to be held by His hand, to be strengthened in His faith, and to be received in glory. Can we wish for anything better? If life is with God and our portion is heaven, what else matters?

Prayer.—Lord, let us ever remain with Thee. Keep us with Thy right hand, and be, Thou, our daily counsel and guide forever. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE HEAVENLY CALL.

"All things are now ready."—Luke 15:17.

This is the Lord's parable of the fullness of God's plans for us. Everything needful for our salvation is prepared. The Spirit keeps us supplied with an abundance of good things and invites us to help ourselves. Here is fellowship, holiness, love, liberty, comforts, joy and strength; here is the fountain of life; here is the house of the soul; here is the remedy for sin—it is all ready.

Let us learn wisdom and choose the good part always. Let us hear the call of God, repent of our sins, and give Him our hearts. The wise merchant sells the lesser pearl for the better one.

Prayer.—Lord, draw us to Thee and give us Thy blessings. Thou knowest how easily we are deceived. Give us wisdom and help us to obey Thy call. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren."—1 John 3:13.

Is there anything better that we can know? Death is the most dreaded evil. Life is the highest good. Death is terrible. Life is beautiful. Jesus said, "I come that ye might have life." And now we have it.

By "life," Jesus means that He would have us be of good cheer, enjoy life, be rich in deeds, and by this know that we are His children.

Should hate, or anger, or something else disturb us? In Christ we overcome with prayer and the word of God, and with deeds of kindness toward those we hate. By so doing, we have His promise to win them and we ourselves are reassured of the kingdom.

Prayer.—O Thou, Dear Lord, who art rich in love, give unto us Thy gift to love, too, and help us to practice it in our conduct. Above all, give us the assurance daily that we have passed from death unto life. Amen.

SUNDAY.

SAYING "AHA!"

"Because thou saidst, Aha against my sanctuary, when it was profaned . . . ; therefore, behold, I will deliver thee to the children of the East for a possession."—Ezek. 25:1-7.

It is easy to treat sacred things lightly. Jests are readily based on hymns. Prayers can be twisted so as to become subjects of mirth. Bible characters may be mocked at and Bible sentences parodied. After even the most exalted sermon there will be some to cry, "Go up, thou baldhead!" Every profanation of the sanctuary finds many to say, "Aha!"

Swearing has been called "the great American sin," but this joining in the mockery of religion is to be found in all lands, and may be called the essential weakness and wickedness of the age. It removes from life all its earnestness and it takes from our thought of heaven all its splendor. It converts the most majestic element of our human existence into a mountebanks show.

No Christian favors long faces and sourness of spirit; but there is a sane acknowledgment of spiritual majesty which is lacking in the feeling of today, which was powerful in the days of old, and which must be returned to our national consciousness before we can really be "strong in the Lord."

Prayer.—Almighty God, we bow before Thy glorious throne in profound humility. We know Thee to be the Ruler of the universe, the Lord of all life. We honor, praise, and worship Thee in holy reverence, world without end. Amen.

A prayer:

"Not more of light we ask, O God,
But eyes to see what is;
Not sweeter songs, but power to hear
The present melodies;
Not greater strength, but how to use
The power that we possess;
Not more of love, but skill to turn
A frown to a caress;
Not more of joy, but power to feel
Its kindling presence near
To give to others all we have
Of courage and of cheer.
Give us all fear to dominate,
All holy joys to know—
To be the friends we wish to be,
To speak the truth we know."

Not alone to know, but to act according to thy knowledge, is thy destination, proclaims the voice of my inmost soul. Not for indolent contemplation and study of thyself, nor for brooding over emotions of piety—no, for action was existence given thee; thy actions, and thy actions alone, determine thy worth.—Selected.

DRIFTING.

BY REV. J. W. FIX.

"Therefore, we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things that were heard, lest haply we drift away from them."—Heb. 2:1.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes once said, "The great thing in this world is not so much where we stand as in what direction we are moving. To reach the port of heaven, we must sail sometimes with the wind and sometimes against it; but we must always sail, and not drift." If you, my friends, were asked the chief danger known to men and women of the Church, what would be your answer? Would you answer lawlessness, indifference or selfishness? Perhaps all these dangers would be mentioned; but may I say that I am convinced that the Christian's greatest enemy is the danger of drifting away from the path of duty and righteousness. The writer of Hebrews was considering the deadly danger of drifting when he wrote the words contained in our text: "Therefore, we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things that were heard, lest haply we drift away from them."

There are many expressive figures in Bible, touching human life. In one place we are asked the question, "What is your life?" And the answers follow in the next sentence: "It is a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away." In another place life is represented as the grass that groweth up in the morning, but on the evening of the same day is cut down. Again life is compared to an eagle that hastens to its prey; but no where in the word of God do we find a truer picture of life today than that of a drifter. "We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things we have heard, lest haply we drift away from them." Because of the ease of drifting, we are warned in this text to beware lest easily and haply we go downstream. Indeed, there are dangers in life that lead all to drift, but there are helps from above that will enable any and all drifters to turn back and go upward. Let us first consider the fact that—

1. All of us may drift away from the word of God. There is not one of us so good but who might not be lured into the peril of drifting. The words of the text, therefore, sound a warning not only to the non-Christian, but the consecrated Church member as well. The Bible is filled with danger signals against the tempter's beckon. Listen to some of them: "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation." "Wherefore, let him that thinketh he standeth take heed, lest he fall." I am sure that the prodigal son who left his home and loved ones with his money, never dreamed that he would drift downward to the position of swineherder. It is most unlikely that Judas Iscariot ever thought he would drift down and down until he became a traitor. It is not likely that any of us here today ever dream of becoming a man or woman of degredation; and yet the forces of evil are so great today and Satan is so keenly alive to his mediums of evil that one never knows when he will start drifting. Even though the spirit be strong, the flesh is weakened by luring temptations, and therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things that were heard, lest we drift away from them." The flesh is unregenerated, and even though men may be born again, his flesh will remain unregenerated till he rise with Christ on the last day. The world about us offers worldly amusements that lure many a man to start drifting. The fact of Satan's existence in the world makes a triple alliance which we call the world, the flesh and the devil. All these beckon even the most devout Church member to depart from the works of righteousness, to come hither and have a good time, to be a good fellow and consider that one should eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow he might die. Hence, we are all exhorted in the words of Scripture to "Put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand the wiles of the devil."

There are many causes for this drifting into which so many of us fall. These reasons and causes lie all about us. If a Christian neglects the vital duties of life, he will most assuredly commence to drift. We are admonished to "forget not the assemblying of ourselves together." And to neglect this challenge to go to Church regularly and worshipfully is to start downstream toward destruction. Any Christian who neglects the vital subject and practice of Scripture reading and secret prayer, and he will start drifting away from God. The Christian life has its vital and its reasonable habits which are to be performed just as regularly as the physical life demands obedience to regular habits of eating, sleeping and working. Let the physical life of man be neglected—disregard habits that are essential—and the body will become the victim of bad health. In like manner, the Christian life in the same fashion shall be defeated and the essential habits are neglected. Drifting is most certain when a man turns from spiritual food to worldly desires.

Drifting is caused by various stimuli. Often because of business reverses which bring despair and want. Fate seems against many people for the time being, and they resort to dishonest methods rather than turn or draw more closely to God. Indeed, business men need His wisdom and help every day and every hour.

Sometimes sorrow comes into a life and causes a man or woman to drift away from God. Such individuals become embittered, and grow sour toward righteousness. They exclaim that it does not pay to try to be of good cheer, for soon life's sweetness is wiped out. Down, down the stream goes many a man who, in sorrow, seeks not God's sheltering wings, but worldly pleasures.

Most likely the greatest cause for drifting away from God is that people have hatred in their hearts one for the other. Wrong relationships between men, women and God bring about the saddest chapters in the world's experiences. There is no place in the human heart for hate if a man is to enter the kingdom of heaven here on earth. When hate enters the heart, man starts to drift. He loses his sense of perspective, his vision becomes blurred and his life is all poisoned. Life's collisions, frictions, competitions, etc., often turn human beings away from God. I know of two Church members who sit at the same table and eat from the same dishes, but will not and have not spoken for a long time. Not only are they members of a Church, but they are brothers. They became victims of a little misunderstanding between them, and it has been the means of a divided family—the men are drifting. Men and women of the Church, let us be too big and noble to ever let little things like that cause us to drift from the bigness of God's kingdom on earth and in heaven.

Let us be like Abraham of old, who came to Lot when the latter was quarreling over a trifling matter with Abraham's herdsman. He said, "Lot, there must be none of this. Let there be no strife between your herdsmen and mine, or between you and me. We are brethren, and you go your way and I will go mine. You take your pastures and I will take mine."

Christian men and women sometimes drift away from God because of some little secret sin, such as the evil of drug habit, the use of whiskey, the tendency to gamble and play unfair with their fellows. The Hebrew poet exclaims, "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me" (Psa. 66:18). So it is that if we regard the works of sin and iniquity, and if we follow the call of Satan, we shall most assuredly drift away from God. Indeed, there are thousands of currents that pull man downstream, and it is very easy to drift; so much so that many a person becomes the victim of drifting without knowing it. "Any old fish can drift along and dream, but it takes a live fish to swim against the stream."

It is indeed easy to do in Rome what the Romans do. For Christians to become victims of greed and selfishness, when the world round-about is in a similar state of mind requires very little effort on our part. But there is a serious danger that always accompanies the love of money. Jesus was conscious of this fact, and to that end relates a story in Luke's gospel in which he tells

Dear Friends:

It certainly is encouraging to have friends come to our rescue when we are in need. Mrs. H. W. Morse, Springfield, Ohio, sent to us a box of baby clothes; Friendly Bible Class, Norfolk, Va., 1 box of clothing and shoes; Mt. Auburn S. S. Class 4, Eastern N. C. Conference, 6 hats, 3 little suits for boys; Circle 3, Woman's Missionary Society, Burlington Church, 1 bunch and 1 dozen bananas, 1 basket fruit for children in hospital; Woman's Missionary Society, Union Christian Church, Alamance County, 26 towels, 1 quilt; Mrs. J. B. Stephens, Cary, N. C., R. 2, 3 dresses, 1 pair shoes; Mrs. C. M. Sawyer, Reidsville, N. C., 2 dresses; Ivor Christian Church, Ivor, Va., 3 qts. corn and tomatoes, 9 qts. peaches; Circle 4, Elon Church, 7 dresses; Mrs. Geo. Macon, Henderson, N. C., R. 1 (for their society), 1 box clothing for little girl; Nancy Branch, Garner, N. C., R 2, 1 yellow silk dress; Circle No. 4, First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., Mrs. Jas. P. Montgomery, teacher, 36 cakes soap.

The several circles of our Burlington Church make it a rule for one of the circles to visit the Orphanage each month and make us a contribution of something that will be helpful to us in the work. What if our good women all over the Southern Convention would do this—a wonderful inspiration it would be to us in this work.

When we are through with the undertaking, we will have had this summer about forty tonsil operations. The Kiwanis Club of Burlington learned of our many operations and the expense attached to it, and immediately mailed us a check for $100 to help us bear the expense. So kind, so thoughtful, and so fine in spirit!

Jesus said, "For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me." He also said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

The children here are His little ones. Have you visited them?

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

of a certain rich man whose land brought forth plentifully and the man thought within himself, saying, "What shall I do?" He had no room to bestow all his goods and decides to tear down his present barns and build larger ones—he was beginning to drift. He says to his soul, "Eat, drink and be merry." Wasn't that fine? No! The man's soul could not be fed on the corn which he might put in his granary or the hay in his barn lofts. Material good did not assure this man a life of peace; rather, he allowed his wealth to start him drifting away from God. The unseen hand and voice spoke to Him, saying, "Thou fool, this night shall thy life be required of thee, and then whose shall those things which thou hast provided be." So it is that he who layeth up treasures for himself but is not rich toward God."

2. We may drift from God and be unconscious that we are drifting. Many a Christian has drifted away from God and is unconscious of the seriousness of the fact. The story of Sampson is the personal experience of many a man and woman today. The tragedy of this man's life was that his strength departed from him and Samson wist not that his strength had gone until he went out to grapple with a great task, and then discovered he that he had no power with which to do his work, for he was utterly paralyzed. Old Jacob had gray hairs upon his head, but he did not know his head was gray. A man can drift way down the stream without being conscious of the fact. He may be right at the top of the waterfalls and on the verge of going over the rapids, and not know of his nearness to the dangerous precipice.

On one occasion, Admiral Peary, the Arctic explorer, supposed he was traveling toward the north pole at the rate of ten miles a day. He found, however, that the ice floe on which he was moving was drifting toward the equator at the rate of twelve miles a day; therefore, Peary was really going backward at the rate of two miles a day. He would not have discovered this fact had he not looked skyward to get his bearings. In this life we drift so easily away from God without even knowing that we are drifting. We need to look upward toward the face of God and ever go forward with Jesus, our Captain; yea, the Author and Finisher of our faith.

As little children play upon the seashore, they let sand slip through their fingers, without giving earnest heed to it. O man and woman, let us one and all give the more earnest heed to the things we have heard, lest haply we drift away from them. If there is something wrong in your life and you are drifting from God, I beseech you, in the name of one who at all times is ready and willing to help you, to turn to Him.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

CHRISTIANITY, A WAY OF LIFE AND BELIEF. By John W. Bailey. The Judson Press; pp. 130; $1.00.

The central fact of Christianity is Jesus. Around Him gathers all that is distinctive in the Christian religion. His conception of God, his conception of man, his conception of the world, his conception of destiny, his cross, the emphasis of his teaching, the principles of his gospel, and the application of these ideals to the family, to wealth, to internationalism—such is the scope of this book. It deserves its place as an accredited text for course No. 5 in the Standard Leadership Training Course.

A HISTORY OF THE MODERN CHURCH. By J. W. C. Wand. Thos. Y. Crowell Co.; $3.00; pp. 314.

The dean of Oriel College, Oxford, treats Church history from the fall of Constantinople, in 1453, for the Eastern Church, and from the Protestant Reformation for the Western Church. A chronology of events from 1509 to 1929 adds greatly to the value of the volume. The great political events which paralleled the religious changes and were part and parcel of them are also traced. In so limited a space, the wonder is that the author has comprehended so much and done it so well. The desire for reunion, the zeal for missions, and the desire to be free from interference on the part of the State are delineated as the chief characteristics of the Church in our time, and is likely to exercise great influence over the future of the Christian movement.

ADVENTURING IN PEACE AND GOOD WILL. By Annie Sills Brooks. Pilgrim Press; $1; pp. 93.

Here is a ten-day course for a junior vacation school that was stenographically reported. Peace and good will are adventures, practical adventures in living, in our homes, schools and other group relations. Worship services, songs, stories, handwork—all are made to yield assistance to what must have been a successful enterprise, and if properly employed should succeed elsewhere. Worth anybody's time and attention.

CHURCH SCHOOL ORGANIZATION AND ADMINISTRATION. By Leon C. Palmer. Morehouse Publishing Co.; $2.00; pp. 205.

This book proposes to do for Church school administrators in the Episcopal Church what teacher-training books have done for teachers during the past two decades. It is admirably done and will be useful as a guide to administrators of religious education in any denomination. The procedures recommended have been tested in experience, and that gives them a validity they otherwise might lack.

PSYCHOLOGY AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE. By W. Fearon Holliday. Richard R. Smith, Inc.; $3.00; pp. 320.

Many pastors are finding it necessary to counsel troubled souls and are learning that they cannot do this highly needful work without a first-rate knowledge of psychology. Here is the book they will find giving them the insight and information they require for success. Dr. Holliday is professor of theology and philosophy of religion at the Sally Oaks College, Birmingham. He speaks with the reasoned authority of the true scholar.

THE PUPIL IN THE CHURCH SCHOOL. By Antoinnette A. Lamoreaux. The Judson Press; $1.00; pp. 138.

This book is an approved text for credit in course No. 1 of the Standard Training Course. First printed in 1927, it is now revised and enlarged. The author has long been recognized as a specialist in child psychology. The mastery of the material of this book will put the truth in possession of the fundmaentals of the formation of Christian personality, the goal of all Church school effort.

NOTICE.

Since checking up on reports, I find that several Sunday Schools sent a fine delegation to the recent Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, held at Liberty Vance, but failed to turn in their report. Now, perhaps your delegates forgot to give me their report, or your secretary failed to let the delegates have their report. Any way, I failed to receive it. I am asking that you send me your report at once, as I am asked to turn in the minutes by August 20th. Please bear in mind that if I do not have your report your Church will go up as blank and your delegates cannot count for you. Now, I am hoping that all schools will send in a report of work being done.

Thanks. MRS. R. J. NEWTON,
Secretary.

OBITUARIES.

HARRELL.

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst our beloved sister, Miss Gussie Harrell, whose death occurred July 15, 1930; therefore, be in resolved:

1. That in her death, our Church has lost a faithful and zealous member, an efficient and loyal worker, and our Sunday School a consecrated teacher.

2. That recognizing her valuable services to her Church and her unfaltering faith in Christ, her love and interest in her Christian work, we heartily commend her example as being worthy of imitation.

3. That while we believe our loss is her gain, and heaven is richer because of her presence there, we recommend her loved ones to the gracious care of our Heavenly Father.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and one recorded upon the minutes of the Church register.

WICKER.

Wm. Staley Wicker, aged 4½ years, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Staley Wicker, of Atlanta, Ga., died in that city on July 13, 1930, and was buried at Elon College, N. C., on Thursday, July 17th, from the home of his grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Wicker.

"Sonny" was an attractive, happy child, the joy of the home, a delight to all who came in contact with his bright, sunny personality. He lingered 11 days, suffering from colitis, that dread summer enemy of childhood, and then he passed through the gates into God's eternal sunshine. The parents and relatives are sensitive of a great loss. Yet, as David said, the child cannot come to them, but they may go to him. Services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Dr. J. U. Newman.

BEQUEST FOR CONGREGATIONALISTS.—

Mrs. Jane Hamm, who died recently in Minneapolis, left the residue of her estate, estimated at over $20,000, to the Congregational Conference of Minnesota—one-half to aid weak Congregational Churches in the State and to increase the salaries of their ministers, and the other half to be added to the ministerial relief fund of the Conference. It would be a beautiful thing for some of our wealthy people to remember the Christian Conferences in a similar manner and perpetuate their good works for all time in promoting the kingdom of God.

VANDERBILT PLANS.—

Vanderbilt School of Religion just closed what is said to be the most successful year in its history. It has doubled both its faculty and student body within three years. The announcements for the ensuing year show that Guy W. Sarvis, who was for fifteen years dean of the college for liberal arts at Nanking University, China, will teach special courses on Oriental religion, with half the time devoted to the question of cultural contacts between the Orient and the Occident. It is also announced that Dr. John R. Mott will deliver the course of Cole lectures. Those who would prepare themselves for missionary work in the East will find a great opportunity at Vanderbilt for study.

BAPTIST PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS.—

At a recent session of the Southern Baptist Convention, the "precariousness of Christian education" was deplored "because of the great increase in the number of junior colleges under the public-school system." Dr. John Sampey, president of the theological seminary at Louisville, is reported as having advocated that the denomination set up schools similar to the Catholic parochial system, complete with religious education and "with a Bible on every desk." It seems that it would be better to conduct courses of Bible study in our Churches for the young people who take their secular education in the junior colleges under the public-school system. Much of our religious education given in the colleges to the few never filter down to the Churches for the many who need it.

PAGAN LOVE VIEW.—

At a midwest pastors' conference, conducted at a Presbyterian theological seminary, Dr. William Chalmers Covert, formerly a Chicagoan, took a fling at the pagan love view of some of our modern authors. He said that this "indecent literature" which "is flouting all that is sacred in the love of man and woman" is responsible in a large measure for the widespread moral laxity. Companionate marriage, he condemned as "belonging to the jungle," "a gross, sensual prescription for an evil its practice would intensify."

Many other evils in the social, educational and political spheres, he declared, boded ill for the future of America. He pleaded particularly for a spiritualizing of education. He might have added, with great emphasis, the need for spiritualizing of literature, or banning indecent books, papers, periodicals and other salacious or semi-salacious literature from the reading of young people.

OBERLIN COLLEGE ENLARGED.—

On July 10th, at Oberlin College, a brief service was held in the chapel in Council Hall, commemorating its sixty years of service. Prof. Walter G. Fiske spoke of the struggle to erect the building and of the six presidents of Oberlin and other distinguished men who had taught within its walls.

The first regular Congregational Council, meeting at Oberlin in 1871, had a part in laying the corner-stone, and from this the building received its name. At the conclusion of this brief service, Dean Graham turned the first spades of dirt for the group of new buildings whose erection will begin at once. The new buildings consist of chapel, administration and recitation building, and dormitories, with library, social rooms, etc., will form an artistic quadrangle. The group is designed by Case Gilbert, and is made possible by the recent gifts of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., of $400,000 and the James fund, which now amounts to about $200,000.

BRITAIN AND EGYPT.—

Britain is endeavoring to practice the policy of non-interference in Egypt, but only last week she has been compelled to interfere. In spite of the rioting in Alexandria having cost seventeen lives, in order to quell this uprising in Egypt and prevent further rebellion, Britain has dispatched warships to the scene of action. Egypt is attempting to establish constitutional government without being prepared for it. Practically, however, Egypt is free to handle domestic affairs as she wishes, so long as she does not interfere with Britain's control of the Suez Canal and the waters of the Nile. But an enraged minority of Moslems, called the Wafdists, has been very hostile to the rulership of King Fuad. They are undertaking to destroy the monarchial government and establish a republic under their own control. To promote that end, a program of civil disobedience, somewhat like that of Gandhi in India, has been threatened. Certainly any one familiar with the Near East can realize that conditions in Egypt are aflame with unrest and may be difficult to control should the uprising continue to become more acute. The conditions throughout the East are far from conciliatory, and the war cloud seems threatening in the near future.

FOUR TYPES OF CHURCH PROBLEMS.—

A recent religious survey of Chicago reveals four types of problems which are engaging the religious forces of this metropolitan city. And these are, first, a study of the religious life of the suburbs of the city, in order to assure an adequate and well-planned religious development in these rapidly growing sections. With the coming of the automobile, many of our cities are extending their area of population from the congested centers to suburban districts for better residential conditions; second, a study of Church life in the great inner city area—the area in transition from a retreating Protestantism, which urgently needs an adequate ministry to take care of increasing paganism and Catholicism; third, a study of the religious ministries to the newer groups entering the city—negroes, Mexicans and rural white Americans—the trend of the rural people is toward the cities in greater numbers; fourth, a study of the homeless-man area, where disorganization and demoralization reign supreme, and where "rescue" missions are almost the only form of religious ministry. What applies to Chicago will apply to other cities in a large measure, and should engage the careful attention of religious workers in these cities.

THE NEW SOUTH.—

Recently, the New South centered its interest on coal and iron. Now it is stressing interest in textiles, and the dawning interest in hydro-electric power, natural gas, chemical industries, rayon and paper will rapidly develop. Coal mining in eastern Kentucky and West Virginia is on ehe increase. In eastern Kentucky, two companies are investing a million dollars each this year in the coal industry. Union labor has been excluded. The cheapness of the labor from the mountain farms, the quality of the coal, the thickness of the veins, the fact that most of the mines are operated on lateral shafts, and the abundance of labor, all combine to create out of this district the greatest single bituminous coal-mining area in the United States. The development of the hydro-electric power is even greater in importance. The development of power production in the South for the past five years has almost doubled the ratio of increase for the whole country. They are producing some fourteen or fifteen million kilowat hours of electric power, of which more than eight million is hydro-electric. Water-power construction at this time involves a total expenditure of about $200,000,000. There are great possibilities in the South for specialists from our brilliant Southern population, and the industrial outlook for the South is greater than ever before.

NOTES-PERSONALS

If sifted, nine-tenths of the crime of England and Wales could be traced to drink.—Justice Alverstone, England.

Rev. M. F. Allen, of Newport News, will preach at the Richmond Church on next Sunday morning in the absence of the pastor, Dr. Ryan. Those who know Mr. Allen are counting upon an instructive and enjoyable service.

Dr. Atkinson, who was taken ill while in England and forced to return to the United States, reports that he feels greatly improved. For the first time in several weeks THE SUN is carrying an article from its Editor in Chief. We are glad that he is able to resume his writing, though unable to take up his work in its entirety.

Rev. Ray M. Busler, of Tampa, Florida, is supplying the People's Church, Dover, Del., for the month of August. The pastor, Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, is in Heidelberg, Germany, and writes that his health is very much improved. He expects to be home about the first of September, able to go on with his work with his usual vigor.

LYNCHBURG, VA.

The summer is most ended and revival meetings well past, and now is the time for Churches to be thinking about their pastor for the coming Conference year. This should be one of the most serious and well-arranged-for items confronting a Church. It is an admitted fact that upon this rests the future growth or decay of a Church. It means much to a Church to secure the services of the right man and have him favorably located. There is more to the kingdom work and there is more for the preacher to do than to preach. Our denomination has suffered untold losses in the past, especially in and among our rural Churches, for the lack of pastoral attention. Families have been neglected and lost to many a Church because no minister was near enough to give them the proper attention at the proper time. We need our ministers in our rural Churches to be so located that they can care for the sick and visit and administer to every civic as well as religious need. This would be largely solved if our Churches, at this season, when they are thinking of calling their pastor, would be governed by the action of the 1929 Conference, in session at Virgilina, Va., at which time the following groups were adopted: (1) Apple's Chapel, Hines Chapel, Monticello; (2) Belew Creek, Pleasant Ridge (G), Salem Chapel; (3) Berea, Bethlehem, Shallow Ford; (4) Bethel, Concord, Union; (5) Danville, Happy Home; (6) Haw River, Mt. Zion, Long's Chapel; (7) Hebron, Union (Va.), Liberty, Lebanon; (8) Pleasant Grove, Ingram; (9) Mt. Bethel, New Lebanon, Howard's Chapel, Kallem Grove, New Hope.

We, as a Church, must get the future growth of the denomination more at heart, both on the part of the Churches and ministry. It should not be a case of where can I preach, for the world is large and one can preach anywhere; but where can I best serve along with the preaching. The day is past when we need preachers to ride out and preach, but we need them to preach, then serve.

It was my pleasure this summer to work in the only field of this Conference that is so arranged that they have their pastor among them. That group is sticking together, and all, with one consent, declare it to be the solution to the rural Church problem.

Now, brethren, let us forget self and selfish motives, if such has been the case in the past, and do the thing in an organized and progressive way, advancing the kingdom for His sake.

BUILDING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

BY REV. ROBERT LEE HOUSE.

(Concluded from Last Week.)

What are some of the methods of encouragement? There is no better way than the private or individual method. This has the advantage of being definite and specific. It is more personal and, doubtless, more sincere than any other method. Nothing can take the place of an encouraging word from a sincere friend. A rising vote of thanks for the work of the superintendent, of the officers, and teachers of the Sunday School is not out of place. Promotion day is encouraging to the children. It is remarkable how hard children will work when they are recognized and given a part on the worship program.

And such procedure often effects the most unexpected results. The stupid person suddenly becomes bright; the mediocre person suddenly becomes a genius. One of the constant surprises in this world is the way in which the people from which we had expected little, surpass those from whom we had expected much. God seems to take delight in surprising us by choosing "the foolish things of the world to shame them that are wise, and the weak things of the world to put to shame the things that are strong, and the base things of the world and the things that are despised; yea, and the things that are not to bring to naught the things that are." "To unlock the vital energies of immortal souls and set them working in our human world is a work fit for a god." Let us dare to have faith in people. All of them are created in God's image; all of them heirs of immortality; all of them bought by the blood of Jesus. They are now sons of God, and it does not yet appear what they shall be. Dare to offer a word of encouragement!

4. Enthusiasm. There are some who say, "Beware of enthusiasm in the Sunday School." Now, it may not necessarily be a choice between enthusiasm on the one hand and stagnation on the other, but so often it works out that way; and between the two, I much prefer the former. Enthusiastic! Why not? If we are engaged in that cause which is of supreme import; if we have been commissioned to administer those truths which pertain to eternal life—why not be enthusiastic about it? Why not give of our best to the Master?

Now, how are we going to put enthusiasm into the Sunday School? By giving people something to do. People need employment. Not only do they need employment, but they need continuous employment. A child will do good work as long as you keep him busy. But give him some spare time and his work becomes half-hearted. Moreover, the hardest part of rolling a wheel is getting it started. The great task of Sunday School leaders is to plan systematic work for young people.

A challenge is one of the best means of producing enthusiasm in the Sunday School. We don't work at the peak of efficiency until we are challenged. Now there are many things to which we may challenge people, and a word of warning is needed, lest we bring reproach on the Sunday School by issuing the wrong kind of challenge. But listen to the challenge of the Master: "If ye love me, keep my commandments," "If ye love me, feed my lambs." Love comes as a challenge. Our love for the Sunday School should challenge us to be better members of the school and thus make it a better one. Our last year's record is a challenge for improvement. And we never know what we can do until we begin to labor under the impelling force of a great challenge. The watchword of John Wesley was "Expect and attempt great things for Christ."

Sunday Schools also need to try something new occasionally. This would not be true if they were perfect. But we must continually try new methods if progress is to be made. Of course, I realize, as you do, that the very instant something new is suggested, some one is going to reply very much as Peter did when he was given a vision of something new: "Not so, Lord, for I have never."

Yes, "As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be," . . . Amen. A professor of mine once called my attention to an illustration which I have, for some reason, not forgotten. David killed Goliath with his sling. This reminds us that we can work better with those tools and methods that are familiar to us. But it is also important to note that he never used a sling again. When once we admit that there is room for improvement in our Sunday School, we must also admit that the time has come for us to try out some new methods which, even though they are not familiar to us now, have the possibility of a greater efficiency.

And it is by no means impossible to be specific. The condition of your individual Sunday School will determine just what new methods of procedure should have attention. If your Sunday School does not have good singing, there is a splendid opportunity to start something new. The same thing is true of the worship program in the Sunday School. If you have only one room in the Church building, new rooms would be a splendid addition. It might be well to provide some form of training for the teachers and superintendent. The necessity for something new is in direct proportion to the lack of efficiency in your Sunday School.

There is the joke told of the negro convict who, when the group had been instructed to be on their backs and, with feet up, act as if peddling a bicycle, failed to act according to instructions. Whereupon, the warden went over to him, shook him, and said, "Look here, negro! Don't you understand that you're supposed to be peddling a bicycle?" "Yes-sar, Boss," replied the negro; "but I's coastin'."

Friends, we might as well face the facts. Some of our Sunday Schools have been coasting for fifty years. And the only way to put enthusiasm into them and keep them from coasting for the next half-century is to start something new.

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

MEANSVILLE CHURCH: This Church is engaged in revival meetings. Rev. Lawrence Stanley began the meeting on the 2nd of August. Mr. Stanley is the pastor and is doing a very fine piece of work in his Churches—Barnsville, Meansville, The Rock, and in Cochran. The people all love him as a preacher and a pastor.

THE STATE CONFERENCE: It has been proposed that we have a joint State meeting. The Congregational and Christian Churches are planning for this to be held with the Oak Grove Christian Church. This Church is out from LaGrange about five miles. The meeting is to be held on the first week in October. This arrangement will mean that the Congregational people will give up their annual meeting and meet with the Christian Church. The program committee is to meet in LaGrange on the 19th of August to arrange a suitable program.

MIDDLE GEORGIA ASSOCIATION.

The Middle Georgia District Association met with Rose Hill Christian Church, Columbus, Ga., August 1-3. On account of the general financial conditions, the attendance was small. The meeting and spirit was excellent.

Rev. J. F. Blackburn, of Atlanta, was with us, and he delivered some very fine addresses. Miss Annie Campbell, of Fort Valley, and Miss Dora Brackin, both field workers, were with us. They directed and spoke on the "Work of the Women in the Church, Including Missions."

Miss Susie Elder and Miss Dorothy Allen both gave us some valuable suggestions on the young people's work—Christian Endeavor and the Church school. Rev. Charles W. Smith, of Phenix City, Ala., was with us and took part in a number of the services.

Rev. Neil McQuarrie, the minister, preached on Sunday morning, closing up with the Communion service. Miss Campbell and Miss Brackin both took part in the morning worship. Following the Sunday School, Miss Allen spoke to the school about the daily vacation Bible work and the program of the coming weeks. The school and at the morning worship we had the largest attendance of the Association. The spirit and fellowship of the meeting was excellent. Rose Hill Church entertained the delegates in a very fine way.

Rose Hill Christian Church, Columbus, put on a daily vacation Bible school August 4-15. This immediately followed the District Association, and the attendance and interest was very fine. The school was directed by Miss Dorothy Allen and Miss Susie Elder. Miss Allen is a summer student with the Congregational Church. The interest and attendance in both the school and the Church are increasing.

NORTH GEORGIA ASSOCIATION.

The North Georgia Association of Congregational Churches was given a warm reception July 28-30 at Liberty Church, Bowman, Ga. The thermometer registered in the nineties throughout the entire session, but, despite the hot weather, the delegates voted a good time and a helpful meeting.

The opening session, on Monday night, saw a goodly portion of the delegates from the Churches present, and also a large audience of the people of the Church community. Dr. G. S. Butler, of Demorest, Ga., preached the opening sermon on the subject, "Fruit of the Spirit."

Tuesday was, of course, the big day of the meeting. A number of delegates who could attend only a portion of the Association were present during the day. At the business session in the morning, Rev. S. M. Penn was made moderator, Rev. C. L. Percy assistant, and Miss Ruth Lot was re-elected secretary-treasurer. After the appointment of a committee on nominations, with Rev. H. C. Eddleman as chairman, it was voted to proceed with the program.

A rousing address of welcome was given to the Association by Mr. Peter V. Rice, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Elberton, Ga., in which he complimented the Association upon having such a good program for education, which was the field of particular interest to him.

Following the address of welcome, Rev. J. F. Blackburn and Rev. C. L. Percy took up the discussion of problems of the North Georgia Association, with particular reference to improvement of our meetings and our apportionment. One of the practical suggestions that came out of this discussion was that Church members set apart the product of a portion of land or to raise some animal for this particular object. Closing the morning session was an address by Rev. S. M. Penn, our moderator, on the subject of "Jesus and Law Enforcement"—an up-to-date topic, well discussed.

The long morning session had prepared the delegates and others for the bountiful repast which was generously provided by the ladies of the community. It was surprising to see how much fried chicken, sandwiches and cake could disappear in a short time.

The afternoon program was under the direction of Miss Dora Braskin, field worker for the State of Georgia, ably assisted by Messrs. J. P. Mahaffy and A. G. Swartz, who discussed the work of our Sunday schools and young people's societies. This program was a real credit to the ability of Miss Brackin, who is just beginning her work as a full-time worker.

The afternoon program had been preceded by a business session, at which time reports were received from the Churches making up the North Georgia Association. Miss Brackin contributed greatly to the interest of these reports by posting a chart upon which all the various activities of the Churches were tabulated. Only two of the active Churches of the Association were without reports.

Following the supper hour, which came early, Miss Brackin led the young people and children in a series of games, which were heartily enjoyed. A brief rest was taken, and then they all took up the following of a short trail down into the woods in front of the Church to a spot where a vesper and candle-lighting service was conducted. One could not help being impressed with the real spirit of reverence evident among the young people as each took his or her part in this service.

The Tuesday night service was given over especially to the subject of education. Dean J. C. Rogers and Prof. A. G. Axtell, of Piedmont College, were the speakers, and, as was remarked by one of the delegates, "education of our children as explained by these speakers would seem to be a religious duty."

The final session of the meeting on Wednesday morning proved to be one of the busiest ones of the whole gathering. The committees on resolutions and temperance presented some resolutions of such importance that the Association ordered that copies be prepared and sent to every minister, to be read in each of his Churches. The committee on ministerial standing recommended that a license be granted to Mrs. L. B. Fountain, and that a committee on ministerial standing be appointed to report at the next meeting. This report was adopted and the committee continued.

The final addresses of the meeting, by Rev. J. F. Blackburn and Rev. G. L. Percy, were really a summing up of suggestions made during the meeting that might be carried on to the State meeting to be held in October and to the individual Churches in the Association. The success of this meeting made all the delegates look forward to another enjoyable program when the State meets with Oak Grove Church (Christian), LaGrange.

THE CHURCH AND WAR PREPARATIONS.

Speaking at the banquet held by the Congregational Council, meeting at Bournemouth, England, on July 4th, former Premier Lloyd George made the statement that the entire international atmosphere was poisoned by mistrust and suspicion, and called upon the Churches of the world to allay such feelings. He said that the peace of the world depended upon the co-operation and good will of Great Britain and the United States. He continued:

"It is vital in the interests of the human race that Britain and America should march side by side, solving the great problems that await us. Peace is by no means secure. In spite of treaties, man has not yet given up the idea of war. Preparations for war are going on in every country of the world. There are more men trained for war in Europe, Asia and America than before the great catastrophe of 1914."

Mr. Lloyd George asserted that, except for countries like Germany which were forced to reduce their armaments, Great Britain was the only one that had diminished its forces to a point where they were at least no greater than before the war.

"I speak from personal experience," Mr. Lloyd George continued, "when I say that, although I have gone to live in a quiet place in Surrey, I hear every day the rattle of machine guns in one camp, the hoarse roar of cannons in another, and, carried by the westerly breeze, I hear the boom of naval artillery from the direction of Portsmouth and the drone of airplanes. That is going on in every civilized land on earth. It is really time the Churches took this thing in hand. I do not know who else can do it.

"We have got covenants against war, we have got pacts, which we have all signed, that there shall be no more war, and we are spending more preparing for things that we have determined should never happen again. If a drunkard signed a pledge that he would take no more drinks, and you heard he was filling up his cellars with the choicest and most expensive wines and that he was occasionally taking a nip to taste them, you would know he was preparing for another spree. This is the case of armaments in the world. I do not believe in pledges signed in a full cellar.

"The international situation is bad. We are building up barriers against each other, putting up fences against each other and restrictions against each other. We are blockading each other and we are trying to starve each other. Trade is treated as if it were contraband. The atmosphere is poisoned with suspicion and mistrust.

"Let us have brotherhood," was his final plea. "It is only the Christian Churches that can do it. It is for you to do it."

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

I.

(NOTE: The climate, pneumonia germs, or something laid rather ruthless hands on THE SUN editor immediately on his arrival in London, June 23rd, and sent him to bed with a fever on June 24th, and a little later to a hospital. Two and a half weeks later, when able to leave the hospital, he took ship for America. Thus his trip in Europe was far shorter, even if more eventful, than he anticipated. However, much of the time a diary was kept from the day he sailed from New York, on June 14th, till he returned that July 21st; and if SUN readers have the patience and the desire, they may now and in the few weeks to follow, have the opportunity of journeying with the editor across the sea and back.—J. O. A.)

On June 14, 1930, Dr. L. E. Smith, Dr. Roy Helfenstein and I left the hotel Cornish Arms, New York, at 8:30 this A. M. An hour later we were safely berthed and boothed on the Adriatic, of the White Star Line, which was to sail at 11:30. Everybody else seems to be going also. Put 1,200 passengers, with their trunks, bags and parcels within the compass of a steamship, with 400 more of the crew hurrying, bustling, scurrying around, and a thousand visitors who have come to say good-by and wave a farewell, and you seem to be in the midst of a numberless population. The confusion is too much for this scribe, and he finds a writing-room and sends a dozen letters to as many home folks and friends he is leaving behind.

Our good ship did not swing loose from her moorings at 11:30 A. M., but was delayed an hour and a half, waiting for a dense fog on the harbor to lift. When she did swing loose she had to creep out of harbor and into the deep sea through a fog that would not let us see the receding shore or other outgoing and incoming vessels.

At 4 P. M. all passengers on board were ordered to put on life-savers and come out on deck for drill and instruction as to how to adjust and wear this vesture in case of accident and destruction to the ship. (Not a very comforting performance, even if we were warned that it was all being done as a matter of precaution.) Dinner was served at 6 P. M.—an elaborate, inviting and wholesome meal. Dr. F. G. Coffin and Dr. W. H. Denison are of the party, and about six hundred Congregationalists. A messenger, Rev. Dr. Lee, had come over from England to greet and welcome us, and is introduced to the assembly of more than 600 by Dr. Burton, secretary of the Congregational Council. Also Mr. Workman, manager of the White Star and Red Star Lines and a prominent Congregationalist, had come over to greet and welcome us. These addresses of welcome to England were hearty and cordial, though delivered on the high seas, not eight hours out from New York.

Some over 200 delegates of the American Public Health Association are on board to attend a world conference on public health, at Dresden. The dining-room tonight was one lovely sight. Friends of outgoing passengers had sent flowers, boxes, bundles and crates of them from all the hothouses of New York and adjoining cities, and these fortunate passengers allowed the dining-room the beauty and fragrance of these love-offerings for the dinner hour. Creeping through the fog, outward toward the widening and deepening sea, the orchestra playing sweet music, a hundred alert "waiters," in English uniform, bringing luscious dishes, with steaming fragrance, to six hundred hungry diners at tables of shining silver, spotless linen and fragrant flowers—this is life on the sea at dinner time.

Things are new and strange, and all events of the day seem large, eventful and worth writing about in my diary; but this will do for entry today. Have met many pleasant people, whose acquaintance, I trust, will ripen. And now, after an hour's reading, devotions and meditation, I shall betake me to bed in room A-42, and while cradled and rocked on the bosom of the briny deep think and dream of big ships, great oceans, new worlds and the dear ones at home whom I shall not see for many a day but who, nevertheless, are the joy and comfort of life wherever we are. J. O. A.

GOING TO COLLEGE.

Thousands of our young people who have just graduated from the high schools are endeavoring to decide whether they shall enter college this fall or enter upon their lifework without further preparation for life. Some will consider a high school education sufficient for their lifework; others will hesitate to enter college because of the cost and the financial depression with which we are confronted—but none should be deluded with the idea that education of the right kind would not fit them better for whatever career they plan to pursue. This is a day of strong competition, and demands the best preparation possible for any career. If the mind is dull, it needs all the help it can secure from training and education to qualify it to do the highest grade of work it is capable in any field of endeavor. If it is brilliant, it is well worthy of cultivation and education to prepare it for the largest contribution it can make to the service of humanity. This is an age of application of the most highly developed intelligence to the solution of the problems of industrial, social, educational and religious scope, and the future will be the most strenuous period that has ever engaged the mind of men.

The man that is educated will become the leader in whatever field he may enter. In the sphere of chemical, electrical, mechanical or sanitary engineering, the times will demand and reward a high degree of intelligence, and complete education in these fields and the mediocre mind and preparation of a past age will not qualify for competition with those who forge ahead. The "hewers of wood and drawers of water" will become the slaves of the race, because they are uneducated and, though they may have most brilliant minds by heredity, they cannot compete with those who have brilliant minds which have been well trained for these fields of industry.

Those who neglect to go to college because times are hard will find them harder because of the neglect to educate and prepare for such service as will qualify for success in life. If I were a young man without education and without money today, with my present outlook, if I could go to college only at a great sacrifice and by undergoing great hardships, I would go, even if I had to go in debt for all my expenses. It is easier to undergo hardships for an education when you are young and jubilant, hopeful and ambitious, full of life and energy, than it is to undergo hardships all your life because of the lack of education. Many young men who fear or fail to enter college when the time is ripe because of the desire to hasten to the pursuit of wealth or fear to spend money or go in debt, find, in the end, that the young men who venture and dare to undertake to acquire an education outdistance them in the race of life.

There is no better time to enter college than when times are dull and money scarce. Prepare for prosperous times when conditions are such as to make it difficult to secure lucrative employment. Under such conditions, one's time is not so valuable as in more prosperous times, and one can devote time to the pursuit of education without so much loss, and when more prosperous times come, one is ready for larger earning capacity.

For those who are planning to enter any one of the professions, it is well to lay a strong foundation in classical education. Upon this foundation, a strong superstructure can be built, and thorough professional training upon the basis of thorough classical education will give preparation that will guarantee success in any of the professions. Thoroughness requires time and expense, but, like the tortoise, it wins the race in the end.

For those who are undecided as to what career they will enter, the best course to pursue is to acquire a classical education as prognosis and exploratory method to discover their fitness, likes and dislikes, before they settle upon some career for which they are totally unfitted for by nature, mind and disposition. The classical education will enable them to find themselves, try out their qualifications, discover their talents, and capitalize their capacities, and thereby work with nature rather than make the mistake of entering a career for which they are totally unfitted and make shipwreck of their natural endowments. ACCIDENTS.

Accidents are beyond human prevention or explanation; yet, in some cases, liable for legal action. In England, at one time, animate or inanimate property that caused the death of an individual had to be forfeited to the king to be used for pious purposes. It was called deodaud, or given to God. The most frequent deodauds were such things as horses, boats and carts. So late as 1840, a railroad engine was declared deodaud in England, and the company had to pay $10,000 as the value thereof because it had caused the death of a human being. In 1846 the law of deodaud was abolished in England by a statute. Such a law never existed in this country. In primitive systems of law, the owner of property, responsible for accidental injury caused through its instrumentality, as the falling of a tree, a house, or the rage of a bull. Such injury was satisfied by the surrender of the property or its value, to be used for benevolent purposes. Such laws no longer exist.

But there is a tendency in modern law to make employers of labor responsible for accidents happening to employees in the course of their employment. This law is based on the principle that those who reap the profits of labor should also bear the losses in case of accidents. An occurrence that happens without intention on the part of any person may be classed as an accident. Two locomotives might collide by the willful intention of the two engineers, mad with each other, and passengers in the train suffer injury or death. That would be called an accident; and it would be to the innocent passengers and the railroad managers. But it would be a willful act on the part of the engineers.

Accidents increase with the advance of civilization, and that proves the first statement that "accidents are beyond human prevention or explanation." Better roads and automobiles increase accidents on the highways; improved machinery and airships increase fatal accidents. One might think that progress in civilization would increase safety; but this age is the most advanced and yet most hazardous. That is not only true of personal safety, but of financial safety. The increase in business and fortunes means the risk of money and investments. It is, no doubt, true also of conduct and character. It is harder to be a good Christian than ever before in the history of this country. There are so many temptations, and they come within the reach of people in so many forms, that character accidents are increasing all the time. The education of the present opens so many doors into personal temptation and indulgence that social and moral accidents are more frequent all the time. Going on the sea increases accidents on the deep; going in the air increases accidents in the air; and going in society increases accidents in the social world. But accidents—real accidents—are beyond human wisdom and skill to explain or prevent. W. W. S.

CHAPLAIN ROUNTREE IN GERMANY.

H. E. Rountree.

Kiel, Germany, July 9, 1930.

Dear Sun Readers:

One never knows what the rest of the world is like until he sees it. One never knows how to make comparisons until he knows what he is talking about. One never knows how to boast intelligently of his own country until, by reason of his knowledge of others, he knows the superior things of both.

We are now concluding our visit to Germany, and we are getting underway for Oslo, Norway. It is with deep regret that our stay here has been so short. Our welcome here has been most cordial, hearty and sincere, and we really hate to go. As the old adage goes, they "put the big pot in the little one for us." From the time of our arrival at Kiel, on Saturday, until today, when we shoved off, something was happening all the time to make us feel not only that we were real guests, but that we were at home.

The following will give you somewhat of an idea of this reception. In the afternoon, reception at clubs of the navy personnel; in the evening, dinner by the lord mayor to our admiral and invited guests; reception of midshipmen at another place; reception of petty officers and enlisted men at another place—these lasting well into the night. Sunday was given over to regattas and racing contests between the race-boat crews of our ships and those of the Germans, in which the latter furnished the prizes. We were fortunate enough to win first in the whaleboat and second in the cutter. In the evening they threw several balls, one for the officers and one for the midshipmen and one for the enlisted men.

Monday and Tuesday were spent in continued regattas, athletics, festivities aboard ship, excursions and bus rides, visits to Hamburg and other nearby towns, and having a general good time.

Kiel is a city of about 213,000 inhabitants, and it is one of the large cities in Germany. It is situated in a slight pocket between two ranges of hills and at the point of the bay, thus making a beautiful picture indeed. It was really thrilling as we steamed into the harbor last Saturday and contemplated the beauty of the scenery. The shore was lined with thousands of people who had gathered there to welcome us.

The city of Kiel is a place of much interest, going far back into the earlier centuries. It is the leading naval port of Germany, but since the war, naval interest has been reduced to practically nothing and it has become purely a commercial port. Several German warships are usually based here, and are in at the present time. The naval school is also here, where they seek to maintain what naval interest they may. The famous Kiel Canal is situated close by. The Government Canal, sixty-two miles long, connecting the Baltic with the North Sea, is also not far away, further enhancing its prestige and importance. It is a city of museums, ranging from antiquities to the present developments in all the branches of science. In the earlier times, it was the home of dukes and princes, which undoubtedly gave color to the environs.

We are leaving Kiel, feeling that Americans and Germans could be the best of friends. As our ships steam majestically out of the harbor now, the bay is full of rowboats and launches loaded with people, and the shores appear as though the whole town had turned out to give us a "cheerio fond auf wieder sehen" (good-by).

But this is only a part of my story. A great many of us went to Berlin, and there we have more things to talk about than at Kiel. Nearly one hundred and fifty of our ship joined a like party from the other ships for this three-day trip. A special train was arranged to take us, and it took six hours to make it. We reached there a little after noon Sunday, and after a nice lunch at our hotels, with freedom of action, we scattered all over the city, sight-seeing, wherever our inclinations might lead us.

Berlin is an ambitious and assertive city, the largest in Germany and is said to be the third largest city in the world, having a population of 4,013,000. We toured the city, visiting practically all the important public places, including the royal palaces and domains. Everywhere the broad avenues and stately buildings were very impressive and inviting. The famous Unter der Linder (meaning "under the linden trees), nearly a mile long, is said to be the most magnificent on the continent of Europe. At one end of this is the famous Tier Garden, the great part around which the city has grown. This was once the private hunting-grounds of the kings, and it is this that has given it its name—"Tier" meaning animals. At one end of this garden is Germany's great zoo; and in connection with this there are enormous beer gardens where on Sundays and holidays thousands of people congregate to eat their "bite" and drink coffee or beer. At the other end of the Unter der Linden, just over the River Spree, which runs through the city and on an island which the river forms, is situated the Lustgarten, a magnificent platzo about which are grouped many noted buildings, monuments and statues. Facing upon this is the Royal Palace, where the Kaiser lived until the time when he abdicated and ended the World War, and which was the scene of many revolutions after the war. The palace still shows the damages which were done during the revolution, although the most of it has been restored. This palace contains seven hundred rooms and the halls of government administration, to accommodate not only all the royal needs, but also his whims. And the elegance and beauty of it shows that no expense was spared to make it what he wished. One of the interesting features of this palace is a rampe in the old part which was built in the sixteenth century. These were days before the elevators, and to reach the top floor of this building, this rampe, which is a gradual incline, was built in a spiral way clear to the top. When the king and other notables has need to go to the top floor, they were carried on horseback or in chairs by servants. Close by here is the Armory and other interesting museums. Here it was interesting to be shown Germany's implements of warfare in their development from the medieval age to the present time. Berlin is also called a city of museums, and it is this kind of thing, with many other interesting characteristics, which often compels one to tarry a while longer.

Berlin is also called the city of monuments. The streets, avenues, parks, squares and public gardens and buildings, are adorned with statues of kings, generals, literary men, scientists, and other notables. Many of them are very imposing, and all of them are designed to fix in the minds of the German people the names and lives of their great men. We visited the Reichstag—the German Parliament—and were given a brief story of its history. Other places of interest pointed out to us were the Uranian Observatory, the Borse (stock exchange, seating 5,000 people), and the Einstein home.

The best-known place outside of Berlin is Potsdam. This is the city of the royal army and the dwelling-place of many kings during the past five or six centuries. It is situated in the hills, seventeen miles away from Berlin, and is the capital of what is known as the Bradenburg Province. It is well laid out and appointed, and has a population of 65,000. This has been the headquarters of the German army through these centuries, and it was here that the kings were accustomed to spend more than half their time. They took a great pride in the army, and king and queen vie with one another in their choice of garrisons. The garrisons are now reduced to a corporal's guard and the royal buildings to museums. The old garrison Church is here. It was here the military personnel attended divine services every Sunday. Special parts of the Church were designated for each rank. The interior is finished in carara marble, from Italy. In the cove behind the altar rest the bodies of Frederick the Great and his father, Frederick William I. It was these individuals who had this Church built, and their bodies were placed here as a fitting memorial to them. This, however, was not the wish of Frederick the Great. He was a great lover of dogs and had many of them. It was his request that when he died he be buried with his dogs.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Vacation is a common word that people understand to mean to leave a place, a position, an obligation vacant or empty. Schools have long vacations. Legislatures and Congresses have long vacations, but Sunday Schools do not take vacations. Stores take very brief vacations. Officers take very brief vacations, or none; usually the office is open and workers take vacation by turns, as a post-office or a clerk's office. The question of vacation is universal and important. It is understood that all faithful workers need some absence from regular duties and some recreation. The body and the mind both need a change from regular employment. A watchman who sits in one place all the time to look after gates, trains, mills, buildings, need a change of position for a period to better qualify him to render good service. The secretary at the desk all the time to attend to mail, records, customers and the requests of his superior needs relief from the grind of office duties and such recreation as will bring him back with new love for the position and new strength for his service. Even a sentinel at his post needs to be relieved, that he may come in contact with others in other lines of duties. He will return to his post with a keener appreciation of his position, which had seemed dull and boring. Nothing makes the day so bright as a dark night, and nothing makes the stars so beautiful as the absence of the sunshine.

Nature takes vacations. Summer, with its beauty and its fruits and harvests, passes into winter when the biting frosts and freezes seem to kill the life of garden, field and forest. But after what seems a long winter, spring returns with its buds, its green grass, its leaves, and its flowers. These changes make nature more attractive and the world's business more prosperous. If all were summer, the coal business would suffer; if winter lasted all the time, flowers, fruits and food for beast and man would cease to satisfy human necessity.

Churches take vacation. The minister of the gospel lives in a treadmill of responsibilities, duties, and trials that wear his life as well as his mind and body. If he is sympathetic—and he cannot represent Jesus Christ if he is not—the suffering of the sick, the broken hearts and homes by the death of loved ones, the crushed spirits of those who fail in business, the appeals for financial and domestic help in family troubles, all these make heavy drafts upon the strength of a real minister. He needs a vacation, and the congregation that is faithful share with the pastor in all his trials and tribulations.

Vacation is natural, necessary, and beneficial. The question arises, "What use shall be made of vacation?" Rest from regular duties is a necessity. Nothing so arouses a desire to get back to work as a period of separation from what had seemed a real task. But rest is only a part of the advantage of vacation. To be occupied in some other useful study or service is the best rest and the surest recreation. Dissipation never made a vacation prepare one for better service.

Show me a nation whose people dwell in homes where God is honored and the children are taught the principles of Christian religion and I will show you a nation that cannot be destroyed by war, disease, revolution, or anything under heaven.—Dr. Carl Gregory.

ELON LETTER.

Four important appointments have recently been made by the administrative committee of the board of trustees, as follows:

Mrs. George W. Diehl as dean of women and professor of elementary education. Mrs. Diehl is a graduate of Concord State Teachers' College, Athens, W. Va., where she received her B. A. degree, and of Smith College, Northampton, Mass., where she received her M. A. degree. Mrs. Diehl comes to Elon from Morris-Harvey College, where she has served as dean of women and professor of psychology. She has had thirteen years' experience as teacher in the public schools and colleges of Virginia and West Virginia. Mrs. Diehl has made a special study of the educational problems of young women, and brings to the office of dean of women a wise sympathy as well as a wide understanding of the educational problems of young women at the college level. The office of dean of women is a most difficult one and a most important one in a modern college. The administrative committee feels that it has made a wise choice in the selection of Mrs. Diehl as the successor of Miss Louise Savage, who served in this important position for seven years.

Miss Hallie I. Shearer becomes head librarian. Miss Shearer is a bachelor of arts of the University of Rochester, master of arts of Northwestern University, and in addition to these two literary degrees she holds a professional librarian's degree from the State Library College of Albany, N. Y. She has had several years' experience in reference work, and comes to Elon from the Detroit Public Library, Detroit, Mich., where for the past four years she has served as head reference librarian. The library in a modern college is a major department, since it aims not only to secure material for students at the suggestion of professors, but it likewise aims to direct and stimulate the voluntary reading of the students as well. Elon must at this time have a librarian who is skilled particularly in the selection and purchase of books, because the Carnegie Corporation has made the college a beneficiary of its new loan fund, placing with us $2,000 a year to be invested in new books.

Miss Jeannette Niederlander becomes head of the voice department. Miss Niederlander received her literary education at the Western College for Women, at Oxford, Ohio. She holds a bachelor of music degree from the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, where she is this summer a candidate for the master of music degree. Her teaching experience covers the conduct of her own studio at her home in Middletown, Ohio, and voice and choral director in Limestone College, Gaffney, S. C.

Mrs. Harvey Boney becomes assistant dean of women and dietitian. Mrs. Boney is a graduate of Queens College, Charlotte, and of the University of North Carolina. She has served as dietitian of Swain Hall, at the University of North Carolina, and as assistant dean there. She is at this time serving in the place of Dean Stacey as acting dean of the summer school while Mrs. Stacey is away on her vacation. Like Mrs. Diehl, the new dean of women, Mrs. Boney has a sympathetic understanding of the problems of the college woman.

The administrative committee feels that the addition of these four members to the teaching and administrative staff will mean much to the college and to the life of the students for the ensuing year.

In this connection, I should mention the extensive remodeling of the lower floor of West Dormitory, which will make this building serve the social and leisure life of the young women in a very significant way.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

The two purposes for which paint is used are perfection and ornamentation. Paint consists of the coloring matter called a pigment, mixed with a liquid called a vehicle. Most pigments are mineral substances, such as white lead, zinc, core, which consists of clay colored with oxide of iron; the lead chromate and cadmium compounds, which are yellow; the lakes of various colors, consisting of some such mineral substance as clay colored with dye; compounds of cobalt, which produce blue; and umbre, and sepia, which are brown. Carbon in the form of lampblack or boneblack, forms a basis of black paints; indigo comes from a plant, and chochineal, from which carmine is obtained, from an insect.

Color cannot be studied or understood a part from light, for color is a property from light, just as pitch is a property of sound. Many years ago, people believed that of all the known colors white light was the simplest and purest; but the great scientist, Sir Isaac Newton, disproved this by an interesting experiment. He admitted a beam of sunlight through a small aperature in the shutter of a darkened room, and let the beam pass through a glass prism to a white screen. On the screen there appeared not the colorless image of the sun, but a band of many colors, arranged in the following order: violet, indigo, blue, green, yellow, orange, red. Such a band of colors is called a spectrum. Newton proved by his experiment that white light is a mixture of all the colors of the spectrum; these same colors appeared in beautiful form in the rainbow, which is produced when the sun shines on raindrops. The drops act like tiny prisms, and separate the rays into seven colors by refraction.

Scientists have learned many other interesting facts about color. Light waves, they tell us, have different lengths and each color corresponds to a certain wave-length. The waves that produce the sensation of red light are about twice as long as those that produce violet, which is the first color in the spectrum. A piece of white paper has no color because it reflects all the wave-lengths equally, but a piece of red cloth looks red because it reflects only those waves that produce red light and it absorbs the others. A black object, on the other hand, absorbs nearly all colors. Now we may see that the sky looks blue in the daytime. In the atmosphere are many tiny particles of dust which reflect the blue waves and permits the others to pass. Were the air entirely free from dust-specks, it would look dark.

We cannot make colors as beautiful as those of the rainbow, but we can imitate or represent those colors with pigments. Pigments are coloring matter and are found in many places. Some pigments come from the earth and we obtain them in clay banks and mines. Yellow ochre is a pigment of the first kind, and cobalt blue comes from minerals. Plants and trees provide us with many dyestuffs and pigments, and the great group of aniline dyes is obtained from coal tar.

We cannot use pigments just as we find them. If, for example, we should spread yellow ochre on a house, the first rain would wash it off. Pigments must be mixed with something to make them adhere. If we mix yellow ochre with linseed oil, we form oil paint, which is permanent.

If we mix glycerine and arabic, we form a substance which will dissolve in water. This we call water-color paint. If we mix yellow ochre with chalk, we form colored crayons and pastels. In all these mixtures, the pigment is the same, but the mixing medium determines the kind of paint form.

The color chart can be used as an aid in the study of color, just as the piano is used in studying music. If we strike but one note on the piano, we do not produce music; but if we strike at the same time two other notes related to the first note, we produce a harmony of sound which we call a chord. So, with the color chart, if we select from it any one color, as for instance blue, we do not obtain harmony; but if we take the same blue as one note and use with it two other related notes as a lighter blue and a darker blue, we obtain a color chord.

There are three colors—yellow, red and blue—which are, in pigments, the sources of all other colors. That is, from the mixture of these three colors, all other colors are obtained. For this reason, yellow, red and blue are called primary colors. The union of any two primary colors produces a new color called a binary color. That is, the union of yellow and red produces the binary orange; the union of yellow and blue produces the binary green; the union of red and blue produces the binary violet, or purple. Orange, green and violet, then, are called the binary colors.

When colors are as bright as they can be made with pigments, their colors are in full intensity. Any color that is lighter than full intensity is a tint, and any tone that is darker than full intensity is a shade. The two terms, tint and shade, in speaking of different tones of a color are often confused. There are certain colors that seem to strengthen or emphasize each other when they are seen together; such colors are said to be complimentary to each other. If we wish to use any one color in full intensity, as a green feather on a hat, we should be sure to use with it black, white or gray. If we were to paint the shutters on a house bright green, we should paint the house light gray or white. If we wish to use blue and orange in a costume, we must use a small quantity of the intense color, as a bright orange tie, buckle, flower or bit of trimming, with a large mass of grayed blue for the main part of the costume.

Tints and shades of any one color are sure to be harmonious when used in a costume or house decoration. Other groups of colors that can be depended upon to produce harmony are the neighboring, or analogous colors. For example, yellow, yellow-green and green in their tints and shades might be employed in the color schemes of fabrics, curtains, pillow-covers, carpets and hangings. A combination of colors or variety of colors may be produced by mixing colors in their full intensity. For instance, use three parts yellow and one part violet, you will get gray-yellow; three parts orange and one part blue will produce gray-orange; three parts red and one part green will make gray-red, and three parts green and one part red will give gray-green, and three parts blue and one part orange will make gray-blue, while three parts violet and one part yellow will make gray-violet.

From this treatise on color, you will see how practical and valuable it is to have a harmony of color combination, for this alone will produce harmony, and harmony alone can produce pleasure, ease and contentment in conjunction with the affairs of nature in producing a life which will look upon a complexed condition of affairs and can see in it all complete harmony in universal activities.

OCEAN VIEW CHURCH.

On Monday, July 14th, at 8 P. M., the Ocean View Christian Church revival meeting began, with Rev. H. C. Caviness, pastor of Portsmouth Church, preaching for us. We had services each morning at 10 o'clock and each evening at 8 o'clock up to July 27th. His messages were gospel truth given with power. Rev. W. H. Garman had charge of the music, with his pianist, Miss Ruby Lytle, at the piano. So, in addition to the wonderful messages brought by Bro. Caviness, the messages through song held an important place throughout the meeting.

From the very beginning of the meeting there were members present representing the Churches of both Bro. Caviness and Bro. Garman. Having praying and witnessing men of God present in this meeting, certainly had a marked effect, and we of this Church appreciated the presence of each and every visitor.

In view of the fact that our meeting was held at a time when the attractions here at the View were at the highest, attendance at the meeting was not as good as we had hoped, and yet the unusual interest manifested on the part of those who attended was encouraging from beginning to end. There were both conversions and reconsecrations.

An outstanding feature of this meeting was the 10 A. M. daily service, each one present with a Bible. Bro. Caviness led us in an effective Bible study, interest in which increased throughout the meeting. As a result of this meeting, Thursday night, July 31st, a cottage prayer meeting began, and some of the same good brethren who were such faithful visitors during the revival were present to help this prayer service succeed.

We appreciate the presence, prayers and help of all who contributed in any way toward its success. We ask the continued prayers of all Christian people for our work here at Ocean View, that God's will may be accomplished.

A DAILY PRAYER.

(August.)

Our Lord Christ, in whose fellowship there is happiness and holiness, turn us, Thy anxious followers, from sin unto Thine own pure righteousness. So keep us enfolded within the bosom of Thy companionship that Christian conscience and consciousness may be aroused against the evils that constantly assail and entrap many who have given Thee a habitation in their heart and yet are weak and wandering. Thou, only, O God, canst put away iniquity. Except Thy grace overcome, the iniquity that is in us is our utter undoing. Reveal ourselves to ourselves and give us this day a fresh sense of Thy forgiveness. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

WORK THROUGH THE NEWSPAPER.

Ira D. Crewdson, our missionary in Fukushima City, Japan, has responsibility for the Fukushima office of the Newspaper Evangelistic Association of Northern Japan. Some of the activities of this organization are to provide articles for the daily newspapers. Many are written in direct response to the questions about Christianity that most frequently appear in letters from inquirers, some relate to current events such as the London Peace Conference, others are written in an effort to evangelize young men of rural districts and stimulate them to active seeking for spiritual light; a library of 675 volumes is maintained, and the present membership is 267; thirty-seven inquirers completed the elementary course of religious instruction last year and were awarded certificates, and the present membership is sixty-three. In the higher course there were seventeen graduates; correspondence is carried on with inquirers, many asking serious questions about religion and practical matters, many coming from readers of the library books; ten thousand copies of a prospectus were published, and several thousand copies of several different tracts or leaflets.

Reports come that these efforts have gained considerable foothold in the form of public and official favor, and that the material is not censored. Responses have come in the form of 1,953 new inquirers registered for the first time.—World Call.

THE CHURCH BEAUTIFUL.

Blessed is the Church!
For it shall be called the Haven of Hope,
Which opens wide its doors and offers shelter to all;
Whose stones are symbols of its strength and beauty;
Whose arches are symbols of its everlasting span of service;
Whose altars are symbols of its fires of faith.

Blessed is the Church.
For it is the secret place of life's spiritual treasures;
For it is the confessional for life's troubles;
It is the shrine of little children, youth, old age
Who have sung for untold years, "I was glad when they said unto me:
'Come, let us go up unto the house of the Lord."

Blessed is the changeless Church,
For its memories are rich and beautiful;
Memories of baptisms, weddings; friendships with man and God.

ILLUSTRATION OF S. S. LESSON.

Like unto Saul in the way in which he learned to profit from failure and carved success out of defeat in Choy Ting Kan, of China, whose story is told in a 1929 issue of the Missionary Review of the World. As a lad, he was sent to the United States, where he spent nine years in study, graduated with honors and returned to China, where he became a teacher in a government naval school. When the war with Japan broke out, he was made captain of a torpedo-boat, and thus soon came into active encounter with Japan's warships. He was made a prisoner of war, and while in prison camp in Japan he came in contact with a missionary and became a Christian. When asked what he would do if released, he quickly replied that he would go back and fight—so he was still detained. When the war was over and the time for exchange of prisoners had come, it was learned that back in China he was considered a traitor and deserter, and the order had been issued to have him beheaded as soon as he fell into Chinese hands. So, through his missionary friend, it was arranged that he might be released and remain in Japan under the missionary's care.

Later, in Formosa, working for the Japanese government, he lived in earnest, happy Christian fashion. Still later, he returned to China, was repatriated, and eventually became a leader in the reform movement. He dropped out of the life of his missionary friend, and for years no word passed between them. Finally the missionary got in touch with him and learned that again he had faced sorrow and defeat, this time in the death of his wife and two children from plague. He had given up his faith and become a skeptic. But with the renewal of friendship, the old faith returned. He was made the head of one of the departments of the government and was the right-hand man of Yuan Shi Kai when he was president of the Chinese republic. In remarkable fashion he made the great stumbling-blocks of sorrows of his life avenues of progress. From failure and grim disappointment, he learned the way to success, both in position and in character.—World Call.

MISSION CONFERENCE MEETS.

The Woman's Missionary Conference met at Antioch Church, near Harrisonburg, August 1st. Ten Churches of the Conference were represented by person and several other Churches by reports. Rev. R. L. Williamson, pastor of the Winchester Church, gave the principal address of the day.

The morning and afternoon devotional services were conducted by Mrs. A. S. Turner and Miss Ora Scott, respectively. Miss Treva Senger, of Harrisonburg and Atlanta, Ga., gave several readings. The Woman's Missionary Society of Winchester, gave three pageants, or dialogs. The pastors in the Conference were all present except one, who was out of the bounds of the Conference in revival meetings. The treasurer, Miss Verdie Showalter, made her report, showing $461.14 paid into the mission cause during the year.

A letter was read from Mrs. J. A. Williams, President of the Southern Woman's Board, suggesting a change in time of our annual meeting. After some consideration, it was decided to hold our next session in September or October, 1931, the exact date to be planned later. Life memberships were stressed. Plans for more work along this line were laid. The committee on place decided in favor of meeting next year at Dry Run.

The nominating committee suggested the following for officers: President, Miss Ora Scott; vice-president, Mrs. A. W. Andes; secretary, Mrs. B. F. Frank; treasurer, Miss Verdie Showalter; superintendent spiritual life, Miss Amy Louderback; superintendent women's societies, Mrs. R. C. Myers; superintendent young people's societies, Mrs. A. F. Kite; superintendent literature, Miss Ella Pickering; superintendent cradle rolls, Mrs. E. Lena Rothgeb.

The day seemed to be one well spent, and all were glad to have been to the house of the Lord.

THE PONCE CHURCH VACATION SCHOOL.

"There's the bell; get in line." "There's a new little boy!" "The march is sounding; let's go." All this, and more—not in English, but in Spanish—started off each morning of our Church school. The children soon learned the order of things. Immediately upon entering, they gave the pledges to the Church flag and to the Bible. One of the children who had previously prepared himself read the Scripture. The Bible story was told by a faculty member. The prayers were short, given by the children themselves. A new song concerning Christian children was learned every other day. One of the parts of the devotional exercises most enthusiastically participated in by the children was the memorizing of Bible verses. All vied with one another in learning them quickly and accurately. During the twelve days of the school, the first psalm, the twenty-third psalm, the Beatitudes, the opening prayer, the benediction, besides four other odd verses were learned by most of fifty children. It is simply marvelous the aptitude for memorizing that Porto Rican children have, even though they may be from the poorest of homes. A short story concerning the application of the lesson to every-day life was told each day, sometimes by a teacher, sometimes by a child. Several children even volunteered to tell stories they already knew, which were related to the topic.

Then followed the Bible classes. Miss Inis Correa and Miss Adela Vines had charge of the primary children; Miss Eugenia Mora, the junior boys; Mrs. P. D. Rudd, the junior girls; Mr. D. P. Barrett, Jr., the intermediates. Each teacher had complete charge of his class, and each did his own planning of course of study. There was a study of the lesson, then written work as an application of this. During the last days of the school, each class chose the favorite Bible story studied and worked out a dramatization of it as its contribution to the final program. The faculty is to be congratulated for its success in working out its Bible classes. Miss Adams obtained a book written in Spanish from the Evangelical Book Store, giving a course of study to be used as a devotional part of a Church school. This was followed out. But there were no plans or advice left for the Bible classes.

In the twenty-minute recess that was then given, the children were allowed to play as they wished for the first ten minutes; and during the last ten minutes, each teacher directed his group in games. It was during this time, too, that our group kodak pictures were taken.

The manual classes are always keenly attractive to the children. Miss Correa aga n made all of her plans and had the little ones execute the work. In sewing, Miss Vines had the beginners, Miss Barrett the juniors, and Miss Mora the intermediates. The work for these three classes only was planned and partially prepared by Miss Adams. The sewing was of the same type as that done last summer. Mr. Alfred Barrett had the class of junior boys. As nothing had been bought for the use of this class, he made his own plans of work in cardboard and wood. A Porto Rican boy had promised to instruct the carpentry class, but at the last minute he got a job and left us helpless for the moment. Fortunately, Mr. Barrett, Jr., offered his services. At first, he was at a loss, because no plans had been made and no material bought. But it did not take him long to buy packing-boxes from various stores, and nails, and get those boys to work.

Monday night, July 14th, we gave the final program—the demonstration of what had been accomplished to fathers, mothers, Church members, and those interested. Our devotional exercises were carried out exactly as they had been each day—the pledges, the Bible reading and the story, prayers, songs, Bible verses, short story. All of this was done entirely by the children. The devotional part ended, we had the work of each individual Bible class. A little conversation and song was given by Miss Correa's children and served as an introduction. Then the following dramatizations were given in costume: "The Good Samaritan," Miss Mora's class; "The Ten Virgins," Mrs. Rudd's class; "The Parable, the Talents, and Queen Esther," Mr. Barratt, Jr.'s class. How the children did enjoy this work! They do love to dress up and act out the stories they learn. Soft music was played, the lights were dimmed, and the rostrum was lighted appropriately for each little drama. These dramatizations mark indelibly on the children's minds the stories they hear.

Materially speaking, the most important part of a final program is the exhibition of the children's hand-wrok. The primary children had made little houses of postcards, artificial flowers in little pots, cardboard horses, eyeglasses, and jumping-jacks. The beginnners' sewing class exhibited school-house bags and chicken bean-bags. Miss Barrett's class had made hand-towels, aprons, bags and curtain tie-backs. Miss Mora's class had finished hemstitched handkerchiefs, laundry bags, and embroidered dainties. Mr. Alfred Barrett's class had made a complete set of household furniture of matchboxes and cereal boxes, painted, upholstered, finished in every detail; animal doorstops, little girl book-ends, toy animals, all cut out of thin wood, sandpapered and painted by the children. Mr. Barrett, Jr.'s class had little benches, novelty shelves, and book racks. This work was all remarkably well done, for Porto Ricans are exceedingly deft in any hand-work. One was also astounded at the amount of work done during two weeks only.

Throughout the session of the Church school, Dona Delpins Zayas aided each teacher to solve any difficulties and supplied each need in so far as she had the money. She handled the money affairs of the little school. Her help was invaluable in making the work smoothly successful. Throughout the session, the spirit between faculty and children was one of reciprocal helpfulness. Thus ended our sixth Ponce Church vacation school.

MRS. P. D. RUDD,
Director.

In all these thirty years I have never seen the day when I was tempted for a moment to return to the old, spasmodic, haphazard method of giving to the Lord. We, too, have been blessed temporally and spiritually, in basket and in store, in mind and in heart, in this practice of systematic giving. There has seemed to be an overarching Providence all the way. When the tenth account would be running low because we had drawn upon it more freely in the face of some unusual need, then some windfall out of a clear sky, a generous wedding fee or an invitation to lecture or a commencement address with a very cheering "honorarium" attached, would come to our relief and we would thank God and go forward.—Rev. Chas. R. Brown, Yale University.

Only God can take out of your heart the bad temper, pride, malice, revenge, love of the world, and all other evil things that have taken possession of it, and fill it with holy love and peace. To God you must look; to God you must go. This is the work of the Holy Ghost; He is the Purifying Fire; He is the Cleansing Flame.—William Booth.

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson VIII—August 24, 1930.

Jonathan and David—A Noble Friendship.

Golden Text: "He that maketh many friends doeth it to his own destruction; but there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother."—Prov. 18:24.

Lesson: I. Samuel 18:1-4; 20; II. Samuel 1:17-27.

Time: 1085 to 1063 B. C.

Place: Saul's capital, Gibeah. Mt. Gilboa.

Today's lesson is spread over a period of over twenty years. It is not of any special event, but of a friendship that started between two youths and lasted through storms and strife until death parted them.

Our lesson opens just after the battle between David and that arch enemy of Israel, Goliath. In the morning a mere lad sent to carry food to his brethren in camp, in the afternoon the hero of all Israel. No wonder that David's combat with the giant should have won the admiration of Jonathan. Events crowded each other, Saul took him into the royal palace and refused to let him return home, and Jonathan loved David and gave him his own robes that he might appear properly clothed at court.

David did not long remain in favor with Saul, for jealousy which was Saul's final undoing soon made it appearance. Even when David was playing and singing before him, did he try to slay him. It was Jonathan that from the first pled for David and restored the friendly relations between him and King Saul.

Again David went to the wars in defense of Israel, and the new successes of David again brought an attack on his life from Saul. This time David escaped through the aid of Saul's daughter Michal, who had been given him as his wife. David appealed to Jonathan to save his life and to interceed for him with Saul. They renewed their covenant, and Jonathan departed on what was a fruitless mission, for Saul in his anger even attempted to slay Jonathan.

This was the parting of the ways, but not of the friendship of these two, for in later years when Jonathan was slain in battle along with Saul, David grieved greatly, even though Jonathan's death opened the way to the throne of Israel. And David remembered his covenant with Jonathan, when he took his lame son, Mephibosheth, and saved his life in violation of all the customs of the time.

There is nothing more beautiful than a beautiful friendship. Henry Clay Trumbull has aptly said: "It is good to have a friend, but it is better to be a friend. The gain of being unselfishly loved and sympathized with and helped and cheered is not to be compared with the gain of unselfishly loving and sympathizing with and helping and cheering another. He who has a pure and unselfish love for any one being in the universe has thereby a new life."

What a man knows should find expression in what a man does. The value of superior knowledge is best shown in a performing manhood.—Bovee.

Topic: "Is Education Worth What It Costs? Why?"

Scripture Reading: Prov. 1:5-9, 3:13-20, 4:5-13, 8:1-36; Luke 9:57-62; 2 Tim. 2:15; Luke 2:41-52.

Topics for Talks.

1. What are the aims of education?
2. What does education cost?
3. How may one become educated?
4. Is an education worth its cost?

Suggested Songs.

"True-Hearted, Whole-Hearted," "Lead On, O King Eternal," "O Master Workman of the Race."

Program.

1. Prelude.
2. Opening song: "True-Hearted, Whole-Hearted."

Scripture reading: Prov. 3:13-18.

Discussion of the topics for talks.

Hymn: "Lead On, O King Eternal."

Prayer: "O Lord God of Hosts, who maketh the frail children of men to be Thy glad soldiers in the conquest of sin and misery, breathe Thy spirit, we pray Thee, into the students of this country and all lands, that they may come together in faith and fellowship and stand up an exceeding great army for the deliverance of the oppressed and for the triumph of Thy kingdom, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

"O Master Workman of the Race." (Tune "Materna.")

"O Master Workman of the race,
Thou Man of Galilee,
Who, with the eyes of early youth,
Eternal things did see.
We thank Thee for Thy boyhood faith
That shone Thy whole life through.
'Did ye not know it is my work,
My Father's will to do?'

"O Thou who didst the vision send
And give to each his task,
And with the task sufficient strength
Show us Thy will, we ask.
Give us a conscience bold and good,
Give us a purpose true.
That it may be our highest joy,
Our Father's work to do."

Before deciding upon the above question, several other questions must be considered. Why do we have education, any way? Why are millions of dollars spent yearly for education? Why do thousands of people dedicate their lives to education? Why are legislators ever alert to pass laws for the betterment of education? Why will parents deny themselves to educate their children? Why will young people wait on tables, wash dishes, clean lawns, and do other tasks to secure an education? What are the values, then, of education?

Briefly suggesting values of education, we list these: (1) Mental growth and development; (2) friends; (3) understanding of the world in which we live; (4) ability to better use our talents for the good of the kingdom of God; (5) appreciation for the cultured things of life, as music, art, or literature; (6) increased ability to earn a living; (7) a higher national standard of living.

Dr. Michael Pupin, professor of electro-magnetics at Columbia University, was the son of an illiterate European peasant. His mother once said, "My son, my eyes are perfectly good, but I am blind because the eyes of reading and writing are closed to me."

Huxley said, "If a little knowledge is dangerous, where is the man who has so much as to be out of danger?"

For discussing the value of a college education, have college students and alumni speak from their experience of the value and satisfaction of education. They will, doubtless, dwell at length upon the personal contact with teachers and students.

Emphasize the fact that economic improvement is not the greatest aim of education, for it is surpassed by both mental growth and preparation for greater service to God.

It is entirely possible for students to pay a considerable part of their expenses. Many colleges have self-help bureaus to assist students in securing work. Boys and girls frequently sell papers, work in stores, clean lawns, fire furnaces, wait on tables, cut wood, sell magazines and books, do clerical work, assist in laboratories, attend to babies, sew, cook and countless other tasks to defray expenses. Many colleges have co-operative clubs or houses where students do all work to pay part of their expenses. Many people continue their education through reading, extension courses, or correspondence courses.

The present age demands greater education than any preceding age. This is due to the fact that more people are educated and competition is keener. Lincoln is frequently pointed out as a man who succeeded in spite of lack of education. In emphasizing that fact, do not overlook these points:

1. Lincoln's associates had little, if any, more education than he.
2. Lincoln educated himself by reading good books.

College friendships cannot be replaced by any amount of money or material wealth. An educated person knows better how to use his or her talents.

Statistics were collected regarding three classes of men:

1. Those whose education was concluded in the seventh grade.
2. Those who finished high school.
3. Those who graduated from college.

After compiling the statistics, these facts were established:

1. The least educated man earned less and reached the maximum limit earlier than the others. After they passed thirty they had no hope of increased earning.
2. High school education gave them ability to reach a higher salary and to increase wages until they are about forty or fifty years of age.
3. College education enabled them to increase wages far more than the other two groups. Furthermore, ability to increase earnings was not hampered by physical disability.

When the uneducated man becomes unable to do physical labor, his earnings decrease. The educated man earns as long as his mind is alert.

Note that most of the Scripture readings come from the Proverbs. Recall that Solomon was the wisest of men and had great veneration for wisdom and knowledge.

Note that Jesus spent His first thirty years preparing for the work of three years. Preparation is even more necessary for us who would follow Him today.

THE FOUNDATION. By Frederick P. Keppel. The Macmillan Co.; $1.25; pp. 113.

With that thoroughness of insight and discriminative judgment which characterizes his official acts as president of the Carnegie Corporation, Dr. Keppel describes the place in American life of the foundation. There are now more than two hundred such foundations in America with capital funds of almost a billion dollars. Beginning effectively with Andrew Carnegie, who conceived the foundation to be a wise method of distributing the wealth to which he felt a stewardship relation, the foundation has today become a means of furthering knowledge and finds its best ally in the universities.

The foundation is not a charitable organization dealing out aid to the poor and needy, but a trustee of humanity's interests under necessity of being assured of an adequate return on the investments it makes. It must, therefore, be convinced that the recipients of its grants are going concerns and likely to continue. The weaker colleges have never fully appreciated this attitude of the foundation, feeling that they existed to make the strong stronger, and their failure to help rendering the weak even relatively weaker. Dr. Keppel makes it clear that the foundations were answering a good conscience relative to the return to themselves in accomplishment and permanent achievement of their own investments.

The foundations should not be opportunists, in the sense that they should always wait for some outside agent or agency to prod them to support enterprises or undertake programs. They should face human needs and inaugurate methods of meeting them, listening, of course, respectfully to suggestions from any competent source.

Not only should institutions and causes be helped, but promising individuals should be sought out and aided, so that they may serve their generation to the full measure of their ability. Just how to find these in the smaller centers is a real problem for the administrators of these funds.

We have not yet seen the full development of the foundations Dr. Keppel thinks, though eventually the public will take over the functions now performed by the foundations, and they will accordingly disappear or, at any rate, become a factor of relatively slight importance. This will not be in our day nor in the days of our children or grandchildren, however.

Challenging fields of exploration and service to human life await new foundations in ministry to rural life, recreation, the home and family, the Church as a social agency, museums and parks, towns and regional planning, housing, technical training below the college level, nursing, and dental education, according to Dr. Keppel, and no doubt other and larger needs, will arise as experience points the way. Therefore, it seems that the foundation will have a perpetual place in American life with shifting emphasis.

Dr. Keppel admits that the foundations have made and are likely to continue to make mistakes, though in the main their successes have outweighed their failures. They may safely, in his judgment, rest their case on the achievements of the General Education Board in the field of secondary education in the Southern States, of the Rockefeller Foundation for public health throughout the world, and of the Carnegie Corporation, in its stimulative development of the American public library, not forgetting the discovery of insulin as the consequence of a single grant of the Carnegie Corporation.

The book embodies in permanent form the lectures on the subject given by Dr. Keppel on the "Page-Barbour Lectures" foundation of the University of Virginia. It is not a defense of the foundation, though it will serve that purpose. It is rather an exposition and an orientation, and as such, its worth at this time cannot be easily overestimated.

JUNIOR WORSHIP GUIDE. By Charlotte Chambers Jones. The Pilgrim Press; $2; pp. 280.

For those Church schools which use the closely graded lessons, this book will be especially valuable in the junior department. It contains fifty-two delightful stories, with worship services with directions and materials. It also emphasizes the season interests.

THE WAITING ISLES. By Charles S. Detweiler. The Judson Press; cloth $1.25, paper 75c; pp. 167.

Dr. Detweiler has spent thirty years in missionary service in the Caribbean, working with the Northern Baptist Convention. In this interesting book he depicts the history, geography and theology of our Southern neighbors, nor does he neglect the Monroe Doctrine or its obligations on us.

FAMILY ALTAR

Conducted by H. E. Rountree
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

The Magnet of Gratitude.

"I will give thanks unto Jehovah with my whole heart; I will show forth all thy marvelous works." —Psa. 9:1-8.

Oliver Wendell Holmes once forcibly compared the thankful heart to a magnet. You can take a dish of sand and scatter particles of iron all through it, and then sweep your hand through the sand in an attempt to find the iron, but you will not discover any. Then take a magnet and sweep it through the sand, and it will soon be covered with the bits of iron. "So," he said, "the unthankful heart, like my finger in the sand, discovers no mercies; but let the thankful heart sweep through the day, and, as the magnet finds the iron, so it will find in every hour some heavenly blessings—only the iron in God's sand is gold."

Therefore, if we go gloomily through life and think we have nothing for which to praise our Maker, the fault is with ourselves and not with Him. We do not carry with us eyes to see our blessings or mind to understand them or heart to value them. And this is why some persons, to whom God has given not a tenth so much as He has given to us, so far excel us in this grace of gratitude.

Prayer.—Forgive us, O God, that we make so poor return for all Thy kindness. Make us sensible of Thy benefits. Make us happy in our blessings. Make us grateful to our Infinite Benefactor. We ask it in the name of Thy unspeakable Gift. Amen.

TUESDAY.

The Clogged Pipe.

"The Wicked are like the troubled sea; for it cannot rest, and its waters cast up mire and dirt." —Isa. 57:11-21.

The sea on a sunny day, as its waters sparkle and its waves exult in the light, is a beautiful emblem of a thankful life sending its praise to heaven; but Isaiah gives us a picture of a life made gloomy and thankless by sin, its waters with no sparkle, full of mire and dirt.

Once in a large city Church, in the midst of the services on Easter Sunday, the organ suddenly became silent. An examination was made and it was discovered that an eel, pumped up from the river, had clogged the pipe that supplied the motor. It was an acted parable of the ceasing of the song of praise from many a human soul as some sin or unbelief creeps into the channels of power and communication with God is shut off.

If we feel our hearts growing cold, if we can no longer join in songs of thanksgiving, let us examine our lives for lurking evil. Sin and gratitude are incompatible. Sin silences the music of life. As Satan comes in, the heavenly choir goes out.

Prayer.—Holy Spirit of all purity and peace, guard Thou our souls against every temptation and preserve us from all evil. So shall our spirits sing Thy praise, and worship Thee with anthems of thanksgiving. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

The Voice of His Praise.

"O bless our God, ye peoples, and make the voice of His praise to be heard."—Psa. 66:8-15.

Praise is a voice. Thanksgiving must be born in the heart, but it must not stay there. Dumb gratitude will answer for dumb beasts, but not for speaking men.

When the psalmist bade all people to utter in words the praise of God so that their thanksgiving could be heard, he was only commanding them to do what is reasonable and sensible. Who of us, if he bestowed great and constant benefits on some one, would be content with his silence?

And while spoken praise of God is justly desired and commanded by heaven itself, it is no less required for the good of earth. There is a contagion of joy and gratitude which no one who wishes a happy life can afford to scorn. Praise God with your speech, and you will be more cheerful and contented, and your neighbor will be the same. Make the voice of His praise to be heard, and that praise will sound, with ever-increasing exultation, through all the earth. Strike up the anthem in your own heart, and you will rejoice at its growth in volume all around you.

Prayer.—It is because Thou lovest us, our Father, that Thou dost ask for praise; and it is because we love Thee and Thy children that we will make the voice of Thy praise to be heard. So shall we join the heavenly choir, and join it here on earth. Amen.

THURSDAY.

Remember the Giver.

"Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights." —James 1:12-18.

The giver is always better than the gift. The richer the gift, the richer must be the giver back of the gift. The more pleasing the gift, the more pleasing should be the giver. We see the giver in the gift; yes, but the gift gives us only a glimpse of the giver's graciousness. Happy is the receiver who looks beyond the gift to the giver.

If we always enrich our blessings with the remembrance of God who gives them, what an enlargement of our blessings follows! How every least benefit becomes a significant of divine favor! All heaven shines out upon us from some joy that others would least consider. The very smallest comfort becomes a personal token from the King. We are constantly delighted and surprised and exalted by these proofs of the Father's love.

Prayer.—Yes, Lord, for Thou never gavest a blessing but Thou gavest Thyself with it. Thyself, and all of Thyself. Shall we fail to give Thee all our heart in return? Amen.

FRIDAY.

Breathe In, Breathe Out.

"Freely ye received, freely give."—Matt. 10:5-15.

Spurgeon once said that "we breathe in the atmosphere of heaven by prayer, and we breathe it out again by praise; prayer and praise make up the essentials of the Christian life." Try to live by breathing in only; you cannot keep it up for a single minute. Try to live by breathing out only; that will last as short a time. The air flows in and out of the lungs, the blood flows in and out of the heart, and equally necessary is it that the love of God should flow in and out of the life.

Prayer.—Forgive us, our Saviour, that we have presented to Thee distorted lives; that we have destroyed the pure symmetry of Thy bestowals. As the mirror returns the image, so may our gratitude return Thy gifts, to Thy glory and to our infinite good. In Thy name. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"Whoso is wise will give heed to these things; and they will consider the lovingkindness of Jehovah."—Psa. 107:31-43.

Many persons live unthankful lives because they do not know enough to be grateful. They have no conception of the marvels of the eye, and so they are not thankful for the wonderful gift of sight. They do not realize the delicate balance of the ear, and so do not praise God while that balance remains undisturbed. They have not followed the course of history, and so are not grateful for the goodly heritage of this country.

Or, they may have the knowledge, but leave it unrelated to their Creator. They regard themselves as children of chance and not design. They are only dull parts of a dull machine; they do not know the Father, and so they are not grateful to Him.

Both ignorances and deadening. Both leave the heart sad and the spirit inert. Both choke the spring of thanksgiving at its source and leave the life a barren waste.

Prayer.—We would be wiser than that, O our Father. We would take heed to the world in which Thou hast placed us. We would know what a marvelous palace Thou hast given us to enjoy. We would consider Thy lovingkindness in nature, in history, and in the realm of divine grace. And, above all, O our Father, we thank Thee for Thy Son, and for the riches of love which Thou hast bestowed on us in Him. That mercy is so great that all eternity will not suffice for our unceasing gratitude. So to Thee, and to Him, and to the Holy Spirit of all good, we give our praise forever. Amen.

SUNDAY.

Gratitude for Affliction.

"Before I was afflicted, I went astray; but now I observe Thy word." "It is good for me that I have been afflicted; that I may learn Thy statutes."—Psa. 119:65-72.

It is well, in giving thanks to God, to begin with what we are likely to forget in that connection, our troubles and sorrows. If we praise God for them, we shall praise Him for all the rest of our life.

And we shall praise God for our afflictions. They are all designed for wise ends. They punish us for wrongdoing, and so help us out of the temptation to repeal it. They wean us from the things of this world and so turn us toward heaven. They make us see how weak we are and so cause us to lean on infinite strength. They teach us to see clearly many blessings that we had not realized till we lost them for a time. There is endless good in afflictions. Let us know the good hand of our God in them.

Perhaps if we begin our thanksgiving with our sorrows and troubles, we shall not go further, for our hearts will be too full of praise for other utterance. Verily, our Heavenly Father is kind to us, who transforms even our misfortunes into beautiful blessings.

Prayer.—Lord, we praise Thee at all times. When others moan, we will sing; when others weep, we will laugh; when others cry defeat, we will shout in triumph. Never art Thou so kind to us as when Satan whispers that our lot is bitter. Amen.

A VISION THAT BECAME A REALITY.

By Rev. J. W. Fix.

(Isa. 6.)

The world's greatest men have dreamed dreams and beheld visions. Dreams and visions make real the ideal. We feel sorry for the person who does not dream of the future and who does not see himself nearer his goal and who does not have visions that eventually become real. Were it not for the fact that many of us, a few years ago, had a vision of a home and family, we would not have gone in pursuit of that which is now our realized dream or vision. It is related that the builder of the great Brooklyn Bridge stood one day, after the completion of that gigantic structure, and with the blueprints in his hand, exclaimed, "It's just like the plans." So it is that our work, when completed, should be like the plans. Dreams and visions have always played a large part in biblical history.

The book of Genesis relates the vision of Abraham, who heard the voice of God speaking to him, saying, "Fear not, Abraham, I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward." And because of the kindness of the Lord, Abraham made an altar to God and went forth in His name—seeing in his mind the fulfillment of His command. In a similar manner, Jacob was granted a vision of God, and through the medium of a dream saw a ladder reaching from earth to heaven. This wonderful experience, underneath the shining stars of an eastern sky, changed the whole tone and outlook of Jacob's life. This vision brought him face to face with one whom he heard exclaim, "I am the Lord God of Abraham, thy father, and the land whereon thou liest, to thee and thy seed will I give it." As Moses was leading the flock of his father-in-law, Jethro, he beheld a burning bush, and out of the flames he beheld in a vision the voice of the Lord, saying, "Put off thy shoes from thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob." And we read that Moses hid his face; and the voice continued to speak and informed Moses of the condition of the children of Israel, and said, "Come and I will send thee to Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth thy people out of the land of Egypt." And the voice of God promised Moses protection and safety in the doing of His will. Just as Abraham and Moses received visions from God, so we read that Joshua, Gideon, Samuel, Elijah, Job, Jeremiah and Isaiah received like visions from God. All these men were enabled by the medium of a vision to learn the will of God and to profit therefrom.

It would be interesting to discuss each one of these and compare them to our own experiences. It would be equally valuable to consider the vision of Saul of Tarsus which revealed the face and the voice of Jesus of Nazareth unto him, but we must confine our thinking to that greatest of all visions about which we read in the sixth chapter of the prophesy of Isaiah. This vision, in content, is threefold, and as such let us study it. In it the prophet beholds:

1. The holiness of the Lord.
2. The sins of his own life.
3. The forgiveness and love of God.

Before we discuss these various phases of the vision, let us think of the time in which Isaiah lived and see if the conditions under which he lived did not have something to do with the vision. Let it be remembered that there were three great prophets who lived and labored in the century in which Isaiah lived. They were Amos, Hosea, and Micah. Each of these prophets had ruled in his own way, and unfortunately there was a great split among God's people. Factions had formed over trifles, and there was needed a man to go forth and proclaim the word of God in a way that would unite them. There was needed a man, wise in governmental affairs and one who was broad enough to overlook national barriers. Isaiah was that man. He is known as the world's greatest statesman and prophet. God always prepares to carry on His work through human instrumentality. When He needed a great man to save His chosen people from the bondage of Egyptians, He delivered Moses from a place of hiding and prepared him in the court of Pharaoh, and then chose him out from among all others to be the world's greatest deliverer and lawgiver. God can use all of us and all we have. He has made use of some very poor material, and has placed many men of low degree upon places of exalted honor. It was so with the man Isaiah, who was called into service through the vision about which we have been speaking and to which we now turn. He first saw in the vision:

1. The Holiness of the Lord. "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God of Host, the whole earth is full of His glory."—Isa. 6.3.

We do not know the exact nature of this vision, but one thing is sure—Isaiah beheld the glory of the Lord. So great was the impression made upon his mind that he recalls many incidents about it. He remembers that it was in the year that King Uzziah died and that it was an event over which he was happy. Uzziah was a monarch, and because of his power and prosperity, had gone into the temple to celebrate his victories by burning incense. An explosion occurred, he was burned, leprosy set in, and he died. Thus came the end of a long, dark reign of a wicked king. All this Isaiah remembered as being more than just a historical date. It was the beginning of his call to be a prophet of and for God. He exclaims at the beginning of his vision, "I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and His train filled the temple." The Lord was not upon an earthly throne, but high and lifted upon a heavenly throne. His train so completely filled the temple that there was left no room for human rulers. God was supreme. Oh, if we could just get such a vision of God supreme, how wonderful all of life would be!

Isaiah saw above the throne the seraphim. We know not its shape or its likeness, but we are told that its face and feet were covered before the presence of the Holy One. Its six wings were spread in readiness to do the will of God, above whose Majesty it stood. While the prophet stood before the seraphim he heard the choirs of heaven sing out in praise to Him who is holy. These several choirs sang, "Holy, Holy, Holy is the Lord God of Hosts." It must have been a wonderful event in the life of the prophet to have heard the heavenly voices praising God in trinitarianism. (1) Holy is the Father, who hath created heaven and earth, and man, to whom all are called to worship in the beauty of His holiness. (2) Holy is the Son, who should come to redeem the world of sin by His precious blood shed without blemish or spot. (3) Holy is the Spirit, who day by day manifests God's love and sanctifies His child.

Just as Isaiah worshiped God in holiness, so should all God's people. But man cannot worship God as did the prophet unless he puts himself in a position to behold Him high and lifted up. Such an experience is worthy of all we might do. It demands a complete surrender and unbiased devotion to Him.

2. The sinfulness of himself. "Woe is me, for I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips."

It was not until Isaiah beheld the glory of the Lord and realized His majestic holiness that he saw his own mistakes and realized the unworthiness of his own life. After he had beheld Him, high and lifted up, he exclaimed, "Woe is me, for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips and dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips, for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of Hosts."

As we behold the glory of our Lord, do we not feel undone and cannot we all confess that we are people of unclean lips and dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips. Instead of beholding our Lord, as did Isaiah, upon a throne high and lifted up, we see Him upon a cross, and as we compare our lives with His, we are conscious that we are weak, but He is strong. That He was

Dear Friends:

Some years ago we would often read in the Orphanage papers where some orphanage had received a carload of something—a whole carload! It looked big to me, and I often wondered if the Christian Orphanage would ever receive a carload of anything. We just wondered how a superintendent of an orphanage would feel to get a whole carload of something given. For several years we have been having that peculiar joy. This year has been no exception to the rule.

A few days ago, Holland-Beamon Company, of Suffolk, Va., wrote us that they were shipping us a car of coal to help us keep the children warm this winter. This is an annual donation from this firm. They get so much joy out of the giving that they are always glad to help us make it comfortable for our little children. Then our good friend, H. A. Carlton, of Raleigh, has made us have that peculiar joy twice this year. Some weeks ago he shipped us, from the Carlton farm near Mullins, S. C., a car of oats (1,531 bushels). He has also shipped us a carload of baled hay from this same farm and will ship us a car of shelled corn this fall. While we get a great joy out of the receiving, I know these donors must get a real joy out of being able to give in this large way to help make life easier and happier for helpless children.

Our good friend, W. Z. Atkinson, Titusville, Fla., shipped us last week a barrel of 200 pounds of fresh fish, fine as could be, and the children certainly enjoyed them.

We are grateful for this generosity, and it makes our heart glad. We are urging our Sunday Schools to increase the monthly offerings to help us in our financial distress, and some are doubling their offerings, and a number have joined the monthly contribution list who were not on it this year. The North Carolina and Virginia Conference still stands at the head of the list, and only lacks three being a hundred per cent Conference.

The members of the board of trustees in Eastern Virginia Conference are trying to make that Conference 100 per cent, too. I truly hope they will succeed. How much easier it would be if all our Sunday Schools would take their part, and do it well, in supporting this work! Shall helpless children suffer when we live in a land of plenty? CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, righteous altogether, we are righteous only in part. He prayed without ceasing; that we scarcely ever pray. That He had absolute faith, and that our faith is not as great as the size of a mustard seed. That he went about doing good for others, and to others; that we go about almost exclusively in the interest of self. Truly, we can say we are undone, incomplete and unworthy. But Isaiah felt that his greatest weakness lay in his sinful lips, for he exclaimed, "I am a man of unclean lips." He had heard the voice of God and listened to heavenly choirs praise God. He saw a great contrast to his own works and manner of speech. Perhaps he had blasphemed God, as did Saul his Christ. But after the vision he was persuaded of his wrongdoing and sinfulness of speech. Indeed, the lips are the blossom of man's fruitage. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Isaiah realized, as all of us should, that he who is a servant of God should be a man of clean lips.
Superintendent.

3. The purifying power of God. "Lo, this hath touched thy lips and thine iniquity is taken away and thy sins purged."

While Isaiah stood thinking of his own sins and of the weakness of his character and the numerous times his lips had spoken unclean things about God, behold, one of the seraphim flew unto him, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken from off the altar and laid it upon Isaiah's mouth and said, "Lo, this hath touched thy lips and thine iniquity is taken away and thy sins purged." What a great act of purification. How wonderful is God in His ability to cleanse a life of impurity. On another occasion, Isaiah describes the Lord's forgiveness by quoting Him in the words, "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool" (Isa. 1:18).

Now, Isaiah has experienced just what he prophesied in his first chapter. To appreciate the wonderful forgiveness of God, one must be forgiven. To know the love of God, one must be loved of Him. To appreciate the reward of service, one must serve Him.

Just as God was enabled to completely forgive the sins of Isaiah, to purify his sinful lips and use him to utter great and stirring words of prophecy, so Jesus Christ, about whom Isaiah spoke, came into the world in fulfillment of prophetic utterances and forgave all who came to Him. I see a woman taken in sin, and to her Jesus speaks, "Thy sins be forgiven; go, thou, and sin no more." I see the Son of Man take a sick man and say, "Be thou whole," and the man becomes well and useful again. Even on the cross, He prays for those whose sinful lives allowed them to persecute Him: "Forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Friends, if you are a man of unclean lips and dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips, won't you behold Him and think of what He can do for you if you will but give Him a chance? What God did for Isaiah, He, through Jesus Christ, today can do for you. What Jesus did for the woman in sin, and the man of an unclean disease, He can and will do for you.

Jesus is waiting; O come to Him now—waiting today.
Come with thy sins; at His feet lowly bow.
Come, and no longer delay.

OBITUARIES.

TUCK.

Dorcas Patrica Tuck, the infant daughter of Bro. and Sister Pressley Tuck, of Virgilina, Va., died on Saturday, June 14, 1930, age 3 months and 17 days. There are four other children—Warren, Harrell, Imogen and Major. The funeral services and burial were at Union Cemetery on the afternoon of Sunday, June 15th. Bro. and Sister Tuck have the sympathy of the entire community. They are comforted with the promise of Christ that they will see their little one again.

C. E. NEWMAN.

McPHERSON.

Bro. Wayland C. McPherson departed this life July 28, 1930, at the age of 51 years, 6 months and 3 days. Besides his wife, three sons and two daughters of Liberty, N. C., he leaves two sisters, Mrs. F. D. Hornaday, Snow Camp, and Mrs. Ralph Harris, Oriental, N. C., and five brothers—Thos. McPherson, Julian, N. C.; Dr. S. D. McPherson, Durham, N. C., and H. E. and W. W. and Dr. C. W. McPherson, of Burlington, N. C.

In the presence of a large, sorrowing congregation, burial services were conducted at Pleasant Hill Church, where he had long been a faithful and devoted member, by the pastor and writer, assisted by Dr. G. O. Lankford and Rev. W. M. Smith, and his body laid to rest underneath a mound of beautiful flowers. We lament his going and pray God's richest blessing upon his loved ones, feeling that our loss is his eternal gain.

T. J. GREEN.

WILKERSON.

David Young Wilkerson, the son of R. F. and Nancy Pool Wilkerson, was born the 8th of June, 1850, and died June 13, 1930, age 80 years and 5 months. He was twice married. His first wife was Miss Julie Ann Elliott. To them were born six children, all living, as follows: Mrs. J. E. Goode, Mrs. R. M. Sneed, Mrs. A. L. Walker, of Virgilina, Va, and D. Y. Wilkerson, Jr., of Roxboro, N. C.; R. T. Wilkerson, of Dinwiddie County, Va., and Mrs. R. H. Eastwood, also of Dinwiddie.

After the death of his first wife, in 1915, he married Mrs. Roxie Satterfield, who survives him. There are thirty-seven grandchildren and twenty-seven great-grandchildren. Bro. Wilkerson united with Union Christian Church in 1926. He was an industrious, honest man and had a great host of friends. His health began to decline in February of this year. He suffered with patience and was willing to depart and be with his Saviour. Funeral services were held at the home, Saturday, June 14th, by the writer, assisted by Rev. H. H. Johnson, and burial in Union Cemetery.

C. E. NEWMAN.

PEARCE.

John Julius Pearce was born February 21, 1868, and died July 17, 1930. On November 9, 1886, Mr. Pearce was married to Miss Martha Winston. To this union, thirteen children were born, nine of which are living. Bro. Pearce united with the Baptist Church at Youngsville, N. C., in youth; later he moved his membership to Oak Level Christian Church, where he was faithful until the end. The Church lost one of its most faithful and loyal deacons and members. He was loved by all who knew him, and he loved his home, Church and community. No one could be missed in the community more than Bro. Pearce.

Bro. Pearce is survived by his wife, nine children, eleven grandchildren, five brothers, one sister, and a host of other relatives and friends. Services were conducted by the writer. Interment was made in Oak Level Cemetery. The Lord bless the bereaved.

H. E. CRUTCHFIELD.

COUNCIL.

Mrs. Rose B. Council, of Franklin, Va., died at Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va., July 12, 1930, in the 74th year of her age. She was a member of Union Church, a woman of gentle, retiring manner, a home-maker, where her family and friends loved to gather. She had reared a family of six, all of whom survive her and rise up to call her blessed. They are Mrs. D. F. Morriss, of Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. H. T. Sheffield and Mrs. A. T. Sheffield, of Suffolk; H. G. and R. C. Council, of Franklin, and Thomas Council, of Handsom. There are eighteen grandchildren. Her husband, W. E. Council, had passed on before her about a year ago.

She had been a sufferer for ten weeks before the end came as a sweet release to her tired and worn body. Her spirit has been released to enjoy the blessedness of those who have lived in Him and for Him here. In the absence of the pastor, funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. E. Brittle, Dr. W. W. Staley, and G. H. Spooner, from the residence, near Franklin, on Monday, July 14th.

CARL.

Miss Jennie A. Carl was born March 21, 1864, and died June 21, 1930, aged 66 years and 3 months. She united with Mayland Christian Church a year or two ago. She was highly respected in her community. Funeral services at Linville Creek Church of the Brethren, June 23rd.

A. W. ANDES.

REESE.

Miss Lucy Anna Reese departed this life July 9, 1930, being 72 years of age. In early life she united with Pleasant Grove Christian Church (Va.), of which she remained a member till death. Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Carroll, of the M. E. Church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Harvey Brook, of Lynchburg, Va. Her remains were laid to rest beside that of her mother, in the Church cemetery. Peace be to her ashes.

A FRIEND.

SHAW.

Mrs. Thomas L. Shaw was born February 24, 1872, and departed this life July 21, 1930, age 58 years, 4 months and 27 days. She was married to Thomas L. Shaw thirty-eight years ago. To this union were born six children—Will, Paul, Rosa May, Ray, Bessie and Mrs. Mary Wright. All survive except Rosa May, who died at the age of six years.

Sister Shaw professed faith in Christ as her Saviour in early life and joined Bethel Christian Church, where she was a faithful and consistent member. She was highly esteemed in her community. Her sweet and pleasant disposition won many friends. She leaves to mourn their loss a devoted husband, five children, four brothers, two sisters, twelve grandchildren, a number of relatives and a host of friends.

Funeral service was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. F. Apple, her pastor, at Concord. Her remains were laid to rest in the Church cemetery to await the resurrection. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Dr. W. C. Wicker.

THE WORLD'S POPULATION.—

New figures put the world's population at something over two billion, divided among the continents as follows: Asia, 950 million; Europe, 550 million; North and South America, 230 million; Africa, 150 million; Australia, seven million.

BRITISH INDIA.—

The situation in India still remains acute, but it is, however, relieved by some hopeful signs. The unofficial European community in India has recently come out with a very timely statement affirming their sympathy with the national aspirations and asking the government to declare, without any further delay, that the object of the round-table conference which is to be held in London in October is to devise some measures for granting to India, within a specified period, the dominion form of government with necessary safeguards. There are rumors afloat that the viceroy will make some such important announcement when he opens the legislative assembly this week. Efforts are being made to bring about some form of conciliation between the government and Mahatma Gandhi through the agency of men of good will. Though Gandhi is still in prison, he is the only man who can speak for the whole of India.

HURLBUT'S PASSING.—

Dr. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, for a long time one of the best-known Sunday School workers in the whole world, died at Bloomfield, N. J., August 3, 1930, at the ripe age of eighty-seven. He first came into prominence as a nationally known Christian leader when he joined with Dr. John H. Vincent, another minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who later became bishop, and one or two others, to found the Chautauqua assembly at Chautauqua, N. Y. Two years ago, a movement was started to build the Hurlbut Memorial Community Church, at Chautauqua, in honor of this renowned Christian leader. For years, Dr. Hurlbut was editor of the Sunday school material of his denomination. He wrote books largely retelling the biblical narrative for the use of study classes. His "Story of the Bible" is said still to be the most widely circulated children's book in its field in America. "The workers fall, but the work goes on."

METHODIST CHURCH UNION IN KOREA.—

Bishop Herbert Welch, of Pittsburgh, will return to Korea in October, where he will be present at the session of the conference between the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, where plans for the union of these two great branches of Methodism will be consummated for the promotion of missionary work in that country. This is a movement in the right direction for all missionary work not only between Churches of the same name and family, but for all Churches which name the name of Christ. Why should Christ be divided when presented to the mind in mission lands? Why should He be divided when presented to the unsaved in Christian lands? The movement towards Church union is a movement that will, please God, continue to move until the consummation of the brotherhood of man under the conscious Fatherhood of God in a great Christian fellowship which shall unite all saved peoples so that there shall be no conflict in the body of Christ.

DECLINE IN EVANGELISM.—

The press reports that evangelistic work is becoming more and more difficult. The number of converts is decreasing in evangelistic campaigns. Professional evangelists are decreasing in number, according to the replies of one hundred questionnaires to prominent evangelists sent out by Chas. Stelzle, New York publicity man. According to the report, the average income of these evangelists is about $3,000 annually, which is much less than it was ten years ago. Evangelistic results are greatest in the Middle West and in the South. Mass evangelism is much less popular in the far West than in any other section of the country. Dr. Stelzle says, however, that "there is a strong feeling that nothing but the old-time religion will ever change conditions." The chief cause for the present decline in religious work and evangelistic results seems to be commercialism, materialism, radios, automobiles, increased interest in sports, and other engagements which crowd out religious interest. The remedy seems to be a more intensive attention to religion as an important factor in life.

PROHIBITION NOT OVERCROWDING JAILS.—

"Contrary to the usual unfounded claims of the wets, prohibition is not overcrowding State and Federal prisons. According to official statistics recently published in the Congressional Record, there were 116,670 prisoners in the State prisons January 1, 1930, of which 4,037 were prohibition violators; seven States had no prohibition violators at all in their State prisons, namely: New York, Nevada, Montana, Arizona, New Hampshire, Louisiana and North Carolina. New Jersey had one solitary bootlegger in the State's prison; there were two in Wisconsin and three in Utah.

"In Federal prisons there were 11,270 prisoners, making a total of all prisoners in Federal and State penitentiaries of 127,490 on January 1, 1930, on which date there was a grand total of 7,158 prohibition violators in all prisons, about 5½ per cent of the total, a proportion far too small to cause general overcrowding. The increase and excess of prisoners is caused by theft, burglary, larceny, forgery, assault and hold-ups." —The National Enquirer.

CHURCH UNITY IN THE EAST.—

Christians in the East have spoken on Church unity in a manner that deserves careful consideration. One hundred and seven of the leading Christians of India have spoken in a manifesto on Church union which puts the attitude of the East as succinctly as it could be expressed. The Indian Christians say, "It is felt by all that the attainment of unity is fundamental for India's progress." It is thought that this desire vigorously expresses itself in the Indian Churches as a movement for Church union. This spirit of union is in keeping with the spirit of tolerance of different forms of belief that has been peculiar to the people of India. The theological dogmas of the West have not dominated the Eastern mind, as they are not indigenous, and the Indian Christians are indifferent to them. They further hold that the existence of denominations tends to retard the growth of Christian experience and circumscribe the scope of its expression on those forms of thought and life which are most normal to the people. They believe that a united Church, free from the bonds of the present separated sects, will afford a congenial atmosphere for the Indian expression of Christianity.

EMOTION IN RELIGION.—

In a conference for ministers held at Presbyterian Seminary, Chicago, this summer, Dr. W. C. Covert, general secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Education, deplored the fact that organization is replacing individual human emotions in religion. He declared that the Protestant Churches of America must "arise from their ecclesiastical routine," for they are in danger of being buried beneath the "dust of dignity" as well as being afflicted with "stereotyped terminology, cant and insincerity, intellectual abstractions and diluted devotions." He mentions six points in which the Churches err—the neglect of the emotions; the indifference of Church people; the lack of appreciation of worship; the regularity of precedents and customs the meaningless vows of fellowship; the devastated areas in the spiritual life of the Church. The remedy recommended for the development of an emotional basis of religion on art, music, prayer and worship was the consideration of the possibilities of "the thrilling intimacy of a great brotherhood; the mystical appeal of divine worship; the spiritual wealth of a noble hymnology, and the obsession of a great personal devotion to Jesus Christ."

NOTES-PERSONALS

Chaplain H. E. Rountree, U. S. N. (Utah), has returned from his tours in Europe, and his address is 424 North Street, Portsmouth, Va. Chaplain Rountree was with the midshipmen's cruise of the summer, visiting France, Germany, Norway and Scotland. He reports a very interesting and profitable cruise, and that the fleet was received cordially in all countries visited.

Rev. E. B. White, of Windsor, Va., writes: "We are enjoying the great Massanetta Springs Summer Bible Conference. This is a wonderful place, and our welcome here has been most cordial, hearty and sincere. The Bible lectures, sermons and music are inspiring. In these days of stubborn wickedness and ungodliness, it is refreshing to be at a place where the marvelous, infinite, matchless grace of our Lord Jesus Christ is emphasized as it is here. The fellowship with many of our own beloved and consecrated ministers has been delightful. May the dear Lord bless our great denomination now and forevermore."

MT. ZION.

We are serving our second term at this place. This is a good Church to serve. The attendance has been good throughout the year. Last Sunday the Church was filled with people. The Sunday School is doing fine. A Woman's Missionary Society was organized the first of the year and is doing fine.

Rev. L. A. Nall, of Elon College, assisted us in our revival the second week in July. Bro. Nall is a man of God. He is interested in the work. His messages were plain, searching and powerful. There were about forty-five conversions and thirty-four additions to the Church. Thirty-one were baptized last Sunday. To God be all the glory and praise. Amen.

POUNDED.

Friday, August 1, 1930, was the closing day of our revival meeting at Concord. When we went to our car, behold, it was loaded! The thought had been so well circulated among the people that we had no hint of it at all. It was a complete surprise, but very pleasant. We wish to acknowledge to all who had a part our many thanks for their kindness.

Among the things found on arriving at home were coffee, sugar, salt, sausage, corn, snap-beans, Irish potatoes, flour, meal, peaches, canned fruit, jelly, preserves, butter, honey, grapes, pickles, cucumbers, rice, soda, soap, etc. May the Lord bless the good people and help us to be a better and more appreciative servant. This is a splendid people to serve.

MOORE UNION.

The best revival meeting that has been held at Moore Union in several years was held there the fourth week in July, conducted by Pastor Rev. Sikes Smith, of Greensboro, N. C.

The meeting increased in interest at each service, the attendance was good and the music was inspiring. They have a fine choir, and with a little practice would be able to do great things in a musical way. It is great for a Church to have the privilege to develop its talent in every line of Christian service. This proves the power of the Church, and it proves also that God is with His people.

There were forty-four converts made during the meeting and fifteen new members added to the Church. Everybody seemed to be interested in the meeting. We hope to have our same pastor with us another year. May the spirit of Christ fill us all and prepare us for our part in this momentous work.

(Miss) Eva Maye Moore.

CONCORD.

Our revival meeting began here the fourth Sunday in July and ran through Friday of the following week. There was a harmonious spirit in evidence throughout the entire meeting. A good-will feeling prevailed. The spiritual life of the Church was refreshed and quickened. Many expressed themselves, regretting that the meeting had to close when it did. The services were held in the daytime entirely. Attendance was very good, gradually increasing in number until the close.

Rev. T. A. Wall, a Baptist minister, had charge of the preaching. He made a splendid impression upon the people with his zeal in the Lord's work. He is a splendid preacher of righteousness. His messages were highly scriptural and instructive in spiritual things. Bro. Wall is a firm believer in the old-time religion. His fellowship is very pleasant. His greatest care is to see people saved, and his greatest delight is in preaching the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. May the Lord bless him greatly in his labors of love elsewhere.

There were three professions of faith in Christ and two additions to the local Church. The Church was greatly encouraged and revived spiritually. We are thankful for the good seed that was sown and work done. To the Lord be the glory and praise for His wonderful love and power.

L. L. Wyrick.

FROM REV. G. D. HUNT.

The revival at Noon Day Church closed last Friday night, with the Church greatly revived and twenty-three new names enrolled as members. This was a very gracious meeting. Many bright testimonies were given for Jesus Christ, many prayers were offered, and many souls were saved. The people of God were made happy and the Church rejoiced to see those young lives dedicated to God.

I have been this week with Rev. W. T. Meacham, in a revival at New Harmony Church, in Randolph County, Ala. I am sure that this has been one of the finest meetings held here in quite a good while. Large crowds and good order, with fine music were special features of this meeting. It seemed that everybody was anxious for a good meeting. Even sinners were moved upon by the Spirit, and four members were added to the Church roll. I desire to make special mention of the young people who contributed so largely to the interest of the meeting. There is a fine group of young people in the community, and much bright talent should and must be developed for the Lord's work here. It will be a glad day for the Christian Church in that part of our Conference when we can locate a preacher in that section to look after the interests of our Church. We have four or five Churches in that section, and they could form a very nice pastorate and thus be able to do constructive work. We should think and pray over this matter.

Our Church is passing through a period of reconstruction, and we will be forced to plan better and bigger things for the kingdom. Why not our Churches in the several sections of our Conference begin now to consider grouping themselves into pastorates, and thus save themselves and our preachers from defeat. Let us come together prayerfully and humbly, and God will show us the way.

I shall write more fully of this matter at an early date. I will assist in a meeting at Beulah Church next week and will also undertake to rebuild my home at Truitt, Ala. I am so thankful to all my friends for their sympathy in our great loss. God will bless you all.

G. D. Hunt.

UNION (SOUTHAMPTON).

Thinking that it would not be out of order to say just a few words through The Sun columns in regard to our work at Union (Southampton), I take great pleasure in saying that our pastor, Rev. R. F. Brittle, is preaching some fine sermons. We are having preaching twice a month—second and fourth Sunday afternoons, at 3 o'clock—and the congregation is growing all the while and it seems that our pastor and people are working together so much. We are having a good Sunday School, with four organized classes and a fine prayer service once a week. We also have a community song service twice a month, which is led by Rev. S. K. Emurian, of Suffolk, and is largely attended by different denominations and is enjoyed by all who attend. Our Sunday School gives the two best Sunday collections to the Orphanage and missions, and the fifth Sunday's collection to Elon College, and I think that the pastor and people are very much together in the work of the betterment of the Church; and as for myself, I feel very much encouraged and know we, as a Church, are very weak financially, but I trust that we are growing stronger and stronger spiritually as the days come and go.

We are very much in need of a new place of worship, as our present place of worship is very old and very much out of repair. But the pastor and people are beginning to talk about ways and plans concerning a new place of worship, and I am asking all Christian workers to please remember us in prayer, that God our Father may open a way and hearts, and also treasuries, that we may soon have something to depend on, to look forward to, and I know that when Christian people begin to work and pray that something will be done, for prayer changes things.

Hoping and praying that a new day is awaiting us for bigger and better things at Union for our God and His Christ in building up His kingdom,

Sincerely,

Franklin, Va. F. H. Joyner.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

THE MINUTES of the Florida Congregational Conference have been attractively printed and are being distributed to the Churches and ministers.

J. BERNARD ROOT, Jr., arrived on July 31st, at the parsonage at Sanford, Fla., to gladden the hearts of the pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. J. Bernard Root.

REV. H. B. MOWBRAY, pastor-elect at Demorest, Ga., is at Chatauqua, N. Y., and expects to begin work with the Demorest Church on the second Sunday in September.

A UNION CHRISTIAN MEETING of all the Congregational societies in Miami was recently held at the First Church, Miami. Dr. Rexford Raymond gave the principal address, speaking on "Work in the Southern Mountains."

DR. W. KNIGHTON BLOOM, who has been attending the International Congregational Council, in Bournemouth, and enjoying a well-earned and needed rest among old friends in England, will sail from Liverpool on the Adriatic on August 23rd, reaching New York on the 31st.

REV. C. DeW. BROWER, of Interlachen, Fla., who has a large measure of the missionary spirit, has spent some of his vacation Sundays supplying the pastorless little Church at Moss Bluff. This volunteer and gracious service is sincerely appreciated by the people of the Church.

DR. C. REXFORD RAYMOND, of Chattanooga, recently preached at the Miami Beach Community Congregational Church. Dr. and Mrs. Raymond are the guests of their daughter and her husband, Rev. and Mrs. Orville D. Ullom. Mr. Ullom is assistant pastor of the Miami Beach Church.

MIAMI, FIRST: Under the leadership of Rev. O. H. Denney, summer pastor, this Church has recently received thirteen new members. Mr. Denney reports that, as a result of the recent Church survey held in Miami, he received 212 cards and is systematically calling on all. He made fifty-five calls in one week recently.

MR. A. G. SWARTZ, who is assisting Prof. C. Lisle Percy in the North Georgia larger parish, began on August 3rd a series of protracted meetings at Trinity Church, near Duluth, Ga. There will be a week's meeting in each of the country Churches—Trinity, Macedonia and Liberty. He is being assisted by Rev. S. M. Penn, of Sophia, N. C., who was formerly located in that region.

BACK FROM MEXICO: Dr. Elisha A. King, of Miami Beach, has returned from Mexico, where he was a member of the seminar conducted by Dr. Hubert Herring for the study of Mexican life and conditions, with the purpose of promoting better relations between the two countries. Dr. and Mrs. King are now at the Isles of Shoals Conference, where Dr. King is to deliver two lectures upon his experiences and observations in Mexico.

CHRISTIAN LIFE CONFERENCE.

The third annual Christian Life Conference for the West Florida young people was held at Cottonville Church, July 18-20, 1930. This year the young people from three of our Alabama Churches joined the West Florida group and added greatly to the fellowship of the conference. There were eighty-seven registered delegates and thirty-seven of that group were entertained in the homes of the Cottonsville people.

It is a joy to see the young people progress in leadership from year to year. This year many more took part in programs and discussions than had done so before, and they bore more responsibility for the program of the conference. The purpose of these conferences is to build leadership for the work of the kingdom through giving to the young people a realization of their responsibility in this great task and some training for meeting it. This year we had two periods for studying the program of the Sunday School, the Christian Endeavor, and the Daily Vacation Bible School, and for giving help in the choice of a life work, and for planning the recreational program of the Church.

Devotional exercises were conducted by the delegates from Blackwoods and Antioch, Ala., and from Crestview, Dorcas, and Cottonville, West Florida. These groups presented stunts to add to the fun of the recreation hour, and enriched the program greatly. One of the interesting items was the contest in Bible basket-ball. Dorcas met Cottonville, then Blackwoods, and conquered both. This made her third year of winning in Bible contests. All of the teams had done remarkable work in studying the questions on the four gospels.

Besides the local leaders, Rev. W. H. Tillman, pastor of the entertaining Church, and Rev. J. D. Simpson, pastor of the Crestview Presbyterian Church, there were present Dr. F. P. Ensminger, assistant for the Southeast, representing the Church Extension Boards; Rev. J. E. Each, of Thorsby United Protestant Church; Sidney Davies, S. S. S. worker for West Florida; Miss Dora Brackin, recently appointed for full-time extension service, and Miss Marguerite Davison, extension worker. These leaders gave inspirational messages to the young people, led classes or conducted discussions whenever they were called upon to help. This year two of the young people took charge of discussion questions and received hearty response from their fellows. These are the questions selected and discussed by the young people: "What does it mean to be a Christian?" "Why do young people not pray?" "What are the main obstacles in the way of a young person who wants to do right?" "Why do young people go to Church?" "Why don't they go?" "What place has missions in world peace?"

An impressive addition to our program was the candle-lighting service held out-of-doors immediately after a brief sunset meeting. A large group of young people was present, and it was an inspiration to see them walk away with their lighted candles, singing, "Where He Leads Me, I Will Follow." The conference was closed by the consecration and Communion service, presided over by Dr. Ensminger, assisted by Rev. J. E. Each and Sidney Davies.

The business of the conference was conducted by Miss Allene Stanley, chairman for 1929, until the election of Miss Lola Hart, of Dorcas, chairman for 1930. Miss Ina Adams, of Antioch Church, was elected secretary, and Miss Mildred Rister, of Blackwoods, treasurer. The award for the delegation contributing the most to the spirit of the conference was given to the delegation from Blackwoods Church, Headland, Ala. The committee on invitation accepted the invitation of Dorcas Church to hold the 1931 C. L. C. there. Chairmen from each Church were appointed to make plans for the 1931 C. L. C. and to share them with the program committee. Each conference has been better than the one preceding, and every one is looking forward to making the next one still more helpful to the young people of the South Alabama and West Florida area.

EVOLUTION'S SHAKY FOUNDATION.

God seems to have raised up Bryan as a David to meet the challenge of the giant Evolution that is defying the armies of the God of the Bible as the pet champion of present-day Philistines (modernists, higher critics and advocates of new theology). Apropos to this, there has appeared an account of the last hours of Darwin, credited to an English Wesleyan publication. It shows amazing light upon the origin of the evolutionary theory and its shaky foundation:

"The Last Words of Darwin.

"The following little account by Lady Hope of the death of Charles Darwin, the evolutionist, is startling. It is a most wonderful narrative and contains the account of a great and terrible tragedy. The tragedy of Christendom for the past sixty years, the lapse from the true faith, the blight which has spoiled the Christian harvest, have here a surpassingly strange light cast upon them.

"Darwin is propped up in bed, and he looks out over the lovely landscape as the sun is setting. He is reading—the Bible! Says Lady Hope: 'I made some allusion to the strong opinions expressed by many persons on the history of the creation, its grandeur, and then to their treatment of the earlier chapters of the Book of Genesis.

" 'He seemed greatly distressed, his fingers twitched nervously and a look of agony came over his face as he said, "I was a young man with unformed ideas. I threw out queries, suggestions, wondering all the time over everything; and to my astonishment the ideas took like wildfire. People made a religion of them."

" 'Was there ever a more dramatic scene? The very soul of tragedy is here exposed to us. Darwin, enthusiast for the Bible, speaking with glowing enthusiasm about the "grandeur of this Book," reminded of that modern evolutionary movement in theology which, linked with skeptical criticism, has become a blight in all the Churches, and has destroyed biblical faith in multitudes—Darwin, with a look of agony, deploring it all and declaring, "I was a young man with unformed ideas," and imploring his visitor to gather servants, tenants and neighbors together and preach to them Jesus Christ.'

"This remarkable picture of Darwin is a challenge to every modernist. What an overwhelming criticism! The 'unformed ideas' of the young man Darwin are the basis of modern evolutionary theology!"—Rev. S. I. Keeler.

In a lecture at Mansfield, Dr. Dinsdale T. Young said that the subject of one of his sermon-lectures was Samuel Bradburn, a poor boy, who once worked at a cobbler's bench, and who became a minister and president of the Wesleyan Methodist Conferenec. At one conference several ministers spoke of the sacrifiecs they had made, one saying that he had "given up his all" to take up the work of a Christian minister. Mr. Bradburn then rose, and, to the great amusement of the conference, said, "Brethren, when I came into this ministry I gave up half a dozen of the best awls that a man ever had."—Christian Herald.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

II.

Sunday A. M., June 15th. The fog-horn on this good ship, Adriatic, peeled forth its doleful sound of warning and alarm all night. This was not conducive to sleep to one not accustomed to the sea and ships and such. I arose at 7:15 for an elegant, warm salt-water bath, which partly atones for a restless night and restores disquieted nerves. It is indeed a beautiful Sabbath morning; sweet, cooling sea breezes, a glorious, hazy sun driving away the fog, a calm blue sea, and withal a day of rest, worship and comfort on God's great ocean.

At breakfast, our conversation drifts to Abraham Lincoln. Dr. Helfenstein argues that Lincoln was a very religious man and he does not blame Lincoln for not joining any Church of his day; the Church then was too narrow and sectarian. Recently there has appeared in the Southern Churchman a series of articles which claim to be authentic and indisputable, to the effect that Lincoln was an atheist in his early years, and never did get over his youthful days of doubt and skepticism. On the other hand, Dr. Barton (who is of our company today) has written a book on "The Soul of Lincoln," which seems to prove beyond doubt that Lincoln was a very devout, religicus man. Great men make one contribution to the world worth noting, namely: they furnish matter and material for infinite debate and discussion.

It is certainly good to recline in an easy chair on deck—cool, calm, comfortable, delightful—and with gratitude to God for His wondrous works, look out on the calm sea, spread out like a huge blue-plush carpet on a lawn, with now and then whiffs of wind beneath it.

At 1 o'clock we have a delightful and hearty luncheon. Helfenstein and I eat fresh lobster, but Smith thinks little of lobster; even the name seems stupid and senseless. I ask our "waiter" to bring me a glass of "fifty-fifty." Sure, says our English waiter; "you mean ''alf and alf'." But, at any rate, I get what I asked for—a delicious glass of milk, half cream.

At 3 P. M., 600 of us meet in one of the ship's dining-rooms, now transformed with pulpit, Bible and hymn books, into a place of worship. An orchestra of piano and stringed instruments leads the music of several sacred hymns, in the singing of which the great congregation joins with great zest and melody. A Dr. Archibald, of Massachusetts, leads the devotions and preaches a very appropriate sermon, using as his text the first words of our Lord's Prayer, "Our Father." His subject was, "Jesus' Idea of God." If we are to gain the right conception and have the right idea of God, we will not get that conception second-hand, even from the books of science and philosophy, or from nature. We must get it from Jesus. He had the fullest, freest, noblest, most perfect idea and conception of God ever gained or held by any one. Jesus looked upon God as "Our Father," and lived in the light of that idea. And He it is who has called us to be disciples of His and sent us out as His ambassadors.

At noon today our good ship had made only 274 miles since leaving her moorings in New York, having to creep all night through a fog, and is scheduled to make about 400 miles a day. So at 4 P. M. she is driving with all her engines at full speed through a friendly sea; and within the next twenty-four hours, if she keeps this up, will recover all her lost time.

At 4 P. M. they serve tea and cakes on deck. Think of serving out on deck more than a thousand cups of tea and more than two thousand delicious cookies! But English waiters and seamen are efficiently trained and skilled, and all goes as orderly as a marriage feast. On the sea, God seems to have a free hand, unlet, unhindered by the vile and desecrating hand of man. It is today just as God made it thousands of years ago. Some three hundred years ago the first Congregational pilgrims came over on the Mayflower and sailed this very ocean. Well, it is today as unmarked by man, as calm and serene, or as restless and stormy, as when those first pilgrims came over. The whole expanse of the sea, as far as the eye can discern, remains without a sign or a mark or a monument or a token by man. Here indeed one meets and realizes fully that he is in God's hand and is face to face with Him in creation and in government.

We have a glorious sunset, one whose colors and splendor beggars all description. This has been indeed and in truth God's holy Sabbath, and in our hearts we rejoice because we have been blessed to see and enjoy it. J. O. A.

LAWLESSNESS DEPLORED.

"Under the protection of Providence, our fathers hewed out this mighty nation and created for us a priceless legacy, which, in sheer gratitude to them, in simple justice to ourselves, we must cherish, safeguard, and pass on to posterity," writes Governor William G. Conley of West Virginia, in the United States Daily. He continued, in part:

"We have a country worth living in, worth fighting for; and, whatever may be our shortcomings in the form of government or in administering it, we have the best government in the world, because it rests on the people and not on the few; because it rests on persons and not alone on property; because it rests on the free development of public opinion and not on the authority of an aristocracy.

"There is a widespread tendency to disobey the law and to look upon constituted authority with disrespect. Even some of those in high position who have taken the oath to support the Constitution have opened their floodgates of oratory in opposition to the very form of our government, and in their estimation it stands convicted of momentous achievements for the betterment of humanity.

"The minor delinquencies of this great government, inevitable in its spelndid advancement, are held up to scorn as indications of inherent faults in our whole political organization. Established customs have been criticised and ridiculed, our politics derided as vicious beyond comparison, and an immorality written into practical American ethics that does not exist and never has existed except in the imaginations of the iconoclasts.

"If a small portion of the energy and enthusiasm of these iconoclasts were used in upholding law and order, our present governmental system and the hands of those entrusted with its administration, there would be less turmoil and dissatisfaction."

One might compare these splendid sentiments in regard to upholding the laws of our country with those expressed by Rev. John A. Ryan, professor of moral theology and industrial ethics at the Catholic University of America, some time ago, when writing on law enforcement with especial regard to the eighteenth amendment. He is quoted as saying: "Whether a particular act of the State is contrary to the moral law is a question which obviously must be decided by other authority or tribunal than the State itself, since the State has no competence in the field of morals."

"In deciding whether the obnoxious lay ought to be obeyed . . . the Catholic citizen may consult his priest or his bishop or the Pope."

Such expressions by one in a position to influence public sentiment hardly lead to a high regard for the laws of the country and the Constitution.

PERSONALITY IN SERVICE.

There is nothing that counts for more in the service of the kingdom than personality; and yet how few there are that realize what a decided asset personality may be! We think of service in terms of monetary gifts, in terms of exercising one's talents, and in terms of personal service; but seldom in terms of just being the sort of individual whose personality will be of definite service.

It does not require much consideration to realize to what extent an unattractive personality interferes with the work of the kingdom. In most every Church there are those who are faithful enough in attendance, and who are regular in their financial support; but if all the facts are taken into consideration they must be put down as a liability rather than an asset. And the reason is that they repel people upon casual acquaintance, and are very difficult people with whom to co-operate. Generally, such people have many excellent qualities and characteristics, but there are certain other qualities that more than counterbalance the good points.

It is impossible to adequately and exactly define personality. Temperament and disposition enter largely as determining factors in personality. Yet there are many acquired habits and characteristics that are equally important in determining personality.

The gospel of Jesus Christ ought, above all things, to make one attractive, loveable, and co-operative in the finest sense of that word. That the gospel does not always have such a beneficent effect upon the individual is due to the imperfect understanding of the gospel, and the fact that it does not have free course and power in the life. It has never yet had a chance to do its perfect work.

It ought not to be necessary for the Christian to have to put forth a conscious effort to influence people and to draw them to Jesus. There is, of course, a legitimate place for invitation and exhortation in Christian service. And yet most of us, should we consider the matter, would have to admit that those who have influenced us most profoundly for Christ have been those who have said the least to us, but whose lives have been so beautiful that they have been a drawing factor.

One frequently hears it said that people are driven from the Church by the inconsistent lives of Church members. But I doubt that those whose lives are glaringly inconsistent really exercise a restraining influence over those who are not Christians. Such persons are recognized, even by the most unrighteous, as falling short in every respect of that which they profess. It seems to me that the really dangerous persons in the Church are those whose lives are above reproach in every respect save that they are hard, unattractive and repellant. As one considers the life of Jesus, the winsomeness of His personality is inescapable. The same characteristic, even if in a less marked degree, ought to be observable in the lives of all those who profess to be followers of Jesus. We would see in a Christian, not only those things that may be commended and admired, but those beauties of soul which stir our love.

UNEMPLOYMENT.

So much is said and written in these days about the lack of employment, and so many suggestions are made for relief from this situation that the question becomes of interest to all who care for the welfare of society. It has not been decided whether unemployment is the result of hard times or hard times the result of unemployment. They seem to run together and the question is still open for investigation; but the range of both hard times and unemployment covers such a large area and affects so many people and interests that a solution of the question would give relief to many people and many lines of business. The question is usually approached with the thought of material interest. In fact, this age is commercial in its thought, its government, its purposes and plans. Public opinion seems more concerned about material prosperity than about moral integrity. The question of unemployment has not been considered from a moral and religious standpoint. The condition is plain, the cause of the condition is the core of the subject.

All public questions are related to the moral condition of the people; and this is especially true in Christian nations. Political questions cannot be separated from moral questions; the eighteenth amendment represents moral interests as well as political and commercial interests. While the Church and State are separate, as organizations, their interests are related for the welfare of society. The State itself is based on moral principles. The inscription on the coins of the government, "In God we trust," acknowledges this trust and recognizes the moral supremacy of God over all. The question may be propounded in the consideration of unemployment whether there is not a relation between commercial employment and religious employment. There is work for all in the service of God in His Church. There is room for all with full reward for service. "Why stand ye here all the day idle? They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive" (Matt. 20:6, 7). The question may be asked, "Are those who complain that they can get no work, real workers in the Church of Jesus Christ?" Are not the idle in the commercial work among those who are idle in the Church. Is it not true that the army of those without jobs in mills have not been busy in the work of the Master. Do you know of many faithful workers in the Church who are idle in the common work of life? If employers and employees were all busy in doing the Lord's work it would bring about such a spirit of "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you" that mills would be open, whistles continue to call men to work, and men would be employed. Co-operation based on religious grounds would solve the question of unemployment. As long as workers absent themselves from the house of prayer and do nothing to help the Church in its effort to save the world, they may hunt in vain for jobs with good pay. There seems to be no large number of women out of work; and the working-women are more faithful in Sunday School and Church, in contributions to missions and benevolent causes than men. What the working-men need first of all is to work for Jesus Christ and His Church. W. W. S.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH NEWS.

There could be no news in our Church paper that would be more genuinely interesting to the larger constituency of the Christian Church than news for the firing line in the field. If our pastors would write frequently to the columns of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, giving in succinct, concrete form, from week to week, the real items of news from their field, the Church paper would be the most interesting periodical reading that comes to our homes. There is too much space taken up with academic articles which are interesting to the contributors and a certain class of subscribers, but to the mass of our people, news from the several fields of the pastors would be much more interesting reading.

All unusual activities in Church life, and all successes in pastoral and evangelistic activities would awaken interest and renewed activities in other fields. All methods of Church work which resulted in awakened interest, renewed efforts, greater undertakings, Church growth, better organization, more intense emotional and personal religious activities, and successful personal evangelism would be stimulating reading.

Great undertakings, resulting in increased interest in the Orphanage, enthusiastic extension of missionary activities, stimulating support of the colleges, mobilizing and organizing our younger people to systematic religious work, promoting increased attendance at Sunday School, and bringing about a changed attitude towards the real value of religion in the life of the whole community would catch the eye and hold the attention of the readers of the Church paper.

Life is always interesting, the concrete description of the life of the Church at work is thrilling; the personal experience of Christians in the solutions of their problems is inspiring, and contributions to the Church paper which would be filled with the intimate, personal undertakings of devoted Christian workers would engage the attention of a large constituency of the Church.

When we can induce our ministers to write regularly about their Church life, their Church problems and difficulties, and the successful handling of these problems, then ministers and laymen alike will become enthusiastic subscribers and readers of the Church paper, and renewed and growing interest will be awakened in the entire Church life.

In the business world, printers' ink plays a large part in giving publicity to what is being done, and helps to bring about interest and success. The children of this world are wiser than the children of light, and the business world moves forward to greater and greater draft on our time, interest and efforts, which drain off the interest, time and efforts from religious activities. When the Church keeps pace with good business publicity in ever keeping the things of value before the public mind, it will engage and hold a large place in the life of our people.

We become satiated, satisfied, and sometimes nauseated with too much of the academic contribution to our Church paper; we do not have any too much about our important Church institutions, but we have far too little about the life and activities of our local Churches. We are too little together in conference and convention to learn much about the continuous movement of the Church to create enthusiasm and to keep alive interest from year to year at white heat. The successes of others, acquaintance with what others are doing, and how they are working to promote the kingdom would enhearten the discouraged, stimulate interest in the indifferent, inspire the diffident, appeal to the inactive, and engender enthusiasm in the minds of those who have a narrow vision of our field and work.

If pastors would write about the things in their fields which are of special interest to themselves and their people, the human element in such reports would awaken interest in the minds of others who are undertaking similar activities. Human nature is very much alike the world over, and Christianized human nature develops similar interest in similar situations. Such interest is contagious and will spread from heart to heart until the entire Church will become more intensely interested in all we are doing if we keep the things worth while ever before the minds of our people.

ACTS IN CHEYENNE DIALECT.

By the publication of the Acts of the Apostles in the Cheyenne dialect by the American Bible Society, one more language is added to the long list of languages in which the Scriptures have been printed by the society. This is the first of the society's publications in this dialect spoken by some 3,000 Cheyenne Indians in Montana and Oklahoma.

The translation work was done by the Rev. Rodolphe Petter, a Mennonite missionary, of Lame Bear, Mont. The text was first multigraphed by Mr. Petter and an Indian helper, Ernest M. Cheyenne, and then reproduced by photography, a process of making plates for Scripture portions which is playing an increasingly large part in the publication work of the American Bible Society. Mr. Potter is at work on the other books of the New Testament, which will be published by the society when completed.

That the words in Cheyenne are unusually long and bewildering is apparent from the translation of the fourth verse of the second chapter of Acts: "Na nistxevoss emhanesenzastovhesetova-ohaevohon Maheonematasoomaho na easeveseeszehon onitavenszistovazistohwenszheshaevoss Matasoomaho." (And they were filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.)

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Firecrackers and fireworks are losing ground in the mind of the American people. The Fourth of July used to be celebrated by the extravagant use of firecrackers and fireworks of many kinds. It was a source of money as well as the cultivation of what was considered true patriotism. But it cultivated the spirit of war more than patriotism by its explosives and noise. But that type of patriotism that expresses itself through war is lacking in the true principle of love of country, and people are coming to a more loyal patriotism based on real love of country and a love for other countries. One can never be his best self until he "loves his neighbor as himself." Patriotism is more than fighting for one's country; it is loving for one's country.

After the close of the Civil War there was such prejudice in the Southern mind that people were unwilling to conform to the customs of the Northern part of this country. An innovation in the South changed the use of fireworks and firecrackers from the Fourth of July to Christmas. Christmas became ablaze with fireworks and war-like with firecrackers. Merchants made capital of the trade, and streets and country places seemed more like the celebration of the victory of war than the birth of the Prince of Peace. It is time to eliminate this war celebration from Christmas, and it is being done. The Ministerial Union of Suffolk has been working on that question for several years. It has reached the point that no firecrackers are allowed on Christmas Day; but after that day they are still used; and often you hear stray explosions at night or beyond the range of policemen. But this effort has reduced the firecracker business in Suffolk, and it will finally discontinue. And the use of firecrackers is gradually passing from use on the Fourth of July in the North. Norfolk does not permit the use of firecrackers at any time; and no doubt it will finally disappear and give place to something better and safer, for many accidents and many fires have been caused by the use of firecrackers. It looks innocent, but it contains the spirit of war, and what should be cultivated is the spirit of peace.

A quotation from the Readers' Digest, condensde from the Delineator, and written by Prof. William Lyon Phelps, of Yale University, says: "Just as the old methods of celebrating the Fourth of July have given place to a more quiet, more safe, and more sensible commemoration, so the conception of patriotism today has, in general, reached a higher and more dignified plane than in the past. True patriotism is shown, not by boastful jingoism, but by manners and conduct that display good breeding." One of Webster's definitions of patriotism is "devotion to the welfare of one's country." Everything that suggests war should be left out of our literature, ovations, celebrations, and even our way of thinking. War manuments suggest too much of war; the cross shows the wickedness of man as well as the sacrifice of Jesus Christ for a lost world. All public celebrations should represent peace.

ELON LETTER.

In October, 1929, the Greater Norfolk (Va.) Congregational and Christian Churches conducted a Standard Leadership Training Institute. The venture was such a success that this year the second session will be held. The date is October 5-10, and the place is the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va.

An attractive eight-page folder has been prepared, outlining the courses of study to be offered, with a list of the faculty members and the necessary information relative to textbooks, enrollment, etc. Shortly this folder will be placed in the hands of pastors and Sunday School superintendents of the ten co-operating Churches, who in turn will place them in the hands of present and prospective officers and teachers. Every worker in our Sunday Schools should aim to secure a leadership training diploma, which represents twelve courses, or units, of study completed in such an institute as that to be maintained in Norfolk, in the Summer School of Methods held at Elon College each summer, or in the regular college classes at Elon. To teach religion is to teach the most important theme possible, and we who try to do it should be willing to prepare for so sacred and important a work.

The courses to be offered in Norfolk this fall are all for credit, and include the following: "A Study of the Pupil," "The Principles of Teaching," "The Old Testament," "Primary Materials and Methods," "Junior Materials and Methods," "Adolescent Materials and Methods," "Religious Education in the Family,' "Recreational Leadership," and "World Missions—India."

The faculty members are Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Miss Priscilla Chase, Rev. and Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle, Rev. F. C. Lester, Mrs. M. J. McArdle, Rev. J. E. McCauley, Dr. L. E. Smith, and the writer, who also is to act as dean of the institute. Dr. Charles E. Shelton will conduct a chapel, or worship, service each day, and Rev. H. C. Caviness will give the commencement address on the closing evening. Miss Emily H. Millar, 272 East Thirty-ninth Street, Norfolk, Va., is registrar. She will gladly send a folder and full particulars to any one addressing her as above.

There should be more such institutes in various centers of our Church. Suffolk could well maintain one for the Churches of Nansemond County; another could be held at Franklin; and others, likewise, at Waverly or Wakefield. Henderson, Franklinton, Raleigh, Burlington, Greensboro, Reidsville, Danville, and Sanford could each sponsor such an institute for contiguous Churches. I will be glad to do all I can to help out personally or by securing a dean from our faculty in any place where the local leadership is anxious to promote this highly desirable work. One such institute may appear to be a small thing, but twelve such institutes may mean one hundred teachers and officers with diplomas, and that is far from a small thing. In Christian work, let it be remembered, we are fighting a campaign and not a single battle.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE LETTER.

The college is taking on new life since the meeting of the Southern Christian Convention. The folks of this section are very much pleased over the financial plans of the Convention, especially the part pertaining to the financing of Piedmont Junior College. Never before was there such a challenge thrown out to the Churches, and never before was there such faith manifested on the part of the officials of the Church. It is hoped that all the Churches of the Convention will come to the help of the Lord in financing the institutions of His great Church.

Our people are becoming enthused over the progress of the financial plan for Piedmont Junior College, and this is what is needed in the case of all our enterprises. Enthusiasm often enables a man to accomplish the seemingly impossible, just because it won't permit him to see anything ahead but success. Goethals and the men under him dug the Panama Canal. Their enthusiasm enabled them to transform a plague spot into a health resort; to get real work out of the lazy West Indian negro; to fight the floods and landslides with which nature opposed them.

Enthusiasm will win for any man in his struggle against circumstances; the greater the obstacles to be overcome, the greater will be the man's enthusiasm if he is sincere in what he is doing. It was not the number of cubic yards of earth and rock to be moved at Panama that made the feat worthy to be called "big"; it was the tremendous obstacles of past failures, of an unfriendly climate, and of man's sloth. So it is in any undertaking—the obstacles that hinder success only make its attainment that more worth while.

Enthusiasm keeps a man always on the job, not only during working hours, but also during his own time. I do not mean that he is always hard at work, but that he is always on the alert for any hint as to how he can improve his work and increase his knowledge. Many men have no enthusiasm for their work because they have no real knowledge of it.

There are two ways of taking your work home with you. One is to worry over it—to mull it over when you should be forgetting it in recreation or sleep. This is letting your work master instead of you mastering it; it is not the way of successful men. The other way is to remember that your advancement depends on what you do during your own time just as surely as on what you do during working hours. It is only the untrained man who worries over his work. He has cause to worry, because he never knows when something is going wrong that he cannot put right—when he is going up against some new problem that he will not know how to handle, when he will have to stand aside for the man who knows.

To the person with ambitions, there are few things which cannot be made to further his ambitions. Books and home-study courses will quickly give him specific knowledge of any subject. Newspapers, trade papers, daily conversation, all hold some suggestion which the wide-awake man can turn to account. The suggestion may be slight; the idea may seem to be common property; but the man who is not afraid to do a little overtime thinking can pick up much information of advantage to him simply by keeping his eyes and ears open. Originally, screws were made blunt-nosed; the man who thought of pointing them made a fortune from the idea. Do you suppose that idea came to him during his working hours?

In its heart, the world loves the willing worker —the enthusiast—even while it fears him. It loves him because he does the things that have to be done; because he accomplishes what he sets out to do. Without enthusiasm, no man can accomplish anything worth while, whatever his opportunities. In her generous heart, success has a special regard for the man who wins by pitching in. When he comes to her for his reward, she flings wide the doors of her treasure-house and, smilingly, bids him, "Help yourself."

DANIEL ALBRIGHT LONG.

By Wm. Thornton Whitsett.

On Wednesday, August 6th, I had the pleasure of attending the large gathering of the members and friends of the Trollinger family in their annual reunion, held at Trollinger Memorial M. P. Church, at Haw River. It was a day filled with interesting events, and much interest was aroused in the wealth of historical events that cluster around the story of this family and this section in which they first settled. These will become matters of record as preserved by the historian of the association and the secretary in charge of these annual reunions. I wish to speak a word especially of one of the speakers of this occasion.

Dr. Daniel Albright Long was on the program for an address on "Reminiscences of Alamance County," and in eloquent words he told the story of the past of his native county, perhaps, as no one else could have done, because of his own personal connection with much of the past history.

Dr. Long was born in Alamance County, May 22, 1844, the son of Jacob and Jane Stewart Stockard Long, who gave to the State one of its most interesting and influential families, the sons becoming especially noted in the fields of teaching, law, and the ministry of the Christian Church. He was educated at the University of North Carolina, where he was given his A. M. degree in 1871, and D. D. in 1876, and then LL.D. at a later time. He holds also the honorary degree of LL.D. from Union Christian College, Columbia University, Yale University, University of Virginia, and University of Pennsylvania. For ten years he was president of Graham Normal College, the forerunner of the present Elon College, and later was president for sixteen years of Antioch College at Yellow Springs, Ohio, where his work came into national prominence and recognition. For eight years he was president of the American Christian Convention of the United States and Canada. He has held many other important positions.

Now past his four-score years, Dr. Long is still with us, his mind still bright and clear, and his memory of the days he has lived still unimpaired. Always a close student, he is well-versed in local, State and national history, and no man living knows more of the causes and effects that have played upon the history of Alamance County, and no one could take more pride in the part his county has played in the stirring times now gone than Dr. Long. He was one of the prime movers in first calling attention to the work of the Regulators, and was one of the chief agents in having the monument erected on the spot that commemorates the battle of Alamance, May 16, 1771. Making his present home in Florence, S. C., he delights in visits to his native soil, and his multitudes of friends who always welcome his coming.

As an individual becomes somewhat withdrawn from active affairs as the years creep along, there is a tendency to forget the part he has played; and hence, it is a joy to hear one like Dr. Long on the public platform from time to time and to listen to his vivid descriptions of much that has gone into the making of the history of county and State. It is a benediction to come in touch with this scholar and Christian philosopher from time to time and wonder at his clear grasp of world affairs, and especially to catch something of his abounding optimism concerning the affairs of man on earth, which in his view are continually moving on to "that divine far-off event" under God's ever-directing hand. Here a lapse, and there a lapse, but the century-considered movement ever for a better world, and a finer type of humanity.

Long may the years be kind to this sage of Alamance, Daniel Albright Long, teacher, scholar, orator, minister—one of the outstanding men of his generation.

VIRGILINA LETTER.

The series of meetings held at the four Churches of this charge began on the fifth Sunday in June at Hebron and closed on the second Sunday night in August at Virgilina. Rev. M. T. Sorrell was with us at Hebron. The attendance was good. Bro. Sorrell is a very earnest gospel preacher. There were quite a number of professions and thirteen accessions.

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield was at Liberty the week following the first Sunday in July. Notwithstanding the extreme heat, there were good crowds in attendance. Bro. Crutchfield is a real orator. He made a good impression on the people of the community. The Church was revived, with several professions and reclamations and six accessions to the Church.

Besides presenting Bro. Crutchfield with a purse, the people got up a nice little pounding of "substantials" for both pastor and visiting brother, which is greatly appreciated.

The third week in July, Bro. Crutchfield was with the Church at Lebanon, and, as at Liberty, did very faithful work. There were a number of professions and six accessions.

Beginning with Monday evening following the first Sunday in August, Rev. J. E. McCauley assisted at Union (Virgilina). The services lasted till Sunday evening following. Crowds were immense. Our seating capacity is over four hundred, yet many stood before the doors and at the windows during the evening services. There were more than twenty-five professions and reclamations and fourteen accessions. Bro. McCauley made a fine impression on the entire community.

A DAILY PRAYER.

(August.)

Our Lord Christ, in whose fellowship there is happiness and holiness, turn us, Thy anxious followers, from sin unto Thine own pure righteousness. So keep us enfolded within the bosom of Thy companionship that Christian conscience and consciousness may be aroused against the evils that constantly assail and entrap many who have given Thee a habitation in their heart and yet are weak and wandering. Thou, only, O God, canst put away iniquity. Except Thy grace overcome, the iniquity that is in us is our utter undoing. Reveal ourselves to ourselves and give us this day a fresh sense of Thy forgiveness. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

NEW NEEDS FOR THE OLD BOOK.

That dramatic and dire needs for Bibles spring up with startling frequency is surprising news to all save to those whose responsibility places them in a focal point where such needs naturally express themselves. Such a point is the Bible House in New York City, where for over three-quarters of a century have been located the headquarters of the American Bible Society and whither are directed the appeals for Scriptures when untoward emergencies occur.

A cablegram from Geneva, Switzerland, a few weeks ago announced the distressing conditions amid which thousands of Lutherans and Mennonite refugees were living near Moscow, Hamburg and Bremen. These religious-minded folk, mostly farmers, decided to flee from Russia because of the intolerable conditions imposed by the Soviet government, which is adamantine in its refusal to recognize or tolerate religious practices. A second cable read: "Please appeal to Bible Society, because need for Bibles very strong among Russian refugees who are not allowed to take Bibles with them."

This was followed by a letter describing in detail not only the physical suffering but also the spiritual depression and destitution, and stressing the need of Bibles and Scripture portions. The American Bible Society at once responded by cabling a substantial sum for purchasing Scriptures.

Late in the autumn of 1929, a destructive typhoon, with characteristic suddenness, hit certain areas in the Philippine Islands and came within thirty miles of the city of Manila. Logs being floated down a river by a lumber company formed a jam against a bridge. Becoming torrential, the waters caused an inundation which submerged a number of towns. The usual danger and anxiety followed. The agency secretary of the American Bible Society, who was soon on the spot, wrote: "The logs in the river were washed over the banks, and in many cases driven through people's homes. In one instance, a house was washed down the stream and the family inside chopped a hole in the roof and perched there, awaiting rescue. However, one of the logs coming down the river with tremendous force drove through the house, smashing it to bits and killing all of the family except the father. In other places, people were killed in their beds by the logs wrecking their homes. In all, between forty and fifty people were killed in that district.

One thinks, of course, of the Red Cross in such emergencies, and the Red Cross, to be sure, was soon on the field. One also realizes that in such calamitous experiences few of the sufferers, in their haste to escape, take time to find and carry a Testament or Bible. Here was the opportunity of the agency secretary of the American Bible Society. With the assistance of pastors, he distributed portions of Scripture to 4,000 of these destitute people. Man does not live by bread alone either in normal or critical times. Faith must be fed as well as the body. Spiritual bravery is needed when life is to be reconstructed after a typhoon.

The attention of the American Bible Society was recently directed to a peculiar need for Old Testaments. While not a sudden emergency like the above, it is appealing, if for no other reason, because of its picturesqueness. It is the need of the Old Testament for persons known as the Sephardim, living in Constantinople, Salonica, Adrianople, Smyrna, Bulgaria, and Cairo. The Sephardim, of whom there are probably 70,000, are Spanish-speaking Jews who were exiled from Spain in the fifteenth century by Ferdinand and Isabella. They speak a dialect which differs from modern Spanish and is written in Hebrew characters. In order to prepare a new edition of the Old Testament for these thrust-forth aliens, thereby saving them from secularism, a substantial sum is being sought from philanthropic sources.

Other interesting emergencies could be cited. The ones mentioned above indicate that the circulation of the Scriptures, the object for which the American Bible Society was founded, is not perfunctory or whitened with tedious administrative pallor, but colorful and buoyant as it rises to meet unusual and unexpected opportunities.—Rev. Geo. W. Brown, in Missionary Review.

WAIFS CROWD CHILDREN'S BUREAU.

Each week brings new faces to the offices of the Virginia State Children's Bureau. Forty little boys, ranging in age from nine to fourteen, have come to the bureau within the past few months. Some of them were healthy, alert little fellows when they arrived, while others were undernourished and bewildered. Yet, all of them were brave youngsters. Imagine, if you can, how it would feel at that age to be removed from all familiar surroundings and to be dropped into a strange, unknown world. To a few it may be an exciting adventure, but to the majority it means anxiety and confusion.

First, a temporary boarding-home is explained to each child. He is told he is to remain in one until a more permanent home is found for him. At once, the anxious expression of his face is relieved. When the boarding-mother gives him a friendly welcome, his face brightens up still more. Her three balanced meals each day make his cheeks fill out; her kind, encouraging words foster his self-respect; and her careful training brings improvements in his habits and manners.

He is given a mental and physical examination at the clinic and his physical defects are corrected under the doctor's directions. The social workers and boarding-mother work together for his welfare. Within a reasonable length of time he is ready and eager to find a home and give his place to a little newcomer.

It is family life which makes it possible for a child to develop his best. It has been truly said that home life is the highest and finest product of civilization, and that "home made" children are the best. When a child is deprived of his own loved ones, he looks to others to supply this need as far as possible. He wants the feeling of belonging to some one; the security of being a real member of a family group.

Will any resident of Virginia who will help one of the forty boys to have a wholesome, happy childhood communicate with the Children's Bureau, State Department of Public Welfare, State Office Building, Richmond, Va.

A representative of the bureau will call personally upon any family who is interested in giving one or more of them a home. Every effort is made to select a child who will fit into the family life. All the children are placed on trial. They may be returned to the bureau if the placement does not prove to be a happy one.

Officials of one of the Methodist Churches of Minneapolis are asking members of the congregation to consider making two hours' pay the standard for their weekly gifts for the support of the Church. "Would this small amount of our God-given wage-earning power be too much to set aside for the Church of Christ in the world?" is the query of the appeal sent out to the members of the parish. If the Christian world would adopt some such program and live up to it, the financial problems of the Church would be solved, so far as maintenance is concerned.

According to The Bible Champion, the Chicago Tribune of February 25, 1914, carried this item: "The back rooms of 445 saloons in Chicago contribute to the delinquency of 14,000 girls every 24 hours." Still the Tribune is among the papers that want to do away with national prohibition.

CHAPLAIN ROUNTREE IN GERMANY.

H. E. ROUNTREE.

(Concluded from Last Week.)

Kiel, Germany, July 9, 1930.

Dear SUN Readers:

The two other most interesting places of the city are the historical summer homes of the kings. These palaces, two in number, are situated in the beautiful gardens of the royal estate, just outside of the city. One is called San Souci, which has been a museum since the seventeenth century, and the other the New Royal Palace, which was occupied up until the time when the Kaiser abdicated during the World War, and which is kept as a museum since that time.

This estate covers two hundred acres of land, and is really a little wooded haven of verdant trees, shrubbery, gardens, hedges, statuary, winding walks and bridle paths. It is said that they are the most beautiful gardens of the world. San Souci is a low, spreading, impressive structure, set in elegance of verdant surroundings, vast terraces, sparkling fountains and beautiful gardens, to be compared only with the Palace of Versailles, France.

It was our pleasure to be shown through these palaces. The gorgeous beauty of their interior is beyond the imagination. These kings seemed to have a million-dollar place for everything they wished to do. Wealth, luxury and art, all the world's best, is added to wealth and luxury day by day as ideas skipped along ahead of them and led them on until the whole seems to have reached the proportions of madness. There is not a detail that is not furnished and finished in all the grandeur and splendor that wealth and power could buy. One detail demonstrates this extreme. We are told that Voltaire was a frequent visitor at the palace, and hobnobbed with the king. The king, in order to tease his friends, set apart a room for him and adorned it in magnificence that compared with all the rest of the palace, but with images of parrots and monkeys, because, he said, the philosopher talked and chattered so much.

The other extreme is demonstrated in the private theater in the new palace. Here, operas and drama from Berlin were rendered for the king and his courtiers as often as he desired. As we slide along in our thick wool slippers (which were given us at the door to keep us from marring the floors) from room to room, it was like slipping from one glory to another—all different, but all equally gloricus, even as there is one glory of the sun and one glory of the moon and one glory of the stars.

Time and space do not admit of my going into further detail, but when I tell you that gold and silver, pearls and marble, agate, cut-glass and precious stones, gorgeous tapestries, together with all the wealth of art that could be collected, are used in the finish and fixtures of the entire interior of these palaces, you can understand a little bit of what I am trying to describe when I say that from a material standpoint it is like being in the "seventh heaven, stepping from star to star."

During the stay of those three days in Berlin our entire party of about four hundred was the guest of the management of two theaters, the Scalla and the Winter Garden—the Scalla on Sunday night and the Winter Garden on the following night. In Berlin the Churches are closed on Sunday nights and the theaters are open.

On these occasions, a cordial welcome was extended to all. The entire party was called on the stage, and, with the performers, photographs were made of the group. Speeches of welcome were made and our navy yells, with four cheers for Berlin, were the response. This is the spirit shown us everywhere. On the streets, in the shows, or at the hotels, the American Navy man was greeted cordially, treated kindly and dealt with generously.

It is obvious that the German people are in a great many respects a superior people, progressive and wide awake. Though still suffering from the terrors of war, and though there are fewer men than women, they are recovering remarkably from the impoverishment of the war. They are ambitious to achieve the best they may be capable of, and as we look at their fields, the factories and stores and are told about their trade, evidences of their poverty recedes in the background. As we watch their people at work and at play, there is every sign of a grim determination and every promise of success. The genius her mentality reflects, surprisingly lacking in the jovial spirit, is an evidence of their greatness and an assurance of their success. The country itself bears a stateline which reflects that genius. The people are a plain, unassuming people, without a visible sign of ostentation. They speak frankly about themselves, and they expect frankness in return. There are no superficialities to speak of. We saw a fine cross-section of them Sunday afternoons at the beer gardens. Among these and among all wherever we went during our stay, I have yet to see the first woman who used cosmetics. They do not even powder their nose. One lady told me that the German women could not afford the unnecessaries. But the most of them are a stalwart people, robust and noble in bearings. The ladies go out for sports quite as much as the men, and this has been emphasized very much since the war until it has reached the proportions of a national pastime.

These people seem to like the Americans, and say that they regard us as friends. We are terminating our brief visit, feeling that we are friendly, and we wonder why people should ever be enemies.

I need not say again that our visit has been a delightful one. When I see you, I will try to tell you more about it in detail. At this moment we are steaming out of Kiel harbor, on our way to Oslo. As the city disappears behind us, our stay is a pleasant reflection. From high official to plain woman and child, every one has outdone himself to be courteous, generous and kind to every one of us, and they have overwhelmed us with their hospitality. It will be a long time before we forget our visit here.

Committee on O'Kelly Memorial.

What is the matter with the Christian Church? Have we forgotten James O'Kelly? Are there not one hundred and eighty-three men and women who will give $1.00 each to complete payment on the O'Kelly Memorial? Send the dollars right along. I enclose $1.75 as a starter. Who will be the next? J. E. WEST.

What we want is the single eye that we may see what our work is; the humility to accept it, however lowly; the faith to do it for God; and the perseverance to go on until death.—Selected.

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson IX—August 31, 1930.

A Herdsman Called of God to Be a Prophet.

Golden Text: "I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then I said, Here am I; send me."—Isa. 6:8.

Lesson: Entire Book of Amos.

Time: About B. C. 793.

Place: Tekoa in Judah, twelve miles south of Jerusalem; Bethel, ten miles north of Jerusalem.

When God really needs men, He takes them where He finds them. Amos tells us that he was a herdsman and a tender of the sycomore tree. When God called, Amos answered. What he had to say was brief, but it was to the point.

After a life of warfare and strife, David left his kingdom to his son Solomon, under whose leadership a great nation was developed. But upon his death the kingdom was divided into North and South—Judah and Israel. When Amos began to prophesy it was in the days of Uzzian king of Judah, and Jereboam II was ruling in Israel. The exact time of the prophecy was given as two years before the earthquake—not just an earthquake, but one that was of such severity as to be remembered, for not only was Amos' prophecy dated by it, but the terror occasioned by it was alluded to years afterward.

Amos tells us that "Jehovah took me from following the flock, and . . . said unto me, Go prophesy unto my people, Israel." On the surface Israel seemed at peace and blessed with abundant prosperity. But to the eye of the prophet, it was evident beyond question that wealth had led to vice, and that vice was only the prelude to decay and destruction.

Cuthbert McEvoy paints a pen picture of Amos as he stands before the people of Israel and flays them with his words. "We can picture Amos as a gaunt, sun-bronzed figure, distinguished from all others in the markets by his wise and trenchant speech, and such a man as, if we met him with his herds among the lonely hills, we should remember for his authoritative bearing and the deep thoughtfulness of his expression. One day when the people of Israel were celebrating one of their great festivals in the sanctuary at Bethel, the men and women dressed in their most gorgeous raiment and the tables laden with the most dainty food, the great prophet stood in the doorway. His very presence seemed a rebuke to the scene of thoughtless dissipation on which he gazed. Instinctively the revellers must have felt that an alien had come amongst them. But his first words riveted their attention. He had begun to speak about God's punishment of their hated foes, the Syrians. He went on to speak of others whom they hated no less—the Phœnicians, the Philistines, the Edomites, the Moabites, the Ammonites. Of each one he said that God would punish them. As the people listened, their prejudice was changed to interest, their interest to approval, and their approval to applause. Then Amos came very close home to them. He mentioned their nearest foes, the foes of their own blood, the people of Judah. On them, no less than on the heathen tribes, the punishment of God was to fall. Enthusiasm for the speaker was now at its height. It was just for this moment that Amos had been preparing. It was then that he discharged the bolt which bore the burden of his message to Israel: no less than all the others, the people of Israel were to be punished for their sins. It is not surprising that his stern message was rejected with anger by the high priest at Bethel."

We, today, are endangered by the same sins that Amos was compelled to condemn. Warring nations stoop to the level of the crimes that he condemned. Domestic wrongs current in the time of Amos are still practised. Nations, as well as individuals, need to heed his warning to "seek good and not evil."

Topic: "Why are Industrial Missions Worth While?"—1 Cor. 9:19-23.

Some Bible Hints.

Paul was a working-man. To win men we must become as one of them (v. 10).

Missionaries are not interested in building boats and houses; they do it to make the people they serve independent and win them to a higher life (v. 20).

We cannot help people at long range. God could not save us except by becoming a man and living our life. So missionaries must work with their hands and teach the habit of work (v. 22).

The spiritual motive dominated Paul's life. He did all "for the gospel's sake." That is the spirit of the true missionary (v. 23).

Suggestive Thoughts.

Everywhere in the world there is some sort of industry, but in backward lands it is primitive. To raise any people, we must improve their material conditions.

Industrial missions show the natives that there is nothing mean or humiliating in work. To glorify work is to give a new meaning to life.

By setting up industries, missionaries help people to be self-supporting. This alone makes for a higher character and gives a man a new estimate of himself.

Industrial missions are often the first step on the highroad to civilization. They take native industries and improve them, using European methods. Very soon people begin to want more and better goods.

A Few Illustrations.

Up to 1880 only twenty-nine industrial schools or classes were reported in the mission field. Now we know that handwork opens the mind to instruction.

In Europe we have developed an aggressive industrial instinct. Work has become a game which we enjoy. We have to build up that spirit in Africa and other lands.

Carpentry has been taught in industrial missions since the very beginning. Boys and young men are delighted with the chance to work with wood. Their trade lends them dignity.

One missionary who was employing natives to make a road said, "Fourteen years ago these men refused to carry a load. They were warriors, not slaves." Now they have learned something better.

To Think About.

How have industrial missions helped self-support?

What good has come from the negro industrial work at Tuskegee?

Why do idleness and the gospel not mix well?

THE SECOND MILE.

"And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain," the Lord Jesus said in the Sermon on the Mount. The custom to which our Lord refers seems to deal with the rights of the king's officers in olden days to demand the free use of horses or men as they hastened on their way to deliver some royal decree. In our days and country the rights to demand such service may have disappeared, but the principle involved from the standpoint of the Christian must remain, because it is an expression of the love and good will of our Lord Himself.

The first mile belongs to law, the second to love. The first mile expresses duty and convinces the mind, the second breaks the opposition and wins the heart. The first mile brings Sinai into view, the second Calvary. The first reveals the servant, obedient and dutiful; the second shows the princely spirit of one who will sacrifice to seek the lost.

This is what brought our Saviour from heaven to earth. He was concerned about the second mile of redemption. True, the cross was promised from the days of the fall, and even anticipated before, but when the time came for the earthly career of Christ as the Man of Sorrows, He was here to travel that second mile, and that is why He is so anxious that His people should follow His example. Our Church will not travel very far unless there is to be found among us a fair number of "second mile" folks who are willing to "go with him twain."—Wesleyan Methodist.

HUMILITY.

A curious story is told of Napoleon when he was conferring with the leaders of Austria on some matters of state. At one end of the room was an elevated platform with a chair upon it. "Remove that chair," the great general is reported as saying; "I can never see an elevated chair without wanting to sit in it." His life story is full of evidence that the expression was true to fact, even though it may have been put into words by some ingenious writer. It reminds us of the place-seeking of a good many people, both in the Church and out. How refreshing in contrast is the example of our Lord when He washed the feet of His followers on the night of His betrayal! The writer who quotes the incident concludes: "Both Jesus and Napoleon were consumed with a great psasion; one to get the world for himself, the other to give Himself for the world.—Wesleyan Methodist.

THE FACULTY EXCUSE.

"The man who says he is kept away from the Church by hypocrites is not influenced by them anywhere else. Business is full of them; but if he sees a chance to make money he doesn't stop for that. Society is crowded with them, and yet he never thinks of becoming a hermit. Married life is full of them, but that doesn't make him remain a bachelor. Hell is full of them, and yet he isn't doing a thing to keep from going there. He wants to have you think that he is trying to avoid the society of hypocrites; and yet he takes not a single step towards the only place where no hypocrites can go."—Exchange.

DO YOU BELIEVE?

If you want to investigate, use a questionnaire. That is the American way. If you have an address to prepare for the convention, get your material by means of a questionnaire. If you want to know whether the American youth are religious, send out a questionnaire.

Now, the questionnaire is valuable for some purposes. It sometimes reveals the sort of thinking which the investigator is doing as well as the thinking of the investigated.

Under the direction of Rev. Charles Stelzle, a group of ministers prepared a questionnaire to be submitted to the students in American colleges evidently for the purpose of discovering whether these young people are religious and of developing a program of religious education. Certainly it is important for us to know whether the young people in our colleges have any keen sense of religion and also for us to have some genuine program of religious education. The students are asked to answer the following nine questions:

1. Do you believe in God?
2. Do you believe in immortality?
3. Do you believe in prayer as a personal relationship with God?
4. Do you believe that Jesus was divine as no other man was divine?
5. Do you regard the Bible as inspired in the sense that no other literature could be said to be inspired?
6. Are you an active member of any Church?
7. Do you regularly attend any religious services?
8. Were you brought up in a religious home?
9. Do you think that religion in some form is a necessary element of life for the individual and for the community?

Two things seem to stand out prominently in the minds of those who prepared this questionnaire. First, religion is a matter of belief; second, religion is an institution. Do you believe, do you go to Church, these are the fundamentals of religion.

And yet one might answer all nine questions in the affirmative and not be a Christian. Of course, much will depend upon the meaning which is attached to the questions. The good Book assures us that "the devils believe, and tremble." Evidently belief does not save them from fear. A house-top declaration of belief in the "Bible as the inspired word of God, from cover to cover," does not restrain some persons from committing murder. Church membership is certainly no infallible index to character.

The matters referred to in the questions are not insignificant, but are they the fundamentals? Do they approach the problem of religion from the right angle? We would like to submit another questionnaire. It is the following:

1. Do you love your neighbor in the same significant way as Christ loved His neighbor?
2. Do you practice the Golden Rule as scrupulously as you tell the truth to your mother?
3. When you pray the Lord's Prayer sincerely in the privacy of your own room, do you find that prayer a source of satisfaction, courage, and inward strength?
4. Does frequent and extensive reading of the Bible give you a clearer understanding of human life and its relationships, a stronger grip upon yourself, greater courage for the tasks you face, a keener sense of human brotherhood, and a deeper conviction that the Heavenly Father knows and cares?
5. If you had been the young man who went to the Great Teacher to inquire the way of eternal life, would you have accepted the challenge of the Master sincerely and joyfully?
6. Is your attitude toward all persons, regardless of race, nationality, creed, and social position as compassionate, humane, and catholic as was the good Samaritan's?
7. Do you pray for your enemies and do good to those who despitefully use you?
8. Are you identified in a significant way with any movement whose purpose is the promotion of the kingdom of Christ?
9. In the moments when you feel that your life is richest and strongest, do you recoil from the beings, including Socrates, Isaiah, Paul, Galileo, thought of the utter annihilation of all human Pestalozzi, Pasteur, Lincoln, Phillips Brooks, Roosevelt, Wilson, and your mother?

If a person can truthfully answer these nine questions in the affirmative, will he be far from the kingdom of God?—Editor D. B. A. in The Palmer News-Letter, 1927.

That nothing is lost (John 6:12). It is in piety as in the economy of temporal goods: we shall be sooner ruined by the neglect of trifles than by great expenses. Whoever knows how to make small matters turn to the best account will, in spiritual, as well as temporal, affairs, amass great riches. The greatest sums are only small ones accumulated and carefully collected. He who lets nothing be lost will soon grow rich.—Fenelon.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

UNION WITH GOD.

"If a man love me, he will keep my words."—John 14:23.

It is ever thus, that if one loves he obeys, and obedience always involves esteem and pleasure. Even two human beings who love each other may be said to live each in the heart of the other; and the two hearts are inseparably united. A whole world may be between these persons, but they are still together.

It is ever thus with us and Jesus when we love. Humble creatures and poor sinners as we are, it is a great and wonderful thing that we may be considered children of God and one with Him through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Prayer.—Come, precious Spirit, and teach us how to know the Father and to love Him and to be one with Him. Amen.

TUESDAY.

MEANING OF CONFUSION OF TONGUES.

"They were all filled with the Holy Ghost."—Acts 2:2.

It is noted that these people were all together in one place in one accord. Suddenly every one spoke in a different language. This is typical of the rending asunder the human race by reason of sin. But we also note that they all were filled with the Holy Ghost and spoke the wonderful words of God. Although the nations are different and men are strangers, not knowing one another; although individuals are different and but few meet in harmony of thought and purpose; although there are enemies who destroy one another and in whom the image of God is lost—the tongues of fire are typical of the individual blessing which the spirit bestows, and it expresses the new life in their hearts. When the Holy Ghost cleanses hearts, He robs none of the individuality which God has given to each; but He sanctifies it, brings it into harmony with others, and each employs the talent entrusted to him for the edification of others.

The differences of languages may never be abolished. The differences of people may never disappear. But even these differences may be used to purify and transfigure all into a higher unity, when all people shall bear the word of life in their own tongue, and, though different, all languages shall be filled with everlasting truth.

It is a wonderful thought to believe that when all the saved of all tongues shall come together in His presence as one big family, that all these tongues shall be united in one grand harmony in the celestial language of love in which all shall be understood as of the Holy Ghost and speaking the praise of God, singing "All hail the power of Jesus' name and crown Him Lord of all."

Prayer.—Holy Spirit, gather our hearts to Christ, and gather all the people, that there may be one fold and one Shepherd. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

REDEMPTION.

"For God so loved."—John 3:16.

"The sun shines, the fire warms, and God loves," and all the world is included. That means me, however lowly may be my station.

What a wonderful book! So wonderful that its author must be God. None less could have produced it. It never could have entered into the thought of man—and it is all for us. Luther expresses it thus: "The important thing is not that I may receive crowns and kingdoms, which would leave me under the dominion of sin and death, but that I may be redeemed from death and hell, and be eternally saved." In God's love the fire of hell is quenched, the devil is trodden upon, and our own poor hearts made happy with eternal life.

Prayer.—We thank Thee, O God, for Thy love, for Thy unspeakable gift of eternal life. Forbid that we shall ever in any way reject this salvation, but may accept it from Thee and may taste of the sweets of Thy love and Thy life forever. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE NEW BIRTH.

"Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."—John 3:3.

To fall and die is something which we can do of our own strength, and the devil will be glad to help us; but to rise from the fall and live again is beyond our power. Besides, that would be an undertaking in which the devil would not assist. Only the Lord Jesus Christ gives life, and He gives it by our own willingness to receive it. "As many as are baptized into Christ have put on Christ." If we put Him on, put His Spirit in us, and are baptized (that is, buried in Him), and walk in newness of life, He raises us to His glory and we are one with Him forevermore.

This is a miracle, but, nevertheless, the new life springs forth, and we can know for ourselves that it is a fact just as much as we know that the wind blows. Let nothing be as important to you as having this life in God.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, give us Thy Holy Spirit, that we may have true faith, and that we may have the life of Jesus in our lives. Amen.

FRIDAY.

A LIVING BRANCH.

"I am the Vine, ye are the branches."—John 15:1-6.

All of us are branches, but some are dead branches. By the miracle of the graft of Jesus in our lives we are made to be partakers of His life and may be alive and bear fruit. This is done by the gospel, by His gifts, by faith, and by our taking hold and holding fast. When we do all this, the life which is in Him flows into us like the sap in the tree, and reveals itself in our lives in the fruit of love and obedience.

In order to remain a living, fruitful branch, the union with the vine and the flower of the life must be unceasing. Otherwise, it must die. This is a good time to examine ourselves and learn whether or not this life and love of Jesus is reigning unceasingly in our lives.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, grant that we may be a living branch in Thee. Purge us daily, that we may bring forth more fruit. Forbid that we shall ever become dry and wither. Out of the depth of our souls we beseech Thee to abide in us forever. Amen.

SATURDAY.

SYMBOLS EXPOUNDED.

"As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up."—John 3:14.

The brazen serpent was without venom. Jesus lifted on the cross was without sin.

The brazen serpent had the form of a venomous serpent. So the Son of man hung on the cross, not in sinful flesh, but in the likeness of sinful flesh.

The brazen serpent had healing against venomous serpents. So Christ has healing against the serpent, the devil.

Saint Augustine said: "The serpent is nailed fast, that it may have power no more." On the cross, death is nailed fast, that it may have no more power. In Christ, death has no more power over us.

All the people had to do was look toward the serpent. God commands us to look toward Jesus and live.

It is rather a glorious feeling to realize that in our sinful state, having been bitten by sin, whoever we may be, if we believe and followed Him, the poison is taken away and we shall live.

Healing proceeds out of our uplifted Saviour unceasingly. This is the gift of God to save us from sin.

Prayer.—Praise be to Thee, dear Lord Jesus, who suffered even the death of the cross, that there might be no sin in us. Give us grace and strength to believe in Thee, to feel Thy life in our souls, and to live in Thee forever. Amen.

SUNDAY.

TRANSFORMATION.

"Many walk, of whom I have told you often, . . . that they are enemies of the cross of Christ, whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things."—Phil. 3:19.

The hearts of worldly people cling to things of the world. They love and trust in themselves. They have riches and power; and if they have no temporal treasures and pleasures, they seek them; and they are unhappy when they do not get them.

The Lord cleanses His children from this lustfulness and give them the spirit which sweeps it all away. If, perchance, it has not all been swept away; if the child of God still loves something more than he does the Lord, his heart is not wholly right. But having been made right, his conscience is alive and tender; he has joy in godliness; he hates evil and fears to do anything against God's will. He accepts correction from Him and strives to please Him, and his conduct is distinctively kindly, merciful, loving, humble and showing forth goodness toward all.

Prayer.—Lord, grant that we may experience this power of our Saviour's within us. Give us the mind to try to increase unto the measure of our Christ. Give us clean hearts and a right spirit and help us to walk in Thy ordinances and keep Thy statutes. Amen.

To unconverted persons, a great part of the Bible resembles a letter written in cipher. The Blessed Spirit's office is to act as God's decipherer, by letting His people into the secret of celestial experience, as the key and clew to those sweet mysteries of grace which were before as a garden shut up, or as a fountain sealed, or as a book written in an unknown character.—Toplady.

CHRISTIAN THINKING.

By Rev. O. A. Walker.

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Phil. 4:8.

What is back of all of the boasted progress of this progressive age? What has developed the electrical forces to their present important place in the affairs of men?

Consider the mastery of the air. Some twenty years ago the Wright brothers stayed up in a heavier-than-air flying machine for eleven seconds, a reporter who described this wonderful feat was discharged for reporting so unreasonable a story; today men are flying over and around the north pole and are reporting their movements, their altitude, their speed, and the atmospheric conditions as they fly, and people a thousand miles away receive the messages instantaneously.

It is the results of the fruits of the mind of man, and this applies to every important line of human endeavor. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." And as a nation or a people thinketh, so will they be.

Grecians thought in terms of culture, of art, of architecture, of poetry and of things beautiful to the eye. They left the one ever living and true God out of their thinking, and any intelligent schoolboy can tell you the result.

Rome thought in terms of law, and commerce, and power. It was not too bad as far as it went, but it was not sufficient, and today her Caesars and her Ciceros and her Mark Antonies are organ grinders, fruit venders, and many of them bootleggers in American cities.

Germany thought in terms of things military till she got top-heavy with militarism and plunged the world into an awful war, with its bloodshed and carnage from which it will require another generation to recover.

The mind is the motor-power that controls the body, the character, the destiny. Some one has well said, "The thoughts of today are the dreams of tonight and the actions of tomorrow." And we might add, the destiny for eternity.

If a nation or an individual is commercial or artistic or religious, it is because they think in those terms.

Psychology tells us that no intelligent persons commits a crime without first getting the consent of his mind. Neither will one climb to lofty heights without first setting himself definitely to that task.

Take reading. Our mind food has a wonderful influence on our lives. Our bodies are said to change completely every three years, and our new body is composed completely of the things we have eaten—lime, fat, carbon, iron, and so on.

The same is largely true of our moral and our spiritual natures. As clear water passing through a piece of white cloth leaves its microscopic deposit, so do the thoughts we pass through our minds leave their lasting impressions.

The average person could well give more serious thought to his mental and moral food. Why are not children more often interested in things of a religious nature? It is not because questions concerning the spiritual do not have an appeal, when given an opportunity. Ask your child to name some of the missionaries in the foreign field, tell where they are located, and something of their work. The average child will be found to know about as much concerning this work as they do about the Chinese language.

Then ask him to name some of the movie stars, and tell what pictures they have made famous, and they will reel off a list as long as your arm. Which is to say, we are not giving Christianity a chance, and the children are being robbed of the finer things that ought to be going into their natures.

The very pictures upon the walls of our homes have an influence on our making or our unmaking. There is a story of a mother who had three sons, all grew to manhood and went to sea, though reared far from the scenes of the ocean. The mother could not understand it. Telling a friend one day about it, he pointed to a beautiful painting that hung upon the wall in the living-room of the home, of a great ship as it rode triumphantly through the paths of the sea, in the midst of a storm. That picture was the most inspiring sight those boys of the plains had ever seen. Why should it not influence and mold their lives?

It is natural to think about the things that crowd themselves upon us. Unless they are the right kind of things, it is not always wise. As we would protect our bodies against poisonous or polluted food, so should we protect our thinking against the things that are sordid and harmful.

I believe some mirth is good; the world would be a weary waste without it. Few things are more restful than a hearty, wholesome laugh. Nothing so relieves the nerve tension. We should also make ourselves capable of earnest, solemn thought.

Paul here suggests food for our thinking that will make us what we ought to be and what we want to be. The intellect and the soul will grow and expand when fed upon the things that are true, honest, just, pure, lovely; the things that come with a good report; the things of virtue, and the things that are worthy of praise. We will surely become like the things we think about. We have seen fine people come under a bad or a poisonous influence, and have seen them deteriorate, like an apple in a box of decayed fruit.

"Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." What was His mind? "Wist you not that I must be about my Father's business?" When He healed the sick, when He preached by the lake, when He prayed in the garden, or when, with His disciples, He tramped the stock paths of the Judean hills, it was all to this one high purpose.

We often experience a desire to live long, but appealing as that is, it is vastly more important that we live well. The duration of our lives is not ours to determine, but the quality will be largely as we choose. Therefore, "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue and there be any praise, think on these things."

TINFOIL COLLECTED FOR CRIPPLES.

During a recent campaign, 717 pounds of tinfoil were gathered by trainmen, shopmen, clerks, stenographers, and other Rock Island and New York Central employees at La Salle Station and Englewood on the Illinois and Western and Toledo divisions of these railroads, and delivered to Medinah Shrine Temple to be sold and the proceeds used for the support of crippled children at the Shriners' Hospital there.

This tinfoil came from cigar and tobacco wrappers, candy, chewing gum, etc. It sells around 25 cents a pound and was gathered in two months under the supervision of G. B. Dodd and E. B. Martin, station masters at the La Salle Station, and Herman Fauistich, station master at Englewood. As a result of the campaign for tinfoil, which has been under way for several months among the Rock Island and New York Central employees, very little of this material goes to waste around the Rock Island offices.

According to the Crescent, a total of 7,550 pounds of tinfoil had been collected by the Shrine to be sold for the benefit of crippled children.

CALL FOR MISSIONS.

While Dr. Atkinson is recuperating from a recent spell of illness, will not all ministers, Sunday Schools, Churches, societies and individuals make a special effort to increase our missionary offerings? The demands are many and urgent, but our offerings are smaller than last year.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The insurance rates on our buildings are high because the town water supply does not run near enough to us to get the advantage of water protection. One thousand dollars would extend the water main from the town water main well within the requirements of the insurance company, which would give us a much lower rate. Our good friend, J. Edgar Long, of Graham, N. C., was in to see us some time ago and took note of our situation, and wants to see this remedied. He mailed us his check this week for ten dollars to start a fund to extend this water main from the water line of the town to the Orphanage grounds. Mr. Long, in closing his good letter, said this: "Fatherless and motherless children get close to me." How many will join our good friend, Mr. Long, in extending our water main?

We are making a great effort to get all our Sunday Schools on the monthly contributing list. We have succeeded in getting all in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference on except two. This Conference is the nearest a hundred per cent of all the other Conferences. We are not going to rest until we get the two on the list to make it a 100 per cent Conference.

We are hoping all the Sunday Schools in all the Conferences will come to our rescue. It would be so easy if every member of the Christian denomination would help. It takes money to run a home with three or four children. It takes more money to run an orphanage with more than a hundred children.

Friends, do you ever stop to think of the responsibility that rests on the shoulders of the superintendent of an orphanage? The children eat food and wear clothes every day, whether the income is large or small. We are entirely dependent upon you to contribute funds to pay our bills each month. If our expenses are $500 per week and you send us $250, it is hard for us to stretch the $250 to pay the $500. That is why our hair turns gray and we lie awake at night when you are sleeping so peacefully. Do you love little fatherless and motherless children? Do you really sympathize with them? Do you remember them in your daily prayers? If you do, won't you make a contribution to help them?

The income to the Orphanage has been so small this year that we are badly in need of funds to meet our bills. We have faith in you. For fourteen years you have stood by us and we have been able to meet our bills each month. We are counting on you now in this time of need. You will not disappoint us, we feel sure.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

JESUS AND THE AMERICAN MIND. By Halford E. Luccock. The Abingdon Press; $2.00; pp. 224.

Our American heritage has come to us from two particular sources—puritanism and pioneering. Both have had the effect of making "getting on" the primary objective of the American mind. Our religion is more akin to the Old Testament doctrine, therefore, that righteousness pays dividends in cash, and conversely that the possession of things is evidence of righteous living, than to the New Testament doctrine of the supreme worth of persons. If our real religion is that body of beliefs or principles, in accordance with which we habitually react to situations as they present themselves to experience, then prosperity is the typical American religion and methods of promoting it our gospel. Providence and prosperity are, in our thinking, the obverse and reverse of the same idea—a numismatic description not at all foreign to the practices of a people who measure things in terms of the money mart.

Externalism, prosperity, standardization in thinking, as well as in the things that are meant to serve life, the creation of new desires through salesmanship—these besetting sins of our philosophy of "getting on," without reference to the consequences our success produces in the character of the people, have rendered the Church impotent spiritually in the presence of the problems of our time that cry out for solution. The Church has come to have a pathetic faith in generalities, to discount realistic thinking, to accept the present social order as something to which it should adjust rather than change, to spend its moral force in dealing with problems of individual morality to the neglect of social abuses and sins, to emphasize worship since it provides an escape from the duty of facing the ethical consequences of our faith, to have an overweening confidence in ecclesiastical machinery and organization, and so to find itself unable to communicate an experience of God. A more caustic indictment of the Church has never been penned.

The American mind, therefore, needs to be called back by the prophets of religion to the three things that really have distinguished America and set her off from other nations—the spirit of adventure, belief in democracy, and appreciation for personality; all in terms of the Christian gospel. It is a large order, and complacency for the many may nullify its appeal; but, to the real prophet of the Lord, here is an objective calling for the highest statesmanship.

Prof. Luccock has written a real book; one that will challenge thought and stir the emotions and energize the will. Such a book has been long overdue.

TEACHING WITHOUT TEXTBOOKS. By Frances W. Danielson and Jeanette E. Perkins. The Pilgrim Press; $2; pp. 239.

The curriculum of the future will evidently be text-bookless. Here is a demonstration volume as to how it is done with nursery, beginners, primary, and junior-aged children. Situations as they naturally arise out of the group experience, as well as situations made to arise by the suggestion of experts, are seized upon to lead children to face outcomes and make intelligent and right choices. Consequently, these children are led to work and play in co-operation, to study purposefully, to share joyously with one another, and to worship reverently and sincerely. Here is a book you will want.

EXPLORING RELIGION WITH EIGHT-YEAR-OLDS. By Helen F. Scott and Sophia L. Fahs. Henry Holt & Co.; $2.50; pp. 283.

This book conceives of religion as the qualitative value in any and every life experience and of the curriculum of religious education not as a body of material to be passed over to the pupil by the teacher, but as an interpretation of experience, so that its spiritual values emerge and become effective in shaping character. The exploration covers thirty-two Sundays, and is a record of exactly what took place in the Union School of Religion with an actual group of eight-year-olds. Here is food for anxious thought by those engaged in the religious stimulation of children.

SCIENCE AND THE NEW CIVILIZATION. By Robert A. Millikan. Charles Scribner's Sons; $2; pp. 194.

The discoverer of cosmic rays and America's most illustrious physicist, writes in his engaging style of science, of physics in particular, and records his belief that essential religion is the world's supremest need. Read this book and stouten your faith, and at the same time you will see there is no conflict between science and religion; rather that science has done more to relieve human bondage than all the political upheavals of history. It is strong meat and a book for thinkers. If you can qualify, the reviewer heartily recommends it.

OBITUARIES.

LOWE.

Dannie B. Lowe, native of Alamance County, N. C., died at the home of his mother, Mrs. Mary E. Lowe, July 14, 1930, being in his forty-eighth year of age. He is survived by his widow, six children, his mother and nine sisters and brothers.

Bro. Lowe was a member of Shallow Ford Church, and for a number of years was active in Church and Sunday School work, and at one time served as superintendent of Sunday School. For the past fourteen years he had made his home in Roanoke Rapids, where he lived up to the time of his death. He died while on a visit to the home of his mother.

Burial services were conducted from Shallow Ford Church, and his body was interred in the Church cemetery on July 15th, in the presence of an unusually large congregation. May the Lord comfort the sorrowing relatives and friends.

R. A. WHITTEN.

UNDERWOOD.

Little Sallie Willie Underwood, the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. I. T. Underwood, departed this life July 30, 1930, at 3 A. M., at the age of eight months. Her death came as a surprise to all, for the day before she was thought not seriously ill. She leaves, to mourn their loss, her father, mother, three sisters and three brothers. Her stay was brief in the world, but she has woven her sweet little life into the affection of the family circle.

Burial was conducted at Concord Church by the pastor of her parents, assisted by Rev. Mr. Stearns, Methodist minister, an acquaintance of the family. The large attendance was an evidence of the high esteem in which Bro. Underwood and family are held. May the Lord bless and comfort the loved ones.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

Mrs B F Frank 12-1-30

By Dr. W. C. Wicker.

OFFICIAL CENSUS FIGURES.—

It is officially announced that the population of the continental United States was 122,698,190 on April 1, 1930. This figure is subject to revision, but it is not expected that it will change much by review. This is an increase of 16,987,570 since 1920. The percentage of increase was 16.1. This shows the vitality and attractiveness of the country. After all that may be said, this is still the land of opportunity, the land of the free, the land of the passion for progress.

TEST FOR CITIZENSHIP.—

The Presbyterian Synod of California, composed of 2,000 delegates, adopted resolutions approving "the recent decision of the high Federal courts admitting a Quaker and a conscientious objector to citizenship" and calling "on our whole constituency to distinguish between Christian patriotism and the narrow nationalism which places Caesar before Christ." This synod also approved the action of the Presbyterian General Assembly, which held that willingness to bear arms, without regard to conscience, should not be made a conditional test for citizenship. This action of the Presbyterian Synod of California and of the Presbyterian General Assembly should meet with hearty approval of all Christian people who would like to place Christ before Caesar.

CHRISTIAN CRISES IN CHINA.—

Dr. T. C. Choa, a prominent Chinese delegate at the Jerusalem conference and a careful student of conditions in China, says: "Christians in general seem afraid to say or do anything in China. Where the Church has acted, it had worked too slowly, and the resultant action has come too late. A good example of this is the situation eventuating in the passage of a resolution by the Natural Educational Conference (an official body), forbidding any one who is not a Chinese citizen to establish primary schools, kindergartens, or normal schools in China. The Chinese Christians knew a long time before this action was taken that such a movement was contemplated, and a big petition on behalf of such mission schools was circulated among their constituency, but before the signatures could be collected and presented to the government, the action was taken and the mission schools were prohibited."

YOUTH TURNING TO RELIGION.—

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, at its recent convention, in Berlin, Germany, on August 5th, this year, declared that "Youth is incurably religious, and more young people are taking Jesus Christ seriously throughout the world today than ever before in history." He pointed out that this was the first international religious assembly to meet in Germany since the outbreak of the World War. It is true that youth possesses more of the religious impulses, urges and tendencies than are possessed at any other age, and the Christian forces of the world should capitalize these tendencies in religious guidance and Christian culture. Dr. Starbuck, in his "Psychology of Religion," has plainly demonstrated that in youth more people are converted to Christianity than at any other age. The wise Christian worker will take advantage of this fact and work with nature in religion as well as with nature's laws in the realm of science and industry.

ADULT EDUCATION.—

In Chicago there has been a marvelous success in the adult educational movement. The universities and colleges, with public lectures and educational programs, the settlements, the art institute, the Adler Planetarium, the Field Museum, the Adult Education Council, the Chicago Forum, and many other agencies are conducting elaborate programs. At one of the Monday evening lectures recently at a hall where 2,800 people could be seated, the executive secretary of one center said: "We have far more than this number seek admission. On several occasions we have had thirty policemen guard our doors from being stormed by the people who wanted to hear the discussion by eminent speakers on topics of the day. Such an adult educational movement in many of our populous centers would do much to solve the problems of evil and irreligion if properly directed for the moral and spiritual education of the adults of the community."

MISSION TEACHERS BARRED.—

In China today it is almost certain that Western missionary teachers will be barred from teaching in the elementary schools by the recent government action, so far as the schools refuse to conform to that action in territories controlled by the Nationalist government or wherever local authorities are in sympathy with the Nationalistic purpose of such prohibition. Junior and senior middle schools are not affected by the order, but they must be registered and such schools may not accept any students who come from unapproved primary or elementary schools. There seems to be, therefore, no educational future open to students of unauthorized primary schools, and Westerners who are in China in connection with missionary schools will not be allowed to teach unless they conform to the same rule and come under the Nationalistic control. This will doubtless greatly hinder the progress of the missionary educational undertakings in China.

CHRIST AND CONCILIATION.—

If we accept Christ as the Prince of Peace, the Churches of the world should be able to work out some plan by which the Christian program for peace can be made effective in abolishing war and accomplishing world peace. The Churches should be able to "lend mass and momentum to the offensive against war." This program calls for adventurous and progressive spirits prepared for the inflexible struggle. Certainly the religious forces are wise enough to be in the lead of contemporary thought and scientific research, since many of the most advanced scientists are at the same time the most advanced thinkers in the realm of religious thought and leadership. Peace may entail profound changes in the social structure and economic outlook, but such an outlook will be both Christian and conciliatory. Such an advanced peace movement must deal in a Christian manner with the new conception of the relationship between men and machinery in industrial production. If un-Christian methods dominate our industrial system, the Christian forces must attack the peace problem at the source of war conditions and change these conditions so as to bring about a conciliatory industrial system.

WAR PENSIONS.—

War pensions in the near future will mount to the enormous figures against the United States government of half a billion dollars a year, and that figure will be increased. The debt piled up against the government by the World War was the enormous sum of $25,000,000, but it is very likely that before the last pension is paid to the veterans of that war or their widows, more than another $25,000,000 will have been spent. Only recently the last veteran of the Mexican war died, eighty-three years after the armies of Scott and Taylor crossed the Rio Grande into Mexico.

When the year 2000 arrives, according to this record, a few survivors of the World War will still be alive, and since there are still widows of the War of 1812 on the pension roll, it is probable that there will be widows of the World War veterans surviving and drawing pensions in the year 2033. In this good year of grace there were as many as 156,000 persons drawing pensions. It is expected that this number will grow to 380,000 by the year 1933. According to previous records, this number will grow as the number of World War veterans unable to support themselves increases. If all the money we have paid for war and pensions since the discovery of America had been paid to evangelize the world, educate the Christians, and found Christian governments where paganism now reigns, this world would have reached something of the ideal that Christ anticipated when He set out to conquer the world by love.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. M. F. Allen, pastor of Newport News Christian Church, has been filling the pulpit of First Christian Church, Richmond, in the absence of its pastor, Dr. C. C. Ryan.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Kernodle, of Graham, N. C., with their son-in-law, Major J. J. Henderson, and daughter, Mrs. Henderson, were guests at the home of the managing editor last Sunday.

Rev. J. W. Knight, pastor of a group of our rural Churches in Rockingham County, and who has been quite sick for several months, continues very ill at his home near Stokesdale. His physicians hold little hope for his recovery. May his many friends remember him in prayer.

The worst feature of the country today is lawlessness. It must not be overlooked, however, that that has been with us from the first. The perpetual talk of liberty, independence and self-determination, without proper definition, have emboldened the anti-social and self-willed until there can be little doubt that the government is on trial.—Christian-Evangelist.

Many pastors of the Christian denomination are now returning from vacations in various parts of the country and will begin their duties for the coming year in a refreshed and vigorous state of mind. We wish to urge these pastors to the importance of making their membership better acquainted with the official organ of the Christian Church and demonstrate their accomplishments through sending new subscriptions to C. D. Johnston, circulation manager, Elon College, N. C.

When asked for the secret of success, General Booth replied: "I will tell you the secret: God has had all there was of me. There have been many men with greater brains than I, and men with greater opportunities; but from the day that I got the poor of London on my heart, and a vision of what Christ could do for them, I made up my mind that God should have all there was of William Booth. And if there is anything of power in my work, it is because God has had all the love of my heart, all the power of my will, and all the influence of my life."—Selected.

Henry W. Taft, brother of the late Chief Justice, has quit the advisory committee of the New York County Republican Committee because the committee went wet. Mr. Taft thus proves that he is not only a better Republican but a better citizen than his associates, for in the one instance he stands squarely with President Hoover, who is the titular head of his party, and also with the national platform of his party, and in the other he stands by the Federal Constitution and the fundamental law of the land, which is one of the essential marks of a really good citizen.

THE SUN LETTER.

If The Christian Sun had four thousand paid subscribers it would be a financial success and could pay its way and not be a financial burden on anybody. We now have 2,800 subscribers in all. Quite a number in arrears. The total cost for the year is about $7,000 (on a basis of three thousand subscribers). To publish one thousand more copies would add some extra cost, but if the income was $8,000 per year it would take care of the cost. You ask the question, what do you do with the $7,000 it now takes to publish The Sun? That is the cost of publishing and mailing The Sun. The editor, the associate editors, the circulation manager, all give their services free and do the work in connection with their other work, in order to keep The Sun making its weekly visits to your home. It only costs you $2.00 per year for fifty-one issues. We want 1,200 new subscribers. How can we get them?

We have 236 Churches, with a membership of about 31,000 members. If a Church having 130 members would get us six new subscribers; 260 members, 12 new subscribers; 520 members, 24 new subscribers, and so on—it would be fine. Let every Church undertake to do this at once.

Chas. D. Johnston,
Circulation Manager.

BETHEL.

We have been called to serve this Church another year. We have been here several years. The Church has made a steady growth. The attendance has been good this year. The Sunday School is doing fine. We had our meeting the third week in July. Rev. A. P. Hurst, of Elon College, was with us. Bro. Hurst is a real gospel preacher and a man of experience. His messages were deep and interesting. The people heard him gladly. There were five additions to the Church. We give God the praise.

J. F. Apple.

LONG'S CHAPEL.

On the first Sunday in August, we began revival services at Long's Chapel, with two services on Sunday. Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, of Reidsville, N. C., reached us on Monday and was with us till the close of the meeting on the following Friday evening. His sermons were practical and very earnest. Our people were pleased with him and the gospel messages that he brought. Seven united with the Church and were baptized at the close of the meeting. One or two others may join later.

The Sunday School is doubtless the largest in the history of the Church. The Christian Endeavor Society meets every Sunday evening. The meetings are interesting and helpful. The Church is planning to have preaching twice a month the coming year. The Church and the community are looking forward with much interest to the meeting of Conference in November.

Burlington, N. C. P. H. Fleming.

REV. G. D. HUNT'S LETTER.

Since I am at home this beautiful Sunday morning, I will send a short message to the Church through The Sun columns. I have been this past week in a meeting at Beulah Church, at Truitt, Ala. This is our home Church, of which Staley Hunt is pastor, he being in his school work at Pisgah, Ala., could not be present with us in the revival. We had a fine meeting, good attendance, and the best order prevailed. The music was a fine feature of the meeting. Many fine testimonies and prayers were made for the glory of the Lord, and everybody enjoyed the fellowship, while the people were so kind to us in helping to build our home, which was destroyed by fire some weeks since. I am praying God to bless every one of them. We have at this date all the framing and rafters on and a goodly part of the weather-boarding up.

I am leaving tonight for South Georgia, to be with Rev. W. C. Carpenter in a revival of two weeks at Ambrose and Vanceville, Ga. I am expecting a good meeting. I have only two other revivals, so far as I know now, but I have two or three other Churches in the two Conferences to visit before Conference. I must see all of the Churches if possible before the close of the Conference year.

Our joint board, together with all other interested brethren and sisters, will be called to meet at some convenient place on the fifth Sunday in this month to consider questions of vital interest to our Church and hear a detailed report of the field secretary. We expect a fine attendance and a mighty good meeting. Just as soon as our chairman shall decide on the place we will notify you. Remember, it will be the fifth Sunday in August of this year when the meeting will be held.

G. D. Hunt.

PROGRAM.

Program for the Ministers' and Laymen's Board meeting, to be held at the First Christian Church, LaGrange, Ga., on the fifth Sunday in August, 1930:

10:30. Devotional Service—Rev. H. M. Gray.
11:00. Report of Field Worker and Sermon—Rev. G. D. Hunt.
12:00. Lunch.
1:30. Rev. J. D. Dollar Presiding, Chairman of the Joint Board.
2:00. Plans for Future Work. General Discussion.

We are hoping for a representative gathering of our loyal men and women. Please arrange to come and enjoy the day with us.

J. D. Dollar, Chairman.
G. D. Hunt, Field Sec'y.

NOTICE.

Rev. J. Lee Johnson, of Fuquay Springs, N. C., will assist H. C. Caviness, pastor of First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., located on the corner of Washington and County Streets, in a series of revival meetings, beginning September 2nd and continuing for two weeks. Services each day at 10 A. M. and 8 P. M. except Monday. A cordial invitation is extended to every one, who can, to attend these meetings; a hearty welcome is assured each one, and the blessings of our Lord which always attend the gospel ministry of Mr. Johnson, who is one of the outstanding ministers of the Southern Christian Convention. Please pray for the meeting, that our Lord Jesus Christ shall be glorified (Rom. 15:30).

H. C. Caviness, Pastor.

CONFERENCES MEET.

Alabama Conference will meet with the Church at Noon Day, Tuesday, 10 A. M., after second Sunday in October, 1930.

Eastern Virginia Conference will meet with the Church at South Norfolk, Va., Wednesday before the first Sunday in November, 1930, at 10 A. M.

North Carolina and Virginia Conference will meet on Tuesday after the second Sunday in November, 1930, at 10 A. M., at Long's Chapel, Alamance County, N. C.

Western North Carolina Conference will meet Wednesday after the first Sunday in November, 1930, 10:30 A. M., with Hank's Chapel.

Eastern North Carolina Conference will meet on Tuesday after the third Sunday in November, 1930, at 10:30 A. M.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

REV. CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D., of Winter Park, while spending his vacation at his summer home at Henniker, N. H., has supplied several important pulpits in the East.

MISS SUSAN A. LONGWELL, who occupied the chair of English literature and philosophy at Rollins from 1897 until 1909, when she retired on pension from the Carnegie Foundation, died in Springfield, Ohio, on July 26th, at the age of ninety. She was born April 27, 1841, near Whitesville, N. Y. In her mingled the strains of French, Dutch, English and Scotch-Irish, but of American stock, all of her ancestry being in this country prior to the revolution.

MIAMI SHORES: Rev. John M. Peyton has resigned, his resignation having taken effect on August 1st. Mr. Peyton has accepted a call to a Church in northern New York. The people of the Church gave Mr. Peyton and his wife a birthday and farewell surprise which was greatly enjoyed by all and appreciated by the pastor and his wife. Mr. Peyton has served several of our Congregational Churches in the Southeast, coming to Miami Shores from Salisbury, N. C. He leaves this section with a large number of friends, who extend best wishes for a successful and happy pastorate in the new field.

CORAL GABLES, FLA.: This Church received into full membership twelve new members early in July and seven more on August 10th. Of this number, fourteen were received upon confession of faith. The pastor, Rev. Don G. Henshaw, reports that the congregations have been over one hundred each Sunday, and the Sunday School attendance has averaged one hundred and twenty-four. For the summer season, this is a gratifying report. Mr. Henshaw has "stayed on the job" this summer and has served on the depositors' committee of the defunct bank in Coral Gables. Mrs. Henshaw has been at her old home in Tennessee for part of the summer.

MR. & MRS. MYRON S. BURTON, son and daughter-in-law of the Rev. Dr. Charles Emerson Burton, New York, N. Y., general secretary of the National Council of the Congregational Churches, sailed from San Francisco, Calif., August 15, 1930, on the S. S. President Pierce, of the Dollar Line, to begin a missionary career in China. Undeterred by reports of bandits and revolutionists, they are going to Fenchow, Shansi province, where is located the fartherest inland hospital of the American Congregational Foreign Board. Mr. Burton will become business manager of the hospital. Mrs. Burton is a medical technician. Westward from Fenchow there is not another modern equipped hospital for 3,000 miles until Persia is reached. Fenchow was the scene of the martyrdom of four missionaries and their families during the Boxer uprising in 1900. The mission station was reopened in 1907. Mr. and Mrs. Burton received their commissions in Plymouth Church, Minneapolis, Minn., from the hand of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Harry P. Dewey. They will be supported by Plymouth Church. Mr. Burton is a graduate of Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., where his father also graduated. Besides a year in business, he has received the degree of M. A. in business administration from the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis. Mrs. Burton is a former student at Carleton College and graduated this June from the University of Minnesota. Their marriage a year ago was the culmination of a Carleton College romance.

MEXICO: We quote from an interesting private letter from Dr. E. A. King, of Miami Beach, who has just returned from attending the "Mexican Seminar": "I have brought home quite a lot of pictures that tell a story themselves. I am arranging to have lantern-slides made, and I shall be lecturing on Mexico next winter. I cannot attempt, in this letter, any discussion of Mexico, but I have a mind full of things—just crammed full —and it will require a considerable amount of organization of facts and arrangement of material before I write much about it.

"You may be interested in a general observation about climate and altitude. The voyage down to Vera Cruz via Key West and Havana was smooth (on the ocean) and very warm in staterooms and warm even on deck. That is a hot country in July. But the change came soon after leaving Vera Cruz in the train. We go in a few hours from sea level to nearly 8,000 feet. When we got up to that level and a little lower we found cool weather that caused us to put on our overcoats. The whole plateau is very high, and consequently cold. Mexico City is 7,400 feet in the air. All the time I was there I wore my overcoat except during the middle of the day. Some mornings, however, I went out without my coat. The insides of the stone buildings are cool, and sometimes cold. The climate is a combination of California and Florida. I think it surpasses both in some ways the year around, according to reports.

"It took several days to get adjusted to the altitude. Short breath was the chief difficulty. Indigestion another. One had to be careful not to over-do. On the way back, at sea level on the ship, we had to make another adjustment, and that was easier because we had six days to do it in. We slept a great deal in our steamer chairs, lost all ambition and energy, and didn't care! It took us the whole week to 'let down' and 'build up' and get into active life again.

"I have quite a lot of first-hand information (and other kinds) about our Protestant work in Mexico. I am to go to the American Board this week to speak, and later to report on several important items. I sat in semi-officially at a conference on the extension of the Union Theological Seminary. I am very favorably impressed with its work."

INTERNATIONAL COUNCIL ORGANIZED.

A world executive organization for the Congregational Churches is to be established as the result of action taken at the International Congregational Council meeting in Bournemouth, England, last month, it was announced recently by Dr. Fred B. Smith, of New York, moderator of the National Council of the Congregational Churches in the United States. Dr. Smith returned this week from Europe.

The Rev. Dr. J. D. Jones, of Bournemouth, the new moderator or presiding officer of the International Council, is to be the head of the executive organization under the direction of an "ad interim" committee of fifteen. The committee will be appointed by the various national bodies, five from United States, five from Great Britain, and five from other countries. The executive budget will be pro-rated among the countries in proportion to their representation on the ad interim committee.

The purpose of the executive organization, Dr. Smith stated, "will be to put on an aggressive, continuous, challenging appeal to the Congregational Churches throughout the world to make effective the ideals set forth in the resolutions and findings adopted at the Bournemouth meeting. Dr. Jones is expected to spend a good deal of his time traveling and in his visitations among the Churches and at conventions in different countries he will personally symbolize the solidarity of the Congregational fellowship. His headquarters for the time being at least will continue at Bournemouth, where for thirty-two years he has been pastor of the Richmond Hill Church. The pastoral relationship is not to be dissolved, but the actual duties are to be largely assumed by his able associate, the Rev. Dr. Thomas Yates."

The Congregational Churches will be the second large Protestant body to establish a permanent world executive organization. The first were the Lutheran Churches, for whom the Rev. Dr. John A. Morehead, of New York, president of the World Lutheran Convention, was designated last January to assume the responsibilities of executive director. Dr. Morehead formerly was executive director for the National Lutheran Council in this country.

The Baptists, the Presbyterian and Reformed jointly and the Methodist Churches have world gatherings for discussion and conference, as also have the Anglican Churches in the Lambeth Conference of their bishops, but none of these communions has a permanent world executive organization.

In the meetings of the International Congregational Council, the Congregational Churches have heretofore also had world gatherings purely for discussion, the first being held in London, 1891.

The causes of international peace, Church union and co-operation in foreign mission work, it is said, brought to the front at the Bournemouth gathering the need for the formulation and promotion of a world Congregational program. "The responsibility of the Churches for international peace," Dr. Smith said, "was reiterated in every address. I attended every session and took notes on all the speeches, and no matter what was the topic, every speaker, at some place in his remarks, stressed the duty of the Churches to establish and maintain international good will. This obligation was most forcefully expressed by David Lloyd George in his wonderful address on the evening of July Fourth, when he voiced as his mature conclusion that upon the Churches fundamentally depends the solution of the problem of enduring peace."

The foreign mission work of the British Congregationalists, carried on through the London Missionary Society, founded 1795, and that of the American Congregationalists, carried on through the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, founded 1810, has become a joint enterprise in several countries, and the trend, Dr. Smith said, is in the direction of further consolidation.

The total number of Churches represented in the International Congregational Council is 24,275, with a constituency of 6,000,000. They are located in twenty-nine countries, in addition to United States and Great Britain.

An invitation was urged from the Japanese Churches for the International Council to hold its next meeting, 1940, at Tokyo. The decision was left to the ad interim committee, with the sentiment manifestedly prevailing, however, according to Dr. Smith, that the meeting should be in United States.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Monday, June 16, 1930.

The sea is calm and blue and beautiful this early Monday morning. After a plunge and a rub-down from a good warm salt-water bath at 7 A. M., a hearty breakfast is had with relish. Drs. Smith and Helfenstein don their golf clothes this morning. Smith's are too small, and Helfenstein's are too large, and both agree after breakfast not to play golf at all, but tennis. They have all sorts of games and amusements on a great ship. But the sea amuses and plays all sorts of games with me. It is so everlastingly moody. One hour it is as gentle and docile as a lamb; next hour as restless and wild as a tiger; and then it will become as boisterous and beastly as a lion. But at all times it is strong and mighty and majestic, and absolutely sure of itself and free and independent. So man, in invading its domains, must needs prepare himself to meet the moods and demands of the monster.

This ship on which we sail is a giant of 24,679 tonnage. The great engines that drive her number twelve, and they consume four hundred tons of coal per day, or 3,000 tons to devour in her journey from New York to Liverpool. Her complete crew is 544 officers and men, and she carries a passenger list of 1,340 men and women. She has swung to her sides 34 live-saving boats, ample to accommodate 1,885 persons should she go down, and there are 2,000 life-saving jackets in case of need. By noon today, since yesterday noon, we had made 407 nautical miles; this added to the 274 miles of the first day, puts us 681 miles out at sea.

Drs. Coffin and Denison join us at lunch. The talk is by Helfenstein and Coffin about life in Paris, both having spent some time in that gay metropolis. They agree that, for pure pleasure-seeking, a gay and debonair life, no city in the world equals Paris. They also agree that the change of feeling towards us Americans since the World War is marked and deplorable. To make short measure of it, Europeans do not like us, and when they think it will do no harm they do not hesitate to say so. We helped them win the war, but we refused to enter the League of Nations and have shown in a hundred other ways that we are separate from them and seem determined to act as a big bully, or a heartless big brother.

In the afternoon everybody on board reads, lolls, dozes on deck chairs and dreams the time away. I am reading Benson's "Leaves From the Trees," and come across this sentence, "The error of religion in our time is that it undertakes to explain the world, whereas its work is to interpret it." Now there is a sentence for a text. We whose business it is to teach religion, preach religion, write about religion have allowed ourselves to be drawn off by the scientists and philosophers into trying to explain the world—tell how it originated, how long a period has been covered by creation, how many and how far away the stars are, whence came man and all the created things. We have become involved in a tangle and a fog of our own making, when we should have been busy explaining to our fellow-man that we are here, and the world is here, and that God is here, and sin is here, and God, who created us and all the world, is also able to recreate us and redeem us from the evil and sin that doth so easily beset us. Yes, Benson is right; religion needs to interpret the world and nature and God, and not seek to explain it, "For by faith we understand the worlds were made."

Some one lends me a copy of Irvin Cobb's humorous brochure on "Take Before Sailing." Cobb advises against tourists going to art galleries, museums and graveyards in Europe. The first time he went to Europe he followed the guide-books, and from them learned that nearly or quite all the people of Europe died from one thousand to two thousand years ago, and he must find out about them. Now he advises tourists to find out something about the few Europeans who are still living, some of whom are very interesting.

This has been one smooth, restful, calm, happy day at sea. The sun this evening, as it reluctantly slipped into the sea, lit up the sky above with long streaks of a glorious gray and scarlet and blazing red and fading pink. The sun himself was a huge ball of blazing flame as he descended into the deep, and to prove his merit and worth and power painted the canopy of heaven with a richness and revelry of color seldom if ever seen on land.

When God gets ready to paint, He does not confine Himself to a canvas 10x12 or 20x24. He takes the sky or a spreading landscape for a background, and with deft hand and infinite skill paints a picture to adorn and glorify a world. God has indeed made for us a beautiful and boundless world, and with it and through it He is preparing us for one far better and more beautiful, whose glories tongue cannot tell and whose bliss and blessings no pen can describe.

CONFERENCE IS COMING.

It is time that all Churches in the Southern Christian Convention should be planning to close the Conference year. Some of the Conferences have already met, and their record is already made, but if they have not made the record that was set by the Convention they should endeavor to make such a record before they stop work and cease to raise money to meet the imperative needs of the Convention. Economic conditions among our people within the bounds of the Convention are not so good as usual, and many of our people will retrench in their Church contributions rather than make sacrifices to meet the needs of the kingdom and allow the Church to suffer.

Every pastor would do well to begin to look into the financial condition of the Church or Churches over which he is pastor and devise some means by which the apportionments of the Church to Conference may be raised. The work of the Convention cannot go on unless the Convention fund is raised to meet the current expenses for operating the work of the Convention. The officers of the Convention find it difficult to finance the activities of the Convention, even when all that the Churches are requested to contribute is raised.

The superannuation fund is another fund that we can hardly neglect to raise. Our old ministers who have spent their best days in service for the Church must not be neglected in the declining years, but even when we do our best the sum is entirely too small to take care of our aged ministers as well as they are cared for in other Churches where larger salaries have been paid their ministers while in service. Then, the widows of deceased ministers, left without home and means to provide for them in age, should not be neglected. They have served in aiding their husbands to render service in the ministry, and should be cared for by the Churches in such a manner as to reflect the love of Christ and exemplify "pure and undefiled religion before God and the Father by visiting them in their affliction with our contributions to the superannuation fund and send the full quota to Conference for this purpose. We need it all, and more than is requested, and surely no Church will withhold their contributions for such a worthy cause.

The publication fund with which we publish THE CHRISTIAN SUN is essential for the Church paper. Without it we cannot carry on our work. The entire amount raised through the subscriptions of the paper is not sufficient to pay for the printing and mailing. The editors of the paper are receiving nothing for their work from week to week for the entire year. They are glad to do all they can to give the Church the advantage of such a paper as THE CHRISTIAN SUN represents. The circulation manager is receiving no salary for his service in securing subscriptions and looking after the renewals. Though he is a busy man with our Orphanage and is greatly overworked at times, he is rendering this service without the hope of fee or rewards of a monetary nature, but it is all done because the Church is not able to employ some one to do this work on salary. It seems that the thousands of Church members of our Church who do not subscribe for the paper, in view of what these faithful workers are doing for nothing, might subscribe for the paper at two dollars a year and render that much support and at the same time receive value worth more than the price of the subscription would cost.

Our educational interests are as important as any of our enterprises. We have need for the college. Our young people educated in the college of our own Church will have an opportunity to develop loyalty to the Church and its institutions which they will not and cannot receive anywhere else. When a young man or young woman graduates from any one of our colleges, there should be developed in them such a spirit of love and loyalty not only to the college and its faculty, but also to the Church that there can be no question about their loyal support ever thereafter.

DIVORCE.

Ministers are forced by conditions to decide the question whether to marry a divorced person while both parties are living. Biblical and legal questions both enter into the decision, and that makes the question more difficulty of decision. The relation of these two questions must be considered in the light of law and the Bible.

True, "marriage is the union of one man and one woman, to the exclusion of all others, and intended to last for life." Two ideas are involved in such marriage. (a) The personal agreement between the man and the woman to unite in marriage. (b) The legal acknowledgment of such agreement under a license issued under the law. There are many laws on this subject, but the moral contract and the legal avowal to keep such contract, constitute marriage. It is divine in origin and is the most sacred human relation; "so long as ye both shall live" is a common pledge at the marriage altar.

The marriage ceremony creates a legal relation, and divorce ends that relation; but the marriage tie still exists. The real marriage relation is a personal contract between the man and the woman before the legal ceremony is performed and continues its obligations while both parties live. Nothing but death can destroy the marriage relation. "They shall be one flesh" (Gen. 2:24; Eph. 5:31). The marriage relation is the most sacred and the most unified of all relations. Nothing can sever this relation but death. Matthew says of this relation, "They are no more twain, but one flesh. What, therefore, God hath joined together, let not man put asunder" (19:6). Divorced people may live apart, but they are still husband and wife, and have no right to remarry while both parties live.

There is distinction between divorce and annulment of marriage. When a marriage is annulled, it is declared void and never to have existed. Several causes furnish legal reasons for the annulment of marriage, but these do not enter into the question of divorce. According to the law in many States, the final decree forbids the dependant to remarry, or to remarry within a certain period. Some States permit the defendant to remarry at once. There are divorce laws in every State except South Carolina. Married people in that State cannot secure a divorce for any reason. The only ground for divorce in New York State is adultery by the defendant; and this is practically a ground for divorce in nearly all the States.

The most alarming fact in this country is that the United States of America leads all other countries in the divorces per thousand marriages. Ireland is the lowest, being less than one to the thousand marriages. The highest is the United States, with 85 to the thousand. Canada is next to Ireland; Switzerland is next to the United States, with 43 to the thousand; England and Wales, 2½ to the thousand; France and Germany, 30. These statistics were gathered by the United States in 1910, and there has been no improvement since that time.

What this country needs is uniform marriage and divorce laws for the whole United States. Dissatisfied married people go from one State to another and get divorce and then remarry. From the best here presented, a minister of the gospel has no right to marry divorced men or women while both parties are living.

CHAPLAIN ROUNTREE IN SCOTLAND.

Edinburgh, Scotland, July 26, 1930.

Dear Sun Readers:

On the eve of our leaving this port, I wish to write you a line about Edinburgh and this country. Scotland is one of the smallest of European countries; nevertheless, one of the most beautiful, and it is teeming with historical interest. It is the home of Bruce and Wallace, Burns, Sir Walter Scott and Harry Lauder. It is the home of Mary Queen of Scots, one of the most fascinating and mysterious characters of Scottish history. It is the land of abbeys and castles, irregular hills, mountains and lakes. It is the land of golf, where, through the past five hundred years, this has become the national game, and its links are the most wonderful in the world. It is a land of American tourist and here the Scotchman's blue eyes kindle with delight when mention is made of his native land. It is not strange that he does, for we are told that the Scotchmen lead their children to the old landmarks and shrines of their country's history and repeat to them those deeds which are their nation's proudest heritage. "Time,' they say, "is never wasted which is spent in honoring departed greatness."

We have made excursions here and there, everywhere seeing the best we could and all we could. Some have traveled in groups, while others have preferred to travel independently. Notably among the places visited are the Tressachs and the Melrose sections, where Sir Walter Scott lived. The Tressachs is a section of irregular hills and mountains too rugged and too beautiful to be cultivated. In their midst are many beautiful lakes, which the poets of the country have written so much about. A trip through this section involves travel by train, steamer on the lakes, and stage coaches over the mountains from lake to lake, or it may be made by bus all the way. In any event, it is a full day's tour of enchanting delight among wild and picturesque nature. But the charm of this section does not lie alone in its mountain scenery, but also both history and legend in these woods have fascinated the English-speaking race with the life and adventures of Rob Roy and the transcending genius of one man, Sir Walter Scott. He who has read "Waverly Novels," "Marmior" and "The Lady of the Lake," needs no guidebook for his tours.

We reap today what Sir Walter Scott sowed. In the comforts of a de luxe motor bus, speeding over modern highways, up the hills and down the valleys, over glen and dale, we absorb in a few flashing hours what it cost him years of labor to accomplish. As we speed along through the country, the cultivated lands are transcendently beautiful. From along the mountain-side, as far as the eye can see, the whole panorama is one of fields and pastures, inset with the homes of those who own and cultivate them. These fields are laid off in small, irregular patches, separated from one another by rock walls. In these various patches, potatoes, oats, barley, rye, wheat, hay, and pasture grass are growing. Everywhere thousands of sheep and cattle, the source of Scot Hill leather and tweed, are grazing. The whole valley clear to the hills in the distance looks like a vast crazy-quilt, with every cut a different color.

It is this sort of thing which Scotland has built up to excellence through the receding centuries, and which we can enjoy anywhere we may choose to go.

Edinburgh is a big city, having a population of more than four hundred and twenty-seven thousand, and it is called the "Athens of the North." It is a very pretty city and full of historical attractions. Among them, and foremost, is the Edinburgh Castle, the castle of the kings and queens of former days, now used as a national shrine. It also includes barracks for the guard. Princess Street gardens furnish delightful recreation and pastime for the populace during their evenings. Those gardens occupy a great natural basin (once a lake) between Princess Street and the great perpendicular rock upon which the castle rests. It is about three blocks long and two blocks wide. Away down in the bottom of the ravine there is a row of shrubbery and trees running its entire length. This hides a railroad running through it. Contrary to the usual, this adds to, rather than takes away from, the attractiveness of the park. It is a pleasing occupation to watch the folks gathered here listening to the music of the red-coated band and passing their time in the gloaming, and this delight passes to inspiration as we watch the lingering twilight of the north climb slowly up that perpendicular rock and finally leave it in the care of the night.

In the castle is the World War memorial, "Queen Mary's Chapel," the "Crown Room," and many other things of interest. In the crown room are to be seen the discarded souvenirs of Scotland's sovereignty, the crown once worn by Robert Bruce, the sword of state, the scepter, and a great many other jewels. Other places of interest in the city are the Holy Rood Palace, John Knox's house, St. Giles Cathedral, the National Antiquarian Museum, the National Portrait Gallery, Parliament House, Advocate's Library, and the Royal Botanic Gardens.

What has impressed me much is the cordiality of the people. Their receptions call forth unqualified admiration, and our pleasures here have exceeded our most sanguine expectation. We have been entertained in receptions, luncheons and dances. Official receptions for officers and midshipmen have been abundant, including a great many golf and tennis parties for those who engage in those sports.

This concludes our visits on this cruise. We leave next Monday, the 28th, for Hampton Roads, Va., and we expect to anchor there the 14th of August. Au revoir to you until we meet again.

H. E. Rountree.

TOO BUSY.

I recently read the following on a Church bulletin-board: "When a man is too busy to worship God, he is too busy." It strikes me as containing food for thought, especially in these days of hectic living.

Many excuses are set forth for not worshiping God. Many of them do not stand much analysis. We are frequently met in Church work with the answer, "I am too busy; I have so much to do, I really cannot find time." Such people may profitably reread this bulletin-board statement. Nay, further, they might more profitably sit down and make a careful analysis of their time with the view of making changes that would enable them to find time to worship and to give something of themselves to His service.

If you feel that you are too busy to worship your God and serve Him, my advice is, first of all, to look to your Christianity and then to analyze your powers of discrimination and your selection of the things to which you are giving your time.

The author of the statement is right, "When a man is too busy to worship God, he is too busy," and something should be done about it.—Rev. Granville Taylor.

Serve the Lord with gladness. Enter into His gates with thanksgiving, and into His courts with praise. Be thankful unto Him, and bless His name. For the Lord is good.—Psa. 100:2, 4.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There are many social and benevolent organizations throughout the world that cultivate personal contact, create permanent friendships, and do much good without considering "the rock whence they were hewn, or the hole of the pit whence they were digged" (Isa. 51:1). It would be well if all such organizations could fully understand that the Church of Jesus Christ is the parent of all benevolent and beneficial organizations. Where Jesus Christ is unknown, and His Church does not exist, such organizations are not doing work. They are the children of the Church and fail to appreciate their parents; and that is not now an unknown quantity. Children forget what their parents have done for them, and organizations forget what the Church has done for them. All love and all benevolence have their origin in God, for God is love; and He not only gave His Son to save, but the world with all its good for man to enjoy. Jesus came to represent God, and He sends His Church to represent Him.

One of the dangers of this age is that good organizations will do good and at the same time neglect the Church from which they unconsciously sprung. The Church should be recognized, attended, sustained, and made first in all organized social and benevolent work. Unless this is done, many get into the organizations without a change of heart or a clear conception of the Church as the mother of the organization which they join, in which they work, and which they love.

The old hen sits on the eggs for three weeks, the brood comes out with new life; they follow their mother for a time; then they begin to scratch for themselves, but they continue to roost in the same house or the same tree. They continue to scratch together till death separates them. The Church of Jesus Christ has been brooding over ideas, purposes, plans, benevolences, social questions, in saving the world for centuries. These organizations that are doing so much good are the little chicks hatched out from those centuries of brooding in faith, and they ought not to wander from the Church and their members ought not to feel that they can do more good through them than through the Church from which they sprang.

The Sunday School, organized classes of adults, and missionary societies are in the same danger. They attend regularly and support liberally these organized Christian forces, then neglect attendance upon Church services and the regular support of the parent of their being and their good deeds. The old hen has her hardest time while she broods over the eggs, but she has a hard time again in scratching and watching after her young. The Church has had a hard time from Pentecost till now trying to put new life and new purpose into the world, and she needs now the generous and united support of all her children. His blessing upon all good organizations, but do not let them neglect His Church.

ELON LETTER.

Not so long ago I was in a Lutheran Church which is older than the United States government and which is decidedly High Church in its practices. There is the altar in this Church; also the pulpit and the reading-desk. And yet, at the conclusion of the service the minister said: "Next Sunday we begin here a series of meetings which will continue through the following week. I do not know whether I should call these meetings revival services or not, but I hope that our people will attend and that those who are already members of the Church will be strengthened in their spiritual life and that those who are not connected with the Church will become members as a consequence."

I have recently been in several Christian Churches in which the revival has from the days of James O'Kelly been an integral part of the methodology of our procedure, and I have heard the minister in a great many cases say something like this: "We are in particular need of instruction in the Principles and teachings of the Church. I am not so sure but that our practice of holding a revival service has been an injury to the Christian progress of our new members. We must have training classes for new converts, so that they will really know what Christianity is."

It would seem that those Churches which have relied upon the educational method have found it inadequate and are resorting to evangelistic efforts in order to give warmth and enthusiasm to the Christian experience. It would seem that those Churches which have enjoyed the warmth and enthusiasm of the evangelistic experience and method have found it inadequate and that they are looking for the solidity that comes with knowledge, and so religious education appeals to them as foundational for success in their Christian efforts.

Manifestly, the Church, whether of the confirmation or conversion type, is convinced of the inadequacy of its methods. In a day of great material prosperity such as ours is, the Church ought to be sitting on top of the world, but the sad fact is that the Church has largely lost its power.

It is so easy to have confidence in methods, in organization, and so difficult to grasp the inner significance of the Christian life. Even in our political experience we have lost the real spirit of liberty for the individual in striving after social organization and in our Christian experience the Church has lost its pristine power in the mad effort to ecclesiasticize and organize and programize religion.

We need to ponder long and insistently that great saying of Jesus, "I have come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Life, which means a genuine experience of Christ, is the secret of Christian power, and until the Church is able to introduce mankind individually and socially into a genuine experience of God through Christ, religious education will avail nothing and evangelism will avail nothing.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE.

Piedmont Junior College will open September 3, 1930, with a strong faculty and better equipment than ever before, and a good prospect for students. In the reports of the committees on education of the Alabama and Georgia and Alabama Conferences, the college was reassured of their loyalty and co-operation in a larger way than ever before. This is an index of their ever-growing interest in their own institution. Our folks are getting interested in higher education as they have never been before.

Parents, the question of educating your sons and daughters is a very vital one, and you cannot well afford to pass up your own Piedmont Junior College, which is a Christian institution, for one which is purely secular. If I were to ask you why you want your sons and daughters to go to school, you would probably give one of the following reasons: to prepare them to cope with the world; to make them useful citizens; to enable them to build up a name for themselves; to enrich their lives and make them happier and fuller. All these motives are indeed worthy, and if it accomplished even one, the sacrifice will not have been in vain. But are you assured of even this one? Before going further with your preparation, ponder over this question long and earnestly, for the future of your children may be at stake.

The college problem may be a very difficult one to solve, but, after all, it contains but two factors, and after you have studied each carefully you have at least approached a solution. These two problems are the student and the school. If you have already made a careful diagnosis of your boy or girl, then turn your attention to the school, for it is better for them never to have seen within the walls of an institution of higher learning than to have seen within the walls of the wrong one.

There are three ways to study human character, viz: by what the character says, by what the people say about him, and by what he does; so it is with the school. For the first, study the catalogs; for the second, consult those who are able to give you an unbiased opinion; and for the last, watch the boys who are under its care and influence. The first and second are important, but the third is the vital test of any school. You judge the tree by its fruit, so you judge the college by its boys.

It is not the library that makes the college, or the well-equipped laboratory; it is not the beautiful grounds or the handsome fraternity buildings; it is not the record of its ball teams, or the fame of its dramatic club; it is not the number of students enrolled or the vast learning of its leading instructors. Important as these are, they shrink into insignificance in the presence of real worth. And the real worth of any college lies in its Christian influence. Lack of equipment will be largely compensated for by the training received in real character-building, for one good habit formed is a more valuable acquisition than much study in the psychological nature of habit-forming; one bad habit acquired is more detrimental to life and character than the lack of much learning.

Parents, since you have your own Piedmont Junior College, which stands for Christian character first and always, we shall expect you to send your sons and daughters to this institution. Please do not disappoint us to your own regret.

UNION.

On the fourth Sunday in July we began revival meetings at Union, with two services on Sunday. Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, Henderson, N. C., reached us on Monday and remained till the close of the meeting on Friday evening. The audiences were large and very attentive. Bro. Crutchfield brought us good gospel messages, and our people were much pleased with him and his sermons. One member has been received since the meeting closed and one or two others will likely join. The Christian Endeavor Society is having interesting meetings every Sunday evening. The Church has the largest Sunday School in its history, so far as the pastor knows. Electric lights have recently been installed.

Rev. Dr. D. A. Long was with the pastor and preached for him on the Second Sunday in August. He preached an excellent sermon to the delight and joy of those who heard him. It was a treat to have Dr. Long with us and to hear him preach. His faith, hope and love are certainly cheering.

P. H. Fleming.

LANETT, ALA.

On the fourth Sunday in July we began our revival meeting at Noonday Christian Church, which was started off by the dedication of our new building. It was a great occasion with us. The interest was good and the congregations were large. We had a real good revival and a real harvest-time. Rev. G. D. Hunt was with us and did all the preaching except on Sunday night. Bro. Hunt was at his best. His messages were plain and full of power and inspiration. Twenty-three joined the Church and twenty-three were baptized at the close of the meeting.

After the close of our meeting at Noonday, we went to North Alabama and began a meeting with Rev. J. H. Hughes and his good people at Pisgah Church. The Lord wonderfully blessed us together here and we had a real good meeting. It was a union meeting between the Methodist and Christian Churches. The Baptist people gave splendid co-operation, and I shall never forget the fine fellowship which we had together. May the Lord be praised for all the good done.

Now, just a word to the pastors and Churches of the Georgia and Alamaba Christian Conference. It is only a little more than one month until the meeting of our annual Conference, and I know that this has been an unusual year in many respects. Money has been scarce and hard to get, but, brethren, let's not slack up, but do our best for the Lord. I suspect that the most of us have cut down on the Church already more than we have on anything else, and our obligations are out to our Church and must be paid if we are to continue the work which we have started, and I feel that we all want to do that. So let every pastor do his best to bring up our apportionments in full, and, above everything, let us not suffer a single one of our Churches to come up to Conference without at least a part of the amount asked for. So come on and let us bring all our tithes into His storehouse and try Him and see if He will not open up the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing upon us that there will not be room enough in our hearts to receive it. Send a full delegation of your most interested folks to the session of Conference.

J. H. DOLLAR.

ROANOKE, ALA.

Because of the serious illness of our baby since the latter part of April, I have been greatly handicapped and could do no effective Church work. She seems to improve temporarily at times. She is in a very serious condition at present in Columbus, Ga., under the care of two specialists. We cannot tell what the consequence may be. We can only trust Him who doeth all things well.

I have attended only two revivals. The revival at Roanoke was carried on by our good friend and former pastor, Rev. G. D. Hunt. Two members were received by transfer. The revival began at Rock Springs the first Sunday in August. In my absence, Rev. G. R. Walker preached at 11 o'clock and I did the rest of the preaching. We had a fine meeting and received six members. I went back last Sunday evening to attend to the ordinance of baptism. We had a fine service at the Church and received five more members. Only seven were to be baptized.

On the second Sunday in August we began the revival at Providence Chapel (Red Hill), Richland, Ga. The first part of the week seemed very discouraging. The people had been disappointed. We had planned to hold the meeting a month earlier, but because of the condition of our baby, I could not go at that time, and Bro. Hunt, who had promised to do the preaching, did not want to assume the responsibility in the absence of the pastor. Then when the people decided to hold the meeting last week, Bro. Hunt could not be there. However, on Wednesday night Rev. M. B. Brown, of the Baptist Church, came and assisted us till the close on Friday night. He did some very forceful gospel preaching. Six members were received and more to come later.

There is a great opportunity at old Red Hill if they can only succeed in locating a pastor on the field. I visited Rev. H. W. Elder in the hospital at Plains, Ga., last Friday. He realizes his condition is very serious, but he seems to rejoice when his friends talk to him about God's kingdom here in the world and the glory of the kingdom beyond the great river. Who knows but that the expression on his illumined face will glorify God more than his voice could. His many friends remember him each day at the throne of grace.

I have resigned my pastorate at the Roanoke Church, to take effect at the end of this Conference year. I would be glad to correspond with any Church or group of Churches that would consider my services.

G. H. VEAZEY.

Isn't it strange that princes and kings,
And clowns that caper in sawdust rings,
And common folk like you and me,
Are builders for eternity?
To each is given a bag of tools,
A shapeless mass and a book of rules;
And each must fashion, ere life is flown,
A stumbling-block or a stepping-stone.

A DAILY PRAYER.

(August.)

Our Lord Christ, in whose fellowship there is happiness and holiness, turn us, Thy anxious followers, from sin unto Thine own pure righteousness. So keep us enfolded within the bosom of Thy companionship that Christian conscience and consciousness may be aroused against the evils that constantly assail and entrap many who have given Thee a habitation in their heart and yet are weak and wandering. Thou, only, O God, canst put away iniquity. Except Thy grace overcome, the iniquity that is in us is our utter undoing. Reveal ourselves to ourselves and give us this day a fresh sense of Thy forgiveness. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

MISSION NEWS.

Missionary work among negroes of the South, culminating in the proposed establishment of Dillard University, in New Orleans, will continue as an important part of the American Missionary Association program, it was indicated at the annual sessions of the Congregational Home Boards, at Plymouth Institute, Brooklyn. The delegates represented 5,000 Congregational Churches in the United States. The next convention will be held at Seattle, in conjunction with the first meeting of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, in July, 1931. This meeting will merge the two Churches formally, with a membership of more than 1,000,000.

Seventeen hundred Churches, 300 of them self-supporting, and a combined membership of 172,000 is the accomplishment of Protestant missions in seventy years. Yet there are more non-Christians in Japan today than when the first missionaries went there. Then the population was 30,000,000; today it exceeds 60,000,000. Among the practically untouched groups are to be classified 36,000,000 farmers, 2,500,000 fisher-folks, 400,000 seamen, 500,000 miners, of whom 83,000 are women, and 500,000 maid-servants and waitresses and added millions of other groups.

Japan is the most adult of all the Eastern nations in the record of development, for more than 99 per cent of her youth attend school. She wishes to stand high in the respect of other nations. Although the number of publicly professed Christians is comparatively small, Christianity is now definitely recognized as one of the religions of Japan, and holds an equal place with Shintoism and Buddhism. C.

CHRISTIANITY A FORCE.

Rev. John M'Neel, of Seoni, Chappara, gives two extracts from a Hindu journal as evidence of admission that Christianity is preparing the way for a better order. The writer of the first is president of the Hindu Sabba, an organization having for its chief object the preservation of the Hindu religion. He says:

"The advocates of Bible teaching in the schools only ask a respectful hearing to half an hour's teaching in the message of religion. Though this teaching does not immediately result in the actual conversion of the students, I have no doubt that it is certainly undermining that Aryan civilization and culture (i. e., the Hindu religion), which are our most valued inheritances. Though it may be a trifling question of half-hour's teaching, still it is to us a question of life and death. What the Mohammedans could not achieve by swords, the missionaries are attempting by half-hour's teaching. One is surprised to find the success which they have secured during the comparatively short period of their work. Though actual conversions are not many, I am afraid that the whole field has been thoroughly undermined. It is, therefore, our bounden duty to protect our religion from being completely destroyed."

The second quotation is from an editorial in the same paper. The editor is a liberal-minded Hindu, but he comes to the same conclusion:

"No reasonable man can deny that Christian missionaries have done great service to India in the field of education. It is true that their motive is religious conversion, but that need not deter us from recognizing what the missionaries have done for India. Having said all this, we think that the missionaries should realize that the demand for the introduction of a conscience clause is not based on mere opposition to their religion. With the advance of education, there is a growing tendency for men of one religion to study the life-history of the founders of other religions and to understand the truths revealed in them. Such voluntary study is better and far more fruitful than any compulsory study could be.

The Nehru Committee has recommended the introduction of a conscience clause in the constitution of the country. One of the articles embodied in the scheme says that "no person attending day school receiving State aid or other public money shall be compelled to attend the religious instruction that may be given in the school." The recommendation has not met with the approval of the Christians, and it is true that it will affect Christian institutions the most. But the time has now come when compulsory Bible teaching should give place to voluntary methods. No school receiving State aid or other public money should compel any person to receive religious instruction. This will apply practically to all mission schools in India. The Christian missions in India should be prepared for the great change that cannot be delayed for long.—Missionary Review of World.

CHRISTIANITY MISUNDERSTOOD.

"There is much genuine and conscientious opposition to Christianity. The influence of Russia, and especially of Communist doctrine (i. e., a secular, materialistic interpretation of life) is strong among students all over the country. Many also are quite ignorant of what Christianity at its best is; they have had no contact with the Bible or the best Christian thought. The only Christians some have known have been members of aberrant sects, of which there are far larger numbers in China than most persons realize. Large numbers of Chinese, even among the most highly intelligent groups, are totally incapable of comprehending how individuals can come to China and live out the life of a missionary without selfish and ulterior motives. The misapprehension is, of course, increased by the fact that Christian missions and political imperialism are badly mixed up. Finally, motives of personal grudge and aggrandizement are all interwoven in the pattern. Many of the anti-Christian leaders have at some time been expelled from the student bodies or dismissed from the staffs of Christian schools; or, for any other reasons, they have had bad relations with Christians at some time in their past. There is also a group who have simply hopped on to what they believe to be a bandwagon."—Christian Century.

SEPTEMBER MISSIONARY PROGRAM.

Woman's Society.

Theme: "Faithfulness" (Thou hast been faithful over a few things). Has your society been faithful through the year?

Song.

Prayer.

Business

Roll call. Favorite Bible verse or a testimony as to your faithfulness in society work.)

Silent prayer, followed by Psalm 19:14 in unison.

Heart-to-heart message from Mrs. Howsare, president of our Woman's Mission Board. Do you remember the challenge she gave us in the first message of the year? If you have kept the message on file you might refer to it again.

Annual report of each local officer (in writing).

Exercise: "The Ghost."

A letter to one of our missionaries to be read and signed by all present.

Young People's Society.

Purpose: To help each member of the group to choose a way of life that shall mean service in the kingdom.

1. Hymn: "O Jesus, I Have Promised."
2. Lord's Prayer.
3. Project committee.
4. Leader's introduction.
5. Choosing a life work.
6. Evaluating professions.
7. Personal expression.
8. How to train ourselves for better leadership.
9. "The Call."

Hymn: "Jesus Calls Us."
Scripture: Matt. 20:20-34.
Hymn: "Take My Life and Let It Be."
Hymn: "I Would Be True."

Suggestions.

Poster: On left side of poster a picture of two animals fighting, beside it the words, "The law of the jungle." On the right side a picture of a nurse beside a patient, or some similar scene, and beside it the words, "The law of Christ." Time, date.

3. Project committee may conduct a short review of the year and announce the time and place for the exhibition of the book to the members of the Church.

4. Leader should introduce theme briefly.

5. Ask the pastor or some other person before whom the young people will feel free to speak, to talk to the group for about fifteen minutes on how to choose a life-work that will mean Christian service. This means not only choosing the work of the ministry, or Y. W. C. A., but choosing a profession that will be compatible with one's Christian ideals.

6. Put list found on page 61 of Y. & W. O. on the board and ask one person to check off all those professions which it would be better if no one followed. Add any other professions you may wish to this list.

7. Ask some of your young people who have chosen their vocation to tell how and why.

8. Leader presents material found on page 63 of Y. & W. O.

9. During this worship service have a tall candle burning on the table in the front of the room. This candle is to represent Jesus Christ and His way of living. While a soloist sings "Take My Life," the group will march to the front, each person receiving a smaller candle from the leader and lighting it at the taper. Close by singing "I Would Be True," the room lighted only by the light of the candles.

Willing Workers or Juniors.

Theme: "Learning New Lessons."

Song: "Tell Me the Stories of Jesus."

(Other songs might be, "Saviour, Teach Me Day by Day," "All Things Bright and Beautiful.")

Call to worship.

Let the people praise Thee, O God, let all the people praise Thee.

Response: The Lord is my strength and my shield; my heart trusteth in Him, and I am helped.

Offering. Prayer. All things come of Thee, O Lord, and of Thine own have we given Thee.

This is Christian education period. Lead the children to see how they must "study to show themselves approved unto God"; how school lessons and Sunday School lessons are necessary if they are to be ready to do God's will in their own lives in the best possible way.

NEWS NOTES.

By Mrs. W. M. Jay.

Alamance district is composed of the following Churches: Elon, Graham, Graham Memorial, Burlington, Shallowford, Mebane, Mt. Zion, Haw River, Pleasant Hill, Union Ridge, Bethlehem, Berea, Long's Chapel and Hopedale. Most of these Churches are active in the missionary work, even though they may not have an organized missionary society. But oh, what a force for missions, if every woman could and would be active in this extension work for the Master!

Just recently a Woman's Missionary Society has been organized in Mt. Zion and Berea Churches. A Willing Workers' Society has been organized in the Bethlehem Church, with Mrs. Fannie Gilliam, leader. Who'll be next? The great need, we are told, is for more leaders to take charge of the work. Recently, our missionary circle studied the lives of Bible women, and we were impressed greatly with the life of Deborah. Refresh your memory concerning this great woman. To me, the outstanding fact about her was that she had faith, not only to keep her busy at the things which needed to be done, but she had sufficient faith to inspire others, and also that wisdom which led her to share responsibility. If the women of the Church who are working diligently for the mission enterprise will bring their sisters to share in their interest, enthusiasm and activity, they will have rendered the cause the greatest service possible.

"Just half a century ago a terrible accident took place on the River Thames, at London. A ship, the Princess Alice, with 900 on board, sank, and only 300 escaped. On that night a ferryman heard a crash, went home to his comfortable fireside, and thought no more about it. Another ferryman, who had made his boat fast for the night, hearing the crash, put her back into the water, rowed as fast as he could to the scene of the disaster, and rescued many from drowning. As he pulled to the shore with his boat so full that it could not hold another one, though there were struggling people all around, he lifted up his heart to heaven and said, "O God, for a bigger boat!" "

This is the spirit that should inspire our missionary forces in their extension work for the Master. All around is a needy world, and our prayers should be for a larger influence, or for a bigger boat.

The Union Ridge Christian Church in North Carolina has a live Woman's Missionary Society and are doing a splendid piece of work. They meet monthly in the homes of the members where a business and social session is enjoyed and a good program rendered. Wish we could hear more from these good people and from other Churches too.

Isn't this fine? A news item from a new society, and that new society is at the Ocean View Christian Church. Mrs. H. C. Caviness did some real missionary work when she went out there on July 30th, gave them an interesting talk on the mission work and helped them to organize and get started. Mrs. D. M. Spence is the newly elected president; vice-president, Mrs. Joe Harris; secretary, Mrs. Tom Ward; treasurer, Mrs. R. L. Hardy. These people are really in earnest and are hoping for great things to come to pass. They ask that each society will remember them in their prayers. Hurrah! for Ocean View.

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4¼ inches x¾ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson X—September 7, 1930.

Josiah.

Golden Text: "The word is a lamp unto my feet, and light unto my path."—Psa. 119:105.

Lesson: 2 Kings 22, 23:1-3, 21-25; 2 Chron. 34 and 35.

Josiah comes upon the stage after a line of inefficient, unscrupulous, and godless kings of Judah. He stands out, not only as one of Judah's best kings, but one of the great men of Judah and one of the great reformers in Jewish and secular history. His name, "Jehovah supports," was no misnomer, for the secret of his character and his work was a faith in Jehovah and obedience to what he thought was Jehovah's law, together with the conviction that because he was trying to serve Jehovah, Jehovah was supporting him.

Josiah's reforms apparently were begun soon after he ascended to the throne; four years after that date, according to Chronicles, and at the tender age of twelve. The account, as given in Second Kings, makes the reform begin a little later. Likewise, the two accounts differ as to the cause of the reforms, but both bear testimony to the fact that Josiah instituted far-reaching and wide-sweeping reforms. The significant fact in both cases is that the reform was based on biblical grounds. For in cleaning and repairing the temple, the "Book of the Law," probably the Book of Deuteronomy, or possibly the first five books of the Pentateuch, was found and brought to Josiah. When the young king read "the book," he immediately saw the terrible indictment that Jehovah had against his nation, and he set about to improve, even to reform conditions.

Here is one of the most striking illustrations of the purpose and the power of the Bible. The Bible throws light on individual and social practices and reveals their limitations and their sin. One of the most vital things that earnest and habitual reading of the Bible will do is to keep constantly before one the ideals of the true way of life, and stimulate one to holy living. The tragedy of the neglect of Bible reading lies just here. Conscience alone is not a sufficient guide or stimulus. But he who, in all sincerity, constantly brings his conscience to the touchstone of the Bible and the mind of Christ will find a constant stimulus to holier living and nobler service.

There is the lesson here, of course, as to the effect of the application of biblical principles to national life. Think what a difference it would make in the national life of America and all the other nations if the principles of the Bible were the principles that governed every phase of national life!

There is a suggestive sentence in the account of the repairing of the temple which led to the finding of the law. "There was no reckoning made with them of the money that was delivered into their hands, for they dealt faithfully." Alas, there are so many of whom it cannot be said that "they dealt faithfully." As one comes into contact with cross-sections of life, one finds so many who cannot be depended upon. It is interesting to note that in the parable of the talents, Jesus uses the words, "Well done, good and faithful servant." Faithfulness is a fundamental virtue of real character.

Josiah gave his personal attention to religion. Among other things, he reinstituted the Passover, one of the most significant festivals or feasts of the Jews, and one which had evidently not been observed very regularly or with much meaning. Like every far-seeing man, he saw the peril of allowing an occasion of such religious significance to become obsolete or to become observed in a half-hearted way. It is well enough to state in this connection that the Christian people of the world must not allow the Sabbath or the Lord's Day to become obsolete or to lose its religious significance. There is peril in the situation in our modern observance of the seventh day.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, September 7, 1930.

(Consecration Meeting.)

Opening hymn: "Jesus Calls Us."

C. E. pledge (read in unison).

Scripture selections: Ex. 33:12-15; Matt. 4:18-20; Matt. 9:36-38; Matt. 10:1-8; Josh. 1:9; Matt. 28:19-20.

Poem:

Ah, dare I yield me to the outstretched arms
Of Him whom men once stretched upon a cross!
Ah, can I lose in Him life's wild alarms
And for Him count the wealth of earth but loss?
Dare I forget my passion-stained age,
And make a new beginning on His page
Of undimmed purity, resplendent white,
And keep it as by living in His light?
I dare because His love constraineth me;
I dare because I no longer doubt
That He from evil restraineth me
And all the powers of darkness casteth out.
—Intercollegian.

Hymn: "Open Mine Eyes" (first stanza).

Silent meditation: Read this stanza, then call for silent prayer, closing with a brief prayer by the leader.

"I heard Him call,
'Come, follow'—that was all;
My gold grew dim,
My soul went after Him:
I rose and followed—that was all.
Who would not follow if he heard Him call?"

Duet (or chorus): "Give of Your Best to the Master."

Talks on our crusade plans:

1. My crusade for evangelism.

Hymn: "Lord, Speak to Me, That I May Speak."

2. My crusade for citizenship.

3. My crusade for peace.

Hymn: "O Jesus, I Have Promised."

Benediction.

Through the entire program strive to have all thinking together. Much depends upon making it a time of personal consecration. Have the program so well planned that it will move with no announcements except for hymns. Have the Scripture passages read by several individuals. Just before each of the talks on crusade plans, repeat the pledge which is to be discussed. Secure crusade pledge cards from the Bethany Press, St. Louis, Mo., and have them signed by all members together. See your pastor and find out if he has some local work which he wants the Christian Endeavor Society to carry on. If so, explain this as a separate crusade plan and pledge your society to render such assistance as is requested.

In explaining the crusade for evangelism, read Matt. 4:18-20 and Acts 16:25-33. Note that people were won by a personality, by an experience of salvation. We are ourselves making or reviving our possibilities of becoming evangelists.

"We are writing a gospel,
A chapter each day,
By deeds that we do
Or words that we say.
Men read what we write,
Whether faithless or true—
Say, what is the gospel
According to you?"

Do we so live as to win others? Do we love Jesus so much that we want others to know Him, too?

How may the Christian Endeavor group carry out its pledge of evangelism? First, by living; then by working with groups, and finally by personal invitations and encouragement. Raymond Lull once said: "He who would find Thee, O Lord, let him go forth to seek Thee in love, loyalty, devotion, faith, hope, justice, mercy and truth; for in every place where these are, there art Thou."

In explaining the crusade for citizenship, read Psalm 24:15, Psalm 1 and Rom. 13:1-8.

Explain that a good citizen is unselfish in all his relationships. Show that he is willing to assume his share of responsibility for law enforcement, care of dependent members of society, and the discharge of public business. Show that the good citizens not only obey the law, but urge others to do so also. Harry Emerson Fosdick says: "To be a public-minded citizen, to make citizenship an agency of Christian usefulness, to understand public needs, public sins, public remedies —such co-operative ministry is indispensable to a full-sized Christian life. What would the world become if all Christians felt for their countries what the prophet felt for Zion?" Emphasize the fact that a good citizen shows an intelligent interest in his community, State and nation. Show that his criticism is constructive rather than destructive. Show that a Christian is a good citizen.

The crusade to peace is one of the most important tasks facing the youth of the world today. It is international in scope and interest. Never again do we wish to see millions of our young men killed or maimed because of international jealousy or misunderstanding. Jesus came to bring peace on earth.

International conferences have been held recently to try to prevent war. Look up the results of the London Naval Conference. Refer also to the work of the League of Nations, World Court, and The Hague Tribunal. War is not necessary. Nations may resort to arbitration or judicial decision before resorting to war. Dr. Fosdick again said, "The old age still lifts up its voice to cry, 'War is inevitable'; the new age cries, 'War is no more inevitable than slavery.' The old age urges, 'All nations must be armed against each other'; the new age replies, 'All nations must co-operate for the world's peace.' War in its origins, motives, methods and issues is the most powerful anti-Christian influence on the earth." Read again Luke 2:13-14 to see what Jesus brought; also read Isaiah's wonderful prophecy (Isa. 2:1-5). We are reminded here of the beautiful negro spiritual, "Gonna Study War No More." If that is familiar to the group, have it sung with this program.

Perhaps you are familiar with Bishop G. Ashton Oldham's wonderful words, "America First," which follow: "America First. Not merely in matters material, but in things of the spirit. Not merely in science, inventions, motors and skyscrapers, but also in ideals, principles, character. Not merely in the calm assertion of right, but in the glad assumption of duties. Not flaunting her strength as a giant, but bending in helpfulness over a sick and wounded world like a good Samaritan. Not in splendid isolation, but in courageous co-operation. Not in pride, arrogance and disdain of other races, but in sympathy, love and understanding. Not in treading again the old, worn, bloody pathway which ends inevitably in chaos and disaster, but in beginning a new trail, along which, please God, other nations will follow, into the new Jerusalem where wars shall be no more. Some day some nation must take that path—unless we are to lapse once again into utter barbarism and that honor I covet for my beloved America. And so, in that spirit and with these hopes, I say with all my heart and soul, 'America First.' "

May we not, as the Christian youth of the land, lead the way in blazing the trail, in marching upward toward that which Jesus came to bring, "Peace on earth, good will to men"?

REPORT OF FIELD SECRETARY.

(September 1, 1929, to July 28, 1930.)

The field secretary began work on September 1, 1929, in the office of the chairman of the Board of Christian Education, at Waverly, Va. Most of the work done by the field secretary during the winter months, in addition to becoming acquainted with the work, was office work. Practically all of the summer has been spent on the field. Literature, Christian Endeavor helps, and program material has been sent to pastors, Sunday School superintendents, Christian Endeavorers, and others desiring these helps. Christian Endeavor notes have been prepared for THE CHRISTIAN SUN since March 1, 1930. Field notes and promotional articles have appeared in THE SUN. Since there was not money to provide for the printing of "Handbooks of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Conventions," the field secretary edited and mimeographed five hundred copies of the minutes of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor conventions for 1929.

The following schools have been planned and conducted with the help of the Board of Christian Education, through the chairman field secretary:

1. Training school at Pleasant Ridge Church (Western N. C. Conference). Taught by field secretary.
2. Training school at Franklin, Va. The field secretary acted as dean.
3. Piedmont Junior Summer School. The field secretary acted as registrar and taught a course on "The Teacher."
4. Elon Summer School. The field secretary acted as registrar of the school.

The field secretary attended the following meetings and took part on the programs, except the Woman's Missionary Conference:

1. Special session of Eastern Virginia Young People's Congress, Suffolk Christian Church, September 14, 1929.
2. Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference, Franklin Christian Church.
3. Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, Suffolk, Va., Church.
4. North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, Virgilina Church.
5. Western North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, Hanks Chapel.
6. Valley of Virginia Central Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, Linville Church.
7. North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, Pleasant Ridge Church.
8. Alabama Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, Rock Springs Church.
9. Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, Liberty (Vance) Church.
10. Eastern Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, Waverly Church.
11. Virginia State Christian Endeavor Convention, Lynchburg, Va.
12. Young People's Leaders' Conference, Dayton, Ohio.
13. Southern Christian Convention, Raleigh, N. C.
14. Young people's banquet, Southern Christian Convention.

I have thoroughly enjoyed the work with the Board of Christian Education. I have at all times tried to present every phase of our Church work and to help our people understand that this board is "organized for service only."

Respectfully submitted,

JEWEL TRUITT,
Field Secretary.

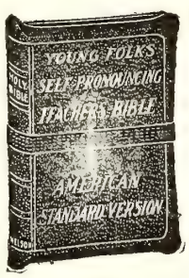
Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.



These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. It combines with the Concordance, Subject-Index, Scripture Proper Names, etc. The 12 Maps have been carefully revised and are beautifully colored. In making orders, give the number and price.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

PRAYING FOR PERIL.

"It is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."—Matt. 19:16-25.

We are not rich; what, then, has this saying to do with us? It has everything to do with us if we long to be rich, if we envy those who are rich, if at the same time that we pray God not to lead us into temptation but to deliver us from evil we virtually beg Him to lead us into this major temptation and abandon us to this crowning peril.

Our Lord has taught us clearly that a desire for any evil, such as lust, is equivalent to the committing of the evil. What counts with God is the attitude of the soul. If we set our heart on heavenly things, we can safely possess worldly things. If we set our heart on worldly things, poverty itself has no safety for us.

Prayer.—Thy kingdom come, Lord Jesus. Thy kingdom, which is righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit. May it come in power or in wealth, in obscurity or in fame, in ease or in hardship, if only it comes, Lord Jesus. In Thy name. Amen.

TUESDAY.

PEACE AND QUIETNESS.

"The work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness, quietness and confidence forever."—Isa. 32:9-20.

In a city not far from me, for several months, the decent citizens have been disturbed by rowdy boys who steal automobiles and go racing through the streets at breakneck speed to the peril of all bystanders. There are always enough sympathizers to make an applauding crowd, and so far the police have seemed unable to break up what amounts to a persistent riot.

This proceeding is only a specimen of the outrages and mischief which have come in the wake of that great blessing, the automobile. The country is going automobile-mad. Instead of using the wonderful contrivance sanely, we are buying cars at an absurd rate and driving them at a rate still more absurd.

How at variance is all this with the peace and quietness that should mark a Christian! Speed for the sake of speed, travel not for seeing the country but for devouring the miles, is unworthy of man's achievements and God's goodness. Now that we have a Quaker President, the country could not do better than cultivate the Quaker qualities of quietness and peace.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, we would seek Thy gentleness, Thy moderation. We would learn how to mediate and how to commune with Thee. We would forget our hurry and worry. We would replace fuming with calmness and competition with courtesy. For the sake of the Prince of Peace. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

MODESTY AND MANHOOD.

"Behold, he hath hid himself among the baggage."—1 Sam. 10:17-24.

Saul, the son of Kish, the first fling of Israel, was only a farmer's boy, yet he was chosen of God for that exalted position. When selected by lot, he ran away in great trepidation, and after a hunt was found hiding among the camp baggage. He was seen to be taller by a head than any one else in the army, but his modesty was proof of a moral stature that was greater than any physical exaltation.

The sixteen-year-old boy, Wilber Brotherton Huston, who won the nation-wide Edison competition, at once became famous and received attentions enough to turn an ordinary boy's head, but he remained calm and modest as Lindbergh. He said that he had been much impressed by Edison, Ford, and other great men whom he had met since winning the competition, and he though that their chief common characteristic was their modesty. He declared himself eager to get out of the limelight and go to work.

This son of an Episcopal bishop has the true Christian spirit. Every child of God must show the meekness which the Son of God exalted among the greatest blessings. For the last shall be first, and the first in his own estimation shall be last.

Prayer.—Who are we, O our God, that Thou thinkest of us? What have we done that is worthy of Thy praise? We are not deserving of the least of Thy mercies. Oh, we are grateful to Thee that when we merited condemnation Thou hast called us to Thyself. Amen.

THURSDAY.

ARE YOU A SAINT?

"Paul . . . called to be an apostle . . . to all that are in Rome . . . called to be saints."—Rom. 1:1-7.

As surely as Paul was called to be an apostle, so is every Christian called to be a saint. As Paul declared it woe to him if he did not carry out his apostleship, so it is woe to each one of us if we are remiss in our saintship.

Preaching at Northfield, Dr. G. Campbell Morgan said that if he should ask all in his audience who were Christian to rise, perhaps all of them would leap to their feet; but if he should ask all the saints in the audience to rise, there would probably be laughter, and he doubted if any one would get to his feet. If he did, he would probably be ridiculed.

Why do we despise saintliness? The saint is the person who seeks to be like Christ. The saint, then, is the only real Christian. It is as much our duty to be saints as to be Christians.

Prayer.—Our Saviour, save us into Thy saintliness. Our Saviour, make us holy as Thou art holy, pure as Thou art pure, and strong as Thou art strong. Our Saviour, may we never be ashamed to be like Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ENERGY TO SPARE.

"Our Saviour Jesus Christ, who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a people for His own possession, zealous of good works."—Titus 2: 1-14.

"Zealous" means literally in the Greek, "boiling." A zealous Christian is a Christian so hot that he is at the vapor point. "Fervent in spirit" is the translation in a familiar passage by Paul.

Such a spirit is illustrated by a new kind of power plant run by quicksilver instead of water. The quicksilver is heated to a vapor of 884 degrees Fahrenheit, and after it has driven the engine it is still so hot that it can turn water into steam and the steam drives another engine.

Now, that is the sort of Christian that Christ approves. The Christian has energy to spare. He is super-efficient. He is hungry for more work. He is never afraid of doing more than his share.

Prayer.—We would be of that sort, our Master. When we have done our best, we have only done what is our duty, but we would do our best, and would never be content with less than our best. And our best, with Thee to help us, is infinitely better than our second best. Amen.

SATURDAY.

GOD WASHING FEET.

"Lord, dost Thou wash my feet?"—John 13: 1-9.

Is there a more moving scene in all the Bible than that in which the Son of God, the Lord of glory, stooped to wash the hot and dusty feet of His quarreling disciples, who were too lost in their silly jealousies and ambitions to perform this service for one another and for their Saviour?

The scene is most touching in itself, and also in what it discloses of the divine nature. For in that upper room God's Son only did what His Father is doing all the time and has been doing from the foundation of the world. In our creation and in our daily preservation, the Father does not hesitate to take upon Himself the lowest toil, the most forbidding task. How grateful we should be to Him, and how ashamed of our foolish pride!

Prayer.—Lord, dost Thou wash our feet? Lord, dost Thou bend from Thy glory-throne to enter our lowliness? That is an exaltation indeed; make us more worthy of it. And grant that we may know Thy humility, and be lifted by it beside Thyself. In Thy name. Amen.

SUNDAY.

OVERTHROWING ONE'S SELF.

"Wickedness overthroweth the sinner."—Prov. 13:1-9.

Satan is never so clever as he seems to be. Most crimes are readily detected. We are likely to think of wicked men as men of unusual skill and ability; in reality they are almost invariably men of exceptional stupidity. It is never "smart" to do wrong.

A striking illustration of these truths is the experience of a certain hit-and-run driver the other day. A bystander noted the number of his car. The car was found in its garage with the engine still hot. The owner denied that he had been speeding. Then the police found on the running-board of the car a cigar-lighter of a peculiar design. The victim of the hit-and-run driver, seriously injured and in the hospital, identified the cigar-lighter as his. It had fallen out of his pocket when he was struck, and the case against the driver was complete.

Sin is its own detective. Never sin in the expectation of concealing your wrong-doing. Never sin with the slightest hope of escaping the penalty. All the forces of the universe are against him who sets himself against God.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, we do not ask to be freed from punishment if we do wrong. We would not have the way of the transgressor made easier. We ask rather that it be made harder, and that we may realize how hard it is. Lead us not into temptation, O Lord, but deliver us from evil. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

Rev. Joseph W. Fix, Preacher.

"INASMUCH."

By Rev. J. H. Clark.

"Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily, I say unto you, inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of these least, ye did it not unto me." —Matt. 25:45.

"And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only, in the name of a disciple, verily, I say unto you he shall in no wise lose his reward." —Matt. 10:42.

In our Lord's wonderful "Inasmuch," we shall find one of the most exquisite incentives to Christ-like toil which the Scriptures contain.

Want. "I was hungry and you gave me meat; I was thirsty and you gave me drink; I was naked and you clothed me" (Matt. 15:35). Joseph Cook says, "We only begin to realize the value of our possessions when we commence to help others with them. No earthly investment pays so large an interest as charity."

The one recorded utterance of Jesus outside of the gospels is that profound saying that Paul records in his farewell message to the Ephesian elders (Acts 20:35), "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

"He that hath a bountiful eye shall be blessed; for he giveth of his bread to the poor" (Prov. 22:9). Giving, after all, of our substance to others is giving to Jesus. Remember the woman who was severely criticised in Matthew 31:8, 9. They said, "It is wasted, you cannot afford it," but Jesus justified her and said, "She did it for me."

Yes, here is the amazing revelation that is succoring others we are succoring Him. "Inasmuch as you did it unto one of the least of these you did it unto me."

Loneliness. "I was a stranger and you took me in." The word may imply a covert allusion to Church fellowship, "you took me along with you" into the Father's family, into the inner circle, the Church of the First-born; "you forgot not to show love unto strangers (Heb. 13:2), to them that are brethren and strangers withal" (3 John 5). Philip Henry, the commentator's brother, remonstrated with his daughter for her engagement to a Christian man who was a stranger. "Father," she answered, "I do not know where he comes from, but I know where he is going to, and I want to go with him." Could a lovelier pilgrim answer be conceived? We come from the four quarters of the globs, but we shall be gathered within four city walls at last.

"Whosoever shall receive one such little child in my name"—on the ground that he is a fellow-pilgrim—"receiveth me" (Matt. 23:5). How this hallows and ennobles all Church fellowship and all kindness done to a total stranger. "The wistful loneliness in many a weary face is an unassuaged suffering of Christ: you did it not unto me!"

Disease. "I was sick and you visited me. I was in prison and you came unto me." It is true, not for ministers and Church officers only, but for all disciples that we either visit or do not visit Jesus; for "pure religion and undefiled (for us all) before our God and Father is this—to visit" (Jas. 1:27) the revealed and suffering. Some are too poor to feed or clothe others—none are too poor to visit.

Jesus does not say, "I was sick and you did not cure me, or I was in prison and you did not release me." All He asks is a visit. Yes, some one has truly said, "Gifts that are coined out of flesh and blood are far more valuable and costly —in sympathy, in sacrifice, and in weariness— than any which bear the imprint of the nation's mint."

If I can live
To make some pale face brighter and to give
A second luster to some tear-dimmed eye or e'en impart
One throb of comfort to an aching, tired heart,
Or cheer by just a little visit some way-worn soul,
Some day He'll say, "He did his best for me."

"I was sick." It is Christ who lies on the sick-bed where we minister; and perhaps one of the best places to find Jesus is a prison cell. So we have in our hands the supreme clue, whereby we can show our love for Christ.

As in the days of His flesh, He was always crowded by the obscure, the sick and the sad, the lonely and the outcast, so He is thronged by them now—and if we would find Him quickest and surest, we must seek Him in the sufferers of the flock, where every smart the body feels the head suffers. "What would we do," says some one, "if Jesus crossed our threshold today underfed, ill-clad, sick and lonely?"

How exquisite a discovery that we can actually reach Him through them! It will amaze us one day to find every little kindness, every forgotten gift, every touch of sympathy, tabulated and restored to us in the coming glory (Matt. 10:42).

"Inasmuch as you did it unto one of these, my brethren, you did it unto me."

THE ATHEIST'S FIRST QUESTION.

We give the atheist too much latitude—we allow him to ask all the questions, and we try to answer them. I know of no reason why the Christian should take upon himself the difficult task of answering all questions and give to the atheist the easy task of asking them. Any one can ask questions, but not every question can be answered. If I am to discuss creation with an atheist, it will be on condition that we ask questions by turns. He may ask the first one if he wishes, but he shall not ask a second one until he answers my first.

What is the first question the atheist asks the Christian? There is but one first question. "Where do you begin?" I answer, "I begin where the Bible begins." And where does the Bible begin? "In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth." I begin with God, all-powerful, all-wise, all-loving. I begin with a creative cause that is sufficient for anything that can come thereafter.

Having answered the atheist's first question, it is now my turn; and I ask my first question of the atheist, "Where do you begin?" And then his trouble begins. Did you ever hear an atheist explain creation? He cannot begin with God, because he denies the existence of a God? But he must begin somewhere. It is just as necessary that the atheist shall have a beginning-point for his philosophy as that the Christian shall.

Where does the atheist begin? I have never known any of them to begin farther back than the nebular hypothesis. And where does that begin? In the beginning? No. It begins by assuming that two things existed, which the theory does not try to explain. It assumes that matter and force existed, but it does not tell us how matters and force came into existence, where they came from, or why they came. The theory begins by saying: "Let us suppose that matter and force are here," and then the theory begins to work, and according to the theory, force working on matter created a world. I would rather begin with God and reason down, then begin with a piece of dirt and reason up. The difference between the Christian theory and the materialistic theory is that the Christian begins with God, while the materialist begins with dull, inanimate matter. I know of no theory that has ever been suggested as a substitute for the Bible theory that was as rational and as easy to believe.—William Jennings Bryan.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic leader in the Senate and vice-presidential nominee with Alfred E. Smith, was maintaining a three-to-one lead over his opponent for the Democratic senatorial nomination in Arkansas. Senator Robinson is militantly dry.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

When our feed barn was burned last winter, our friends and Churches came to our rescue and rebuilt us a splendid modern barn, and built it on a new and better location. This necessitated that we build a new silo, as the new barn is too far from the old silo to make it practical to use. After going into the different types of silos, we decided to build a metal silo, which we purchased from the Ross people. It has been erected, and we are highly pleased with it. For three days last week we kept a stream of silage corn pouring into it, and something like 125 tons was stored. The thing that made us happy about it was that our very dear friend, J. M. Darden, of Suffolk, mailed us his check for $500 to pay for it. Bro. Darden certainly has been good, kind and loyal to us, and we wish we had many whose hearts were as large and as sympathetic as his. When he sees a need in our work it just makes him happy to supply the need. Our prayer is that God will richly bless a man with such a tender and sympathetic heart, and one who has such a tender feeling for little helpless children.

SIX MONTHS' MOVEMENT.

The first half-year of the kingdom of God campaign in Japan has just been completed. During that period a good start has been made toward the evangelistic goal set by the movement; seventy district committees have been set up and special meetings have been conducted in ninety different places. About one hundred thousand people have attended these meetings, between seven and eight hundred of them signing inquirers' cards. The kingdom of God movement is a three-year evangelistic effort participated in by all the leading Christian organizations of the country. It continues and supersedes the million souls' campaign started by Dr. Kagawa two years ago, and carries on its purpose, although no longer emphasizing the numerical element. The movement is quite decentralized, the greatest importance being attached to the development of the spiritual life of the local Church, and to personal evangelism and prayer. Everything possible is being done to keep it from becoming merely "another evangelistic campaign" of which Japan has had sufficient. It is not being exploited as a one-man movement; several score of speakers have been used during the first six months, the "headliners," such as Dr. Kagawa, being reserved for occasional mass-meetings.—Christian Century.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

EMERGENT EVOLUTION AND THE INCARNATION. By W. C. Woods. Morehouse Publishing Co.; $1.00; pp. 109.

Dr. Woods is an eminent biologist. He finds no difficulty with his Christian creed and his scientific researches. He believes in evolution and also in the virgin birth. He finds no difficulties in believing in miracles and a universe controlled by law. The resurrection was a necessity to demonstrate the God-in-manhood of the Christ. Christians who are troubled over the so-called conflict between science and religion will find this book a tonic to their wavering faith. It is regrettable that he feels under necessity to refer to Christians who agree with his position as "Catholic-minded Christians," and that he attaches such importance to baptism as a sacrament. However, these slips in no way invalidate his scientific conclusions.

STUDIES IN THE PHILOSOPHY OF RELIGION. By A. Seth Pringle-Pattison. Oxford University Press; $2.00; pp. 256.

Prof. Pringle-Pattison, of the University of Edinburgh, takes for granted all the conclusions of biblical scholarship. His viewpoint is modernistic throughout, and yet he is warmly and affectionately devout in his allegiance to Jesus. He does not treat Buddhism or Hinduism nor any other religion than Christianity, except it is a known historic source affecting Christian beliefs. This is not a book for the popular mind. Its chief value will be found in its challenge of the reader's convictions, leading to a re-examination of them, and so of a more assured faith. The book is logical and metaphysical.

SATELLITES OF CALVARY. By King D. Beach. The Abingdon Press; $1.50; pp. 201.

The pastor of the First Methodist Church of Baltimore delineates some of the lesser characters who revolved around the central figure of the scene enacted on Calvary; hence the title of the book. Particularly noteworthy are his delineation of Pilate, Barabbas, Joseph of Arimathea, and Simon the Cyrenian. A book that will instruct as well as entertain.

EVERY COLLEGE STUDENT'S PROBLEMS. By O. H. Werner. Silver, Burdett & Co.; $3.00; pp. 370 & xxix.

In this day, when colleges are recognizing their obligations to students as primary, this book will prove especially timely and valuable. It is recommended especially for freshmen and their advisers. From telling the student how to get started right to how to chose a vocation, all the intermediary problems that confront and bewilder a student are suggestively covered.

THE MIRACLE OF THE GALILEAN. By Paul B. Kern. Cokesbury; $2.00; pp. 262.

A new interpretation of Jesus was not demanded, modestly states Dr. Kern in his introduction. This book, The Fondren Lectuers for 1930 before the Southern Methodist University, came out of the urge in the modern preacher's heart to witness to his own experience of Christ. As such, this eloquent and stirring volume will take high rank. What we need today is not a psychological or philosophical or metaphysical religion, but a historical religion revamped in personal experience—not humanism, but personalism. Here is a real book of insight and inspiration by one who has "seen" and been "inspired."

TEACHING IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL. By Goodrich C. White. Cokesbury; $1.00; pp. 211.

This book is a sound exposition of the recitation method in religious education, and that method is the vogue today. Those who practice that procedure in teaching will make no mistake to purchase and master this volume. They will find it helpful, thoroughly helpful, and reliable.

THE U. S. LOOKS AT ITS CHURCHES. By C. Luther Fry. Institute of Social and Religious Research; $2.50; pp. 183.

This is a book of facts, many of them arresting. Everything, however, is to be gained by taking a dispassionate look at our actual situation. To try to improve our religious condition before we diagnose the same, is social folly. This book is a great diagnostic achievement. It gives information the pastor and religious worker will especially need, as also the layman, who would serve the kingdom effectively in our day.

AMERICAN CHARITIES AND SOCIAL WORK. By Amos G. Warner. Stuart A. Queen and Ernest B. Harper. Thomas Y. Crowell Co.; $3.75; pp. 615.

This book revises and brings up to date Warner's American Charities, published in 1894. About two-thirds of the present volume is new material. It will become the standard work in its field. The revision has been made necessary because of the rapid growth of the case-method.

MARRIAGES

HARRIS—BRYANT.

At the altar, in the maid auditorium of the Suffolk Christian Church, on August 21, 1930, James Monroe Harris, of Asheville, N. C., and Elizabeth Pierce Bryant, of Norfolk, Va., were united in marriage by Rev. W. W. Staley. Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Leathers, of Suffolk, Va., witnessed the ceremony. It was a quiet, beautiful and sacred service in the house of prayer, the choice of the bride.

Mr. Harris is a broker in Asheville, and Mrs. Bryant is a member of the Board of Missions of the Southern Christian Convention, president of the Woman's Missionary Conference of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, and supervisor of public schools in the city of Norfolk, Va. She is a member of the First Christian Church, Norfolk, and in all the above official positions Mrs. Bryant has been faithful, efficient and useful. She will be missed in the Conference and the Woman's Missionary activities.

Benedictions from many hearts will follow her in her new relation and new home when countless friends read of her move from the seashore to the mountains to help build a new Christian home.

YOU SHOULD GO TO CHURCH.

Because the Church dispenses the spiritual food by which your soul is nourished and given strength to do its work with hope and courage. Likewise, the concentrated thought of many minds upon spiritual things reacts upon your mind, while affirmation of your belief in a Being greater and better than yourself whose love is your comfort and protection, enables you to meet the world victoriously. The Church is organized to spread love, truth and brotherhood throughout the world, and stands as a moral force reminding you and yours of God.—Ex.

RELICS OF THE INQUISITION.—

A Madrid newspaper reports that masons, who have been working on a spot where a seminary of Latin students once stood in Cuenca, and where, on the adjoining site there still stands the Church of Santa Cruz, destroyed part of a wall. On the other side they found a large number of bodies, around many of which were pieces of hemp rope, which had evidently been used to let the victims down while they were yet alive. This is believed to be a relic of the days of the Spanish Inquisition.—Alliance Weekly.

WATCH US GROW.—

Since 1920, Americans in the United States have increased 16,987,570, or 16.1 per cent. We now number, including all ages, 122,698,190. It is interesting to note that more than one-quarter of this increase was centered in two States—California, with a gain of 2,245,000, and New York, with an increase of 2,234,000. Illinois, Michigan and Texas each made an increase of more than a million; Pennsylvania, 900,000; Ohio and New Jersey, more than 870,000 each. If we figure this in percentage, California leads the list, with 65.5 per cent increase; Florida, next, with 51 per cent; Michigan, 32 per cent; Arizona, 30 per cent; New Jersey, 27 per cent; Texas, 24.8 per cent; North Carolina, 23.9 per cent. Only one State, Montana, shows a decrease, losing 12,557 inhabitants since 1920, and Georgia shows a gain of two-tenths of 1 per cent; and three other States —Iowa, South Carolina and Vermont—increased only 3 per cent. These figures are of especial interest to politicians in the congressional representation which will be increased 16, and California will be given 7 or 8 of these.

CHRISTIAN SURVEY IN MAINE.—

The National Home Mission Council has a five-year program of survey, and the work of this council has just been completed in Maine. The survey was limited in scope to the question of providing a Christian ministry for the entire population. In the State as a whole, since 1926, the number of Churches has decreased from 1,607 to 1,447; but the membership has increased from 255,293 to 294,092, and the expenditures from $2,069,919 to $4,617,856. The total population is 795,000, and of this number 595,635 are thirteen years of age or over. Of this latter number, 17.4 per cent are Protestant Church members, and 19.9 per cent are Roman Catholic. When we consider the large immigration, especially of the French-Canadians, and the further fact, even in country districts, the proportion of foreign-born is 30 per cent, Protestantism has held its own remarkably well. Baptists, Congregationalists and Methodists include 70 per cent of the total population. This survey should enhearten the Protestant Churches of the State and nation to greater evangelistic and missionary efforts to continue their good work of Christian enlightenment.

CHINESE AND CHRISTIANITY.—

There is much genuine opposition to Christianity in China because China does not understand what Christianity at its best is. The influence of Russia, with its Communistic doctrine, a secular interpretation of life in terms of materialism, is strong among students all over the country. They have no personal contact with the Bible or with the best Christian thought. The only Christians they have come in contact with, in many instances, have been members of heretical sects, of which there are far more than most persons are aware. Many of the Chinese, even among the intellectual, are absolutely incapable of understanding how individuals can leave their native land and come to China and live out the life of a missionary without selfish motives. This misunderstanding is greatly increased, of course, because Christian missions and political imperialism are woefully mixed in their minds. Many of the anti-Christian leaders have at frequent intervals been expelled from the student body, or dropped from the staffs of Christian schools. It is strange that those who are in need of Christian enlightenment should oppose the light when, for sweet charity's sake, Christian nations are gratuitously sending the light that they so much need.

KINGDOM-OF-GOD MOVEMENT.—

Japan recently put on a "Kingdom-of-God Movement, to last six months, and has completed the campaign, with the following results: "Seventy district committees have been set up and special meetings have been conducted in ninety different places. About one hundred thousand people have attended these meetings, between seven and eight hundred of them signing inquirers' cards. The kingdom-of-God movement is a three-year evangelistic effort participated in by all the leading Christian organizations of the country. It continues and supercedes the million souls' campaign started by Dr. Kagawa two years ago, and carries on its purpose, although no longer emphasizing the numerical element. The movement is quite decentralized, the greatest importance being attached to the development of the spiritual life of the local Church, and to personal evangelism and prayer. Everything possible is being done to keep it from becoming merely 'another campaign,' of which Japan has had sufficient. It is not being exploited as a one-man movement; several-score of speakers have been used during the first six months." Such a concerted movement in America would awaken the religious consciousness of our sleeping nation to an evangelistic quickening which would result in a great religious revival.

TRAINING THE MINISTRY.—

Important changes are being made in theological training for the ministry during the present generation, and still greater changes will be made in the near future. The institute of social and religious research has instituted an investigation into the actual functions of the ministry that to inquire of the Churches just what services they expect of their ministers is the best way to know what preparation ministers need to fit them for this service, that it is strange no one ever thought of this method before. The courses offered in the juvenial period of Christian education before its development of subject matter and technique are not sufficient preparation for the great, versatile, many-sided duties of the well-adapted Christian ministry. In the examination of candidates for the ministry, their knowledge of theology should be thoroughly tested, but their ability to think, rather than a knowledge of specific courses of instruction which they have followed, should be emphasized. They should be able to discuss clearly the relation of the psychology of religion to salvation, the psychology of the development of Christian character, the relationship of social and industrial problems to the Christian life, and the spiritual guidance of Christian people in service to the whole community, etc.

PRESBYTERIANS AND PROHIBITION.—

The Presbyterian Synod at Wooster, Ohio, in State assembly, called upon their membership everywhere in the Commonwealth to stand uncompromisingly for law and order, and especially for the effective enforcement of, and personal obedience to, the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution. They urged this that the vast moral and economic gains already secured to the country in the first decade under the prohibition regime may not now be "lost in these days of organized crime, laxness among officials and widespread lawlessness, and in the present flood of propaganda and misrepresentation, aided by the almost unanimous support of the press in our great cities." They pledged President Hoover their enthusiastic support of his moral leadership in the present crisis, and their co-operation of their pulpits, Sunday Schools and organized groups in a program of education to undergird the law. If all other Presbyterians—and we believe they will—would join in this spirit of loyalty, and all other Protestant Churches would add their strength in support of the moral and spiritual aim of prohibition by law enforcement and observance, and by the practice of temperance among themselves and the teaching of it to their children, we would have, in the near future, so thoroughly entrenched our nation in the prohibition of intoxicating liquors that the anti-prohibitionists would forever give up the fight.

NOTES-PERSONALS

We are glad that our Editor and Mission Secretary, Dr. Atkinson, is able to be back at his post of duty after an absence of several weeks.

Prof. S. A. Hollman, of High Point, N. C., made us a pleasant call the past week. It has been more than twenty years since we had the pleasure of clasping each other's hands. He is enjoying excellent health, and Elon College students who formerly knew him will read this with pleasure.

FROM REV. G. D. HUNT.

Last week I was in revival with Rev. W. C. Carpenter, at Ambrose, Ga. It was good to be there. We had a fine meeting, which was enjoyed by all. Good attendance and good order prevailed all through the meeting. The people met, they sang, and prayed, and testified for Jesus Christ, and our hearts were made glad. Rev. Bro. Mingledorph, of the M. E. Church, South, was with us and rendered valuable aid throughout the meeting. It was a season of joy; but the people were so busy gathering and marketing their crops until they had really to make a sacrifice to attend the meeting. This is a fine community, and fine people, and they love their Church and their pastor.

The Sunday School here, though small in number, has given one hundred dollars this year to Piedmont Junior College. They have thereby secured one scholarship in the institution for the next session. It is remarkable just what can be done. These good people love Bro. H. W. Elder dearly and often inquire into his condition, which at last report was quite serious.

My home while in the community at night was in the homes of Bros. Oswald Vickers and T. J. Holland; in the day time we visited many of the homes of the town and country. It expresses it mildly when we say we were entertained in a royal way. God bless every home; I am sorry we could not go into more of them.

This beautiful South Georgia country is blessed with an abundant crop. The price, however, is low, but they are well blessed with food and feedstuff. In many sections of our country crops are ruined by the drought; and then the low price must in some way be met. Many of our people are in an uncomfortable condition. I don't know how we may get along, but I know our kind Heavenly Father will help us in some way to get through. I trust the crisis through which we are passing will be directed in a way that shall glorify God and be a blessing to us all.

Before this is printed, the final meeting of our joint Home Mission Board before Conference will have met in LaGrange, Ga., and the future plans of our Church in these two Conferences of the far South will be discussed. We are praying for the Spirit of God to lead in the work of His kingdom, and we are expecting a good meeting on the fifth Sunday.

I am this week at Vanceville, in South Georgia, with Rev. W. C. Carpenter. More next week.

G. D. Hunt.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONGRESS.

The Young People's Congress of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference met in its fourth annual session at the Bethlehem Christian Church August 5, 1930. The meeting was called to order by the president, Simon Piland, and Miss Graham Rowland, our missionary to the Indians, at Fort Apache, Ariz., led the song service. The devotional service was led by Mr. Web Burgess, Jr., of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va. The minutes of the two preceding meetings were read and approved.

President Piland appointed the following committees: Nominations—Miss Mary Sue Parker (chairman), Miss Thelma Boone, Miss Susie Mae Brittle; resolutions—Miss Elizabeth Sharpe (chairman), Mr. James Jones, Miss Mary Knoeller; findings—Miss Mary Rawls Jones (chairman), Mr. Webb Burgess, Jr., Miss Ophella Harrell; goals—Miss Jewel Truitt (chairman), Miss Sara Norfleet Daughtery, Miss Mary Knoeller.

The report of the executive committee was made and the program which had been made was adopted. A report on the survey of the young people's work was made and adopted. The recognition service showed seven Churches represented, with thirty-eight delegates. After the adoption of the treasurer's report, it was voted that all bills of the congress be paid.

It was moved and carried that a committee of one from each Church should be appointed for the purpose of (1) securing free literature from the field secretary to be used for any phase of young people's work; (2) distributing this literature; (3) to co-operate with the Young People's Congress, and (4) to act as an advertising agency for the congress and its efforts.

The topic for the morning program was "Youth Sharing in Christian Education," and Miss Jewel Truitt made a splendid address on this topic, giving the congress several excellent recommendations. Miss Susie Mae Brittle gave an address on "The Elon College Summer Schools." Other talks relative to Elon College were made by Miss Mary Rawls Jones, Miss Elizabeth Sharpe, Miss Jewel Truitt, Miss Graham Rowland, and Rev. R. E. Brittle.

The afternoon session was called to ordor at 2:30 o'clock by the president. Devotional services were led by Miss Sara Norfleet Daughtrey. The theme for the afternoon was "Youth Sharing in Missions," and addresses on "Young People and Missions" were made by Misses Thelma Boone and Mary Rawls Jones. An interesting and inspirational address on "Work Among the Indians" was given by Miss Graham Rowland.

The report of the nominating committee was heard, and the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mr. Webb Burgess, Jr., Rolfe Avenue, Norfolk, Va.; vice-president, Miss Thelma Boone, Route 3, Suffolk, Va.; treasurer, Miss Ophelia Harrell, Crittenden, Va.; secretary, Miss Lilly Spain, Waverly, Va.; pastor-counselors, Rev. F. C. Lester, Waverly, Va., and Rev. R. E. Brittle, Cypress Chapel, Va.; lay counselor, Mrs. E. L. Beale, Franklin, Va.

It was voted that a copy of the minutes of the congress and the report of the findings committee be published in The Christian Sun. The report of the resolutions committee and the committee on goals were read and adopted. Since the committee on goals asked that we join with the other congresses and work toward the same goals, it was voted that we buy seventy-five of the standard work charts for use in the Churches.

Miss Elizabeth Sharpe told of the young people's banquet which was held at the last meeting of the Southern Christian Convention, in Raleigh, N. C. She also spoke of the formation of the Young People's Department of the Southeast Convention of the Congregational and Christian Churches, stating that a meeting of this department would be held Christmas. The following persons were elected delegates to this meeting: Miss Lilly Spain, Mr. Webb Burgess; alternates, Miss Thelma Boone and Mr. Simon Piland. Rising votes of thanks were given to Miss Graham Rowland for her address, and to the Bethlehem Church and to the community for their hospitality.

The evening session began at 6:45 with vesper services, conducted by Rev. R. E. Brittle. Vespers were followed by a brief devotional period, led by Miss Ophelia Harrell. It was voted that the congress pay Miss Rowland's transportation expenses. The report of the findings committee was read and adopted. The theme for the evening service was "Youth Sharing Christ." An address on this subject was made by Miss Addie Lee Parker. Rev. F. C. Lester conducted the closing service.

Report of Findings Committee.

The theme of the fourth annual session of the Young People's Congress of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, at Bethlehem Christian Church, August 5, 1930, was "Sharing."

The morning session was devoted to "Youth Sharing in Christian Education." Those present felt that the young people are not as active in the Church as they should be and are capable of being. It was agreed that a committee of one should be appointed from each Church for the purpose (1) of securing free literature from the field secretary, to be used for any phase of young people's work, such as rally day, mission programs, or for other occasions, if desired; (2) distributing this literature; (3) to co-operate with the Young People's Congress and the Board of Christian Education; (4) to act as an advertising agent for the congress and its efforts.

The theme of the afternoon session was "Youth Sharing in Missions." Miss Graham Rowland gave an impressive address on her work with the Indians and their living conditions. She also told us how we could do similar work at home and get the same joy. It was agreed that seventy-five work charts be purchased by the Young People's Congress in order to supply every Church with a copy to be posted.

The congress elected representatives to meet during the Christmas holidays with other young people from the other Conferences to plan work for the Young People's Department of the Southeast Convention of the Congregational and Christian Churches.

OUR WASHINGTON WINDOW.

By W. Knighton Bloom, D. D.

(Editor's Note: We are glad to be able to print again a message from Dr. Bloom under the familiar heading. All of Dr. Bloom's friends and all our readers will be interested in this message, written in England. By the time this appears in print, he will have landed in this country, ariving on the "Adriatic," Sunday evening, August 31st. We are happy to welcome him to the fellowship of service again and assure him of the loyal support of his fellow-workers in the Southeast in the plans he may have for the future of our work.)

From "Our Washington Window" to Land's End takes in both sides of the Atlantic Ocean, but does not separate kindred minds and world interests. Distance is forgotten where friendship, fellowship and service unite in the common purpose of helpfulness. These words are written just after a visit to The needles, at the western extremity of Isle of Wight, off Portsmouth, England. A symbol of destructive power, the sharp, rosky points stand out in bold relief, but challenged by a lighthouse directly in front of them. That lighthouse warns, cheers, protects, just as "Our Washington Window" has for its purpose—direction, friendship, service, and inspiration.

The International Congregational Council at Bournemouth was a notable gathering, and took a strong position in setting forth the meaning and purpose of "the living Church." Platform and pulpit messages indicated intellectual training, careful preparation, intensity of presentation, and spiritual ideals. The one thing lacking was adequate time for the discussion of vital themes. But it was all very much worth while, and in its general Christian emphasis, constructive trend and eager outreach, will go further towards the creation of a united Church than the ecclesiastical deliberations of the Lambeth Conference. The established Churches, represented by episcopal governments, have less to give for the unification of Christian thought and action than the independent and yet strongly unified Congregational Churches of the world. Not the name by which we call ourselves, but the actual living in Christian thought and action according to our Congregational principles will eventually be the determining factor in Church union.

The splendid entertainment of the council delegates, both in Bournemouth and London; the social events planned so carefully and carried out so perfectly, culminated in the banquet at the Guildhall, in London, with the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress receiving the nearly 1,200 invited guests. Throughout the entire twelve days there was a spirit of welcome that gladdened all hearts. So far as the United States' delegation was concerned, the only matter of regret was the sudden illness of Dr. J. O. Atkinson, which made it impossible for him to reach Bournemouth, and it was felt that he should return at once to his home. Let us hope that ten years hence our friend may be in rugged health and take his place in the sixth council, wherever it may be held.

Following almost directly after the International Council, the writer was privileged to be a member of the Mansfield College, Oxford Theological Conference, where for four days a group of ministers and college professors met under the leadership of Dr. Robert F. Horton and Principal W. B. Selbie. Here vital themes were not only presented, but also adequately discussed, not only at the regular sessions, but around the tables three times a day in the dining-hall of Keble College, and late each night in the "Commons." The general theme, "The Divinity of Christ," was made the subject of a very human analysis, and all went away refreshed by the open-mindedness, clear thinking and frank dealing with the fact of Christ in the world of today.

These two months in the British Isles have made possible physical, intellectual and spiritual rejuvenation. Relieved entirely from service responsibilities, the writer has reveled as never before in the efficacy and faithfulness of the entire staff of the eastern division, both in office and field service, and has therefore been able to carry out some personal plans most happily and at the same time store up energies of a three-fold nature for future needs. Next to nature on sea and land; closely in contact with kindred minds; visiting educational centers and other places of special interest; studying methods of equally great Church of England and Free Church leaders; mingling with the throngs on the great city streets; roaming over rural highways and byways—there has been made possible a new interpretation of life founded upon the past, but facing thrillingly the future.

Fraternal contacts have included Memorial Hall in London, which is our Congregational house; Livingstone House, three hundred yards from Westminster Abbey, the headquarters of the London Missionary Society; the Swanwick Conference, which corresponds with our Blue Ridge Missionary Education Conference; the Oxford Movement, and many informal and enriching talks with Church and educational leaders, who are earnestly facing a period of reconstruction in religious thought and Church and community action.

Throughout the weeks there has been an appreciation of a leisure that has made possible a study of life service without a daily or hourly examination; the accomplishment of many things on a basis that has not called for office or study hours on a planned program bisis; the gathering of valuable information while actually on a vacation adventure. There has been granted a new insight into all that this universe of the All-Father means, and a new grip on life that may well be illustrated by a reference to the courage, patience and tenacious memories of the people of a little Welsh village called Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllandysilogogogoch.

Listening in, many fine things have come to me. These include "the fear that some are getting all of their good things in this world and that what is needed today is to make room for God"; that "some things are forbidden by the Bible because they are forbidden by the universe"; that "to make creeds a requirement of faith is to place a premium on sincerity"; that "God represents that on which, in the end, every one must depend"; that "There is a widespread feeling that Churches and ministers are not saying what they actually think"; that "it will not be long before science is given the task of organizing religion"; and perhaps the message that came with the greatest urge, to "think splendid things of God and serve Him with a quiet mind."

And so my greetings come to the readers of The Christian Sun with the hope that in personal life, in Church, community, conference, vacation weeks, and in every other way this summer has been one of enriching experiences. May we, in an enlarging way, believe in and put into practice the true, the good and the beautiful. May we discover that power which will make us want to go deeper into this service of ours; that will give us the feeling that we have only been scratching the surface of life; that will lead us in a tremendous way to believe what Stanley Jones wrote in 'The Christ of the Round-Table," "Christ has saved things foi me. He has saved the world for me. He has saved life for me."

BOARD ENDS YEAR.

The fiscal year of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions will end on September 7th, and all contributions received in the Washington office (528 Victor Building) or in the Florida office (117 W. Forsyth St., Jacksonville) upon that date will be credited to this year's account and will help so much to enable the board to end the year without a deficit. We not only hope that that may be possible, but that there may also be the twenty per cent increase which is the objective of the plan of advance. All Church treasurers and missionary societies are urged to send in immediately whatever money may be available. General apportionment receipts should be sent to the regional and State offices and will be divided between the boards according to the accepted percentages.

FIJIAN ORGANIZATION SIMILAR TO MASONRY.

There often arise discussions of signs, apparently Masonic, that are found among ancient ruins of former times, and of societies that are known to have existed among natives of lands where white men have seldom visited. An account is given by Prof. Wolff, the anthropologist of Berlin, Germany, of a large stone temple found in the mountains of Fiji, where an organization in many respects similar to the Masonic fraternity meets.

Dr. Wolff relates that for many centuries the natives of this society have met in this temple, and some still hold meetings there and guard their secrets very tenaciously. The society is said to have been founded by the Spanish navigator Mendana, three centuries ago, when he went from Peru. There is a manuscript in Spain which tends to corroborate this. Mendana was a Mason.

The natives of Fiji belonging to this ancient order are inimical to the government, and the governor of Fiji, as a matter of precaution, established a garrison in the district. The ancient temple is divided into three parts. The entrance is for the first-degree members, or novitiates, and they can get no further for four years. Then, if they are deemed admissible, they can go a step further and take a second degree, going into the second part. After four more years, if, after the tests, they are considered sufficiently worthy, they are admitted into the holy manga, which is a sacred enclosure entirely of stone.

NOTICE.

Any Church or Churches not having called a pastor or contemplating a change and desire my services, I shall be glad to consider the matter. I am open for three Sundays in each month.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

IV.

Tuesday, June 17, 1930.

We breakfast at 8 A. M.—Coffin, Denison, Helfenstein, Smith and I. The table talk this morning turns to food, diet and health. Dr. Coffind discusses the superior merits and benefits of a vegetarian diet and asserts that the medical profession is coming more and more to the point of view of the vegetarian; but I notice that our good doctor takes one or two meats yet at each of his meals. We believe many things in theory that we do not carry out in practice.

The sea is calm and the breeze is sweet and wholesome. We decided that if we could have a sea trip every few days, we could keep up an appetite, whether it be on meats or vegetables. Dr. Coffin is a good feeder, as well as a good talker, and I am actually puzzled to know which I enjoy more, his wonderful vocabulary, which, at all times, flows like honey when he is talking, and soothes the mind of the listener, or his wonderful capacity to devour a hearty meal with such remarkable skill and gracefulness.

I am putting it down in my diary that great producers are great consumers, and that they who produce well in any line also consume abundantly. Another line my diary shall have this morning is that one who talks gracefully and handles his mother tongue with suavity and dignity, will also eat gracefully and do all things with grace and graciousness. In our table talk this morning, Helfenstein declares that life at the top is shorter than it used to be; that is, that there are fewer people in our day reaching real old age than there were a few decades ago. When it is argued that this statement is doubtful, since the average of life is increasing rapidly, Helfenstein counters with the claim that this has come about, not by old people living longer than they used to, but by the skill of physicians and the discoveries of medicine and hygiene which brings up the average from the bottom. That is to say, antitoxins have been discovered and developed so that diptheria and many other children's diseases have almost been mastered, and child life has been greatly prolonged, and this brings up the average age rather than the few who live to a very old age. One is not so sure on this point, and it is very difficult to prove. The writer knows quite a few people who are eighty and others who are ninety, but Helfenstein thinks there are not as many of these now as in former years, and that the ravages of nervous living, the strenuous life and the responsibilities entailed thereby will not allow people to grow old as in former years, in spite of all that the science of medicine and hygiene has done and is doing. It is an interesting point of discussion which, like many others, must be settled not by logic but by statistics.

When I tell Helfenstein that I know more people of eighty and ninety now than I did twenty-five years ago, he replies that that is because my acquaintance is wider now and takes in a much larger circle than it did twenty-five years ago; and that if I had known as many people twenty-five years ago as I know now, I would then have known more people of eighty and ninety than I do now. It is not a matter of argument, and Helfenstein says he has the statistics from life insurance companies.

Dr. Coffin comes into the argument with a novel and unique declaration to the effect that a physician told him recently that one of the very best things for a person to be told when he is about forty-five to fifty is that he has some fatal disease or malady, such as diabetes or Bright's disease, or angina pectoris, or something; for being thus told, such a person begins to study diet and to take care of himself and to learn how to live. As a proof of this position, Coffin points out that many frail and delicate men and women who have had pains and aches all their lives live to old age. Such a person watches his diet, begins to live on the proper sort of diet, for it is a mixed and complicated diet that destroys health. Helfenstein declares that one can live and grow fat on any one diet—potatoes, for instance—if one will stick to it. The trouble is, one is tempted to mix diets and will not stick to a single and simple diet.

Our breakfast was seasoned with good talk, and we are hardly away from the table at 9 when the doleful fog-horn begins to blow again, and we look out to discover that our good ship has plunged into a fog so dense that the sun and sky, so clear and beautiful awhile ago, are now obscured. One cannot see a distance of one hundred yards, and our room stewards shuts the room windows, comforting(?) us with the statement that we are now running not only into a heavy fog, but into the region of ice drifts; and, above all things the seaman dreads in this region is the contact with the ice floe, especially since that tragic contact a few years ago of the Titanic. Helfenstein adds to the gloomy outlook by relating that when he went over in 1913 his ship struck an ice drift, but, by genuine good luck and the guiding hand of a kind Providence, the ship hit the ice drift head-on and split it open; whereas, if the floe had hit the ship on the side it would have split the ship open, as in the case of the Titanic. This is all very cheerful(??) talk with which to begin a sunless, foggy day. And yet this is an experience true to life.

How many of us arise in the morning cheerful and hopeful and with bright outlook. We have our breakfast and happy talk with family or friends, and within an hour it often happens that the whole scene of life changes as the problems of the day and the trials of the hour multiply and press down upon us. This leads me to write this line in my diary: happiness and security are within, and the joy and comfort and strength of life come from within the man; and through courage these must conquer the outward circumstances, and not be conquered by them. Circumstances and surroundings are moody like the sea and will finally yield if there is sufficient force, power and courage within.

Our good ship has carried us 414 miles the past twenty-four hours, and we are now 1,015 miles out at sea. The sea is calm enough and our good ship goes steady enough, but the fog hangs around and our recourse is to the lobbies, where we read and write and converse. At lunch today we discuss prohibition and politics, and Smith says he believes that both major parties are lining up to put out a wet candidate for President in 1932, and that those of us who favor prohibition will be forced in the next national election to vote for a wet candidate. Dr. Coffin thinks that the hardest blow prohibition has had for a long time was the sweeping victory in New Jersey recently for Morrow, the wet candidate for the Senate. The wets have never let up, and the ex-saloon-keepers, from the day they were forced to close their saloons till this good hour, have helped those "higher up," who are as eager as they themselves were to carry on the liquor business, and these liquor interests have persisted in their propaganda for the legal sale of liquor. The wets have spent money by the thousands, and even by the millions, to counteract the dry movement. Helfenstein points out that the grape growers and win dealers of France, as well as many members of Parliament in England, who are financially interested in the breweries of England, have spent and are spending piles of money in America to carry on the wet propaganda, that they may have an outlet and a wider market for their liquors. All agree that the wets are making tremendous headway and that the tide has set in strongly against prohibition.

The sky is just a little hazy today, but the breeze is balmy and buoyant. The sea in the afternoon is just restless enough to give a soothing and rocking sensation to the ship. We get each day a twenty-page daily, The Ocean Times. Its print is the news that comes by radiogram, giving the latest news happenings not only in America, but in the world. One does not get away entirely from the world by going to sea, and passengers on board this ship are frequently receiving radiograms from people at home and sending radiograms to people on the other side whom they expect to visit. Strange, indeed, that one may now, on land, hand in a telegram to the local telegraph station and that telegram will soon be broadcast over the whole ocean and picked up by the ship, and then by the individual to whom it is directed. This gives us a touch of real life and makes us feel that, though more than 1,000 miles from land in any direction, we are still of the world, if not in it.

On board ship a large per cent of the passengers dress for dinner; the men appearing in tuxedos, and the women in long dresses and latest evening patterns. The promenade decks are alive with pleasant people engaged in gleeful conversation, the orchestra plays and the dance hall is gay with the rhythm and grace of those who love the light, quick step; the bridge tables are full of players, and the evening invites the people to amusement and entertainment.

On board ship, in fact, one is in a miniature world, and views the whole world at close range. Acquaintances and friendships are quickly formed, and human society of every stage and strata meet and mingle, and the observant passenger sees the wide world, as it were, under a microscope.

We are moving toward the great council at Bournemouth, England, where many of the world's most famous preachers and teachers of religion will give their messages to the Church and about the Church. I look forward to this with delightful anticipation, and I find myself preparing for it by trying to observe life as it is loved and in its reality here on this ship. Of this I am persuaded: Christianity has a message, a real message, a joyous message, a redemptive message, a saving message for the world of our time and the peoples who make up the world. I do not know who will deliver that message, nor whence it will come, but I am persuaded above all else that there is the profoundest and the most abiding reality in our religion and that the religion of a lifting and a saving life will yet penetrate to the lowest and reach to the highest in human society and will conquer and save the men and the women who go down to the seas in big ships or little ones, and those who grapple with life's problems throughout the world.

Our good ship, the "Adriatic," is bearing us along beautifully and bravely. One feels like the thing almost has a soul of its own, as it travels and toils through day and night, through storm and calm to keep us from a watery grave and bear us safely to the other shore. No wonder that in our sacred times we sing of "The Old Ship of Zion." I am wondering tonight at 9:30 if the folks and friends at home will sleep with any more safety, serenity and sweetness than I anticipate doing while the silvery seafoam marks our path and the music of the waves sings to us the sweet lullabys of the deep. J. O. A.

A SENSE OF EXPECTANCY.

It may be that the situation discussed herein exists solely in the mind of the writer; but to his observation there seems to be within the Churches a sense of expectancy, a sort of watchful waiting for something, no one knows just what. It is not that there is a general sense of dissatisfaction, though such a feeling does exist in some Churches and among certain individuals. It is more a feeling of incompleteness, which manifests itself in a vague restlessness. It is somewhat like the situation of a youth who has completed his course in school, but has not yet found employment in the line of work for which he has been fitting himself.

That about which we are writing is somewhat like the state of mind of the American soldier after the armistice, while he was waiting for the orders and the ship that would take him back home. There was a feeling that the task to which he had been called was completed, and that he was merely marking time until he could get back to a settled life and a permament occupation. The fact that many of them had no earthly idea what that occupation would be, made no difference whatever in the eagerness with which it was anticipated.

It is hard to account for the listlessness which is characteristic of much of the Church life of America today. It is true that there are individual congregations which are engaged in building enterprises which stir the interest and enthusiasm of the members. But in those Churches where the buildings are completed and the task of paying for them remains, there is frequently found a sort of disillusionment that is deplorable.

This sitaution which we are discussing is not due to the lack of needy situations and challenging tasks. Within the environs of every Church there are conditions that would have stirred the heart of a Paul or a Martin Luther to a burning enthusiasm. There are scores and hundreds within and around every Church whose crying need is to be lifted to a higher plane of spiritual living. The missionary enterprise is still the great unfinished task. Resources in plenty are available, only the enthusiasm is lacking.

It is idle to venture a guess as to just what would be required to stir the heart of American Protestantism to an enthusiastic fervor. It may be that out of the movement for a united Protestantism will be born a new interest in spiritual things. It may be that the time is ripe for another such a revival as was launched by the Wesleys and Whitfield. It may be that the Church is waiting for a rekindling of the missionary passion. Who knows?

The fact remains that spiritually we seem to be becalmed. It is a time for deep heart-searchings, meditation and prayer. The first requisite for things urgently need to be done. Doubtless there are the inarticulate thousands who in their hearts deplore the fact that the Church is not moving more majestically and triumphantly, and who are only awaiting the sound of the trumpet to stir them to activity. Only it must be remembered, as told us by the Bible, that men do not respond when the trumpet gives forth an uncertain sound.

A REAL PRAYER.

When does a form of words which we so often label a prayer cease to be a mere petition and become a prayer? This question might be better answered if we would put it in another form, and say, Do I really pray? It should be remembered that all forms and groups of words directed to our Heavenly Father are not real prayers. We, as Church members, feel that, in order to keep our feelings right, we must say a prayer in private and especially have some one to say one in all public services. I really think we should pray in private even more than we do. But when we make a petition, do we really pray?

A real prayer is a sincere desire of the heart to perfect the will and character of an individual after the will of God. It is not a real prayer to just be persistent in pleading for some individual want. Such desires and pleadings may be contrary to the will of God and detrimental to the character of the individual who makes the petition. A real prayer takes into consideration the divine perfection and holiness of God. It should embody thanksgiving for His past mercies; then comes the request for the heartfelt needs. But these expressed desires should be in keeping with the Father's will. In the garden of Gethsemane, Jesus prayed that the bitterness of death might pass from Him if it could be the Father's will. Since it was not the Father's will, He was willing to go the way of the cross. If all Christians were willing to follow this example, there would be a different atmosphere in the Church.

Two former pastors visited the home of a sick lady a few days ago. Before leaving, they engaged in a word of prayer with and for her. Just before kneeling in prayer, the good woman asked that the prayer be of such a nature that she might know the will of God. Her interest was not in just getting well, but in glorifying God by knowing His will that she might do it. This, I believe, is a real prayer.

It will be a great day in Christendom when those professing to know God will follow the example of this good lady and our Saviour in prayer. J. E. McC.

DOES IT PAY?

This age is commercial. Almost all questions are measured by material values. To read questions considered by either State or national legislative bodies is to get the impression that material prosperity is the chief concern of statesmen. Candidates for office promise to do all they can for business or agriculture, in harmony with whether they represent industrial or agricultural districts. In all groups in cities and States the main question is, "Will it pay?"—and that means, will it pay financially. Outside of short war periods, there never was a time when farm products would purchase as much as at the present time. A dozen eggs will buy five pounds of sugar, and a ham will pay more on a pair of shoes than ever before. There never was a time when salaries and wages would buy as much as at the present time. The trouble is that people purchase so much more than they ever did before. People ride in cars that cost hundreds of dollars who used to ride in buggies that cost fifty or seventy-five dollars. They haul in expensive trucks instead of wagons and carts. Wage-earners think that they do not get enough for their labor and producers feel that they do not get enough for their products. All are thinking in terms of dollars, and measuring all values, even themselves, by "does it pay?"

This age needs the question, "Is it right?" rather than "Does it pay?" Self is still too large a factor in the mind of most people, and money holds too large a place in the average mind. A better way of thinking would be a thankful spirit for what we have and a division of what we have with the unfortunate. Many are going to movies that ought to be helping poor neighbors with the small money they spend in that way. The question of co-operation should enter more largely into human thinking and human conduct. It may be assumed that the average employer and the average employee is willing to pay all that the business will justify and to work for what the business can safely pay. The interest is a mutual interest, and they should share in the results. Co-operation is more important than the money question whether it will pay.

When industrial and agricultural interests co-operate, and professional, educational and political institutions are all in sympathy, and moral and religious questions rise to the level of material questions, then society will find relief and religion will take its true place in the progress that measures the character as well as the purse of the times. All true service pays in a better sense than dollars and cents. The main question should be considered in terms of human welfare rather than in terms of material values. Prosperity, in the commercial sense, may ruin people, while human welfare may make progress in the hardest times. Necessity develops charity, and the absence of prosperity may develop enterprise and check dissipation. W. W. S.

In all these thirty years I have never seen the day when I was tempted for a moment to return to the old spasmodic, haphazard method of giving to the Lord. We, too, have been blessed temporally and spiritually, in basket and in store, in mind and in heart, in this practice of systematic giving. There has seemed to be an overarching Providence all the way. When the tenth account would be running low because we had drawn upon it more freely in the face of some unusual need, then some windfall out of a clear sky, a generous wedding fee or an invitation to lecture or a commencement address with a very cheering "honorarium" attached, would come to our relief and we would thank God and go forward.—Rev. Charles R. Brown, Yale University.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The closer people are to one another, the more difficult it is to live in peace. Politicians in the same district have more bitter feelings toward each other than those in remote districts. Competition is sharper between those of the same business. Members of the same grade of society have more unpleasant feelings toward one another than those of different position in society. The bitterest feelings exist between members of the same family. Disagreements among Christians are the most difficult to heal or control. The divisions of the Church into so many denominations shows how difficult it is to keep people the closest together in harmony with one another. The closest neighbors have the bitterest feelings and quarrels. Competition is said to be the life of trade, but it often is the death of the trader. That is one reason why it is often better for people to settle and engage in business or professions outside of their own neighborhood. Differences and jealousies are bitterest in families and between married people when love loses control.

Business men are not jealous of men in other business than their own. Leaders in society are jealous of other leaders in society, and not of those that make no pretension to place or leadership. It is noticeable that members of the same family, when speaking to strangers, brag on the member that has become rich or high in position; and when speaking among themselves, criticise the same member because he does not do for some member of the family what they think he should do. The closer the kinship is, the more pronounced the criticism. The bitterest wars of history have been religious wars. The bitterest quarrels have been family quarrels. It is easier to get strangers together than to get estranged friends together. Living together in peace is the sweetest living known to man; living together in disagreement is the worst living known to man. Those who enjoy only a passing acquaintance are usually at peace. Love is the only healing balm for mankind. Peace follows love. God is love, and Jesus is the Prince of Peace.

The Christian religion is the only panacea for humility. Without it, the closer people are together, the more jealousies and bitter feelings spring up and rob nearest ones of peace. The worst place on earth is an unhappy home; and the best place in the world is a happy, Christian home, where love reigns and peace is enjoyed. If every home was a real Christian home, the nations would be at peace and war would be no more, and the unity of the Church would answer the prayer of Jesus, "that they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that Thou hast sent me" (John 17:21).

That prayer implies a divided Church at that time, and is still divided not simply in organization, but in spirit. A local Church may be united in organization and at the same time divided in spirit. The bitterest feelings are found inside of local Churches where the organization is complete. What the Church needs is unity, not union. What the nation needs is religion, not prosperity. What the world needs is peace, not power. What the Church needs is Jesus Christ, not members and wealth.

ELON LETTER.

THE FIFTH SUNDAY OFFERING.

The next fifth Sunday offering is due to be received before this letter will be printed, on August 31st. It is gratifying to note that from quarter to quarter the Sunday Schools are receiving these offerings and sending them to the college, and sending with them good wishes for the college. The prospect is that ten bright, promising young people will come from our Sunday Schools on the scholarships that are provided by a generous friend of the college in co-operation with the trustees, two from each Conference, as part of the plan of the Convention for building our college into the hearts of the people.

It is especially gratifying to note that Mr. J. F. West, Jr., president of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, has addressed a personal letter to each of his superintendents, urging the receiving of the offering and a liberal response thereto. Surely such co-operation will bring a liberal and whole-hearted response.

THE FORTY-FIRST OPENING.

The college will open on September 8th for freshmen, and the 11th for upper classmen. What the enrollment will be is somewhat problematic at this time. If the session had begun on July 15th the college would have had a full quota of students, but since then the drought and general industrial depression have caused a great many who had paid their room reservation fees and had expected to be in college this fall to withdraw. This is certainly distressing for these young people, because many of them will lose interest in their education and will not in the future undertake to try again to make arrangements to go to college.

In a time like this, I wish for two things: that we had an unlimited number of opportunities for self-help, enabling young people to earn part of their expenses while going to college. One of the most distressing and depressing experiences we have in the office here is to say to a bright, earnest young man or young woman who sits across the desk and pleads for a chance to help earn his or her way, "We are very sorry, but we have no place that we can offer you." We have had to say this so many times this year that it really pains us to think about it.

And then again I wish we had an unlimited amount of loan-fund money—money given by generous-hearted friends to be lent to students on personal security to enable them to tide themselves over a critical time such as this in the financial world. We have had to refuse a great many students, fully deserving such consideration, small loans which would have enabled them to go ahead with their plans.

Under the circumstances, I cannot but feel that the college will, in its forty-first session, enjoy as large a patronage as it is possible for it to enjoy, in view of all the facts in the situation. I trust that our friends and ministers will remember the college in their prayers, as also the young people who desire to come.

HOWARD'S CHAPEL.

Our revival meeting began here the second Sunday in August, and closed the third Sunday night. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Knight, being sick and unable to attend, the meeting was conducted by Rev. W. S. Smith, of Greensboro. Music was directed by Misses Purgason, of Mayodan. The attendance was fine and the house was filled each night.

Bro. Smith made a splendid impression upon the people with his zeal in the Lord's work. He is a splendid preacher of righteousness. His messages were highly scriptural and instructive in spiritual things. Bro. Smith is a firm believer in the old-time religion. His greatest care is to see people saved, and his greatest delight is in preaching the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

There were thirty-four professions of faith in Christ and sixteen additions to the Church. The Church was greatly encouraged and revived spiritually. We are thankful for the good seed that was sown and work done. To the Lord be the glory and praise for His wonderful love and power.

A FUNERAL AT SEA.

Enroute to Hampton Roads, Va.,
August 12, 1930.

One of the things which cast a shadow on our delightful cruise this summer was the untimely death of a midshipman, Francis Hardesty Worthington, of Colorado, while he was on a visit to Paris. His body was held in state there until our return, when we put in at Cherbourg to pick it up.

At 8 o'clock, July 30, 1930, the Utah arrived in the harbor of Cherbourg, France. All necessary arrangements had been made with the American consul and the French naval authorities. Our commanding officer proceeded ashore at once to call officially upon Vice-Admiral Basire, commandant of naval activities in northern France. The latter, accompanied by a number of other French naval officers and the American consul, was awaiting him, and courteously received him on the dock at the naval arsenal, where a French guard of honor of thirty-six marines was drawn up alongside the flag-draped hearse containing the body of the deceased.

The Utah boat arrived alongside to take the body to the ship. In it was the ship's chaplain, eight pallbearers, and six bodybearers, classmates of Worthington, and a guard of honor—three squads of midshipmen, under arms, and a detachment of bluejackets, commanded by the midshipmen executive officer of the Utah. These were disembarked and drawn up at attention to the left of the French guard of honor.

Upon the order, "Present arms!" the two guards of honor brought up their rifles. At the same time, Admiral Basire, the captain of the Utah, and the other officers stepped forward and saluted while the remains of Midshipman Worthington were removed from the hearse and lowered into the boat. The casket was covered with the United States ensign and a large wreath of flowers given by the personnel of the Utah.

After the command, "Order arms," the French guard of honor remained at rigid attention while the Utah guard and pallbearers re-embarked. In the boat they sat at attention, aligned about the casket. The boat slowly returned to the ship, with colors at half-mast. The precision and impressiveness with which each detail was carried out were the subject of very favorable comment by Admiral Basire.

Upon the arrival of the boat at the Utah, the guard of honor was disembarked and paraded forward on the quarterdeck. As the casket was being lifted aboard, attention was sounded, officers and men on deck saluted, and the guard presented arms.

The casket was set in state amidship, and a guard of respect of two of Worthington's classmates stood at attention, with fixed bayonets, maintaining the watch until the funeral ceremonies the following day.

The Utah got under way that afternoon and joined the squadron at sea in the evening.

At 5 o'clock the next day (31st of July), the funeral was held. The casket was placed near the rail on the starboard side of the boat deck aft of the cabin. All hands were brought to quarters—officers in dress service with swords and gloves, the crew in dress blues, and midshipmen in whites. The guard of honor, band and pallbearers were paraded adjacent to the casket. The captain and executive officer took position nearby, and the midshipmen and crew, more than a thousand in number, were quietly assembled in the vicinity of the officers.

It was a beautiful day. The high wind of the preceding night had died down to a light breeze. The sun's rays were warm. And on an almost calm sea the ships of the squadron were spread out in a long line of bearing, with the Utah on the left flank.

At 5 o'clock, just as the ship's bell sounded the hour, the squadron heaved to. When the engines were stopped, the colors were slowly half-masted, all heads uncovered, and as the ship gradually lost way the band rendered the solemn music of "There Is No Death."

At the completion of the hymn, the chaplain, facing the casket, read from the funeral service of the Congregational-Christian Church. When he had finished the "Requiem Eternam," the band played "Lead, Kindly Light." Then he read again from the "Gloria Eternam," after which all heads bowed in solemn prayer.

While final preparations were being made for burial, the band played "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and followed it with the "Memorial Hymn" as the guard of honor presented arms and the casket was quietly and solemnly raised from between the lines of pallbearers and lowered over the side. It was stopped just short of the surface and, for a few moments, held suspended while the chaplain read the "Committal to the Sea," and, over the casket, with bowed heads of all present, pronounced the benediction.

At his concluding word, a toggle was slipped and the casket slipped gently out of sight beneath the waves. The wreath of flowers floated alongside for a time. Above them, beside the rail, the guard of honor was drawn up, with rifles lifted to their shoulders.

There was a moment of silence, and then the commands, "Take aim . . . guard fire!"

Three volleys were fired; and as the smoke of the last was floating out over the sea a bugle sounded taps. The burial took place about a hundred miles off the coast of France, in latitude 48-43 north, longitude 7-20 west.

A DAILY PRAYER.

(September.)

Dear Christ of God, through whom God's will is borne to earth, as everywhere so much of doubt and desperation enshroud men's minds, make of Thy Church the agency, and of its members Thy messengers, to carry afar the truth that frees and holds. Thou who gavest the Church, O Master-Friend, through its good offices supply the hunger and want of little children and drive away despair. As unemployment and widespread dearth afflict our nation, Thou who didst multiply the loaves, put into the hands of anguished parents earnings adequate to allay family suffering. Thus may Thy love entwine and enfold even to the fullness of its saving power. Amen.

A FURLOUGH LETTER.

I wonder how many of my readers ever carried regular correspondence with a friend that you love so well, and when you do not write nor hear, you feel the loss. This has been my case since I have been home on my furlough. I have not written my friend, The Sun. However, I have thought of writing many times, but the conditions have not allowed me to do so.

I am sure that the good folks who have been so interested in my work for His kingdom on the island of Porto Rico for three years would like to know how the work is getting along and how I am getting along. Well, I have nearly frozen from the cold of the New England States. However, I have been enjoying it greatly, and my health has been improving greatly; also have gained weight. I feel sure that by the time I return to the island I shall be normal in my condition.

Weekly I have been receiving innumerable letters from my young people, friends and the native workers, telling of the progress that their work is making. I especially was happy to hear from the native pastor of our Santa Isabel Church, telling of the splendid program carried on during our daily vacation Bible school period. Indeed, it is encouraging to see the interest among the native leaders and to know that they are willing to improve their conditions and to reason as real Christians ought to for the progress of His work. Mr. Vazquez, whom you have heard of as one of our best workers, has been a great helper and "pusher" in religious education work during my stay on the island.

Another letter was from Miss Carmen D. Perez, our missionary at Salinas, telling of the future plans that she has for the Church at Salinas. This Church has splendid Christian members, who are always willing to help themselves, but they have been needing a young people's worker, and I am very glad to know that Miss Perez has been placed at Salinas for the coming year. Miss Perez has carried on a very splendid work in our Santa Isabel Church, but was handicapped by her poor health. Our prayers shall be with her, and wishing her a great success in her future work.

The most encouraging letters have come from our volunteer workers, showing the enthusiasm for the work left in their care. It is wonderful to see the work, started three years ago, now carried on with great interest. I am planning to help our different workers by the material, programs, etc., during my furlough months in order that they will be able to carry on their programs.

When I receive letters from my little children of nine and ten years of age, I feel just like a mother that has left her children and is anxious to see them again. I feel sure that they want to see their "Hermanita," as they call me, again. I need your daily prayers.

Victoria E. Adams.

THE TASK IS OURS.

It is for us who know the Saviour's birth
To tell it in the far-flung lands of earth;
It is from us that men must know of God,
Spirit of whom redeems those men from clod.

So, mission great is given us by Him
Who loved and planned while yet the earth was dim;
Who says to us down through each century:
"Missions are naught but Christianity.

"Go, stay, do what you will, my sons, for me,
Till it shall come to pass that all are free—
Free through the truth which lifts the world to peace,
To love, to hope, to heaven, till earth shall cease."

With hearts that burn and flame as God has willed,
Through centuries of service trained and thrilled,
Ours the high privilege to reach, to share,
To touch life-hungry souls with work, with prayer.

World-fellowship our wish, our joy, our aim;
To brothers all let us each day exclaim:
"Peoples, from bonds of race and wrong set free,
Look on and up; the self-same God have we."

MISSIONARY WORK OF YOUNG PEOPLE.

By Miss Mary Rawls Jones.

(Address by Miss Mary Rawls Jones, Holy Neck Church, before the Eastern Virginia Young People's Congress at Bethlehem Christian Church, August 5th.)

The missionary work of our young people has just begun. The aim of missionary eduaction is to aid the young people to develop the right attitude toward others, to create in them a desire to render service, and to give them adequate opportunity to show a Christ-like attitude toward others. This is an age when drives and campaigns are most popular. I challenge the youth of this congress today to a four-point campaign, or service, as we may term it.

First, I challenge you to think. "About what?" you ask. Let us think about the part we, of our Church today, are destined to have in the Church tomorrow. Let us think in what ways we need to be trained for this part. We must be serious. To be a Christian, we must believe in missions because the Christian religion is through and through a missionary religion. Our Lord not only gave His great commission, "Go ye into all the world," but He lived on earth the life of a missionary.

We think of the heart as the seat of the inner life. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Think for a moment of our scant supply of missionary knowledge. Think what do you and I know about our own work. I dare say we would be astonished if we took stock of our accurate missionary information. Do you know how many missionaries we have in the foreign fields? Can we tell where they are located, and do we know them by name? Which of our Eastern Virginia Churches are supporting missionaries in part, or wholely? How many new fields have been added this year? You may say that this is so far away that we don't keep in touch with it. Then, let us take a little of our own home mission work that can be made more attractive to us. Think, what do we know about our Orphanage at Elon College? Do you know how many children they are caring for? Or do you know a single one by name? I dare say some of you do not know the name of the superintendent of the Orphanage. This being true, I challenge you to—

Study. Study our needs in regard to the present-day problems, and in particular its missionary problems. Study, side by side, our home and foreign missionary problems. There are in the Christian Church more than 30,000 young people in the teens and twenties. There are hundreds of other young people in our country who are not in any Church. Now is the time for their Christian character to be shaped. We cannot wait for an odd hour, because the full span of human life is very brief. The most important task facing the Christian Church today in America is the religious education of American youth. We can get this information that is so much needed by attending our summer school at our college, attending our regular local societies, and reading missionary books.

Next, I challenge you to serve. Be a servant for Christ. The world today needs workers for our Master's cause as it never needed them before. Some of our young people have heard and answered the call. There are three of them that all of you know personally—Graham Rowland and Dr.

and Mrs. White. All of you cannot serve in this way, but there are opportunities all around you for small deeds of kindness. Where you can serve some one each day is your place. Begin in your own homes. Say a kind word or do some little errand for some one each day. It is the little things that count, after all. If we are ever to reach our high ideals, we will have to think, study, serve, and—

Give, and teach others to give. If we could and would tithe and teach tithing as a sacred religious privilege as well as an obligation, our financial problem would be solved. If we could get the young people in this Congress to think, study, serve and give, we would be an inspiration to the Conference and a key to unlock the mission treasuries that are still held from us because we have not believed them ours.

"Give our young to bear the message glorious,
Give of our wealth to send them on their way;
Pour out our souls for them in prayer victorious,
And all we spend, Jesus will repay."

"Take our lives and let them be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee;
Take our moments and our days,
Let them flow in ceaseless praise.
Take our hands and let them move
At the impulse of Thy love;
Take our feet, and let them be
Swift and beautiful for Thee.

"Take our voices: let us sing
Always only for our King;
Take our lips, and let them be Filled with messages from Thee.
Take our silver and our gold—
Not a mite would we withhold;
Take our intellects and use
Every power as Thou shalt choose.

"Take our wills and make them Thine—
They shall be no longer ours;
Take our hearts, they are Thine own:
They shall be Thy royal throne.
Take our love: our Lord, we pour
At Thy feet its treasure-store;
Take ourselves, and we will be Ever, only, all for Thee."

SEPTEMBER MISSIONARY PROGRAM.

Woman's Society.

Theme: "Faithfulness" (Thou hast been faithful over a few things). Has your society been faithful through the year?

Song.

Prayer.

Business

Roll call. Favorite Bible verse or a testimony as to your faithfulness in society work.)

Silent prayer, followed by Psalm 19:14 in unison.

Heart-to-heart message from Mrs. Howsare, president of our Woman's Mission Board. Do you remember the challenge she gave us in the first message of the year? If you have kept the message on file you might refer to it again.

Annual report of each local officer (in writing).

Exercise: "The Ghost."

A letter to one of our missionaries to be read and signed by all present.

Young People's Society.

Purpose: To help each member of the group to choose a way of life that shall mean service in the kingdom.

1. Hymn: "O Jesus, I Have Promised."
2. Lord's Prayer.
3. Project committee.
4. Leader's introduction.
5. Choosing a life work.
6. Evaluating professions.
7. Personal expression.
8. How to train ourselves for better leadership.
9. "The Call."

Hymn: "Jesus Calls Us."
Scripture: Matt. 20:20-34.
Hymn: "Take My Life and Let It Be."
Hymn: "I Would Be True."

Suggestions.

Poster: On left side of poster a picture of two animals fighting, beside it the words, "The law of the jungle." On the right side a picture of a nurse beside a patient, or some similar scene, and beside it the words, "The law of Christ." Time, date.

3. Project committee may conduct a short review of the year and announce the time and place for the exhibition of the book to the members of the Church.

4. Leader should introduce theme briefly.

5. Ask the pastor or some other person before whom the young people will feel free to speak, to talk to the group for about fifteen minutes on how to choose a life-work that will mean Christian service. This means not only choosing the work of the ministry, or Y. W. C. A., but choosing a profession that will be compatible with one's Christian ideals.

6. Put list found on page 61 of Y. & W. O. on the board and ask one person to check off all those professions which it would be better if no one followed. Add any other professions you may wish to this list.

7. Ask some of your young people who have chosen their vocation to tell how and why.

8. Leader presents material found on page 63 of Y. & W. O.

9. During this worship service have a tall candle burning on the table in the front of the room. This candle is to represent Jesus Christ and His way of living. While a soloist sings "Take My Life," the group will march to the front, each person receiving a smaller candle from the leader and lighting it at the taper. Close by singing "I Would Be True," the room lighted only by the light of the candles.

Willing Workers or Juniors.

Theme: "Learning New Lessons."

Song: "Tell Me the Stories of Jesus."

(Other songs might be, "Saviour, Teach Me Day by Day," "All Things Bright and Beautiful.")

Call to worship.

Let the people praise Thee, O God, let all the people praise Thee.

Response: The Lord is my strength and my shield; my heart trusteth in Him, and I am helped.

Offering. Prayer. All things come of Thee, O Lord, and of Thine own have we given Thee.

This is Christian education period. Lead the children to see how they must "study to show themselves approved unto God"; how school lessons and Sunday School lessons are necessary if they are to be ready to do God's will in their own lives in the best possible way.

NOTICE.

The article appearing in last week's CHRISTIAN SUN under the heading, "News Notes," was written by Mrs. J. W. Patton and should have been attributed to her; but for some reason her name was omitted in the publication of the article. We feel that this correction is due to Mrs. Patton, for she is very much interested in our mission work, both in the local society and the general work.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson XI—September 14, 1930.

Jeremiah.

Golden Text: "Each one of us shall give an account of himself to God."—Rom. 14:12.

Lesson: Jere. 1:1-10, 14:7-22, 31:27-34.

Jeremiah was the great prophet of Judah during the years before the fall of Jerusalem and the Southern Kingdom. Loving his country with a passionate love, he was, nevertheless, called upon to proclaim again and again the sad news that she should fall a prey to her enemies and be devastated. He was looked upon as a traitor and suffered much at the hands of his enemies, but he never wavered in his convictions nor whimpered about his condition. He has been called the "weeping prophet," but the term needs interpretation. Jeremiah's tears were not the tears of weakness, but the tears of strength. He saw his country's apostasy and her impending doom. He also saw her impenitence and false sense of security. It was this that broke his heart and caused him to shed tears. His life was full of stirring incidents, and the book which bears his name is well worth a careful reading and detailed study.

Jeremiah's Call.

As Jeremiah looked back over his life and saw things in their true perspective, he saw that God had called him even from his mother's womb. It was this sense of divine call and commission that held him true in the most trying times of his life. As that call had come, Jeremiah, like every other good and great man whom God has called, felt his limitations and his inadequacy for the task. But with the call there came also the assurance that the God who had called him would go with him. This assurance always comes to those who respond to the call of God. When God calls a man, God is honor-bound to furnish resources adequate to the task. And God is able to do abundantly above all that we ask or think. It is this assurance that has strengthened and sustained countless followers of Christ as they have undergone every hardship and hazarded their lives in the service of their Master.

Jeremiah's Courage.

It took courage on Jeremiah's part to proclaim again and again that the woes of the people were due to their sins. It was not a popular message, and it aroused bitterness and opposition. But it was the message that was needed and the message that God had given him, and Jeremiah proclaimed it. He told Judah plainly that the terrible drought and dearth that had laid waste the land was due to the sins of the people and the displeasure of Jehovah. He also bitterly arraigned the false prophets who were trying to gloss things over and allay the people with false messages.

As these notes are being written, there are large headlines in even the largest newspapers of the country, telling of the terrible drought that stalks abroad in the land. There are other disasters that have visited communities and sections. Now it would be both false and unfair to insist that these disasters had come on the particular sections because the people of these sections were any worse than the people of sections that have been spared. But it is not well to think about the whole matter in the light of the words of the prophet and in the light of actual history. It can hardly be said that the religious life of our nation is what it ought to be. Materialism has become rampant, and there is idolatry abroad in the land just as general even if different from that which was abroad in the land at Jeremiah's time. God is not capricious and vindictive, but in His providence things may come to bring His people back to a true sense of values and back to a new fellowship with him.

Jehovah's Covenant.

There was a proverb in common currency in Jeremiah's day to the effect that the fathers had eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth were on edge, which was another way of saying that the troubles of the Jewish people were due to their ancestors, or, in modern slang, was another way of passing the buck. Jeremiah hotly denied the implications of this proverb and declared that every man was responsible for his own sins. In a way, Jeremiah was the discoverer of the individual in religion. It was he who gave a new emphasis upon a man's individual and personal relationship with God and his individual responsibility. Paul only put in different words what Jeremiah emphasized when he wrote the words of the golden text, "Each one of us shall give account of himself to God."

Jeremiah, in emphasizing the personal element in religion, of necessity emphasized the inner element of religion. He made an advance in the religious progress of the race when he proclaimed that real religion was not primarily a matter of an outer law, but of inner spirit. The new covenant was to be put in the inward parts, to be written in their hearts, and the heart of it all was to be a personal relationship between a man and God. This is the heart of religion today and always. Here is one of the foundational principles that will never be outgrown or become obsolete. To have the right spirit within is far more important than to give formal acceptance to outward laws and forms and ceremonies.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, September 14, 1930.

Topic: "How to Increase Our Membership."

Hymn: "Faith of Our Fathers."

Call to worship: "Let us not be weary in well-doing: for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

Christian Endeavor pledge in unison.

Scripture: Acts 2:42-47.

Leader's introduction: "Plans for New Work."

Hymn: "To the Work, to the Work."

Round-table discussion (leader's topics):

1. Making the society attractive.
2. Enlisting all members for work.
3. Enlarging the circle.
4. The final purpose of the society.

Sentence prayer for guidance and willingness to follow that guidance, for strength, and for consecration in beginning new work.

Hymn: "Lead On, O King Eeternal."

Mizpah benediction.

Following up our consecration meeting of September 7th, we are now finding definite objects for our work. We are now interested in increasing our membership. In the leader's introduction, stress any local objectives; for example, social service activities, leading mid-week prayer service, etc. We are coming back from vacation to our week-day jobs; may we not come with renewed vigor and enthusiasm to our Church and Christian Endeavor work. Not only do we wish to secure new members; we are equally anxious to interest and hold our present members. We wish to have every young person in each locality definitely enlisted in Christian work. That would be an excellent objective for the Christian Endeavor group. A city-wide survey put on by all Churches would be infinitely valuable to all departments of the Church.

The round-table discussion will be centered around the four topics. Assign them to four leaders. Each leader will discuss the topic briefly, giving suggestions. Allow members of the group to make additional suggestions, ask questions or make suggestions for definite activities in carrying out the work.

How can the society be made attractive? Shall it be through socials or contests? Will the Christ-filled life of a Christian attract people? Do people like to attend monotonous, uninteresting meetings? What is the aim of our society, and is it a worthy one?

In making a society attractive, seek to bring in new and interesting ideas. See that at least one member of the society attends a summer conference. Summer conferences are accessible to all societies in the Church. There is no finer way of stimulating a society and comparing our ideas. Fellowship with young people and their leaders is a stimulus and inspiration which will last long. Emphasize that interesting programs are essential to the life of a Christian Endeavor Society. Show also that building Christian character is the ultimate aim of the society. If the lives of the members of the society show that they are developing strong Christian character, they will challenge and attract other young lives. Be vitally interested in your Christian Endeavor Society. Your enthusiasm will attract others. Show, too, that the Christian Endeavor group is actually filling a need and carrying on a necessary work.

Be sure that all members have a definite job. Work and responsibility will stabilize and hold your members in the group. Find work for every member at some time during the year. Do not have all the work done by a small group. Be broad in your interests. Seek out new people in your town or community. Be cordial and friendly to them. They will be quite sure to join your group. Make it your aim to enlist every young person in your community in some Christian work.

Finally, know the purpose of your society. It is building Christian character. Stanley High made this assertion: "Christianity is unique among religions in the person of Jesus Christ and the expression of the character of God in Christ; fellowship with God, through Christ, furnishes a unique dynamic to live in accord with universal truths wherever found, whether in Christianity or other religions; taking the life of Christ as its ideal, the program of Christianity is to make available for all men the power, which comes through knowing Christ, to grow toward that ideal." That is our program—to make Christ known and to show people that He gives power to grow toward the ideal of likeness to the Christ Himself.

AN APPRECIATION.

New Elam Sunday School wishes to announce through The Christian Sun, their appreciation to their pastor, Rev. E. M. Carter, for his faithful and patient services rendered during the revival here last week. Each service was enjoyed and was a great benefit to all, we are sure.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF HUMAN CONDUCT AND CHARACTER. By John M. Wolfe. Benziger Bros.; $1.25; pp. 213.

Dr. Wolfe is superintendent of diocesan schools, Dubuque, Iowa, and writes from a Catholic viewpoint, evaluating in a most engaging manner the elements and agencies that now are functioning in character education. In his general viewpoint, that character is not entirely a man-made product, he is eminently correct. We need standards for our work as educators in character education, and those standards are in the revealed will of God. Dr. Wolfe recognizes the value of racial and personal experience, but gives them secondary consideration. God's will and plan and purpose and method come first—are primary. His belief in consciousness is well founded, but his conception of conscience is open to serious question.

For eight evenings, James, who is now a young man, meets his confessor-priest, and they talk over the problems of character education, making an experience of James, when a boy in public school, the starting point for much illumination. James had been told by his mother to come directly home from school. Instead, he stopped on the way to play baseball, and when later he arrived, he lied about it, saying his teacher had kept him after school to do a special piece of work. His mother scolded him for not having informed her in advance, but did not check up on him. This incident is made the basis of the discussion throughout. It is a most readable book and suggestive. Incidentally, it shows why the Catholic priest has such a hold on his members. What would a perplexed man give in exchange for such an engaging and sympathetic friend!

THE SOCIAL TEACHING OF THE CHURCH. By W. R. Inge. The Abingdon Press; $1.00; pp. 111.

Dean Inge thinks the real work of the Church is with individuals. If our environment were perfect, the millennium might even then be far off, unless good men had made it so. Good men have the right to their opinion as to what the social teaching of the Church is, and likewise the right to make speeches and publish books and articles in the effort to win adherents to their conception, but they have no right to say "such is the teaching of the Church." This book would have been a real help to some prophets who essayed to be the spokesmen of the Church during our recent presidential campaign. Dean Inge is always arresting as a thinker. You will find yourself musing many times as you read this volume.

THE GOLD UNDER THE BRASS. By Basil W. Miller. Cokesbury; $1.00; pp. 230.

Here is a book of examples for those who are wandering and in need of an objective. History, literature (prose and poetry), art are made to contribute each its quota of challenging and uplifting incident. The gospel of success was never more eloquently pictured.

CHRISTIAN REUNION IN ECUMENICAL LIGHT. By Francis J. Hall. Macmillan; $1.40; pp. 150.

A High Church Episcopalian defends the episcopate as necessary if Christendom is to be united, because it is part and parcel of the Catholic movement. Bishop Manning writes the introduction. It is as forceful an argument as can be presented for this much-mooted question—a question which made it impossible for Christians to commune together at Lausanne.

THE GOSPEL AND ITS TRIBUTARIES. By Ernest F. Scott. Charles Scribner's Sons; $2.75; pp. 295.

It is well known that the Christian gospel has received accretions not only from Judaism, out of which it grew, but also from the Greeks, Paul, the Alexandrians, and others. Dr. Scott identifies the sources, but he demonstrates how Christianity transformed these tributary contributions in such a way that the original message of Jesus has been amplified and clarified. It is a scholarly book and will repay careful study.

UNDERSTANDING THE ADOLESCENT GIRL. By Grace Loucks Elliott. Henry Holt & Co.; $1.25; pp. 134.

Mrs. Elliott writes out of a rich experience and a warm sympathy. Her book is intended not only for workers with adolescents, but for adolescents themselves as well. She tells how to enrich the experiences of youth and explains the causes for adolescent failures. It is a book you will read with profit and continually refer to.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

THE CROSS AND THE CROWN.

"Whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple."—Luke 14:27.

This is one of the passages in which we are told that the Lord Jesus Christ does not deceive us with promises of ease and comfort in this world. Self-denial and sacrifice are two chief characteristics of Christian living. The glory of the kingdom is presented in the cross, and Christianity cannot have its full fruition in earthly and casual things.

Thus our minds must be estranged from the world and our self-will and carnal lusts must be sacrificed. Order your life according to Jesus. Bear your cross in the strength of Jesus. Receive grace, strength and glory from Jesus.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, draw us after Thee. Give us life more abundantly, but whatever sufferings we must bear, may we find the glory in them and praise Thee for them. Amen.

TUESDAY.

HATING OUR FOLKS.

"And he turned and said unto them, If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple."—Luke 14:25.

This is a tremendous paragraph. It is a demand for absolute renunciation. It seems to have come about this way. Our Lord is being followed by multitudes, attracted partly by His miracles, partly by curiosity, partly because He has taken sides with the poor, partly by a half-hearted desire to be His followers. He knows their motives and turns and addresses them in a stern and repellant claim for absolute whole-heartedness. He declares that renunciation of life's natural ties and selfish interest in things is the first condition to discipleship.

His terms here, "hating" and "loving," refer to the will as directed towards action, and not to feelings and emotions.

Jesus, I my cross have taken,
All to leave and follow Thee;
Destitute, despised, forsaken,
Thou from hence my all shall be.

Perish every fond ambition,
All love sought, or hoped, or known;
Yet, how rich is my condition:
God and heaven are still my own.

WEDNESDAY.

WEAKNESS MADE STRONG.

"Your labor is not in vain in the Lord."—1 Cor. 15:58.

A true servant of the Lord has sorrow by reason of sinfulness and obstinacy of God's people, and he is zealous for their salvation. He prays for them. He invites them, and urges them to repent, turn from wrong and be saved. The way of Jesus seems so plain and so glorious that we cannot understand why one will persist in sin.

Sometimes we feel as though we would compel them to hear the word. But, however zealous we may be, all that we do often seems in vain, and we grow discouraged. It is but human that we become discouraged. But we need not be. The Lord says, "Cast thy bread upon the waters, and in due season it will return unto thee." He says, "It is a light thing that thou shouldst be my servant . . . I will also give thee for a light to the gentle, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth."

This being true, we can believe that He who labors honestly and faithfully finds that somehow ultimately his labor is not in vain. In fact, nothing whatever done for the Lord is in vain. Every effort one makes in the cause of love and truth is of God. Only they labor in vain who labor not for the Lord. One's want of wisdom may be an obstacle in his way, but the Lord has taken this into account, and He does wisely that which one unwittingly does foolishly.

There is no loss by reason of that which is done as good. The danger lies in neglect. Be honest, be zealous, be loyal, be persistent; the honor of the Lord is always advanced by this cause. By such concentration the grace of Christ shall make its way unto the ends of the earth.

Prayer.—In this faith do thou make us diligent to do Thy work, Lord Jesus. Amen.

THURSDAY.

LAUGHING AT DEATH.

"Let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heaviness."—James 4:1-10.

Tragedies are being enacted all around us, had we eyes to see them and hearts to understand. While we laugh and play or go calmly and carelessly on our way, men and women close to us, some of them are friends and neighbors, some of them perhaps even among the dear ones in our own homes, are going down to the eternal death, the gnashing of teeth, and the lake of fire.

Some day, when the secrets of all lives are made known, we shall say of these unrecognized tragedies: "How could I have been so blind?" or "Why did I not stop and help?" We shall then understand the wickedness of our self-absorption, of our heedless merry-making or money-making while souls so near to us were dying. Let us not laugh at death today, lest death laugh at us tomorrow.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, who dost grieve with infinite sorrow at every loss of Thy children, make us watchful in time, quicken our insight, extend our sympathies, and give us the Saviour-sense of Thy Son. In His name. Amen.

FRIDAY.

GIVING UP OUR PLEASURES.

"Let the dead bury the dead . . . no man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."—Luke 9:60, 62.

This is a passage hard to understand. Ordinarily it is not understood. In the light of human nature and human interest, it is natural to wish to attend to such emergencies as a death in the family, or to say "good-by" to the folks when leaving for a long journey.

Some have interpreted this as an idiom, said to be in usage at that time. That idiom is as if to say, "Before I will do that, I will bury my father." That interpretation does not seem warranted here. Jesus is talking to a man who had offered himself to become a follower. When he is told to follow and how hard it will be to do so, the suppliant begs to attend to affairs at home first. Then the Master said these words which seem so pre-emptory.

Light is thrown on the text when we recall that the Mosaic law (Lev. 21:11) required those who touched dead bodies to go through a period of cleansing. The law of the Nazarites was that when a man separateth himself unto the Lord he shall come near no dead body. The Lord's business is too urgent to be so delayed. Ezekiel 24: 15-17 tells us that he himself, a prophet, was not permitted to pay attention to his wife's dead body. These ancient customs were still in vogue in the apostolic age, and may have been the particular thing to which Jesus was speaking at this time.

Undoubtedly, Christ means to demand absolute renunciation of life's natural ties upon the part of the would-be disciples as a necessary preparation for the mission of going out, say, like Paul did, and establishing the kingdom among the people. Luke, in 14:26, quotes Christ as saying, "If any man come to me and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, etc., he cannot be my disciple." This is spoken to the disciples when Christ is instructing them how to go out and save the lost. If they could not be interested in the kingdom to this extent, the kingdom could not be a success.

It was thus that the Church of Christ—the new Israel—was inaugurated with seventy apostles sent forth with a mission to build His Church, which Church was endowed with what was known later as "the baptism of the Holy Spirit." True Christianity may be prevented by our desires for home, loved ones, or pleasure.

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, forbid that our desires for the pleasures of this life shall prevent us from following Thee, nor to entice us away from Thee. Draw us to Thee and keep us with Thee to our last hour. Amen.

SATURDAY.

(Friday Continued.)

MORE INTERPRETATIONS.

We must learn of the Lord to renounce worldliness if we are to enjoy the good things of the kingdom. It is most deplorable that riches and covetousness prevent so many from coming to the Lord. This is what our Lord was talking about when He said, "How hardly shall a rich man enter into the kingdom of God."

To the man who declares that he will follow the Lord, the Lord speaks of his poverty, for he sees that as yet the man's zeal is carnal, though not without the groundwork of honesty. To another he says, "Follow me, let the dead bury the dead," for He saw that the man's heart was bound up in his home. The same is true of the man who wanted to say, "Good-by" to his folks first. You know, Demas began the trip with Paul, but he got tired of the hardships and turned back home. The spirit of Demas must be cast out if we are to be saved. Lot's wife, out of the longings for her city and her home, looked back, and her life ended. How many have begun their course for God looking forward, then lose sight of the goal for a time, become entangled with worldly affairs and lose their courage. Thus it is with him who steps aside from his post to sip the pleasures of the world; he cannot help losing that purity of mind which is most precious in the sight of Jesus.

Remember this: "Love not the world, neither the things of the world. If any man love the world, the love of the father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the

WHEN THE SCHOOL BELL RINGS.

By Rev. H. W. Hunter.

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom."—Prov. 9:10.

(From a sermon preached before a large number of teachers and pupils at the beginning of the 1929-'30 school year.)

Last Monday the clang of a bell which had been silent for several weeks was heard in our city, and if we listened we would have heard its echo coming from over the mountain-tops and sounding through the fertile valleys. It was the call of the school bell, a call to duty not only to the youth of our country, but to the teachers and the parents God pity the boys and girls in these character-forming days, and the teacher who is trying to instil truth into their minds, if the sound of the school bell has not been heard in the home.

Music of Graduation or March of Death.

I know of no more serious occasion, no more important time in the life of our land than that day when the school bell first rings out its message on the autumn air to all who having ears to hear will hear. It sounds either the music of a graduation march or the death knell of failure to every pupil. I am convinced that a great deal depends upon the zeal which is displayed in these opening days of school. Not only is this true in reference to the pupil, but it also holds true to teacher and home. So much convinced am I of the importance of this that I think the real commencement sermon might well be preached at the beginning of the first semester of school, and because of this impression I have set aside this service to consider some things pertinent to the hour.

I believe that there is a real desire on the part of most pupils to understand the real values of education. The school bell's duty is not to merely make a sound or be musical. It is, as I have stated, a call to duty. We are forgetting that word "duty" these days. It's a strong word and useful. When you take it out of life you are apt to make character mussy, unstable, unfit to battle. Duty is a virile word. Lord Nelson, of England, once said, "England expects every man to do his duty." The sound of the school bell has a touch of duty in it. Think of duty as a hard word, if you please, but I'm going to keep it right here before you. It's the thing that imparts iron to the soul, enables a man to lift his head above the clouds, think for himself, act like God would have him act, and fear no man. God gives us duty-loving lads and lassies who believe that—

We are the nation's builders.
If we strive with heart and hand and brain to raise the walls
And glorify the temple, we but yield
To conscience that, with unrelenting voice,
Guides us to justice; and the house we build
Must be the house of justice.
Light and law
Shall shine within its portals.
Let it be

A palace worthy of the Lord, whose love
Smiles on no worthless effort.
And unless
He builds with us, our labor is but vain;
And our achievements, howsoever brave,
Are like the splendors of a sunset cloud;
And, howsoever high the house we build,
And bright with grandeur, 'tis but a Babel tower,
A monument of folly and of shame.

When the school bell rings, it tells that education is a factor in your life, one of the greatest. Education is the force that enables you to be and do. The world wants and needs "doers." There are more Panamas to be dug, more seemingly impassable mountains to be crossed, continents and the ends of the earth to be brought closer together. Every realm of useful art calls you. The Battle-scarred world asks for men to set her in "the way, the truth and the life." And this and much more can only be accomplished as we master our daily tasks. Just now the pupil is engaged in studying given lessons, voicing his thoughts in recitation halls, by and by he will sit in the uneasy seat of the examination hall. If he has entered the school-room today holding before him his graduation hour, he already holds his diploma in his hand, he is already smiling inwardly at the applause his name brings. Today determines tomorrow. Do your best today, and tomorrow will take care of itself. Remember that nothing is worth while but the best. If I were only a bootblack I would be the best bootblack in town, I would shine the shoes in the back as well as in the front. The world has no place today for half-formed ideas, half-baked characters. It wants the whole man, it demands a well-formed character.

Teachers Can Make or Break the Child.

I would say to you, my friends of the faculty of the various schools of this fair city, both you of the city school and you of the college, that I am very much aware of the importance of your work; the seriousness of it impresses me. I underestimate nothing you are asked to do. I feel like your task stands at the head of any work in America. You, to a certain extent, can make or break the child that sits before you. You are the representative of the chief force in America today for the improvement of society, for the enrichment and preservation of the State. The State commits unto you its boys and girls, that you may lead them into paths of wisdom. I honestly believe that it asks you to lead them not only into the wisdom of books, but also that of God, for the State recognizes God in its constitution and laws. You understand this, all of you, I trust. I thank God for Christian teachers. I do not know what our country would come to if it were not for the Christian men and women who sit at the school desk.

But I would say to you that to a certain extent you will have to make your bricks without straw. In other words, you are asked to make character without the use of the Book of books, that Book whose mission is to teach the content of real character. I mean that the Bible is, to a large degree, barred from our public schools because some rather worldly minded people, some religious sects, are against its use in the school-room. Yet, I suppose, if you were not Christians you would not receive any consideration from any school board in the land, and rightly so. The lawyer receives his code from the Ten Commandments, the physician receives his inspiration from the Great Physician, the merchant from the Golden Rule; but the school must not use the Book in its task of making men and women. No other book, you will agree, holds up the mirror of life so truthfully or leads into better conceptions of life than the Bible.

Cannot Leave God Out of the School System.

I think that the time has arrived in America when the folks who believe in making real Americans shall say to those who do not like the Bible in our midst, "Take it or leave us." We fought several wars for the sacredness of life, for the safety of our homes and firesides, and we can do it again. We cannot leave God out of the school system and remain the America that our forefathers bled for and sacrificed to hand to us. Let us beware of any individual or force that opposes the public school, that criticises it, that seeks to limit or change it, except to make it better, bigger, more thoroughly and more completely than ever the American public school.

So let the school bell ring, ring a glad song of uplift and hope. May it, as it peals out on the morning air, bring the sound of duty to pupil, to home and teacher. Then, my America, my own beloved America, will continue to be "the land of the brave and the home of the free." And when tomorrow comes, with its problems, the product of the school of today will be filled with the true spirit of service and the fear of God will be found in all hearts.—Christian-Evangelist.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

The home-coming day for children who have lived in the Christian Orphanage and gone out was instituted last year. Our first meeting was held August 31, 1929, and quite a number of children returned to visit their old home. A meeting of the boys and girls was called in the afternoon on that day and organized. A society composed of boys and girls who had their home here in their early life. The society is known as the "Home-Coming Day Society," and they voted to meet once each year and make the dues $1.00 per month. J. M. Darden was elected president.

Our second home-coming day was held on Saturday, August 30th, and a most enthusiastic attendance was present. The day was clear and pleasant and an ideal day to have an occasion of this kind. The children (as we call them) seemed to be happy to get back home again and to show the interest manifested, we had children from Atlanta, Ga.; Raleigh, N. C.; Charlotte, N. C.; Hopewell, Va.; Newport News, Va.; Norfolk, Va.; Durham and Greensboro, N. C., and many other places. The children were called together in the chapel at the Orphanage at 11 o'clock. The Orphanage girls opened the service with a song appropriate for the occasion. Dr. J. O. Atkinson led in prayer. Words of welcome were given by the superintendent of the Orphanage, and responded to by Mr. Andrew Curling, of Norfolk, Va. The Orphanage children rendered a program gotten up for the occasion, after which Mr. Sam Davis rendered some beautiful piano selections.

Mr. J. M. Darden, president of the society, and Mr. Sam Davis and Dr. J. O. Atkinson made talks which were hgihly appreciated. After lunch was served, the society met in its annual meeting. After transacting the usual routine business, it went into election of officers. J. M. Darden was elected president; Gay Franklin, vice-president; Mrs. Pearl Goodwin Partin, secretary; Miss Rebecca Johnston, assistant secretary; Charles D. Johnston, treasurer.

The report of the treasurer showed that dues had been collected for the year amounting to $129. Mr. Darden made the proposition to donate as much as all the members paid in. He immediately gave his check for an equal amount. So the society begins its new year with a balance of $258 in its treasury. Mr. Darden renewed his proposition for another year and said he hoped the members would raise $500. The spirit of the meeting was fine, and we feel that much good will come from these annual get-together meetings.

REVIVAL MEETINGS.

We are grateful to God for His blessings upon us in our revivals this season. We began a revival at Moore Union the fourth Sunday in July, had large attendance, with heavenly conviction in the congregation. The Lord gave us forty professions of faith in Christ. At the close of the meeting, fifteen united with the Church, with prospects of others to unite later.

After closing there we then began, the second Sunday in August, at Howard's Chapel with large congregations and much interest. I was there one week. The Lord gave us thirty-four professions of faith and about forty came for reconsecration.

At the close of the meeting, fourteen were added to the Church, with prospects of others coming in later. We give God the honor and the praise for attending the messages with convictions and results. This is beginning my third year as a young preacher. I am very much encouraged to fight the good fight of faith and work for the Master.

FAMILY ALTAR.

Father, but is of the world. "And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of the Father abideth forever" (1 John 2:15-17).

Prayer.—Dear Father, forbid that our affections shall be set on the base and hollow pleasures of the world. But give us a part with Thee now and forever. Amen.

SUNDAY.

JUSTIFICATION AND CHRISTIANITY.

"By Him, all that believe are justified from all things."—Acts 13:38.

No one has got so far from God or has a sin so foul that he cannot be brought back and have his sins washed away by the blood of the Son of God. No one is so corrupt that Jesus cannot heal him; none have fallen so low that Jesus cannot raise them up. In Jesus there is a remedy for every evil, and only in Him. He is the only Saviour, and there is none other beside Him. For this He became a man; for this He died; for this He is in heaven and makes intercession for us.

The word "justified" here is said to mean, "When I believed, God had mercy on me; He imputed to me the righteousness of Christ, acquitted me of sin and its punishment, and regards me in Christ." So, I can say with Paul, "Who can lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is He that condemneth? It is Christ that died; yea, rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us" (Rom. 8:33, 34). If we understood this, all that we have is through grace, and not due to any particular merit of our own.

This is the first sermon of Paul, and this is his theme throughout his ministry—justification by faith.

Prayer.—Merciful God, make us to see our sins; draw us by Thy grace and wash us clean. We pray that we may never be abandoned to sin and unbelief; but give us penitence, humility, love and forgiveness, and make us righteous. Amen.

OBITUARIES.

RUDD.

Mrs. Alice Jordan Rudd was born in Guilford County, N. C., August 16, 1852, and died August 12, 1930, age 77 years, 11 months and 26 days. She was the wife of Deacon J. H. Rudd, of the Monticello Church. They were married December 20, 1870, and for nearly sixty years this devoted and happy couple have traveled life's pathway together. Fourteen children blessed the home. Nine have preceded mother to the spirit world, and five are living to share with their father the burden of sorrow.

Burial services were held in the Monticello Church, August 14th, in charge of the writer, and the following ministers: Rev. J. L. Neese, Greensboro; Rev. J. L. Trollinger, Brown Summit; Rev. R. L. Nall, Elon College, and Dr. W. C. Wicker, Elon College, and the body interred in the Church cemetery.

A large congregation gathered to pay a tribute of respect to the memory of this noble woman, and the beautiful floral offerings were expressive of the love and high esteem in which she was held. In the going of Sister Rudd, the Church and community sustains a heavy loss. She was one of the charter members of the Monticello Church, and for many years before the organization of this Church, a member of Hines Chapel Church. She became a Christian at the age of thirteen years and was always loyal to her Church and lived a consistent Christian life. She was a lovable companion, a devoted mother, a noble grandmother, a true friend and neighbor, and a devout servant of God.

May the gentle spirit which characterized her life live in the hearts of those whom she knew and loved, and inspire each one to nobler living, and the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ sustain her relatives in their hour of grief. Her work is ended and she has entered into that rest which remains for the people of God.

DARDEN.

Mrs. Elizabeth S. Darden died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. K. Jones, R. F. D., Holland, Va., August 17, 1930, in the eightieth year of her age. The funeral services were conducted at Holy Neck Church by the writer, assisted by Revs. H. C. Caviness, W. C. Hook, C. C. Jones, and J. G. Truitt, and the burial was in the Church cemetery.

Mrs. Darden was the daughter of the late Jethro and Sophia Odom Haslette, and the widow of Dempsey L. Darden. She was the last surviving member of her family. She leaves two children, Mrs. J. K. Jones, of Holland, R. F. D., and Mrs. Charles Wesley Parker, of Portsmouth; one stepdaughter, Mrs. Ella Gray, of Waverly, and two step-grandchildren, Dempsey Gorrell Darden, of Burlington, and Garland Gray, of Waverly.

Mrs. Darden had been a member of Holy Neck Church since early life, and loved her Church and enjoyed its services as long as able to attend. Her latter days were spent in the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. K. Jones, where kind and loving hands ministered to her every need. With a quiet faith and trust, she lived in waiting, as she often said, on the will of the Lord.

May the peace of God our Father and the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be the comfort and stay of her bereaved ones.

PHELPS.

Mrs. Mary Phelps was born in Caswell County, N. C., on September 14, 1862, and died July 11, 1930. She married Allen Phelps, who survives. She leaves the following children: Mrs. Lucy Taylor, Mr. Eddie Phelps, Mrs. Mollie Hicks, Mr. Willie Phelps, Mr. Walter Phelps, Mrs. Maude Cole, Mrs. Ruby Frances, Mr. Floyd Phelps, Mrs. Lottie Huffines, Mrs. Essie Sadler, Mr. Tobe Phelps and Mr. Frank Phelps. There are forty-eight grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

For years Sister Phelps had been a member of Lebanon Christian Church. For two years she was confined to her home and was an invalid for a year. I visited her during her confinement to the home and found her patiently submissive, as becomes the follower of Christ.

The funeral and burial were at Lebanon on Sunday, July 12th. A large number of friends and relatives attended. The sympathy of all go out to the surviving ones, especially to the husband, who has been almost blind for several years.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGRETATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CHURCHES IN THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

NORFLEET.

Fulton Brooks Norfleet died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. P. C. Holland, Jr., R. F. D., Holland, Va., August 17, 1930, in the seventy-third year of his age. The funeral services were conducted at the home by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. C. Hook, and the burial was in Holland Cemetery.

Mr. Norfleet was the son of Joseph and Louisa Norfleet, and was the last surviving member of his family. He leaves a widow, who was Miss Willie Mary Everett, and two children, James Lee Norfleet, of Portsmouth, and Mrs. P. C. Holland, Jr., of Holland; and two grandchildren, Marjorie Ellen and James Everett Holland.

The deceased had been a member of Holy Neck Church since early life. He had been an industrious and frugal citizen, a kind neighbor, a good husband and father, a loyal member of his Church, and passed out in that calm faith and trust that had sustained him through all of his afflictions. May our Heavenly Father comfort and keep his loved ones.

McINTURFF.

Levi McInturff was born July 6, 1841, and died July 25, 1930, aged 89 years and 19 days. Bro. McInturff was a faithful member of Joppa Christian Church and always deeply interested in everything pertaining to the Church. For a number of years prior to his death, he was blind and otherwise a great sufferer, but he maintained to the last a steadfast faith in the Lord.

Funeral services were held at Joppa July 26, 1930, and the remains laid to rest in the family cemetery, a short distance away.

THE WIDOW'S MITE.

A wealthy man, when making a contribution, facetiously said: "I can give more than the widow's mite; that was commended, you know." "Oh," said the pastor, "you needn't give as much as the widow's mite. She gave all she had. You are worth at least $100,000, and I do not ask for more than half of it. When you have given all, you have given the widow's mite."—Selected.

By Dr. W. C. Wicker.

CIGARETTE KINDLES DEADLY FIRE.—

In a Johnson City, Tenn., cottage, a flame was kindled by "a lighted cigarette," according to the chief of police. The fire spreading, trapped six persons. Four of the victims were a young mother, a son and two young daughters. The two others were men who sought to rescue the family.

CATHOLIC CHARITY.—

Since January 1st, this year, the Catholic Church has made bequests and gifts to Catholic charities and institutions exceeding ten million dollars. The largest bequest was three million dollars, willed to Catholic causes from the estate of Daniel Reidbar, of Louisville, Ky. The wealthy men of the Christian Church would do well to remember Church institutions and charities in their bequests, and perpetuate their names and Christian service for all time in benevolent service for humanity. We can never build largely the kingdom of God without large financial support to meet the growing financial needs of the denomination.

"WHAT WE BELIEVE."—

"The Modern Churchmen are bringing out a series of small pamphlets on 'What We Believe.' The Anglo-Catholics did this a long time ago; the Catholics have had their penny catechism for many years. Now these tracts are sent forth to show that a Christian need be neither a Catholic nor a fundamentalist." This method of teaching what Christian people should think on various doctrines of the Christian religion constitutes an effective method of information for Christian people in general and young people in particular, and might be used to good purpose in familiarizing the constituency of any Church with Church history and doctrine.

WORLD ORGANIZATION.—

At the recent Council of the Congregational Churches held at Bournemouth, a world executive organization for the Churches was ordered, and is being established as a result of this action. This announcement comes to us from Fred B. Smith, moderator of the National Council, who has recently returned to this country from Europe. Rev. J. D. Jones, new moderator of the International Council, is to be head of the organization, under the direction of an ad interim committee of fifteen, which will be appointed by the various national bodies. The purpose of this organization will be "to put on an aggressive, continuous, challenging appeal to the Churches to make effective the ideals set forth at the Bournemouth meeting."

BUSINESS BETTER.—

"Fifty American chain-store organizations reported last week aggregate earnings considerably over the same period of 1929. The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, on August 16th, pointed out that the purchasing power of the good old dollar had increased 19 per cent since 1926. In the last eleven years, according to other recently assembled statistics, the government has spent for general construction purposes over four billion dollars. The present construction program is being speeded as an aid to unemployment and relief for drought-stricked areas." This report is encouraging to those who have been pessimistic concerning the business situation in the near future, and should inspire us to take heart and join in promoting better business conditions in all parts of our country.

CONFERENCE CONCLUSIONS.—

Anglican bishops, three hundred and seven of them, from all countries, composing the Lambeth Conference, meeting about every ten years, have just closed their session. Opinions on many subjects, including war, birth control and Church union, were expressed formally in seventy-five resolutions sent to all Anglican Churches of the world and the Protestant Episcopal Churches of the United States, with recommendations that they be accepted. "On war, the bishops more emphatically than ever before declared that this method of settling international disputes was irreconcilable with the teachings of Jesus Christ and that there will never be peace until relations between nations are controlled by religious and ethical ideals." They appealed to all religious leaders of all lands to give their support to the League of Nations and its purposes.

BISHOP DARLINGTON'S DEATH.—

Rev. James H. Darlington, who last April concluded twenty-five years' service as bishop of the Harrisburg, Penn., Protestant Episcopal diocese, fell on sleep August 14th, this year, at Kingston, N. Y., hospital, following a serious operation. Bishop Darlington was seventy-four years of age. Before becoming the first bishop of the Harrisburg diocese, he had served but one parish—Christ Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. His long service as bishop had greatly endeared him to his constituency because of his excellent service for the Church and the kingdom. Our great Church leaders in all denominations make greater contributions to the safety of the nation than kings and princes, than presidents and congressmen, than politicians and legislators. The Church, with its teachings, has been the greatest factor in the safety and uplift of our nation, and should appeal to all its membership to make the largest possible contribution to the moral and spiritual life of the nation. A good prayer meeting in a community is worth more than a chamber of commerce, for it creates the moral and spiritual atmosphere essential to safety of the community.

PROLONGED PASTORATE.—

Long pastorates are the exception rather than the rule, but where a competent pastor is selected and continued in service, the results are generally far better than a constant change of men and methods. In Cleveland, Ohio, thirty-five years ago Henry Schmidt graduated from Union Theological Seminary and entered upon his duties as pastor of the Third Reformed Church. The population has shifted several times and the Church has moved and been rebuilt, but Henry Schmidt is still in his first pastorate. The congregation, on his thirtieth anniversary, gave him an automobile; on his thirty-first, they sent him to Europe; and in another five years they will probably send him around the world. The secret of his success has been the faithful performance of his pastoral duties, and excellent wife, and a large family of well-liked children. The most successful in the Christian denomination have grown out of long pastorates with good pastors. Many of our country Churches are constantly changing pastors, to the detriment of the work. Churches are not built strong in a day nor a year, and Churches would do well to arrange with capable pastors to stay on the work long enough to plan largely and complete their plans before changing.

SIGNATURES AGAINST WAR.—

The twenty-six national sections of the Woman's International League for Peace and Freedom have sent out a petition to be circulated throughout the world. This petition is as follows: "The undersigned men and women, irrespective of party, are convinced that competition in armaments is leading all countries to ruin without giving security; that this policy renders future wars inevitable, and that these will be wars of extermination; that governmental assurances of peaceful policy will be valueless, so long as those measures of disarmament are delayed that should be the first result of the pact for the renunciation of war; they, therefore, ask for total and universal disarmament and request their government formally to instruct its delegates to the next disarmament conference to examine all proposals for disarmament that have been made or may be made, and take the necessary steps to achieve real disarmament." The first American to affix her name to this petition was Miss Jane Addams, international president of the league, and Prof. Einstein, the scientist, was the first in Germany. Among the distinguished leaders in Great Britain to sign this petition were Countess of Oxford and Asquith, Mrs. Philip Snowden, John Galsworthy, the Viscountess Gladstone, Prof. Gilbert Murray, Bertrand Russell, the bishop of Birmingham, and many others. All Christian people should join in any movement that will insure world peace rather than world war.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. A. W. Andes is assisting Rev. S. E. Madren, pastor, in an evangelistic meeting at Elk Spur Church, in Carroll County, Va.

Dr. W. M. Jay, Elon College, N. C., will supply the pulpit of the First Congregational-Christian Church, Newport News, Va., Sunday, September 14th.

Mrs. Fannie Riddick, Miss Susie Riddick and Mrs. Luther Riddick and little daughter, Miss Mae Turnstall, all of the Durham Christian Church, enroute to their home from a six weeks' visit to New York and other northern points, were visitors to Richmond relatives recently.

We very much regret that a letter received from Dr. W. A. Harper, stating that Rev. R. L. House, president of the Eastern North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, had written each superintendent in his Conference urging the taking of the fifth Sunday offering for the college, as provided by the Southern Christian Convention's financial plan, came too late for printing last week. Before the letter of Bro. House was received by President Harper he had already sent in his Elon Letter, and before the letter making the addition reached us, we had gone to press with that part of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

By reference to pages 47-49 of the "Proceedings of the Southern Christian Convention," held at Raleigh, N. C., 1930, the Convention "requests the Board of Publications to allot to each Church within the Convention a quota of paid-up subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN," etc. This is understood to mean that the circulation manager notify each Church the number of subscribers expected of it. To carry out the intention of the motion, the circulation manager is writing the pastor or some official of the Church, and a report will be expected from the Church before the annual Conferences yet to meet. In order to bring the matter before the Churches, the pastors can confer with the members of his official board and announce from his pulpit two or more persons who are willing to do the soliciting; subscription price, $2.00 per year.

To find the quota for the Church, simply divide the number of members on roll, or as reported in the "Annual" by 20, and quotient and major fraction will express the number asked from the Church. Thus, if the membership is 85; divide by 20, the quota is 4, the number asked for additional. Pastors of the Valley Central Conference will please take up the matter before their Churches.

SALEM.

The protracted meeting at Salem Chapel Christian Church was held on the first Sunday and the week following. Sunday services were held at 11 A. M. and 2 P. M.; for the remainder of the meeting, 3 and 8 P. M. The first Sunday in August, with this Church, is rather a home-coming reunion day. On these annual occasions, people from far and near come to see their kindred who are living and to look upon the memorial of their dead. It's really a fellowship day. The afternoon services had but small audiences; the night attendance was very good, and the attention fine. There were some reconsecrations, and a few professions. Rev. R. A. Whitten, of Reidsville, N. C., was with us and did the preaching. Bro. Whitten preached, with much sincerity, the plain, simple gospel truth, making very practical appeals for service on the part of the Church and for a profession of Jesus Christ on the part of sinners.

Rev. Whitten is of very sociable and approachable disposition, and the people took kindly to him. We feel that these annual renewal occasions are too limited in time, and the proper preparation is not given beforehand on the part of the individual members. It takes much prayer and pleading to get close to Christ. The closeness brings the results in service and conversion. A splendid father and his two grown daughters joined the Church and were baptized.

We are grateful that the Lord adds to the membership of this great old Church. These splendid old landmarks of God's goodness which bless the State so much will one day come into their own and be great lights and bee-hives of service and salvation in the community where they are located. May God bless all the people.

BETHLEHEM LETTER.

The annual series of revival services at Bethlehem Christian Church, near Elon College, N. C., commenced Sunday, July 20th, and closed the following Sabbath. Rev. L. A. Wall was with us and did most of the preaching. His messages were clear, plain, potent and evangelistic, being freighted with power through the realized presence of the Divine Spirit.

Men and women at the seat of prayer pled, with audible voices, for mercy, and when the heart was relieved of the burden of condemnation, it was exclaimed: "Oh, the experience is so sweet."

It was a wonderful series of inspirational revival services. The Church and large congregations were greatly moved and encouraged, and faith in the Bible gospel of Jesus Christ was quickened and deepened as being in the eternal bedrock of everlasting truth. There were fourteen accessions to the Church at Bethlehem and fifteen water baptisms.

VALLEY LETTER.

The last session of our Conference was largely attended; the Churches, in the main, were well represented, and a goodly number attended who were not delegates. The interest throughout the Conference was at least equal to the attendance. A good spirit prevailed, and people seemed to enjoy the entire session. We were blessed by having with us and taking part on our program Hermon Eldredge, from Dayton, Ohio; Dr. W. A. Harper, and Prof. A. L. Hook, from Elon College; C. D. Johnston, from the Orphanage; Miss Jewel Truitt, doing field work in the realm of religious education. Others gladdened and honored us with their presence, such as Rev. E. B. White, Rev. F. D. Ballard and wife, Rev. George H. Robertson, Rev. W. C. Hook, and perhaps others whose names I do not now recall. (I am writing purely from memory.)

The usual reports were made, discussed and adopted. I do not think that a careful examination of the Church reports will show any great growth in membership or finances. It seems to be common with us, as with others, that conversions are a little hard to get. The challenge is greater than ever that we pray more and bend our energies harder in the direction of soul-winning. The amount of energy and effort we used to give to this line of work will not suffice now.

I do not think there are as many banner Churches (all Conference apportionments paid) this year as last. I do not take this to mean, however, that our interest along this line is less than usual. Our section is hard hit by our unprecedented drought and financial depression. Yet it is altogether likely that many have spent money foolishly and then plead poverty when the Church collector comes around.

Conference officers for next year were elected as follows: Rev. R. L. Williamson, president; Rev. B. J. Earp, vice-president; Rev. A. W. Andes, secretary; J. Warner Stearn, assistant secretary; Samuel Earman, treasurer.

It was voted to have a midyear session at Bethlehem, the time to be designated by the executive committee. The place for the next regular annual session is Mt. Olivet, in Green County.

At this writing I am with Rev. S. E. Madden, in a revival meeting at Elk Spur, in our mission work in Carroll County, Va. The meeting is only in its beginning, and it is too soon to tell how we shall come out. I was here a little over four years ago and helped Rev. M. T. Sorrell in a meeting at Rocky Ford, six miles away. I have not had opportunity yet to compare conditions then and now and measure what improvement has taken place in the four years. I do see, however, that our Church property at Elk Spur needs some repairs. I counted six window-panes gone from the front of the Church building, the door lock is broken, a good lighting system is needed in the Church and parsonage, and both these buildings ought, by all means, to be painted at once. It will mean a real deterioration of the property to let them go over another winter without painting. I suppose, of course, the Mission Board is aware of these needs, but I suppose their hands are tied because of lack of necessary funds to do this work. How I wish more of our people could see the needs as I have seen them in the few hours I have been here.

It was a great pleasure to me to spend a few days about a month ago with Rev. R. A. Whitten, of Reidsville, N. C., in a glorious meeting at Apple's Chapel, twelve miles out from Reidsville. The congregations were large, the people were appreciative and made my stay among them exceedingly pleasant. Twenty-six were happily blessed at the altar, and many shouts of happiness and praise were heard.

I expect soon to begin meetings in my own field, and am hoping and praying for God's blessings upon them.

A. W. ANDES.

CONFERENCES MEET.

Georgia and Alabama Conference will meet with Oak Grove Christian Church, Chipley, Ga., 10 A. M. Tuesday after first Sunday in October, 1930.

Alabama Conference will meet with the Church at Noon Day, Tuesday, 10 A. M., after second Sunday in October, 1930.

Eastern Virginia Conference will meet with the Church at South Norfolk, Va., Wednesday before the first Sunday in November, 1930, at 10 A. M.

North Carolina and Virginia Conference will meet on Tuesday after the second Sunday in November, 1930, at 10 A. M., at Long's Chapel, Alamance County, N. C.

Western North Carolina Conference will meet Wednesday after the first Sunday in November, 1930, 10:30 A. M., with Hank's Chapel.

Eastern North Carolina Conference will meet on Tuesday after the third Sunday in November, 1930, at 10:30 A. M.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

REV. H. B. MOWBRAY writes from his home in Hiram, Ohio, that he will be in Demorest the second Sunday in September to begin regular work as pastor of Union Church.

MR. A. G. SWARTZ, who has been assisting Rev. C. L. Percy in the Demorest larger parish, will close his work at the end of this month, after which he expects to spend some time with home folks in Pennsylvania before the seminary opens.

REV. S. M. PENN, who has been assisting Mr. A. G. Swartz in special meetings at Trinity, Lawrenceville, Macedonia, Braselton, Liberty and Bowman, Ga., will spend a few days in and about Atlanta before returning to his Church at Sophia, N. C.

SARDIS CHURCH, at Oxford, Ga., is planning for a special all-day session for young people of the North Georgia Association the first Sunday in October. It is hoped that every Sunday School and young people's society may be represented.

UNION CHURCH, Demorest, Ga., has been especially helped this month by a large number of visitors. Sunday, August 17th, Rev. John Peyton and wife were present, visiting old friends; and Sunday, August 24th, Rev. Park Fisher dropped in to give the Church an inspiring message.

MACEDONIA CHURCH, at Braselton, Ga., has been making important improvements in its Church plant this summer. Curtains have been arranged to make class rooms for the Sunday School, a piano has been purchased, and paint has been used to brighten up the Church inside.

PIEDMONT COLLEGE, after the most successful summer session of its history, is preparing for a large incoming of new students for the fall session. A large force of workmen are busy repairing and refinishing rooms in the dormitories. A retaining wall is being constructed on the athletic field, and the field has been extended by removing a part of the bank on the north side. President and Mrs. H. C. Newell returned from New England last week, bringing with them Miss Andrews, who is to be President Newell's secretary. Miss Andrews was at one time a member of the college faculty. One new member has been added to the college faculty, Mrs. Ruth F. Atkinson, who will take the place of Miss Kendall, at Campbell Hall, and will also teach in the department of mathematics.

LATIN CHURCH, WEST TAMPA: The work of Pilgrim Latin Congregational Church, West Tampa, has gone on steadily during the summer months, all meetings being kept up and some special prayer meetings held. During June, July and August, six hundred and fifty-eight house-to-house visits were made. Many of these were very short, with just a few words of greeting at the door, and many others, when nobody was at home, with the leaving of a gospel magazine on which was printed the address of the Church. A large number of Bible portions were distributed in this house-to-house visitation. Mrs. Corwin, for a strenuous vacation, took a six weeks' summer course for teachers at Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga. Just now the Church and the parsonage are being favored by a visit from Rev. A. G. Axtell and family. Mr. Axtell is chaplain of Piedmont College and professor of religion and philosophy. He was formerly in missionary service in Porto Rico, as was Mr. Corwin.

FLORIDA MINISTERS' CONVOCATION.

Plans have been perfected for the annual convocation of Florida Congregational ministers, which will be held at the Seaside Inn, Daytona Beach, beginning on the evening of October 6th and ending at noon on October 9th. The sessions will be held at the hotel, except the evening sessions which may be held at the Congregational Church.

The program will be as follows: five lectures by Rev. J. Delman Kuykendall, D. D., followed by open forum discussion on the general subject, "Religion in a New Universe," the subtopics being (1) "The Cosmic Machine," (2) "The Riddle of Consciousness," (3) "The Behavior of the Human Machine," (4) "Is Man Self-sufficient?" (5) "The Mystic Breath of Life."

Rev. E. A. King, D. D., of Miami Beach, who has been attending the Mexican Seminar this summer will deliver three lectures upon Mexico and the results of the seminar. One of the lectures will be in the evening and will be illustrated. Rev. W. R. Kedzie, D. D., of Chicago, secretary of the Congregational Foundation for Education, will deliver one address and hold one conference on the educational program in the Southeast. In addition, there will be several conferences among the ministers on the work of our Florida Churches and our relation to the problems of the State and nation.

The course given by Dr. Kuykendall will treat of the modern problems of religious thought and is based upon very wide reading of the modern scientific and religious books and will consider the pastor's relation to such cults as "Mechanism," "Behaviorism," etc. Dr. Kuykendall is thoroughly qualified to lead in the discussion of these movements which are challenging Christian thought and to do so in a constructive way.

The directors of the State Conference will hold a meeting in connection with the convocation. There will be ample opportunity for fellowship and recreation. Ministers' wives are cordially invited.

SOUTH ALABAMA ASSOCIATION.

The South Alabama Association was held at Antioch Church, Andalusia, Ala., July 25-27th. Rev. M. L. Thrasher was pastor-host. Mr. Thrasher is known to the general public by the Columbia records put out by the Thrasher family and quartet. Antioch Church is near a school building which was formerly a Christian academy. It has a number of young people who are going to college this year. It has three Christian Endeavors; the senior society has twenty-five members, the junior twenty-three, and the intermediate twenty-three. Rev. Samuel Long, the genial spiritual and humorous moderator, was re-elected for another year. Rev. N. A. Long, his son and pastor, of Midland City group of four active Churches, had devotional services through the meeting. Miss Dora Bracken, commissioned extension board, Sunday School and young people's worker for Alabama and Georgia, came from Blackwoods Church of this association and made a most creditable address on the program of the Church and young people. Rev. M. L. Thrasher treated the pastoral side of the minister's work. Miss Davison and Miss Ina Adams and others from the local Church, presented a young people's program with a dramatic setting.

The ratio of Church membership gains to losses was three to one for the association. The association will be held at the Blackwoods Church next year.

EAST ALABAMA ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the East Alabama Association was held at Bethel Church, near Millerville, Ashland and Lineville. Rev. Joseph P. Bean, first a member of a Christian Church which went out of existence, and later a Congregational minister, was the pastor-host. Rev. Willis A. Dunaway was one of the oldest pastors. He has had a family altar for forty-four years. Rev. T. J. Reynolds, who came from the Congregational-Methodist Church, brightened the meetings by his interest and good cheer. Rev. H. T. McKay, father of Rev. R. A. McKay, of the Central Association, was one of the preachers. His emphasis on the eternal verities was fine. Bro. McKay has four sons in the ministry, and the McKay clan numbers two hundred with grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

President Beougher of Piedmont Junior College pleased the association by his sermon. Miss Davison spoke on the work for women and had a class of young people. Rev. Charles W. Smith, of Phenix City, was re-elected moderator and delegate to the General Council. His organization reported a new brick-veneered Church, and a Sunday School which has grown from thirty-nine to one hundred and forty-one within the year. There was a fine gain in Church membership. Wesley Chapel, which joined the association at this meeting, reported twenty-one additions. Next year's association is to be held there.

CENTRAL ALABAMA ASSOCIATION.

The Central Alabama Association met at Mountain Springs Church, near Clanton, August 14-16th. This active Church was brought again into vigor by the pastor-host, Rev. C. A. Nelson, who, during the meetings, was impressively ordained into the Christian ministry. The first night's program was given to the discussion of young people's work. Rev. Merion Dopson discussed evangelistic work. Miss Davison, with Mrs. Butler and Miss Fairbanks and Mrs. Norton, of Thorsby, had a model woman's society meeting. Rev. R. A. McKay and Rev. J. I. Barker brought messages. Rev. E. W. Butler, State registrar, was re-elected moderator of the association, which is to meet next year at East Tallahassee.

All nine of the Churches of the association reported a total gain of fifty-nine members by confession of faith, and seven of the nine reported forty new members received by letter. The nine Churches lost six by death, twenty-six by letter, and one Church lost forty-one by delayed revision of the roll. The Mountain Creek Church gained most new members. Five of the Churches reported considerable help to the sick of the community. In two other parishes, crops were worked for those unable to do it themselves.

The East Tallahassee Church has a nurse who gives her services to the sick in the Church. This Church has been beautified and its grounds improved during the year. Most of the other Churches have been improved. The Central Association showed the largest interest in apportionment benevolences.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

V.

Aboard S. S. Adriatic, June 18, 1930.

It is cloudy and cool, now and then foggy out at sea today. Ships passing you at sea are welcome and agreeable visions and visitors. You only see them in the distance, but they renew the sense of companionship on the vast sea, out where you and your ship, however many passengers may be aboard it, seem isolated. On board ship life comes to be circumscribed, hemmed in, hedged about. However, if one will look about and explore surroundings, one may find something new and interesting daily, if not hourly. Today I ran into a group, some two dozen or more men and women discussing the Holy Spirit—His character and office. There were various views, as is ever the case when a topic of depth and breadth is discussed. The conclusion of the discussion seemed to be that the Holy Spirit was God now in His world, bringing that world, through the growth and development of the soul of man, into a more orderly and better world. One of the group was impressed with the beauty and perfection of a great ship like this on which we now travel; but it is puerile and as nothing compared to the perfection of the human body; and then beyond the body, and using the body is the soul of man which the Holy Spirit is bringing to perfection. God, the Creator, and loving Father of us, has not left the soul alone to struggle, in this world of worry and of wrong, alone, but has sent into His Spirit to comfort the soul in its struggles and guide the soul in the way of wisdom, love, mercy, justice. And this the Holy Spirit does by revealing to man the real character of Jesus the Christ who is the world's only hope and Saviour. It was an interesting discussion of an age-old and yet even new topic. For man's salvation, and finding his way to God, is man's most weighty problem. It is a comfort to know that whether on sea or on land, God is seeking to aid and guide us through His eternal presence and personality in the world and in us.

I had some money changed today into English "coin of the realm." For a $10.00 bill I got four pieces of crisp, new paper, with brown-colored paint and print, each marked "10 shillings," and in addition five large "coppers," each marked "one penny." The English shilling is 24 cents in our money, and the five coppers make up the balance, less exchange. A penny in English is about 1½ cents in our American money. I see right now this money changing is going to befuddle my mind, keep me guessing, and prove a nuisance. Why can't we have an international currency? Next to a universal language, I know nothing that would make for peace and mutual understanding and friendship among the nations like a universal standard of exchange and measure of values. If I do not understand a nation's money, the standard of values, how am I to understand a nation's morals and manners and men?

There are more than half-dozen large lounges, writing-rooms, spacious and beautifully appointed parlors on this ship. They are comfortable, with heavy plush carpets or hardwood floors with rich druggets and tapestries, and easy, elegant chairs and settees. One travels the seas now in a luxury and sense of ease not often found on land. Ocean travel has indeed come to be a joy, as well as a soothing and soulful experience. The blue sea has been friendly today, and I lay me down to sleep and slumber with gratitude to Him who controls both sea and land.

Tuesday, June 19th.

Slept poorly last night. They ran the clock up an hour, and so had us up at 6 A. M. in order to have breakfast at 7 (8 our time in the States). Soon after a hearty breakfast I went to a parlor to hear Dr. Gilroy (our editor of the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty) talk on "The Church." He defines the Church as "a fellowship of those who seek to interpret and serve in the spirit of Christ. The difference, said he, between the Congregational and the Unitarian Churches is that the former teaches and preaches salvation through grace, whereas the latter teaches salvation through character. In the latter you can just grow into salvation; in the former you are bought with a price and brought into salvation through the saving grace of a Redeemer. The Universalist says, "God is too good to damn a soul." "Yes," adds the Unitarian, "and I am too good a soul for God to damn." Rome believes the Church to be a ship. The Pope is "pontifex maximus." Now, "pontifex" means a bridge; the two words together mean, "the great bridge." According to Roman Catholicism, then, the Church is a way of escape across the stream of time from this into another and a better world. Protestant evangelical communions believe and teach that Jesus is the only Head of the Church, and instead of a bridge of escape He is a sufficient and ever-present Saviour to all who will accept Him as the Builder of a kingdom on earth—a heavenly kingdom to live in and enjoy here.

The sea is bulging and big with billows and rolling mounds today. Our big ship rolls and climbs the bulges gracefully and gently. Many are seasick and uncomfortable. It is very cool and blustery. About 4 P. M. the sea grows calm and looks restless but satisfied. The orchestra gives an inspiring concert, and sweet music fills the briny air, while tea and delicious cookies are served.

Verily, "life on the ocean wave" is romantic to one who has lived all his days on land. One does not have to step into the grave to get into another world. Just step aboard an ocean liner instead and behold "all things are become new." J. O. A.

REVIVALS.

As we understand revivals, at least two things are included. The revival of spiritual experience in the souls of members of the Church and the conversion of sinners and their union with the Church. That type of revival requires special meetings, with special preaching and special music. Such meetings are like a good rain after a drought. The Church, like the field, needs special outpourings of the Spirit, and this does not come in regular worship and work. It requires also the coming together of the whole congregation. Regular services do not draw the whole community together, and regular preaching does not emphasize the necessity for repentance and regeneration. Regular preaching edifies believing Church members, but it does not arouse the community and kindle a spiritual desire for salvation in the souls of the unconverted. Regular services are usually intellectual rather than spiritual, and affect Christians rather than sinners. A genuine revival awakens real Christians to a sense of their obligation to God and to sinners, and leads the unconverted to a conscious sense of their last condition without Christ. Repentance, faith, full surrender to the will of God results in a sense of pardon, and they confess Jesus Christ as their Saviour. Regeneration takes place, and this fills the hearts of Christians with a new sense of their place in the work of saving souls. Preaching improves, singing improves, prayer improves, attendance and attention improve.

The last two weeks have witnessed fine revivals in Oakland, Bethlehem and Liberty Spring Christian Churches, in Nansemond County, near Suffolk. Rev. W. H. Garman, of Old Zion, preached for Rev. R. E. Brittle at Bethlehem, where twenty new members were received. Rev. O. D. Poythress, of South Norfolk, preached for Dr. I. W. Johnson at Oakland and Liberty Spring. About twenty new members were received at each of these Churches. In spite of the extreme hot weather, the congregations in all of these Churches were large and attentive, and the choirs were in place on time and the singing was inspiring. The preaching in all three of these meetings was the gospel in teaching, personal in application, and earnest in delivery; loud enough to be heard, plain enough to be understood, and spiritual enough to make an appeal to Christians to pray and work and to sinners to cause them to repent. What the Church needs in cities, as well as in the country, is not off to the beach so much for pleasure only, as to the house of God to pray, sing, preach, repent and then believe. There is too much decision, intellectual choice, quiet union with the Church in these days. The chief thing in religion is feeling, and a revival meeting is the best means of stirring up religious feeling in the human heart. Garman and Poythress are not afraid to hollo as well as to make clear the word of God concerning sin and salvation; and all people know that thunder quiets people as well as lightning. All Churches need revivals that attract the people, revive the members, and cause sinners to repent and believe on Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour. W. W. S.

WATCH!

Some bells require to be rung very often. As there is constant danger from certain quarters, so there must be constant warnings. When our Lord repeats an admonition five times over within the space of a dozen lines, we may be quite sure that He regarded it as one of supreme importance. If we turn to the thirteenth chapter of Mark, we discover that Jesus repeated His injunction to watchfulness several times, and then closed His solemn discourse with the sharp stroke on the alarm bell, "I say unto you all, Watch!"

Those of us who have crossed the ocean in a steamship have always gone down to our berths on a dark night with a more comfortable sense of security from having seen a "lookout" posted on the ship's bow. It is the business of that sailor to do two things, viz: to keep wide awake and to report instantly any glimpse of a vessel or an iceberg before the steamer's path. His signal is the security of every soul on board. Conscience is the lookout on the bow in the voyage of life. Some people with sinful infatuation put conscience at the stern; it may utter its shriek of remorse when the sin has been committed and the craft has struck the temptation which stove in the bow. But a conscience that can do no more than moan and weep over sins already committed is of little worth; for even that process is a very hardening one if continued very long.

I have observed one very undeniable fact in my own experience and in my observation of others; this fact is that everything depends on the manner in which first sins and first slips from the right path are treated. If a first false step is promptly met by a thorough repentance (as in the case of Peter's lie in Pilate's hall), then the trouble ends. The soul soon recovers its healthy tone, and is sometimes the wiser and stronger for its sad experience. But if the first sin is followed by a second and a third and a fourth without any contrition before God, then conscience soon becomes benumbed and powerless. In time, it is seared as with a hot iron.

It is the office of a healthy conscience not only to feel keen compunctions when wrong has been done, but to detect sin in advance and to sound the alarm to the will, which has its hand on the helm. The truly righteous man has just as many temptations floating across his weather-bow as the ungodly or the backslider has. The difference is that the righteous man's conscience detects the danger and gives the signal to the will to "steer clear" of the enemy. Nay, more; such a conscience reports the danger to God in prayer, and prompt help comes from heaven to the hand on the helm. Wherefore, the Master commands us to both "watch and pray."

It is always unwise to despise an enemy. We never know how many guns he carries until he has stolen a march on us and opens fire. King Edward's garrison fell asleep in Edinburgh Castle because they fancied it impregnable, and despised the little band of Scottish soldiers who were prowling about below the cliff. But when Randolph's thirty men had scaled the precipice and leaped the walls, they were an overmatch for a whole garrison who were asleep. The simple reason why the Englishmen did not watch that night was that they did not regard a score or two of Highlanders worth the watching. You and I, dear reader, have sometimes caught our hardest blows from the foes whom we underrated. Our Lord Himself did not underrate the adversary on the mount of temptation.

The best preventive against spiritual assault and overthrow is to keep up constantly the tone and fiber of a truly godly character by perpetually living close to God. Multitudes live as if there were no God in the broad world. They act as if the Master were away and would never return, and even Christians seem to forget that He says, "Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching." It is not only the enemy whom we are to be looking after, but our Lord Himself. I never know when He will come to inspect my work, or when He will come with the orders to drop the tools into the grave and come up higher. But a perpetually vigilant life of communion, and Word study and holy intercourse with Him will keep us ever ready for "the last call" or for His appearing. If we watch thus for Him He will be ever watching over us, and then no danger shall ever befall us. It ought to be not only a duty, but a delight to be watchful. For there are so many mercies constantly coming in sight, so many opportunities to do good, so many beautiful views of God's providence, and so many foretastes of heaven, that we lose more than we can afford to if we fall weary and lag on our homeward way. Can we "not watch with him one hour"?—Theodore Cuyler.

CHAUTAUQUA MISSION CONFERENCE.

By Mrs. L. W. Stagg.

The New York Chautauqua Mission Conference is the oldest and probably the best attended of the conferences under the auspices of the Woman's Boards. It was held this year from August 17-23, with a registration of 1,232, representing nearly every State in the Union and practically all denominations. The opening session was called to order on Sunday afternoon by Mrs. F. I. Johnson, president of the American Federated Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions, who presided at this and all the sessions throughout the conference with her usual charm and marked executive ability. With her, on the platform, were thirty-one missionaries and nationals. The address of the afternoon was made by a young woman from Persia, telling of the fineness of the Persian women when once they have seen the light. The chairman declared this to be the best address she had heard, on any subject, in many years.

The study classes were conducted by Mrs. W. T. Elmore and Mrs. C .K. Lippard, who had spent many years in India and Japan. The courses in methods were under the direction of Mrs. F. I. Johnson and Mrs. Lippard. They stressed the importance of keeping the great program of missions before the entire Church, beginning by teaching the work to the little folks with picture, song and story.

At the noon hour devotionals were conducted by noted divines. The underlying thought through them all seemed to be peace and unity.

The outstanding feature of the week was the missionary forum, led each afternoon by some of the world's great experts. This proved to be of real value, as the vital problems of the day were discussed and explained. Preceding the evening concerts and lectures, denominational groups met in the various Church homes for fellowship and a short service.

The conference closed with a prohibition rally, with representatives from many countries telling of the way mission work was being hindered by liquor, and each urged all to stand by the eighteenth amendment. One woman from Burma said, "The devil is never so pleased as when the American people stay home on election day and fail to support every dry issue."

The suggested study-books for the year are as follows: Home study—adults, "Trailing the Conquistadores"; senior, "Between the Americas"; junior, "West Indian Treasurers"; primary, "Sugar Is Sweet." Foreign study—adults, "A Cloud of Witnesses"; senior, "India on the March"; junior, "The Treasure Hunt" (for the older juniors, "The Golden Sparrow" is suggested); primary, "Pedro and the Bells."

Among the suggested pageants are "A Pageant of India," "Brother India," "A Message of the Cross," "Christian Citizenship," and a pageant that is being prepared for Christmas will be published in the November issue of Atlantic Monthly. "Larola" is a Hindu play recommended for either adults or young people. There are other books on the Carribeans and India, if the suggested ones should not meet the need of any particular group. There is a wealth of information at our own and other denominational headquarters. Have your literature superintendent order your supplies.

NEWS NOTES.

By Mrs. W. M. Jay.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Bethlehem Christian Church of Eastern Virginia are completing a most successful year and have accomplished some things worth while. While they have not increased so much in numbers, they have greatly increased in the knowledge and spirit of missions. They are especially pleased and happy that their pastor, Rev. R. E. Brittle, has been such a help and force in their work. He taught their mission study class at each meeting and then after the program and business a social was always enjoyed. It is a custom for this society to invite some society during the year to meet with them, and this year the Cypres Chapel young people were their guests.

Miss Thelma Boone is the wide-awake president of this thriving society and makes a good and efficient leader.

The Young People's Society of the Dendron Christian Church was organized last October with twenty members and have been doing a good work. This society is composed mostly of junior boys and girls, and they meet every third Sunday morning, following Sunday School. They always arrange a good program, and this makes a fine meeting for all those who can stay. Once a year they have a big social, and the work is growing and much good is being accomplished for the Church and missions. They expect to raise their quota and are pushing forward for a better year next year. Miss Jennie Barrett Spratley is the corresponding secretary of this thriving new society.

BURNING THE KITCHEN GOD.

Miss Gillard, of Shaoking, Chekiang Province, tells the following story in the Church Missionary Gleaner: "One woman said that she wanted an inquirer's card, and she took down her kitchen god, which was pasted on the brickwork of her stove, as a preliminary. Alas! before the day for receiving the card came, her husband missed the god and insisted on its being put back, and she, cowering beneath his wrath, ordered her little girl to take it from a drawer where she had placed it instead of burning it outright, and give it to her father. The kitchen god went up again, and the inquirer's card was withheld from the woman until this obstacle could be removed from the home. This was the cause of special prayer being made for that household, prayer which is being answered. A few Sundays ago the husband, who formerly had been very bigoted, carried their one-year-old baby boy to Church twice for his wife, and himself attended the services. The woman has again taken down the paper god, and burned it this time, and says that, come what may, she will never put one up again."—Ex.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There are two words that contain great lessons for Christian people. They are time and place. These two words contain lessons not only for Christians, but for all people. A mere suggestion will furnish food for thought to all who read and think. No person would think of playing tennis at a burial. The time and place both say, "not here and now." Dress at the beach and at the home suggests a difference on account of the time and place. The beach is one place and the home is another. Bathing beauties at the beach get their pictures and names in the papers, and their friends are proud of them; if they dressed and behaved in the same way in the home, the public would frown upon them.

Week days and Sundays are different, and God has fixed man's rights on those days—work six days for self; rest one day for God and others. No nation can survive that ignores the Sabbath. "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy." Even in the home and kitchen and the parlor are different places, and no mother would think of preparing dinner for company in the parlor, nor think of entertaining special company in the kitchen. The place is important in human conduct. It is even so in religious life and behaviour. Social functions do not belong to the Church. Many things are proper in society that are out of place in the Church. Boys have too much sense to play marbles in the Church. Girls would not think of playing games in the Church. The question naturally arises in the mind, why is this so well understood? It is a house, a place, dedicated to the worship of God, and that shuts out all worldly exercises and worldly pleasures. The very grounds of a Church should be considered sacred places. Place has much to do with action both social and moral.

People do many things on the beach they would not dare to do on the street at home. Different rooms in a house determine the kind of behaviour to be observed in that house. The living-room suggests one thing, the parlor another, the kitchen yet another, and the bed-room still another. People who do not respect place in their conduct have no true sense of good manners, good conduct, and good character. Not only children, but even grown people, behave different when there is company in the house; and the character of the company enters into the behaviour of all the family. If the governor or a bishop, or an educated lady, or an aged person is the guest, it changes the manner and conduct of all the household. The place is a large factor in the way of men. In the Senate chamber in Washington there is, instinctively, a sense of dignity that creeps over all who enter that great chamber; and the time has much to do with the feeling of the visitor. If the Senate is in session, there is respect that is absent if the Senate is in adjournment.

Baseball or fishing are all right on one of the six days, but wrong on Sunday. A dance may be all right at a party, but it certainly is not at a prayer-meeting. More attention should be given to time and place in the social and business world.

ELON LETTER.

Educators in the past have had various attitudes as respects their functions. As such, they have been peculiarly concerned with the mental man. We know now, however, that we cannot departmentalize experience; that we cannot speak properly of the social man, of the physical man, of the intellectual man, of the spiritual man, because in every experience the whole man is present. Consequently, educators have come to the point where they recognize the obligation to minister to the whole of life, to minister to the whole man. Consequently, departments of student welfare have become major departments in the organization of modern colleges. It would take us too far afield to enter into any detailed discussion of these new departments, the newest arrival in the educational field, but we may well rejoice that colleges have come to realize the worth of the individual student and that they are now devoting themselves whole-heartedly to methods of promoting the whole life of their students. The new method of inducting freshmen into college is one concrete evidence of this concern.

At this time, I can only write briefly as enforcing the idea of education in the service of the whole of life, of the reason for giving due emphasis to ultimate or spiritual values. In 1916 the Association of American Colleges could find small space in its ideal curriculum for any definite instruction in the field of religion. Only four semester hours were recommended for Bible instruction in the ideal college curriculum fourteen years ago by this distinguished Association of American Educators. No place at all was found in the curriculum of such a college in the judgment of these leaders for religious education. But the atmosphere and climate have changed in this brief space of time and we find today that 569 American colleges out of a total of 659 undergraduate colleges, 164 junior colleges, and 99 four-year teachers' colleges; a total of 929 institutions in all, have departments of Bible or religious education or of these two subjects in combination. We find that every State university in the Union except one provides instruction in religion either as a part of the regular course supported by public taxation or through voluntary agencies, and that the most of these institutions accredit this work toward their undergraduate degree. Why this change?

It is because educators have come to realize that the college experience should minister to the whole life, and that religion, far from being a separate department of experience, is a quality of our whole experience and that to eliminate it from the college program is to vitiate the product of higher education. Elon requires every freshman to pursue a course in religion, either Bible I or religious education I, and it does so with the conviction that religion is primary and fundamental in the development of life and in the social order, and that failure to provide for religion in the college curriculum means failure to equip those who resort to our colleges for a complete life.

We are not content here merely with instruction given in the field of religion, but the institution in all its departments is organized in such a way as to lead students to face the problems and issues of life in terms of spiritual meanings and values. Every course in the curriculum is so organized as to achieve this purpose in the experience of young persons who gather here from year to year. The social and group life of the campus is designed to promote a similar facing of life's issues in terms of spiritual values. The chapel services, the Sunday School and preaching services of the Sabbath, and the other voluntary religious meetings of the college year will be found to be helpful in this same field. We do not conceive of religion as something attached to life, but as a fundamental, an integral part of every experience.

W. A. Harper.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE LETTER.

One of the subjects that is attracting much attention at the present time is the teaching of religion in the public schools, but most American students do not regard with favor this action, and to know the reason for this, one needs but to study the theory of our government. The founders did not intend that they should be united, for if they should, one would surely dominate the other; one of them must of necessity have the precedence.

Church and State propagandists have tried to force their dogmas on our legislatures, but more often than otherwise they have met defeat. It is devoutly hoped that any effort to secure ecclesiastical domination in our government will fail utterly. The teaching of religion is a duty belonging to the home and the Church. It is neither the duty nor the responsibility of the State, but if it were, the political State is not qualified to teach religion.

We deplore the widespread irreligion of our times; good people shudder over the situation. But this condition is not to be overcome by turning the teaching of religion over to the State. This conclusion is not mere theory, for the plan has been tried and found wanting—it has ever bred disaster. Of all the evils that can befall a nation, none is worse than a union of Church and State. A legal religious domination has always worked havoc.

The claim is false that the public school denies the child a moral and religious training. The State does not give food and clothing to public school pupils, but it does not deny these things to them. It is not the prerogative of the State to provide these things; it is the office of the parents. The State does not concern itself with matters of religion, and the public school does well to confine itself to its proper sphere. Churches are ordained of God to give instruction in religious faith. Let the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule be observed and taught in the homes and Churches and religion will not die out of the lives of the children; but, on the contrary, it will flourish and be seen in their acts, and the nation will be influenced for good.

The political Church has substituted legal religion for the masses for a personal evangelism for the individual, and is sending her petitions for aid to legislative halls instead of to the throne of God. A human law should deal only with human affairs. God made all people free moral agents, and endowed each individual with the right of choice in matters of religious concern, and this sacred right should never be abridged.

The supremacy of conscience is mightier than monarches. England endeavored to fight one popedom with another. To the tyranny of the Roman pontiff she opposed the force of legal supremacy. Scotland, on the other hand, confronted the supremacy of popedom with the yet weightier principle of the supremacy of conscience. This is the only principle that can sustain the weight of civil and political as well as of religious freedom. The strongest kingdoms of the world have had to step aside and give to conscience the right of way.

The enemies of conscience may plan against it. Its votaries may be murdered or driven into exile, but conscience triumphs. William of Orange seemed to be fighting a losing battle in his struggle with the Duke of Alva and his Jesuit troops, but William was fighting for liberty of conscience, and in the end he triumphed. Alva went home to die, and today is remembered only for his cruelty; but the cause of conscience lives.

I believe in the separation of Church and State; that the religion of Jesus Christ is founded in the law of love of God, and needs no human power to support or enforce it.

FRANKLIN, VA.

The Massachusetts Bay colony was founded three hundred years ago this year, and because of the remarkable progress of this great Commonwealth during this period of years, the entire State is having a most wonderful tercentenary celebration this summer and fall. The celebration of progress began July 15th with a special escort of representatives from Plymouth, England, and visitors from other parts of the mother country. On the Boston Commons that day over 200,000 people assembled to hear the welcome address of Mayor James Curley, of Boston; Governor Frank G. Allen, of Massachusetts, and Ex-President Calvin Coolidge. Following the presentation and welcome address, the distinguished guests of England extended greetings. They were the Rt. Hon. Sir Ronald Lindsay, ambassador of Great Britain, and the Rt. Hon. Herbert Fischer, warden of New College, Oxford, England. There passed before the review stand built upon the Boston Commons fourteen well-directed bands of naval and military character. This celebration was indeed one of the most elaborate displays of pageantry, music and oratory I ever witnessed.

During the entire past month of our vacation in Boston, we beheld each day some phase of the tercentenary celebration. There were great displays of paintings centering about the landing of the Pilgrims, and there were exhibitions of progress embracing all phases of New England life. City libraries exhibited books that were written in those early days of the colony and unique relics of early puritanism were seen.

While in Boston, we supplied the pulpit and occupied the delightfully furnished parsonage of Rev. George Wolverton, of the Oak Square Methodist Church, who was away for a two months' leave of absence. The fellowship of this Church and its young people was worth much to us in stimulating us to return south and do greater things for the kingdom. One of our most delightful days in New England was on the occasion when we accompanied the great host of Epworth Leaguers of the Greater Boston Methodist Churches on their eighth annual pilgrimage to the quaint little city of Plymouth. There were 975 young people aboard the vessel, and during the day each one came into a vital fellowship with every one else. When our good ship docked at Plymouth, the great throng of young New Englanders gathered about the sacred plymouth rock, so sacred for its age and for the fact that it marked the spot on which their early forefathers knelt and offered thanks for a safe voyage across the expanseless sea.

Our stay in Boston was enriched by numerous visits to Harvard University, the homes of Longfellow, Emerson, Hawthorn and Louise Alcott. We came in contact with numbers of great poets, painters, and musicians. Wonderful inspiration came to us as we visited the quaint old King's Chapel, the Old North Church, the Old South Church, Mother Eddy's Church or the First Christian Scientist Home, and Trinity Church, so universally known as Phillips Brooks' Church.

While in Boston, we were delightfully surprised one day by the presence of Dr. Hermon Eldredge, of Dayton, Ohio, who frequently comes to Boston in the interest of the merged publication, Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty. Dr. Eldredge visited in our Boston home and delighted us with many interesting accounts of his previous experiences and travels throughout New England. It was my pleasure to be with Dr. Eldredge in the Congregational headquarters, 14 Beacon Street, and to meet a number of the men and women who are steering the great ship of Congregationalism upon its sea of missions, Christian education and publications. Truly, the Congregational people are a great brotherhood, and they exemplify a keen interest in furthering the kingdom of God by a closer union with the Christian Church. They welcome us.

CHRISTIANITY TO THE ORIENTAL MIND.

The late Count Goto, one of the outstanding leaders of Japan and one of the Japanese best known abroad, said just before his death last year:

"It is John R. Mott whom I wish to be like. He, of course, is a Christian, and I am a Buddhist, but Dr. Mott's methods and devotion to his work form my example. The Oriental mind is vague and abstract. Christianity has been presented to us in so concrete, definite and exact a form that it has been unacceptable to me. I have read the New Testament and I have sometimes wondered how Christianity came to assume its present form, and I begin to doubt whether this is its final form. Christianity, like any organized body, will, under varying conditions, take forms fit for the time and place of its work.

"I have only uttered a little of my heart to show you that I am 'almost persuaded,' and I know that in this respect I represent many of my compatriots. By a slight change in the interpretation and presentation of the teachings of Christ, you will open a wide door for the wandering sheep. I wish to know if Christianity, like so many other beliefs, will see some adjustments as the result of the impending world reconstruction. May the new age thus pave the way for the nations of the earth to come closer in faith and hope and, above all, in charity."—World Call.

A DAILY PRAYER.

(September.)

Dear Christ of God, through whom God's will is borne to earth, as everywhere so much of doubt and desperation enshroud men's minds, make of Thy Church the agency, and of its members Thy messengers, to carry afar the truth that frees and holds. Thou who gavest the Church, O Master-Friend, through its good offices supply the hunger and want of little children and drive away despair. As unemployment and widespread dearth afflict our nation, Thou who didst multiply the loaves, put into the hands of anguished parents earnings adequate to allay family suffering. Thus may Thy love entwine and enfold even to the fullness of its saving power. Amen.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS LETTER.

By Dr. M. J. W. White, Jr.

Dear Friends:

I guess you have been wondering what kind of hospital I have. It is listed as a sixty-bed hospital in the American Medical Journal, but we could easily accommodate seventy-five with the space we have. As it is, we seldom have had over twenty patients. Once we went to thirty-one since I have been here. When we first arrived, there were only two patients in the hospital. We usually have from five to fifteen in the out-patient department daily, but when these small daily averages are added up for the whole year we have from seven to eight thousand treatments.

There are several reasons why we don't have more work which we could easily handle. The main reason is strong Catholic opposition; another reason is there are two other hospitals in the same town, one being a new private hospital clinic. But if the people were educated to the hospital idea, all three would be overflowing beyond their capacity. The people still try their own native medicine until a case is serious, and generally they are too far gone when they come to us. But from my own observation, this is being eliminated through the Red Cross work in the public schools.

The past two weeks have been busier for us. I will describe briefly some of the cases. Two typhoid, two tuberculosis, one pneumonia, one liver case which died, two malaria, one intestinal worms, four obstetrical cases, one accident case which I had to bring from the mountains, a broken and dislocated elbow of a girl who fell from a cocoanut tree, a woman with infected breast caused by a tear on a barbed-wire fence; and besides this, four appendicitis cases, which required operations. A week ago two different men with hog bites, and thus our work goes on day after day.

After visiting several patients, I had just taken the long, hot ride down the mountain, and found it was still hotter in the lowlands. So while supper was being prepared I went after some ice for ice cream. When I returned to the house there was a telephone call for me from the same place I had been that afternoon, asking me to come quickly, as a friend of mine had been thrown from his horse and was seriously hurt. Giving up all hopes of ice cream, I snatched a bite to eat and started again up into the Bukidnon hills. The trip was over some very rough and dangerous road, thirty kilometers from the hospital. I sped along as fast as I dared, and twice just avoided some caraboas in the road, which would have been like hitting an elephant. But luck was with me and I was soon at the ranch where the unfortunate accident occurred.

On examination I found my friend had great pain in his neck, as he was pitched on his head in the fall. He was so serious that I stayed with him overnight. The next morning he was no better, and I did not dare to move him; so I left and told them to call me if needed. The following day I was called. On examination this time I thought there was possibly a broken neck. We put him in a plaster-of-paris cast and started a slow, torturous journey down the mountain to the hospital.

After a week's rest in the hospital, with no improvement, I decided it was not fair to the patient to go on with treatment without an X-ray picture. I had to leave my other patients and take my friend to the nearest place where there was an X-ray available; and that place was the public hospital in Cebu, which is a two-day journey by boat; also his company doctor was stationed in Cebu, so I returned to Cagayan on the next boat, leaving the patient in a hotter place and worse accommodations than at the nice hospital at Cagayan. I returned to my work with the determination to get an X-ray, if possible, and prevent any like occurrence in the future.

PORTO RICO LETTER.

By Mrs. D. P. Barrett.

On the morning of August 6th, I stopped the Blue Line bus at Aibonito. There was a special bus from Ponce to San Juan to take the evangelical people to the tenth summer conference of the evangelical workers of Porto Rico. We twenty-five passengers had a jolly trip over. We arrived in time for lunch and were welcomed at the Blanche Kellogg Institute, a Congregational school for women. Then we registered and settled comfortably in our respective rooms. At 8 o'clock the classes met and were organized; at 9 o'clock we went to the Presbyterian Church, where the opening service was given in charge of the president, Rev. Abelardo M. Diaz Morales, a Baptist minister.

Thursday morning at 8:30 we all went to the Congregational Church, where we had an impressive devotional service, followed by a Bible study in Revelation, given by Dr. J. A. McAllister, the president of the Evangelical Seminary. We then all went to our classes. The different courses offered were:

Group 1—(1) "Homeletics," taught by Revs. Huse, Archilla and Alvira; (2) "The Pupil," by Dr. Vicente Mendoza, who came from Mexico to attend and help in our conference; (3) "Methods for Primary Teachers," taught by Mrs. Inez Mendez; (4) "Methods for Junior Teachers," taught by Miss Palmira Diaz; (5) "The Church at Play," in charge of Miss Florence Latter.

Group 2—(1) "Rural Problems," taught by Revs. Bidot, Carpenter, Aran and Prof. Rosario; (2) "What is Christian Education?" taught by Dr. C. Manly Morton; (3) "Preparatory Course for Teachers," in charge of Rev. J. L. Santiago Cabrera; (4) "The Religious Education of Adolescents," taught by Dr. C. R. Wellman; (5) "How to Conduct a Church Vacation School," taught by Miss Dortha Okrueg.

Each was allowed to take two courses. I took the interesting course by Dr. Wellman, "The Religious Education of Adolescents," for credit. Dr. Wellman had arranged so that we had lectures given by prominent men of the island. One day Dr. Luis M. Morales, the doctor of the magnificent new insane asylum, talked about "The Mental Development of the Adolescent." Another day Dr. Pedro Mora Rico, a well-known dentist, spoke on "The Physical Development of the Adolescent." Lawyer Pablo Berga gave a talk on "Juvenile Delinquency." Mr. Berga is the judge of the juvenile court. This proved to be a very helpful course, and we all enjoyed it.

Another course I took was "Methods for Junior Teachers," by Miss Palmira Diaz. She gave us many helpful suggestions for work in the junior department. I attended a few of Dr. Mendoza's classes, for, being a teacher, I was interested in his course, "The Pupil." It was a privilege to hear such an eloquent teacher, one who understands children and is very much in sympathy with children of the junior age. These were the only classes I was able to attend, and they made me wish I might attend all the classes given.

On Thursday night we were privileged in hearing Dr. Mendoza tell about the history of the Protestant Church in Mexico. He was glad to tell us that the Northern and Southern Methodists working in Mexico had united and will work as one organization. The Presbyterian Church then gave a reception out in the Church-yard for all the delegates to the conference.

Friday the same program was followed. That evening, we had a vesper service on the grounds of the Blanche Kellogg Institute. At the night service we were very much impressed with the sermon, "The Countenance of Christ," given by Dr. Luis Alonzo, from Habana, Cuba. The same night, the conference choir sang the hymn to Porto Rico which Dr. Mendoza composed especially for the conference.

Saturday evening a social was given at the Blanche Kellogg Institute, but a sudden shower made all run for shelter.

Sunday morning a model Church service was conducted by Dr. Mendoza. Every one was much impressed by it. A spirit of reverence prevailed throughout the service, which was one of the best I have attended in Porto Rico. Sunday night each was allowed to attend any Church he wished in the city.

Monday night, the Hon. Emilio del Toro Cuebas, president of the Supreme Court of Porto Rico, gave a most interesting lecture at the Presbyterian Church.

Tuesday evening it rained so hard we could not have our vesper service on the steps of the Capitol, and had it in the chapel of Blanche Kellogg Institute instead. We then went to the Ateneo to hear a lecture by Dr. Luis Alonzo, "The Religious Phenomena."

Wednesday night Drs. Mendoza and Alonzo gave interesting lectures at the Municipal Theater in San Juan. The public was invited and the theater was crowded.

Thursday morning, classes ended, and in the evening we all left, feeling that our time at the conference was well spent. One thing that impressed me very much about the conference was the fellowship between all, without distinction of denomination. You did not hear the names of the denominations. We were all evangelical people.

On Tuesday, August 12th, the Congregational and Christian workers got together and had a little "get acquainted" meeting, at which each worker gave his name and where he worked. Each expressed his joy over the union of the two Churches. After the introductions, we shook hands all around and felt like we knew each other a little better after the meeting was ended.

Miss Lindsay, the principal of the Blanche Kellogg Institute and who served as hostess and dietician, made our stay there very pleasant. One day she gave a birthday party in honor of the three delegates who had birthdays during August.

This was my first summer conference, but I decided right then that I would save in order to go again next summer. The spirit of Christian fellowship throughout the conference was a great inspiration.

NOTICE.

The Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference will meet with the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., on Friday, October 24, 1930. It is earnestly desired that each society will strive to meet the requirements of the "Standard of Excellence," and make this the banner year of our work. Mrs. Ray Clarke Tillinghast, of New York City, who has just completed a trip around the world, will be the speaker and tell of her contact with the women in foreign lands.

Holman Jewel Testament

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4¼ inches x⅜ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson XII—September 21, 1930.

Jonah.

Golden Text: "Of a truth, I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth Him and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to Him."—Acts 10:34.

Lesson: Read the Book of Jonah.

Mention the Book of Jonah to the average man and he thinks of the incident of a large fish—it is usually called a whale—swallowing a man. And there are those who would make belief in this a test of orthodoxy! What a tragedy that, like a smoke screen, this detail of the book has been allowed, or made, to obscure the great and vital spiritual truths of the book. As a matter of fact, the Book of Jonah reaches a high level of spiritual truth, and is one of the most dynamic missionary books of the entire Bible.

In order to understand the book properly, it is necessary to get the background against which it was written. God had intended that His people should be a blessing to all nations, and He had patiently and persistently trained them in the way of service to others. Not the least of the schools through which He hoped to develop a regard for other peoples, and the brotherly spirit toward all races was the exile. But the Jews had come back from the exile, bigoted, narrow and hardened. They still held in contempt the peoples of other lands, whom they branded, one and all, as heathen. They were unwilling to share with others the blessings that they were enjoying. The book of Jonah was an attempt to enlarge Israel's horizon, to deepen her sympathies, to quicken her impulse to service. Looked at in this light, the book takes on new meaning and has new power.

Here, for instance, was a commission to a man to go to the heathen—and the city Ninevah stood for the most despised and the most hopeless of Israel's enemies; this commission in itself being an evidence that God not only cared for these despised heathen, but that He believed in their finer possibilities. It was because they were worth saving that he sent one of his messengers to call them to repentance. This commission in itself was a rebuke to the indifference and inactivity of the Jews.

Then there is the narrow and restricted view of the Lord which Jonah held, and which was characteristic of the Jews in general at a certain period of their religious life. Jonah thought that if he could get to Spain he would get away from the Lord—God was for him a localized deity.

The unsuspected capacity and the finer possibilities of the heathen are depicted in graphic and striking ways. The sailors on the ship—foreigners and heathen, all of them—show splendid qualities both by their turning to their gods and by their treatment of Jonah. They did not throw Jonah overboard until after they had made every effort to bring the ship to land, and then only at his insistent request.

Then there is the rather striking and, to Jonah, the disconcerting way, in which the heathen and hated people repented when the message was proclaimed. In this subtle touch, the writer suggests that when the heathen people are brought face to face with the loftier moral character of the God of Israel, they will turn to Him. The Jews looked upon them as inferior peoples, but God would have the Jews know that there was in these people unsuspected possibilities, even from the religious standpoint.

There is the petulance and the sulkiness of the prophet after Ninevah had repented. Here was depicted the attitude of the Jewish nation. There was a hardness of heart in the nation that would have manifested itself if others had been made partakers of the blessings of the religion of Israel.

Running throughout the book there is, of course, the major note of the wideness of God's mercy and the goodness of His love. He is solicitous for the wicked city—He would not leave it to its own fate until every effort had been made to save it. He is solicitous for the prophet—He gives him a second chance, and He deals tenderly and patiently with him. He is solicitous for the children, and even for the beasts of the city—even if the city itself were wicked, there are innocent children and dumb beasts which are objects of His love and mercy. Throughout the book there is evidence of the gracious and tender care of Israel's God for His creation. And in spite of Nineveh's great wickedness, God freely forgave when they repented.

The Book of Jonah needs to have a large place in our personal and Church lives. The spirit of Jonah is alive and active in the hearts of many who profess to be the children of God. There is still bigotry, pride, selfishness and exclusiveness in the minds and hearts of those who have received the blessings from a gracious Father, but who would refuse to share these blessings with others. Now, as then, the people of God need the spiritual urge which a true interpretation of the Book will give. It is simply a story form of the words of Jesus Himself, "Go ye into all the world."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Sunday, September 21, 1930.

Topic: "How to Improve Our Organization and Teamwork."

Program.

Hymn: "Give of Your Best to the Master."
Christian Endeavor pledge in unison.
Invocation.

"Use us, then, our Saviour, for whatever purpose and in whatever way Thou mayest require. Here are our poor hearts, empty vessels; fill them with Thy grace. Here are our sinful, troubled souls; quicken them and refresh them with love. Take our hearts for Thine abode; our mouths to spread abroad the glory of Thy name; our love and all our powers for the advancement of Thy believing people; and never suffer the steadfastness and confidence of our faith to abate—that so at all times we may be enabled from the heart to say, 'Jesus needs us, and we need Him.' Amen."
—Dwight L. Moody.

Scripture reading: Acts 6:1-7.
Hymn: "I am Thine, O Lord."
Talk: "The Value of an Organization."
Talk: "The Ideal Organization for Our Young People."
Discussion of "What Do You Say?" (p. 87 of Christian Endeavor Guide).
Talk: "Making Our Organization Efficient."
Hymn: "Open Mine Eyes" (sung as a prayer).
Benediction.

"To look at the light,
To keep my thought white,
To fight the great fight;
To do with my might
What is good in God's sight:
To follow Christ, the King."
—John Oxenham.

The purpose of this program is to analyze and improve the local Endeavor Society. There will necessarily be local problems to be discussed. In each case, discuss those problems in connection with the problems outlined. Have the talks carefully prepared; at least a week should be given for that preparation.

Let us look first at the value of an organization. It is obvious that we each cannot have our own way about everything. We need to work with others and consider others. Organization enables each one to be a part of the whole and gives each a task to perform. Organization gives strength. The greater the number of threads in a cord, the greater the strength of the cord. So it is in our Christian Endeavor Society. All energy and work is directed toward one purpose. No organization is stronger than its weakest link. Is your society as good as it might be? Have you done all you set out to do? If so, set your goal higher; seek new activities and service. If your society is not successful, find the weak spots. Are your officers as faithful as they might be? If not, how can they improve? Do all committees function well or are they merely figureheads? Do all individual members co-operate heartily and do everything possible to improve conditions? In a football team, the guards, tackles and backs work together; they resort to teamwork for success. Is your society a team or do you leave it all for two or three workers? "The strength of the wolf is the pack, and the strength of the pack is the wolf." To paraphrase to quotation, "Your strength is the Christian Endeavor Society and the strength of the Christian Endeavor Society is you."

Paul, in his letter to the Romans, points out the need of the Church for teamwork. There is a task for every member of the Christian Endeavor Society and the society loses if one individual fails.

In your society do you need new committees and special committees? There may be local Church work to be done. Look over your community. Do you see need for Sunday School work? Can you send out people to help struggling Sunday Schools? Are there suffering people to help? Remember that Jesus said, "First in Judea." Look well to your community and serve it as best you can. Let service be your first thought.

How can you make your organization efficient? Look to your program committee for interesting and challenging programs, but look to yourselves for presenting them well. Should the society suggest programs? How often should the program committee be changed? How shall leaders for the program be chosen?

Discuss the work of the social committee. See how social events should contribute to the Endeavor program and success.

How can the membership committee contribute to the work of the society? Shall the work of enlisting members be left with the committee alone or shall each member help?

In your local Church, can you do better work with one large society or with several smaller groups or departments? Will the smaller groups lead eventually to rival cliques? In the event that you have departments, how are members divided? Do they join the department of their choice or are they assigned to a department? Which method is better, and why?

In preparing this program, first assign the topics to several capable individuals. Then place on a blackboard or chart an outline of your local organization. Insist that the speakers be frank. If there are defects in the organization, recognize and remedy them. After the talks, call for questions, suggestions and discussions. It is hoped that the members may see where they can help to improve the society.

ON WITH CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR!

At the last session of the North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention it was observed that the work of our young people in Christian Endeavor was not getting its share of attention and emphasis. A recommendation was brought before the convention, the passage of which brought the election of a second vice-president, in charge of Christian Endeavor work in the Conference. The new member of the executive board is Miss Allie Higgins, Guilford College, N. C.

It is hoped that all Christian Endeavor workers have learned of this very important step in the encouragement of the work and that the information which may be had, together with the help which she is prepared to give, is being freely brought into your programs. This note is to call your attention to the service thus provided for you and to urge your use of it. Miss Higgins has been well trained for the position she is holding, and stands ready with much help for you. She is visiting the societies of the Conference and is speaking to them. Have you invited her to come to you?

There are several ways by which you can make her work pleasant to herself and most helpful to your society. In the first place, write her for suggestions as to programs, projects, drives, etc. Don't give up until you have used every means available to make your society the best in the Conference—and the "best" is not always the largest. Seek for quality in your programs and the enrollment will take care of itself. Secondly, when Miss Higgins writes you for information regarding the work of your society, write her at once. You may not have much good to tell her, but if she could know your problems it might mean the life of your society. Write her and tell her the story of your successes and of your failures and she will use the information to good advantage. Yes, by all means, co-operate with her, and thereby greatly assist in putting the work of the Christian Endeavor in its deserved place in the program of our Conference and Convention.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

THE STURDIER WORSHIP.

"Jehovah, the Lord, is my strength."—Hab. 3:10-19.

Certain plants bow toward the sun, following it in its course from East to West. The young and tender shoots of some trees will do the same thing. The reason for this is that the sun's rays dry up and shrivel the plant on the side exposed to them, causing that side to bend. The wind will have the same effect, while on a quiet and cloudy day the plants will remain upright.

This is all a little nature parable. There are some kinds of worship, of bowing down, which indicate weakness and deformity. That is the worship of worldly interests and powers, of money and fame and ease and pleasure. This sort of worship is like the twisting of plants to follow the heat of the sun or the drying blast of the wind.

But the influence of the Son of righteousness is very different. We worship Him, but we remain upright. The longer we worship Him and the truer our worship is, the sturdier is our spiritual fiber. "Jehovah, the Lord, is my strength." Honoring Him makes me more honorable. Yielding my ability to Him renders me abler than before. Bending before His throne forms me more symmetrical. His worship is all that I lack of beauty and strength, of wisdom and skill.

Prayer.—God of all grace and glory, fashion me in Thy own likeness. Create me according to Thy will, O Majesty Divine! Devotion to Thee is my life, and reverence of Thee is my joy. Be Thou my strength, O Jehovah. Amen.

TUESDAY.

LITTLE CREATURES, BIG EXAMPLES.

"Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise."—Prov. 6:6-11.

Scientists have long known that the ants have kept droves of "cattle"; that is, of aphids or little green lice, from which they draw a nourishing liquid in much the same way as we milk cows. Only recently, however, has it been discovered that certain ants are assigned to certain droves of aphids, which they prefer to the exclusion of all others, watching over them, driving off or killing strange ants, protecting the aphids from their natural enemies, and returning regularly to the same twig and the same aphid colony. Moreover, even though the ant herdsmen usually avoid the light, when on duty they remain patiently in the full glare of the midday sun in summer.

Prayer.—Our Father, may we learn Thy lessons in creation. May we not allow any of Thy dumb creatures to surpass us in their service. Thou hast given them to us for examples. May we serve ourselves by them as Thou dost intend. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

PROGRESS IN LESSER WARFARES.

"Let sinners be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more."—Psa. 104:26-35.

It is good news that the death rate from tuberculosis is steadily declining, and the latest figures, for 1928, are the lowest yet. The same good news is reported in regard to typhoid fever.

While science is making such definite and happy progress in the war against disease, what progress can religion report in the war against the most deadly of all diseases—sin? Are we engaged vigorously in that warfare, for others and for ourselves? Have we definite and encouraging results to report for ourselves and others? And if we have not, shall we not see to a better report for the future?

Prayer.—Great Physician of souls, we are poor followers of Thy wise plans. We care so much for our perishable bodies, so little for our deathless spirits! Help us to the abiding health of our immortal parts, for the sake of Thy kingdom. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GOD'S POSTPONEMENTS.

"Therefore will Jehovah wait, that He may be gracious unto you."—Isa. 30:8-18.

Even the most experienced doctors may well be cautious in prophesying death from even the most serious disease, for the human body is sometimes marvelously resistant to attacks, and develops unheard-of recuperative power. For example, about thirty years ago the great physician, Sir William Osler, then professor of medicine at Johns Hopkins University, examined a man who had a very grave disease of the heart, and said that he could not live six months. That man is still alive, and every year goes to the university for the students of the medical school to study in him that particular disease.

So also God may postpone the results of that most terrible of all diseases—sin. But let no one dare to vaunt himself when the punishment of his evil-doing is delayed. Let him rather be humbly grateful to God for His undeserved mercy, and let him repent, though at the eleventh hour. Like the thief on the cross, he will find the Saviour gracious.

Prayer.—Lord of all forgiveness, how dost Thou wait that Thou mayest be gracious to us! And shall we make an evil use of Thy great goodness? Shall we not rather haste to be saved? For every postponement of punishment is a new argument for repentance a new warning that its postponement may be too late. Amen.

FRIDAY.

BEYOND OUR STRENGTH.

"Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin."—Psa. 51:1-10.

The scientists have been making careful measurement of the amount of energy required to do various kinds of household work, and have found that washing clothes uses up more strength than any other household occupation. It is well that mechanical contrivances have come to the aid of the overworked housewife.

We have here a useful analogy with the soul-cleaning which all of us need. Nothing that man tries to do is so desperately hard as to purify his own spirit. It is absolutely beyond his power, and the longer he attempts it, the more discouraged he becomes.

So the psalmist cried out to God, and begged that He would do what man could not do, that He would wash His creature thoroughly from iniquity and cleanse him from sin. There is no other recourse, if one would be pure again, and this recourse never fails.

Prayer.—Oh, wash me, Lord Jesus, and I shall be whiter than snow. Bathe me in the crimson flood of Calvary, for no less potent agent can remove the fearful stains of sin. I long for purity, Lord Jesus, and Thou dost long to give it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

WHEN WE WANT LIGHTNING.

"When the disciples James and John saw this, they said, Lord, wilt Thou that we bid fire to come down from heaven, and consume them? But He turned and rebuked them."—Luke 9:46-56.

Probably John the Baptist would not have rebuked them, but would have hurled the fire. James and John were Boanerges, sons of thunder. Possibly for this very reason, James was the first of the apostles to win the crown of martyrdom. But John became the apostle of love, and died a century old. Christ was the love of God incarnate. However hostile the Samaritans might be, He would not unloose the lightning against them, or even use His whip of small cords. It was indeed to avoid inflicting this terrible punishment that He went on to another village.

Prayer.—So let us feel Thy rebuke, our Saviour, when our anger flames out against the doers of any evil. If they will not hear us, we must go elsewhere, we must not cast our pearls before swine; but is it not sufficient punishment for them that they have made themselves swine? Why should we become tigers because they are swine? Why should we hurl lightning bolts because they refuse the light? Why should we become hangmen because they have chosen death to life? Make us lovers of all men, as Thou art, because we are lovers of Thee. O King of Love. Amen.

SUNDAY.

PROMOTE THESE SCHOOLS.

"Increasing in the knowledge of God."—Col. 1:9-17.

Public-school men, and, indeed, all American patriots, are rejoicing in the prodigious growth of our high schools. The enrollment in these schools has nearly doubled every decade since 1880. That is a splendid record for secular education. How magnificent it would be if religious education paralleled it! What if our Bible schools had grown as fast as our high schools! They are the real high schools, dealing with the loftiest human interests. The education they give is for eternity. Their textbook was written by the Holy Spirit Himself. Their teachers serve without pay, but God Himself teaches through them. Their diploma is given at the judgment day, in Christ's "Well done!"

Each of us, while loyal to our noble public schools, can be increasingly loyal to the Bible schools. Let us see in them our best chance for the highest education, an education that fits us alike for time and for eternity.

Prayer.—Great Teacher, bestow on us Thy supreme wisdom, and as we are taught, help us to teach others. May Thy Book be our delight. May Thy instruction be our strength. May Thy laws be our guidance forever. Amen.

VESPERS.

I know the night is near at hand:
The mists lie low on hill and bay,
The autumn sheaves are dewless, dry;
But I have had the day.

Yes, I have had, dear Lord, the day;
When at Thy call I have the night,
Brief be the twilight as I pass
From light to dark, from dark to light.

REV. JOSEPH W. FIX, Preacher.

THE NEED OF MORAL VISION.

BY ABBOTT LAWRENCE LOWELL,

President Harvard University.

(Baccalaureate sermon delivered at Harvard College, Appleton Chapel, June 17, 1928.)

"The light of the body is the eye; if, therefore, thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light. But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If, therefore, the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness."—Matt. 6:22, 23.

Religious literature and romance are filled with examples of the choice between good and evil. The young man stands before them and deliberately makes his decision. . . . Moral earnestness is required, yet the choice is between obvious right and wrong. Such a choice would be easy. In the maze of life, however ,the conditions are much more insidious. The alternatives are by no means always a rugged but righteous road that winds upward, and a pleasant way leading surely to ultimate perdition. . . .

Conscious May Suffer Deviation.

Many of the important decisions in life are by no means evidently momentous at the time. The right and wrong of the choice may be clear, but not the seriousness of the consequences involved; because they affect not so much the outward career of the actor as his own personal character, and the result may not be manifest for a long time. . . .

Conscience may suffer deviation in various ways. One of the most common is by small concessions to one's own inclinations, known not to be right, but not thought of much consequence and self-excused at the moment. . . . Men have started in life with good intentions and ended reprobates. When the catastrophe comes in such cases, when, for example, an embezzlement is discovered, a long series of gradually increasing malversations appear, beginning with a self-pretense of borrowing money to be replaced, growing by degress more reckless and ending in desperation. All along there is a series also of excuses causing the edge of the conscious to become gradually dulled. The end was not willed from the beginning; there was no deliberate choice between honesty and a life of crime. . . .

Another common way of losing the clearness of one's moral vision is through concessions to the prevailing standards by which a man is surrounded. We often hear that business is business, and that while one should conform, of course, to the rules of business honestly, one cannot conduct business on the principle of the Golden Rule. . . . People constantly repeat that one cannot get on if he behaves very differently from everybody else; and practically that means doing a little worse. . . .

Thirty years ago we saw much of this in football games. Coaching from the side-lines, slugging, breaking of any rules when it would not be observed by the referee, were defended on the ground that the other side did the same, and more also. . . .

Faithless "Gentleman's Agreement."

At the same period, and for the same reason, similar things went on in the railroads, which were constantly making mutual agreements about rates and secretely breaking them, until the expression "a gentleman's agreement" became a synonym for faithlessness. The result was an attempt to be no more dishonest than others, but more profitably so, with the natural result of lowering the standard all around. Such a condition is not necessary for business; nor, in the long run, is it profitable. . . .

How should we keep our eye single and our vision clear? We cannot see ourselves as others see us. . . . But we can judge our own conduct and motives as we would those of another. A Boston gentleman many years ago used to say that if he was very indignant about anything, he wrote a letter with all the anger that he felt, then addressed it to himself and dropped it in the mail. When he opened it he had some perception of the way it would affect the man for whom he intended it.

To know how people would look on our conduct, or how we should look on theirs, in a similar case, is well; but it is far better to measure our duty by the highest standard of which we can conceive, to reflect how supreme righteousness would judge the question.

And mark this, that just as every instance of self-reception, every attempt to excuse conduct less than the best, tends in so far to dull the vision, so every action that is done because a clear light shows that it is the right thing to do, tends to increase that light, to sharpen the acuteness of perception between right and wrong, and thereby to strengthen character.—New York Times.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Some weeks ago our good friend, J. Edgar Long, of Graham, N. C., started a special fund by mailing us his check for ten dollars to build the water main into the Orphanage grounds. This is a fine idea, and we appreciate it. Several have taken up the idea and mailed in their checks to help swell this fund. I will give figures on this and let you know just what it will cost in the near future. If we had had water last winter when our barn was burned, we might have saved one section of the barn. The Burlington Fire Company can run up here in five minutes, and be throwing water in six minutes after they are called. So if we had a good water supply we could reduce our insurance rate and protect our property.

Our school opens Monday, and all our children are looking forward with a great deal of delight to its opening. Last year we offered prizes for different things, and quite a number received them at the end of school. This year prizes will be offered again and all will have an equal chance to win. Several medals are offered by individuals if the school children meet certain requirements. Our children have won several of these medals, too. We are always happy to have our children in the Orphanage to stand shoulder to shoulder with the other children in the community.

The children are in splendid condition as to health, and we look forward to a good year's work. Next week will be a busy week for the superintendent of the Orphanage. Books, tablets, pencils and paper for more than one hundred children. Think of it!

OXFORD, N. C.

For the past eight months I have had no way of getting Christ's message to people except through daily living. I have never devoted a great deal of time to writing to THE SUN or any other paper. However, I shall endeavor to use this method at this time. I heard the call of Christ to go into the vineyard and labor, and I obeyed, going into the vineyard and working four years, but for the past few months I have not been in the active ministry.

The little message which I wish to bring you at this time is of a missionary nature; and we will all agree that a greater interest in missions needs to be aroused in order that the missionary enterprise may be perpetuated. Most of us say we believe in missions, both home and foreign. Somehow, it is the writer's conviction that we Christian people do not pray earnestly enough, and the kind of a prayer that Christ taught us to pray.

(Matt. 6:10) "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." Christ is the Founder of the missionary enterprise on earth. As we read the life records and works of Christ, we find this to be one of the outstanding characteristics of his life and works. This thing of getting the gospel preached to all nations was a very vital factor in the life and works of Christ. If this one thing was of such vital importance to Christ that He let His last message to His disciples be directed along the missionary channel—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel"—it should also be of vital concern to all those who profess to be followers of Christ. To follow a leader, it is necessary for one to go after him in word, deed and action.

Christ prayed for the missionary enterprise on earth; He worked for it; He gave up Himself for it. Christ taught by example; this, together with the life He lived and the works He wrought on earth, makes Him the great missionary pattern and example in all missionary effort and endeavor.

Christ taught His disciples to pray—"Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done." This part of the prayer naturally divides itself into two divisions. "Thy kingdom come"—Christ is the world's true King. However, His triumph is hindered many times and in many ways. Especially is His triumph retarded when we fail to obey His command.

We are to pray for His coming. That day when He will return and we will give an account of the use that we have made of our talents. How beautiful are the lives of those men and women who strive to use what talents the Lord had given them! They preach Christ in word and deed; His light shines out through their countenance; each individual effort may seem small, but God adds them together for His glory, that His kingdom may come.

The will of God is perfectly performed in heaven. "Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven," unitedly, all people working together in one harmonious effort to "Go and preach the gospel." Perfectly, cheerfully and constantly meeting the difficulties and oppositions offered by the world and successfully thwarting them.

This is a prayer that, when answered, will change the world. The crime wave will cease. Penitentiaries will be history; robberies, murders, frauds and all forms of lawlessness will be things of the past, and there will be no more wars. (Mal. 4:3) "And He shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Strife among families and Churches will be no more. All the heathens will have had the gospel preached to them. All complaining against Providence will cease. The animal kingdom will be at peace with man and with itself.

This prayer which Christ taught his disciples to pray is a prayer which it is each person's privilege to help answer in the following ways: By doing the will of God ourselves as far as we know, by spreading a knowledge of Christ and His kingdom among our friends, by giving the gospel to those who are without it, by making it a personal matter and doing something ourselves; and last but not least, by giving time, talent and means.

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

WHY I BELIEVE. By T. E. Gouwens. Cokesbury; $1.00; pp. 147.

Dr. Gouwens, who is pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, Louisville, Ky., writes out of deep conviction as to why he believes in God, in Jesus Christ, in the Bible, in the Church, in prayer, and in immortality. The note of certainty sounded throughout is needed in a day of hesitancy such as ours. The book is especially designed for young people and is brief enough for busy ones.

SPEECH MADE BEAUTIFUL. By Helen Stockdell. Abingdon; $1.00; pp. 111.

Yesterday I heard a popular minister read the Scripture lesson over the radio. Every consonant was spoken with such distinctness that precision stood out as a peculiar charm, but he also spoke his words so musically that they rang like liquid honey. Miss Stockdell has written a book that will enable any preacher to do the same, and so few of us read effectively in this day. Singers, teachers—in fact, all who would like to use our native tongue properly—will find this book greatly to their advantage.

PSYCHOLOGY FOR TEACHERS. By D. W. LaRue. American Book Company; $1.75; pp. 318.

Psychology is here presented psychalogically. It is conceived as the science of the prediction and control of mental events. Biology and physiology are especially drawn upon. Teaching is conceived as guidance and direction of the pupil. A different psychology is due for the conception of the pupil's experience as the basis of the curriculum and of pupil-activity as central in the teaching process.

REIDSVILLE.

We have been quiet for some time, but busy. When we last reported, we were in the midst of a loyalty campaign, which closed with a meeting May 21st to June 1st. The Church requested the pastor to do the preaching. Emphasis throughout the meeting was on the need of loyalty and devotion on the part of those who make up the Church. We had large crowds throughout the meeting, and at several services the capacity of the Church was taxed. We were made to feel that the meeting was well worth our labors. Nineteen members were added to the Church, twelve of whom came upon profession of faith, and seven by letter.

The Church has had an indebtedness for several years which has given great concern at times. When the meeting closed, we began an effort to free the Church from debt. On the second Sunday in July it was a pleasure to present the trustees with notes which had stood in our way. They were happy when fire was applied to them, and the congregation stood while the notes burned, and ended the celebration by singing "Praise God, from Whom All Blessings Flow." It was a good day. We had reached our goal and had a balance on hand.

The work has held up well during the summer months. We have not moved as we might, but we have done some good. At the present we are in the midst of planning for our daily vacation Bible school, which is to begin Monday, September 1st. Miss Truitt is to be with us, and we are hoping to have a profitable time with the children of the community. Rev. F. C. Lester will preach for us on Sunday night as a starter for our school.

We are planning for a great revival which is scheduled to begin on Sunday, October 12th and continue through October 26th. Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor of First Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., is to be with us. Dr. Rowland has been with the Church before, and we are happy in the plans which bring him back. The music is to be furnished by a chorus choir composed of the members of the choirs of the city. The pastor will direct the music. We desire the prayers of the brotherhood, that we may walk with the Master in the work which He has given us to do. Join with us in praying for a great revival.

CONGRETATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CHURCHES IN THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

PERSISTENCE.

Nothing in the world can take the place of persistence. Talent will not; nothing is more common than unsuccessful men with talent. Genius will not; unrewarded genius is almost a proverb. Education will not; the world is full of educated derelicts. Persistence and determination alone are omnipotent. The slogan, "Press On," has solved and always will solve the problem of the human race.—Calvin Coolidge.

JESUS ONLY.—

At the Mount of Transfiguration, after Moses and Elias had disappeared, there remained "Jesus only" standing upon the mount. At a recent session of the Northfield General Conference, a typical address was delivered by Rev. James Reid, of Eastbourne, England, applying the message to modern conditions. There are differences; but studies in astronomy, psychology and sociology convince the modern preacher that in his own studies lies the solution of all problems and the explanation of all things. We can believe in moral values only if we believe that the universe is with us and will preserve what we do. Jesus held indisputable command over the hearts and consciences of early disciples. His standards and authority still stand unshaken. His supremely developed personality is its own interpreter, argument, justification. In the hands of Jesus is the meaning of history, the conquest of the world working through His Spirit in the hearts of men. Jesus has a cosmic significance. In Him the will of God is fully in action. The world is, therefore, working out a purpose, and one involving love, as revealed in Jesus.

HOOVER HOOVERIZES.—

Our present President has been called our busiest chief executive. He rises daily with the sun, takes recreation in the morning only fifteen minutes, with a little fishing during the season. We are told that William Howard Taft traveled most while in office, and that Calvin Coolidge took the longest summer vacations. Theodore Roosevelt was most out-of-doors, but Hoover is noted for the way he works. His normal schedule is a twelve-hour day. He is in his executive office at 8:30 each morning and seldom leaves until 6:30 to 7 in the evening. He devotes his morning hours to correspondence and interviews with the public, members of Congress, out-of-town visitors, etc. The afternoon is reserved for business of the government. Here the President's program, in Congress and out, is planned and pushed through. There are great questions of national and international import to handle, and the responsibility of the President of the United States is tremendous, and few of his critics would surpass him in executive skill and dispatch. The only reason more is not accomplished for the good of the Church and State is the lack of intelligent, persistent industry in positions of honor and trust.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING.—

The rulers of American homes spend from 20 to 47 per cent less time in accomplishing their household duties than European women, according to the recent report of the International Home Economics Association. This is due to the fact that they are experts not only in culinary arts, but also in the business of household administration. The report says that American women feel that housekeeping is a profession to be conducted along the modern line of thought, and that time in the home must be budgeted. The American woman thus accomplishes her work in a seven-day week of nine-hour days. This 63-hour week is contrasted with Europe, where in France the women work 92 to 115 hours weekly; Italy, 86 to 100 hours; Czechoslovakia, 105 to 119 hours; Sweden, 82 to 119 hours; Switzerland, 112 to 118.

According to the report and recommendations, the women who would save time in their household duties should allow one-hour division of time for flexibility; get started early in the morning; try washing dishes once a day instead of three times; eliminate waste motions; plan menus for a week or several weeks in advance; keep simple accounts; remember seasonal tasks and arrange for them in advance; plan work, not according to tradition, but according to dictates of common sense. These suggestions would work wonders in any kind of undertaking.

FRANCE FEARFUL.—

Since her troops have been withdrawn from Rhineland, France is becoming increasingly fearful about the possibility of another war with Germany. Within the last three years, an entirely new plan of national defense has been organized by the French government. They would guard the eastern front with a series of forts and the chief strength of the French army. Word has recently come to France that General Hans von Steeck, head of the German militia and that nation's most aggressive post-war militarist, has entered German politics. French patriots think that under this German general a force of trained Germans could be thrown against the 530-mile French frontier that could easily outgeneral the defenders of France. If the German elections in the fall indicate a swing to the right, then French troubles will be increased, for a reassertion of the military spirit in Germany is likely to follow. A right victory in Germany would probably result in the overthrow of Briand and his peace-loving rule and the establishment instead of a government committed to a military program to offset the rising power of Germany. It would be a great thing for the human race if Germany and France could sublimate their punistic instinct and devote to some national or international humanitarian program of religious service and moral uplift. This would constitute a worthy "substitute of war" and be a blessing to both nations and to the world at large.

SOCIAL CONSCIENCE.—

Controversy is finding a new technique. Instead of one-sided argument from rival pulpits or platforms, in partisan periodicals or pamphlets, and mutual denunciations leading to increasing misunderstanding and bitterness, those with opposite points of view are brought face to face with intelligent but open-minded listeners, and specialists who know the facts. The centuries have made some progress in making such a thing possible. One cannot help wondering what our history would have been if this technique had been used by English and Americans in the decade preceding the revolution or by the opponents and defenders of slavery in the last century. But the significant thing is that hundreds of men and women, with all the opportunities of our modern life, should devote a month of their vacation in midsummer, for four to six hours daily, to impersonal and intricate world problems. This was the case in the Tenth Institute of Politics, held at Williamstown, Mass., July 31st to August 28th. The leaders of the institute were themselves leaders of communities, institutions and denominations, who reveal a widespread concern for the condition of humanity as a whole. Nothing that is human is alien to them. The topics treated include "Analysis of Western Civilization," "Economic Progress in Europe," "Political Aspects of Aerial Navigation," "The Far Eastern Situation," "Pan-American Problems," and, affecting all, "Limitation of Armaments." These and many more momentous questions are engaging the minds of world leaders and should concern the entire population of the nations of the earth.

"A MODERN ISAIAH."—

The death of Dr. Joseph Silverman, rabbi-emeritus of Emanu-El, New York City, brought grief to many thousands of Jewish leaders. He had been enjoying "the luxury of leisure" for several years, but maintained a keen interest in all manifestations of Judaism in America. He graduated from Hebrow Union College, Cincinnati, in 1884, and the first American-born, American-trained rabbi to be called to a New York pulpit. He was a figure of national importance. He was elected to the presidency of the Central Conference of American Rabbis. In New York City he played a conspicuous part in philanthropic and educational movements then growing apace. He founded the Temple Emanu-El brotherhood; he was one of the founders of the Eastern Council of Reform Rabbis, and later of the Association of Reform Rabbis of New York and vicinity; he became known for his attacks on corruption in politics, in the social structure and in its incipience in religion. He was liberal toward other re-

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. J. W. Knight, a very faithful and beloved minister of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, passed from labor to reward at his home in Stokesdale, N. C., Wednesday, September 10th. The funeral was conducted from Mt. Bethel Church, near Stokesdale, of which Church Bro. Knight was the beloved pastor for several years. Revs. P. T. Klapp and T. J. Green, close friends of the deceased, were in charge, and the interment was in Mt. Bethel Cemetery. Bro. Knight had been in poor health for some months, up to which time he had been very active as pastor and preacher. His was a useful life, about which Bro. Klapp will write for an early issue of The Sun.

In the passing away of Captain W. H. Turrentine, Burlington, N. C., on Monday, September 8th, the Christian Church loses one of its most loyal members and his city one of its best and most useful citizens. Bro. Turrentine was ninety years of age, but up to within recent months he was always found in his pew at his Church, a ready listener and a devout worshiper. His beloved wife passed away last February, some months after they had celebrated th sixtieth anniversary of their marriage. Theirs were lives of blessings to Church, community and home, and hundreds will cheerish their memories and be inspired by their Christian virtues in the years to come.

On Saturday, September 20th, at 2 o'clock, there will be held, on the campus of Piedmont Junior College, an educational rally. Introductory speeches will be made by Rev. G. D. Hunt, Col. W. O. Walton, and Dr. Frank E. Jenkins, president of the board of trustees. The main address will be made on the subject, "Developing our Southern Anglo-Saxon Youth for Leadership in the Nation," and the speaker will be Senator J. Thomas Heflin. The public is cordially invited to attend this rally, and parking space has been provided for two thousand automobiles. Piedmont Junior College deserves the support of the Congregational and Christian Churches of this broad land of ours. It is located at one of the strategic points of the entire South. On another page in this issue will be found an article, "Piedmont Junior College—A Christian and Civic Enterprise," which will be found very informative. Read it.

Thus, Dr. Gilroy, editor of the Congregationalist and Herald of Gospel Liberty, August 21st: "Reference to our Christian friends occasions reference here to a sad and untimely incident of the pilgrimage in the serious illness of Dr. J. O. Atkinson, editor of The Christian Sun, who developed pneumonia about the time of landing and was in a hospital in London throughout the course of the meetings. Dr. Atkinson's condition had improved by the time the party arrived in London and he was planning, in care of Dr. Smith, of Norfolk, Va., to return to America. I trust that his return has been safe and his recovery complete. A similar illness of Dr. Lulu Peters, who was on the Adriatic with the party of American doctors en route to the international health conference, had a fatal ending." Thanks, Bro. Editor. The return was safe and the recovery complete, but the "sad and untimely incident" turned out to be a blessing in disguise, and joy, too, for that London hospital proved to be a retreat of recuperation and happiness, its nurses and physicians skilled and exceeding kind, the lovely flowers sent by his "Congregational friends" fragrant and lovely, and the sea voyage home a delight.

We congratulate our good friend, R. M. Rothgeb, Raleigh, N. C., on his recent appointment by Governor O. Max Gardner to the office of mechanical engineer for all State institutions of North Carolina. It is a comprehensive and responsible task to which our governor assigns Mr. Rothgeb, involving as it does, to quote the governor's words, "Plant maintenance," which comprehends the maintenance, the ordinary repairs and alternations of buildings, structures and machinery at the several institutions" of the State. "Mr. Rothgeb will first visit all State-owned institutions, get acquainted with the officers and the plants, and will then take up power plant and heating plant installation, furnace practice, and the use of fuel," etc. Mr. Rothgeb had his first practical experience in managing power plants at Elon College, and then took a course in plant and heating engineering in State College, Raleigh, N. C., from which he went to the management of the power plant at the State Hospital at Raleigh, where his genius and merit have resulted in saving thousands of dollars to the State and have now been recognized as a great asset and thus placed him in his present position of wide usefulness and great service. Our heartiest congratulations to this modest Christian gentleman, who, while serving his State well, has served his Church with no less zeal and devotion.

GEORGIA C. E. UNION.

Plans are rapidly going forward for the eighteenth annual convention of the Georgia Christian Endeavor Union, which is to be held in Augusta, Ga., October 17th to 19th. Dr. R. A. Lapsley, Jr., of Columbia, S. C., will make the opening address on Friday night. Mr. W. Roy Breg and Rev. Stanley B. Vandersall, representative of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, will both have prominent places on the program besides any number of other outstanding speakers who will be present to represent the various denominations having Christian Endeavor.

The executive committee of the State union recently held a meeting and completed plans for the convention. A registration goal of 750 has been set, and Mr. W. Edgar Raines, 705 S. F. C. Bldg., Augusta, Ga., is the convention registrar.

There will be three conference sessions of forty-five minutes each, led by competent leaders who know Christian Endeavor thoroughly. An intermediate oratorical contest will also be held under the direction of the State superintendent, Mrs. Sanford K. Bell, of Atlanta. Mrs. C. P. Huthings, Macon, Ga., State junior superintendent, will have a conference for junior superintendents and a junior demonstration will be put on before the main convention. A sunrise prayer service will be held on Sunday morning.

One of the outstanding features of the convention will be the banquet on Saturday night at which a special program is being arranged for this part of the convention, and it is planned to give a full evening for this part of the program. It is hoped to have at least 300 at this banquet, and early reports from various parts of Georgia indicate that the Endeavorers will come to Augusta en masse. All delegates will be entertained on the Harvard plan, and a society can send as many delegates as they wish.

The Augusta Endeavorers have a strong committee already at work making plans for this convention. Lawton G. Hatcher.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

MISS PRISCILLA CHASE, full-time extension worker for the Carolinas, has recovered from an operation for appendicitis and is soon to be on her vacation.

THE PASTOR-AT-LARGE, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, spent part of his vacation in Detroit, Mich., and the rest working out some problems on his field in the Carolinas.

MISS PATTIE L. COGHILL is spending the month of September as a vacation at her old home in Henderson, N. C. She will return to her work with the Florida Churches October 1st.

REV. ROBT. G. HARBUTT, of the Penney Foundation, Penney Farms, Fla., has been supplying Union Congregational Church, Jacksonville, during the summer vacation. He is now supplying Flagler Memorial Presbyterian Church, at St. Augustine.

REV. THOS. H. DERRICK, pastor of the Congregational Church at Orange City, Fla., has the sympathy of his fellow-pastors and friends in the loss of a very beloved mother. Because of this event, his return to his Church was delayed a week, and the State superintendent supplied the pulpit.

WINTER PARK, FLA.: During August this Church was supplied by Rev. A. Craig, Bowdish, of Lake Wales. Rev. C. DeW. Brower supplied the Church on September 7th. The pastor, Dr. Clarence A. Vincent, returned from his vacation at his summer home in New Hampshire on Thursday of last week.

DR. J. EDWARD KIRBYE and family have returned from Frankfort, Mich., where Dr. Kirbye conducted the summer conference for the denomination. It was successful in every way and $500 was left in the treasury for another year. The United Church, of Raleigh, gave their pastor a royal welcome at the morning service Sunday, September 7th.

THESE TIMES, when many men of brains are said to stay away from Church, it is a fine rebuttal and a striking example of loyalty to Christian ideals to note how the men of United Church, Raleigh, kept up the services of this Church throughout the summer. Many of these men and those who headed up the services of both the Sunday School and the Church are professors in North Carolina College. It can be done.

A REMARKABLE RECORD: One member, Mr. Everett W. Neville, was honored for faithful service and was presented with a valuable gift. He has not missed a single service, Sunday, prayer meeting, Sunday School, business meeting, trustee's meeting in sixteen years. During that time he has served as Church treasurer, secretary, trustees, Sunday School superintendent, and in many other ways. Not only has he not been absent from any meeting, but he has never been late at any meeting. The Church gave him a rising vote of honorable recognition.

A NEW MAP: A most useful and decidedly attractive map, showing our entire Congregational home missionary work, including Alaska, Hawaii and Porto Rico, is now available. It is printed on clay-filled cloth in five colors and is approximately 35x58 inches in size. All types of work and various racial groups are cleverly shown by means of a unique series of symbols. More and more we are realizing the value of map-making in the building of our missionary programs. This map lends itself admirably to the development of a project map showing the missionary interests of any Church. If placed in a prominent place, it will challenge continually the members of that Church to a fresh realization of the home missionary task of the denomination. The map costs $2.00 and can be secured from the Congregational Home Boards, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

WORK IN ALABAMA.

Congregational Alabama is divided into five parts, of which one is West Florida. The four Alabama associations and the West Florida Association are subsidiaries of the Alabama Congregational Conference. The State meeting is held in the fall, and in 1930 will be held jointly with the Alabama Christian Conference at Noon Day Church, near Wedowee, October 14-15. Three of the four annual meetings of the Alabama associations have been held. All of them were in the cotton country, where the cotton weed is small this year, but escaped the boll weevil and promises over half a crop and low prices. The corn in the low grounds is good, but is burned out by the drought in the higher places. The country people have their living in food without much money to spend.

They prize their religion, and in the association meetings they like much preaching. Most of the Churches have had evangelistic meetings, conducted by the pastors or by other pastors through exchange of services. Vacation Bible schools led by summer student workers have accompanied some protracted meetings.

This year the Churches have made statistical reports on wall charts at the association meetings, allowing all delegates to see how many delegates the Church sent to the association, the enrollment and average attendance of the Sunday School, the number of Sunday Schools which had the world service program and a teacher-training class; the Churches which had a daily vacation Bible school, the enrollment in any woman's organization, the local Church membership, the number of accessions by conversion and letter, losses in membership by death or letter, the pastor's salary with the amounts paid, the missionary apportionment with the amount paid, the National Council amounts paid, the improvements on the Church property, the gifts made by the Church or its auxiliaries to the community welfare. The association delegates have been much interested in these reports. Each of the three associations has been fortunate in having spirited and zealous men in its fellowship.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK.

The Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama areas have a devoted lot of summer workers. Mr. A. William Loos did excellent work at Evarts, Ky., and also at Corbin, where he supplied the Church in the absence of Rev. Ellsworth Lyon, who took a summer term in Chicago.

Mr. Arnold Slater has been pastor at Pine Knot, Ky., preaching, visiting and helping with Sunday School and Christian Endeavor work.

Mr. Floyd M. Price has been resident at Deer Lodge, Tenn., and acted as assistant to Rev. Geo. L. Day.

Miss Muriel Warren has had a Bible school at Daisy and one at East Lake, Chattanooga, and one at Mt. Tabor, near Soddy, Tenn.

Mr. George Wessling has been pastor at Ridge Top, Tenn.

Mr. Edwin E. White, at Pleasant Hill, Tenn., has had the largest program, taking as his parish a number of villages and neighborhoods west of Pleasant Hill. Miss Sallye Brodgen, who has worked in this for four summers, was assistant.

Mr. Don L. West, of Vanderbilt, has done excellent work as the organizer of vacation Bible schools.

Miss Alice Benedict helped with these until she was taken ill, after which Miss Lorena Primm took her place for a short time.

Hundreds of children with the most meager Christian instruction have been reached by the Pleasant Hill extension work.

In Alabama, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Smith have done excellent work in the Churches of the Northern and Southern Associations, and Miss Hazel Maddox in Churches of the Central Association. Mountain Creek received the greatest number of new members.

In West Florida, Mr. Sidney Davies has conducted evangelistic meetings and daily vacation Bible schools, besides doing some valuable health work.

HOME-COMING.

The first appointment filled by our beloved secretary, Dr. Bloom, on his return from England, fell at Chapel Hill, N. C. It was at the home-coming, September 7th; the sixteenth anniversary of this university city Church. Mr. Howard, the minister, was very happy in his welcome, and the people were very well pleased with the Church full of members and friends. At the morning service, the pastor-at-large, Rev. M. J. Sweet, brought greetings from all the Churches of the Southeast, and Dr. Bloom brought a vigorous and thrilling message from the International Council and old England itself. He was born near Scrooby, the birthplace of Congregationalism. Three new members were received into Church membership.

After the morning service, a picnic dinner—and a good one—was served in the parish house, which had been procured through the efforts of the ladies of the Church during the year.

In the afternoon a business meeting of the Church was held, in which reports were given by each department of the Church. Not being able to conclude all the items coming before it, the Church adjourned the business meeting to Wednesday night, September 10th.

NOTICE.

Rev. S. C. Harrell, of Durham, N. C., will assist the pastor of Liberty (Vance) Church in a series of revival meetings, beginning September 17th, lasting through Sunday, the 28th. Services each day at 3 and 7:30 P. M. The famous Higgins sisters will come on Sunday, the 21st, and remain till the close of the meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to every one who can to attend these services. We ask all Christians to pray with and for us, that we may have an old-time revival meeting, that God may speak to and through His messengers, and that both the preached word and the gospel singing may be the power of God unto salvation of many lost souls. Come, hear them. Pray daily for these services.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

VI.

Aboard S. S. Adriatic, June 20, 1930.

The sea has been more favorable and friendly today than yesterday, though it is still showing abundant white-caps and is keeping many of our number in their rooms and across the rails. Much of the distress at sea is mental. Many of us who have lived on land all our lives are just afraid that we are going to have sea-sickness, and so the sickness comes out of our fears. And this is true to life. Many of our ailments and disappointments come out of our fears. Somebody told me that Dr. C. H. Rowland, of Greensboro, preached a great sermon not long since on this very theme. His text was in Job, "And that which Job feared has come upon him." That which we most fear often comes upon us, the fear itself in many instances being the source and cause of that which befell us. Possibly that was why David said, "I will fear no evil, for Thy rod and Thy staff, they comfort me." It is far better to take comfort from our hopes than counsel from our fears. "They" say, if you will just make up your mind not to be sea-sick and convince yourself that there are no fears in that direction, you will not be sea-sick.

Our good ship certainly gave good account of herself the past twenty-four hours, carrying us in that time 396 nautical miles, every one of them over billows that rolled and bulged and battled to little effect. Since leaving New York at noon Saturday, she has carried us, to noon today (Friday), 2,281 miles and seems as vibrant with life and vigor today as when she began. She has another thousand miles ahead of her yet, and her patience and perseverance are reassuring and convince us she will land us safely all right.

It is too cool and too windy to stay on deck, and at 10 o'clock I found a group, led by Dr. Gordon, discussing "Sin." Gordon says sin is that which befuddles, clouds, obscures. It is, nevertheless, very real. The way out is to think straight, keep the mind clear and ignore it. One preacher joins in the discussion and says he seldom mentions sin in his Church, does not want his people to think on sin, but keep their minds clear by thinking on the good and wholesome things. A negro woman from away down South somewhere gets into the discussion by declaring that the only way out of sin is "repentance," and the only one who can save us from sin is Jesus the Christ. "Repent, repent, repent," was the message of John and of Jesus and of Paul, and whether you preachers mention sin in your Churches or not, your members are up against sin and its problems, and they should be told often and emphatically the way of escape from sin. Sin may befuddle the mind, but it also determines morals and destroys the soul, unless there is repentance and forgiveness." Believe me, that old negro woman told those theologians a few things they ought to know. She seemed to have more real theology than all the intelligentia who were trying to handle sin with kid gloves on.

Our company at table (Coffin, Helfenstein, Denison, Smith) are quite diverse in type and temperament. Coffin is idealistic, chaste in diction, quick at repartee, and incisive. He and Helfenstein were brought up in the same community out in Iowa, but it would be difficult to find two men whose mental make-up differs so widely. Helfenstein is a realist, given extremely to fineness and detail, and expects you to follow his logic and accept his conclusions. Coffin's mind is synthetic, sees things in the large and completed; Helfenstein's is analytic and sees the whole only in its parts. And then Smith and Denison. Smith is intuitive, quick at conclusions, decided in his opinions, ready at all times to give and defend his position on any question, but always tolerant of others and as ready to listen as to speak. Denison is methodical, serious, studious, stoical. His joy comes out of serious pursuits, discussions and attitudes. This is the first vacation he has had in so long that he is taking it seriously and wondering what effect it is going to have on him and the affairs committed to him. At table Helfenstein leads off in talk and pronounces; Smith follows, and usually differs with emphasis; Denison punctures with serious, sober, mathematical precision; Coffin concludes with sublime and comprehensive idealism and keeps you glad all the time that you are a member of the group and can listen. (If this diary ever does get into print, the writer of it wonders what those four fine men will think of a fellow who sat by their side and then "sneaked" off to his room and wrote down, in hurried pencil-sketch, what he had heard and his impressions!)

Dr. Fred B. Smith talked at 11 A. M. today, in a great address, on "The Church of Tomorrow." The Church will be different. It is, under the fire of its critics, constantly coming to be different. The old order must give way. This, however, is only a matter of machinery and baggage. The evangelic note will be struck, and must be struck with reverend emphasis. The Church is the chosen channel of God, through which He is finding His way into the lives and hearts of men, and all the evils of earth cannot prevail against it.

Many pleasant acquaintances are made and faces become familiar in a few days. For nine or ten days your ship is your world. After all, wherever one goes, whatever one does, folks, just human beings, are the most interesting, or the most depressing, things one runs up with. This big ship is interesting, but the folks who built it and the men who man and steer it give it life and vigor and voyage. The sea is big and boundless and beautiful; but men have made vessels without which one could not traverse and explore it. God made man just a little lower than the angels, and then gave him the personality and the power of dominion. The good people about us largely make us what we are. J. O. A.

RESTING NOW.

She had lived out her four-score years and more, had Mrs. M. J. Lee, of Town Point, in lower parish, Nansemond County, Va.; lived them, every day of those eighty years and two months, in suchwise as to crowd time itself with willing and weighty deeds of love and loyalty and unselfishness. It is given to but few, by native endowment, to live such a balanced and bountiful and beautiful life as she lived.

On the morning of her burial, the writer said to her pastor, Dr. I. W. Johnson, "Doctor, today you bury one of your most loyal and liberal members, as well as one of your best friends and most faithful Christians." "Yes," replied her pastor; "she not only had the virtues and graces of the religion she lived, but she had the sense to know how to handle and direct her religion."

All who knew her will get the force and agree with the wisdom of her pastor in that observation. Hers was a balanced life, one fraught with all the joy that pure piety could bestow, and yet directed by all the grace and graciousness that marked wisdom and discretion could confer.

Every institution and enterprise of her Church laid prior claims to her loyalty and liberality. She loved them all—the college, the orphanage, every phase of missionary work, her Church paper, and the entire ministry of the Church. Any and every minister in the Church had ready and royal welcome and entertainment in her home. While her late, lamented husband lived, W. J. Lee of sacred memory, and to the day of her departure, eleven years after his going, every preacher and person working to build up the kingdom of God on earth was of immediate interest in that home, and found there sympathetic hearing and liberal encouragement. She loved the Church of the living God, as did her devoted husband in his day, and to it gave her profoundest devotion and deepest loyalty. And she loved her friends, who were legion.

It was a large and liberal house in which she lived. Two had built it, but it was, with its three stories, ample rooms and large spaces, never built for two. Hospitality was dispensed there with regal and right willing hand, and often every room in that large house was taken by guests and friends and loved ones who came to visit and to tarry there. If our earthly home is an earnest of the heavenly, then truly she was well prepared to enjoy a place in that home above, that house eternal and in the heavens.

Truly, one does not know how to write with steady hand about a life like hers. That of hers was a life that one cannot describe or portray any more than one can portray love itself or the majesty of mountains, or the splendor of glorious sunsets. This much, however, one is certain of: there are hundreds of lives happier and better today because of the life she lived and the love she revealed to all who knew her, and the triumphant death she died.

The week itself was dying. It was late Saturday evening, September 6th. It had been a long, laborious, trying week. Again and again the worn one had said, "I am so tired." Her weary body was worn with toil and trying and triumph. As the writer looked upon her peaceful, though cold, face a few hours later, that Scripture came to him as never before, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord . . . for they do rest." J. O. A.

OUGHT WE TO DISTINGUISH?

The Christian Century of August 27, 1930, carried a most thought-provoking article by Chas. Stafford Brown, under the title, "Juggling the Missionary Dollar." The facts and the argument contained in the article are so pertinent and so frankly stated that they deserve a reading and consideration on the part of all those who are vitally interested in the missionary enterprise. If one does not have the Christian Century at hand, it is worth taking the trouble of securing and reading the article.

The line of argument as set forth is briefly this, that in raising money for missions the appeal is mainly in the light of the needs and services to be rendered on the foreign field, and that money thus contributed is divided between the home and the foreign field, with the home field frequently receiving the larger portion of the contributions. Mr. Brown is a Congregationalist, and writes from the situation as it maintains in his own denomination. He argues further that, of the money thus spent on the home field, much of it goes to support, or help support, Churches that have been established for years in centers that are adequately if not overchurched. The result is that the money, instead of being used for the spread of the gospel, goes for the fostering of a competing denominationalism.

It seems that Mr. Brown has stated the case in as extreme a light as the situation will warrant. It may even be that the picture is overdrawn. No facts are given as to what other denominations follow the same course in the raising and disbursing of money for missions; but the article is a strong plea for denominational co-operation among all Protestants in meeting the challenge of the mission call.

Of course, no reprehensible motives are to be attributed to any one for the situation as it now exists. There was time when givers to Church budgets drew too hard and fast a distinction between home and foreign mission work, with the foreign work the looser. There were those who were perfectly willing to give to carry the gospel to those of their own class and kind, according to their thinking. But they were not willing to give to carry the gospel to those of other races and nationalities. In fact, it is not possible to draw a line and say that here home missions end and foreign missions begin. Nor do the Scriptures make any such distinction.

The day, however, has come when denominationalism is not in the favor which it once enjoyed. Many thinking people are beginning to see that denominational interests and kingdom interests do sometimes diverge. There is a real difference between giving money to preach the gospel where it is not known, and building Churches where there are no Churches, and giving money to build Churches of our own denomination in the large centers of population which will compare favorably with the Churches of other denominations.

The point is not that both are not worthy, but that they are different. If both are to be supported, let the appeal be made in the light of their respective claims and the money thus given be spent accordingly. This seems to be the burden of Mr. Brown's contention, and we feel that it raises an issue that should have the consideration of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. S. C. H.

EDUCATION.

Education is the development and direction of natural powers. No school for animals would think of training a mule for the race course or a bull-dog for bird hunting. Too many schools and individuals look out into the world to find a place for life-work instead of looking into the individual for the natural gifts. It is more important to develop natural powers than to hold up ideals in the field of education. If schools would use such studies as would develop natural powers instead of giving ready-made courses in the field of human activities, students would make fewer mistakes in choosing their occupations or professions. The school, in addition to giving such studies as will develop natural powers, should endeavor to discover the special gift of the student and then encourage the student to follow that line of life service. The special gift, if any exists, will show itself in the course of growth and education. One thing is important in education, and that is not to lead students into lines for which they have no talent.

The schools are inclined to hold up ideals before students and encourage them to aspire to and prepare for high positions in society. Since education has become so universal through the public schools, it is impossible for all students to fill high positions. The majority of the human race must occupy humble positions and do common work. One reason for this mistake is the fact that so many teachers have had little experience in the real struggle of life. The promise of position and larger pay persuades young people to aspire to and strive after high positions and large salaries. Education is not a matter of position and salary, but a matter of finding and filling the position for which the individual was born. The lowest position may be as important as the highest position. The track man is as essential to the safe and successful operation of a railroad as the conductor of the passenger train. Men and women who have false education look down upon manuel work as menial service, and they aspire to something higher. Bottom work is as necessary and important as top work. A good housekeeper deserves as much respect as a member of Congress. In fact, she is the mother of the nation and the feeder of its inhabitants. The bakeries and laundries of the great cities learned their lesson from women in the kitchen and at the washtub. There is no low place in honest work and service.

Human society is learning its lesson, and distinctions because of money and position are losing their importance. The main thing in this age is education and behavior. A lawyer and a mechanic can now associate on equal ground as citizens and members of society. The exceptions do not disprove the rule. The greatest being that ever lived occupied the lowest position ever filled. Jesus made all things, was God manifest in the flesh, and yet He became servant of all, died for His enemies, and established a Church to save the world. Education that qualifies to serve faithfully, willingly and successfully in the lowest spheres is true education, and if natural gifts fit men for higher positions, then they should accept service at the top. HOME-COMING ADDRESS.

Following is the home-coming address delivered at Berea Church, Norfolk, Sunday, September 7, 1930:

To the Members and Co-workers of this Dear Church:

I have been called upon by our pastor, Bro. J. F. Morgan, to tell you something about this Church fifty years ago. In the morning papers you see each day cartoons entitled "Believe It or Not." So in a few minutes I will tell you things about the history of this Church, some you may believe and some you may not.

In 1840 there was a band of God's servants who came together for the purpose of building a house of worship. They sought the aid of Mr. William R. Hanbury, who was a well-wisher with a generous heart. He gave the land on which to build. After the land was surveyed and the deed recorded, they went to work to get material. In those days there were no saw-mills, so all of the lumber was hewn and sawed by hand.

In 1852 the house was completed. In 1853 it was dedicated, a Methodist Protestant Church. The text used on dedication day is found in the Book of 2 Kings, 6th chapter, and last clause of 6th verse. The words are, "And the Iron Did Swim." I think it is a text that has been reviewed many times. During the war between the North and South, this dear old Church was badly abused by the Northern soldiers. The windows were broken and some carried away; most of the pews were taken out, the doors were full of bullet holes. I'll tell you it didn't look like it does now.

After the war ended, there was a man by the name of Captain Jett, who wanted to buy it to use for a store in which to sell whiskey. Then it was that one good servant of God, by the name of Absalom Onley, came along and by his efforts saved the Church from being sold. He went to the judge of the county court for advice. The judge told him that if he had six members it could not be sold; so the six members went with him to the judge. They were Absalom Onley, Henry Stallings, William Bland, Edmond Curling, Wesley Hall, and Mrs. Portlock. "And the iron did swim" again, I'm glad to say, and it has continued from that day to this.

Now the Church began to grow rapidly. First, it was a Methodist Protestant; then it became Berea Christian Church. The first pastor of our new Church was named Charlie Pettitt. As I was only a small boy, I don't know how long he served. Next was Mr. Jennings, followed by Mr. McGee. During this time there was not much improvement in the Church. The next pastor was Rev. J. W. Manning. Then improvements began. The members came together and started to work to replace the pews that had been carried away. They put in window-lights and bought new windows to replace those that were taken out. After the stay of Mr. Manning came Rev. R. C. Tuck, who served for a good while. The members became more active and the work of improvement began to be of more interest. The work was not so hard, as every one seemed to want to help beautify the Church. It was not then as it is at present. After R. C. Tuck, (if I'm not mistaken) came Rev. H. H. Butler, a young man. He stayed with us for a good while, and was loved by every one who met him. Through him the membership increased greatly. During his pastorate he was married, later resigning and going to Suffolk.

I will tell you the names of those who served the Church after H. H. Butler. They are Revs. J. T. Kitchen, W. S. Long, Pressley Barrett, J. W. Harrell, and H. E. Rountree.

During Mr. Rountree's stay we got busy and beautified the Church as you see it today. So I can but say to all who are present, "And the iron did swim," and I hope will continue as the days come and go. M. W. HALL.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Funerals are the most magnetic occasions in human society. The only time when scattered families are brought together is when some member of the family dies and is buried. The more important the person, the more sympathetically the members come together. Death and funerals keep alive family ties and write family histories. This great truth had a fine example at Berea Christian Church, Driver, Va., on September 8, 1930, when Mrs. Mary Jennet Lee, relict of Willis J. Lee, who died May 20, 1919, and his funeral services were conducted from the same Berea Church.

Mrs. Mary Jennet Lee was the daughter of William Henry Jones, and her mother's maiden name was Miss Jennet Copeland. Mrs. Lee was born June 2, 1850, and died September 6, 1930, at the age of 80 years, 4 months, and 4 days. Mrs. Lee's mother died the day she was born and left her one day old. Her brother, Benjamin Franklin Jones, was born September 11, 1845, and died several years before Mrs. Lee.

After her mother's death, her father married her sister, and she was the mother of five children—Samosa Adelia, Thomas A., Susanna, William Henry, Jr., and Robert E. These were half-brothers and sisters to Mrs. Lee, and all passed away before her except Adelia, who is Mrs. Williamson, and T. A. Jones, of Bennett's Creek. The Jones family was large and honorable, and one incident in the life of her father may suggest the background for Mrs. Lee's remarkable character and generous life in the support of the Church and its enterprises. Her father embarked in mercantile business as a young man in the historic Holy Neck district, but was not succsesful; left the neighborhood in debt, and went to Georgia and engaged in the turpentine business with Captain Patrick Henry Lee and was successful. He returned to Holy Neck and paid all his creditors and the full interest on all of his debts. That gives the key to unlock the door into the Jones family. Mrs. Lee had a college education which was not common in her girlhood days. On her mother's side she inherited the quiet and peaceable habits of the Society of Friends.

On May 25, 1869, she was married to Willis J. Lee, son of Captain Patrick Henry Lee, of Holy Neck, by Rev. Dr. William B. Wellons, so noble in character, so wonderful as a preacher, and such a peerless leader in the Christian Church. They lived happily and successfully together on the Town Point farm on the Nansemond river, until her husband was called to his reward on May 20, 1919. They had no children of their own, but they spent their love, their service, and their means on relatives who proved worthy of their help. Her life since his departure has been the continuance of their united faithful service and liberal contributions.

Russell Bradford, Norfolk attorney, and his wife, who was Jennie Willis, daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. O. Atkinson, whose maiden name was Emma Williamson, niece of Mrs. Lee, have lived with her in the sweetest companionship and service. The home on the river is the finest in location and equipment of any in the county, but they have both gone to a finer home, "a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens" (2 Cor. 5:1).

Mrs. Lee was a Chirstian in the home, a friend in society, a pillow in the Berea Church, and a light in the dark experiences of life.

The funeral services were held in Berea Christian Church, Driver, Va., on Monday, September 8th, conducted by her pastor, Rev. Dr. I. W. Johnson; Rev. Dr. N. G. Newman, a former pastor, and Rev. W. W. Staley, a personal friend. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. West sang "Through the Gates of Gold," and Mrs. Clarence Harrell, Mr. W. W. Ballard and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. West sang "Abide With Me." The floral tributes were many and beautiful, the congregation composed of a large body of relatives and sympathizing friends filled the Church in quiet reverence, and interment was made by her husband in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Suffolk, Va.

ELON LETTER.

The principles upon which Christianity is founded are eternally true. They are subject to individual and social interpretation, and these two types of interpretation vary according to the temporal situation in which we happen to find ourselves. Every individual Christian has the right to interpret these eternal principles according to his own best judgment and understanding, and he has the further right to undertake to persuade other persons of the sanity of his convictions. But neither the individual nor the social group has the right to say with finality that its convictions represent the opinion of the Church. The primary duty of the Church is to produce good men, and these good men, as individuals or as social groups, may exercise the right of applying the principles of Christianity to particular situations, and their fellows will accord such confidence to their conclusions as their character warrants.

The early Church did not have a social program for two reasons. In the first instance, the Church was not socially strong enough to exercise a reformatory influence over the social order; and, in the second place, the speedy expectation of the return of Christ made it seem unnecessary to the early Church to be too much concerned about improving social conditions.

The Catholic Church did not have a social program because it recognized a double standard of life. The high standard, according to the Catholic Church, was found in the type of person who withdrew from the world and lived an ascetic life, which was specially approved by God. Concessions had to be made to those who elected to live the other type of life, on the ground that in the present world we cannot be expected to attain perfection.

The Protestant Church came into being with two ideals in mind. The first of these was the right of the individual to interpret the Christian way of life as the Holy Spirit gave him understanding. The second principle was the passive acceptance of the State as not subject to the moral law. The confusion that has resulted from this second principle of Protestantism is as serious a matter for Christianity today, when nationalism has become the chief opponent of Christianity, as the multiplicity of sects which naturally resulted from the foundational teaching of Luther that individual men or groups of men had the right to interpret the Scriptures as it was given them to understand them.

In our day, we need clarity of thinking in regard to Christian principles, and particularly with reference to the function of the Church. The Catholic Church has been consistent through the centuries, maintaining its right to control the thinking of its members and to interpret to them the mind of Christ with reference to any issue. We find a group in the Protestant Church who take a similar view, and are ready to submit matters of conscience to majority vote, forgetting that matters of right, fact, and truth can never be determined by a majority vote. We need to regard the Church as an institution designed to produce good men, but not to make itself a force in political and social matters as such.

Christianity has been rejected by two types of people—by those who understand it and by those who do not. Those who understand Christianity have oftentimes found it not conforming to their pet theory or underlying philosophy of life, and so they have rejected it. Those who have not understood it, look upon it as an impossible theory of life, incapable of practical utilization in the present world, beautiful but useless. We can understand this situation if we will stop to think just what Christianity is. It has been very aptly described as "revolutionary idealism." Conservatives reject it because it is revolutionary, and revolutionists reject it because it looks to the gradual improvement of the social order, being founded upon idealistic principles.

Abraham Lincoln was by a great many considered as outside the Christian pale. But he had a firm grasp on the place of God in the world which all of us would do well to emulate. During his first administration, when things were dark for the Federal forces, a group of religious enthusiasts called upon him and urged him to join them in prayer, that God would come to their side. Mr. Lincoln refused, but stated he would be glad, on the other hand, to join them in praying that God would so move them that they might get on His side. Abraham Lincoln did not believe in the supremacy of human rights. He believed in the pre-eminence of divine leadership, and was willing to be led anywhere if he could be sure that God was leading him. Some of us who have tried to put God to the test in furthering our own plans and programs, would do well to incorporate into our procedure in the future the reverent attitude of this great man who could not find any Church which he thought expressed the mind and purpose of his Master.

PIEDMONT JUNIOR COLLEGE—A CHRISTIAN AND CIVIC ENTERPRISE.

I. What Has It Now?

1. It has a very important field. It is in the center of over one hundred consolidated high schools, with between three and four thousand graduates yearly, increasing in number each year, from which will come to it a large number of students who would otherwise have little chance for any further education.

2. It has a fine campus of some forty acres, well adapted to all campus needs and with great possibilities of becoming one of the beauty spots of this great region.

3. It has a dormitory which, with the help of a new heating plant, will take good care of over sixty students. There is available, at a very small rental, another building that will care for as many more.

4. It has a large and beautiful administration building, nearly completed, with office rooms, a large auditorium, library and plenty of recitation and laboratory rooms.

5. Its present property is well worth $150,000.

6. It has a board of trustees which is determined to develop here in this region a college that shall give an opportunity for an education of a high order to every aspiring boy and girl in this region; to give an opportunity through extension courses throughout this region to aspiring adults who wish to add to the education they already have and to increase their efficiency, socially and financially; and to send out from this region far and wide trained workers for the best things in life and for the best kinds of prosperity.

II. What is It Planning to Do?

1. To place it in scholarship at the forefront of all the junior colleges in the South.

2. To furnish an opportunity the coming year to 150 earnest young people from the graduates of the surrounding high schools; and to increase this as rapidly as possible to 400.

3. To maintain an all-embracing Christian spirit that shall co-operate with high scholarship in developing and training Christian leaders for our Churches, the South and the nation.

4. To send its most promising graduates on to other colleges for their last two years of college training, until the time shall come when it will be advisable to change the institution into a high-standard, four-year college.

5. To connect up with a special movement for adult education in the South by having in the near future not only a resident faculty for the work done at Wadley, but a field faculty also that shall organize in various centers in this region extension classes with college credits, when so earned, as well as classes for general educational needs below college and various kinds of technical training to increase the financial efficiency of those who will take advantage of these classes.

III. What Has Been Voted to Carry Out These Plans?

1. The raising of $25,000 yearly for budget to be added to all payments by students.

2. The raising of $35,000 to complete and equip its buildings and grounds and to clear it of all indebtedness.

3. The raising of $500,000 for permanent endowment. With this rally an organized campaign will begin to secure the above amounts from this region and extending as widely as necessary throughout the South and even into the North, if the full amount is not secured without it. The board of trustees of Piedmont Junior College and its friends are determined that it shall be a junior college without a superior in the whole South. To this end they will spare no effort, and the president of its board of trustees, who has raised over a million dollars for Piedmont Senior College and about a million dollars for other Southern institutions, begins with this rally to devote himself to the work of securing the above amounts.

HINES CHAPEL.

On August 17th we closed a two weeks' revival meeting. The good Lord wonderfully blessed us with a good, old-time revival, and many shouts were heard during the meeting. Our Church as a whole was greatly revived, and many testified that they were more determined than ever to do more for the Master.

Our Sunday School is doing a great work under the leadership of Mr. Lester Smith. We are having the largest attendance since the meeting than we have had this year. There is a great interest being taken in the work, and we hope to reach two hundred by Conference.

Thursday night, August 21st, we met at the Church and organized a Christian Endeavor Society, with thirty-two charter members and about fifteen more have joined since we organized. Mr. M. L. McNeal is president; Miss May Lowe, vice-president; Miss Vergie Forbes, secretary; Mr. Malcome McNeal, treasure; Miss Sallie Stewart, corresponding secretary; sunshine committee: Mrs. Vannie Anderson, Mrs. Roland Isley, Mr. Garland Wyrick; lookout committee: Miss Annie Isley, Miss Alma Lowe, Mr. John Cole; social committee: Miss Jennie Madkins, Miss Ruby Lowe, Mr. Devo Apple.

Our young people are taking a great interest in work, and we feel they will be a great help to us in our work for the Master. We have enjoyed serving these good people for the past year, and since they have called us for another year we hope to do a greater work than we have this year.

GIBSONVILLE.

The Gibsonville meeting continued for seven weeks every night. This meeting sprang out of our federation. The question, "What is the matter with the Church of today, so indifferent, such ease in Zion? What has become of her powers," etc. These questions arose and were discussed freely; and another question arose, "What shall we do?" We entered into a covenant, eight or ten of us, to pray for an old-time Pentecostal revival. This praying covenant band met in the cottage campus, in the open on the lawn for two weeks. We invited no one, but the influence of this meeting was felt so much that the people first came flocking to us until a great revival broke out and many professed faith in Christ.

Many were reclaimed, many were blessed. It was a meeting of great joy. Some were healed of their afflictions. We give God all the glory, to whom it belongs. The meeting was led by the writer, sometimes preaching, exhorting, pleading, etc., till many professed to be saved. In some respects it was one of the best meetings we ever witnessed. A number of very old people were reached; some homes where there was not a Christian in them invited us to hold a meeting in their houses, and some of them would get saved. God is not confined to Churches nor temples, but can be found anywhere. We really want Him.

His and yours, saved to serve.

A DAILY PRAYER.

(September.)

Dear Christ of God, through whom God's will is borne to earth, as everywhere so much of doubt and desperation enshroud men's minds, make of Thy Church the agency, and of its members Thy messengers, to carry afar the truth that frees and holds. Thou who gavest the Church, O Master-Friend, through its good offices supply the hunger and want of little children and drive away despair. As unemployment and widespread dearth afflict our nation, Thou who didst multiply the loaves, put into the hands of anguished parents earnings adequate to allay family suffering. Thus may Thy love entwine and enfold even to the fullness of its saving power. Amen.

TWO PRAYERS.

About thirty years ago a ten-year-old girl used to pray the following prayer:

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.
God bless Mother and Father,
Howard and Wallace (two brothers),
Timothy and Johnny (two cats).
Please give me a piano, a watch and a bicycle.
Amen."

The following sentiments have been expressed by two twelve-year-old boys in their prayers during the past week and are typical of the prayers they have been praying for the past two years:

"Dear Father, we thank you for all the wonderful things in the world, and we pray that where people don't have the things that we do, that they may. We pray that all over the world people may have Christian advantages and may have better homes and good schools and Churches. We thank you for the Boy Scout troop in our Church. May it help the boys to live better lives; and not only in our own Church, but all over the world may boys have Scout troops.

"Help poor people to earn more money and have better things. Where people live in crowded tenements, help them to get better homes. May they have a chance to get out and enjoy the country. We pray that hungry people may get food.

"We pray that the bootleggers may be put out of business and that there won't be so many robbers. We pray that King George and Grandma will get well. Help China to get a better government, and may all the governments around the world get better. We pray that there won't be any more wars. We pray that bull fights in Spain will stop, and that there won't be any more prize fights in our own country. We pray that people won't worship idols any more, but that they will become good Christians. Please help me to be a good boy tomorrow. Amen."

What a difference in these two prayers! And yet the girl who prayed the first prayer was brought up in a Christian home. Missionary magazines were always in the home, but they were not of interest to children. Her father gave generously for missionary work. She attended Sunday School regularly, but there was no program of missionary education in the Sunday School and not a "giving" one. She had no interest in children around the world because she didn't know about them. Naturally her prayer was a narrow, selfish one.

The second prayer is an expression of world interest and world friendship that boys have had from early childhood. Part of this training has come from the Sunday School, but most of it has been gained in the home. They have no feelings of racial superiority and have always been taught to appreciate the splendid capacities and achievements of all races. While they have been taught the needs of people around the world, there have been no feelings of patronage and condescension in their attitude as they have been led to help others.

Such words as "nigger," "wop" and ch'nk," etc., have never been a part of their vocabularies. They have been taught good things about other peoples, for when children know only unfavorable things about others they are apt to pity them; but when they know good things, friendly feelings will be spontaneous.

World friendship is one of the greatest needs of the day. We need to train our children to feel friendly towards people all around the world. Let us keep these ideals in mind as we teach our children to pray. Then truly the time will come when—

"In Christ there is no East or West;
In Him no North nor South:
But one great fellowship of love
Throughout the whole wide earth."

WORLD OPEN TO CHRISTIANITY.

Never were the doors of entry into other lands so wide open to Christianity as at present, Dr. John R. Mott told the evangelism group of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which met at East Northfield in June. Having recently returned from a trip around the world, Dr. Mott told of the spirit of inquiry which was creating conditions ripe for the message of Christ. Even the Mohammedan world is open to evangelization, he said.

Dr. Mott gave a most encouraging outline of conditions in other countries from the point of view of the Christian work. As an illustration, he told of the resolve of Mr. Chang Singyee, speaking in behalf of the native Church of China, that within five years the Christian Church of China was to be doubled, and this in the face of the cataclysmic conditions prevailing in China now. In India, Dr. Mott said, Christianity is on the threshold of a most far-reaching influence.

"I have never been so impressed before by the tide of inquiry that is sweeping over all countries," Dr. Mott said. "We in America think there is a flood of literature abroad, but we have nothing in comparison with other lands. Tokyo, for example, has miles of bookshops. The press is reaching millions today that never knew anything beyond the borders of their own little communities only a few years ago. All this means that the doors of opportunity for Christ are equally wide open. The barriers of age-old custom and prejudice against the foreigner are now down. Faith and expectation on the part of the Christian Church are all that is necesary for the evangelization of the world."—Missionary Review.

CHRISTIANITY IN JAPAN.

At a meeting in Tokyo, the seventieth anniversary of the coming of Christianity to Japan was recently observed. Some sixteen veterans, Japanese, English and American, who had put in fifty years of work in Japan, were the recipients of suitable gifts, the senior member being Mrs. Agnes Gordon, of the American Board, who first went to Japan in 1872.

Dr. William A. Axling, of the National Christian Council in Japan, to whom we are indebted for these facts, points out how fitting it was that practically the first meeting in the new city hall should be one to mark the seventieth anniversary of the coming again to Japan of what it is admitted by all alike to be one of the forces which have made a definite and valuable contribution to the national life, namely: the Christian religion.

"It is hard to realize," he says, "as one looks on the Japanese Church today, led by Japanese leaders, largely financed by Japanese money, that it was only a matter of seventy years ago; yet it was two generations back when such Christians as existed had to conceal their beliefs, when notice boards were to be seen on all hands forbidding the 'Evil Sect,' and when many of those who dared to confess their faith had to pay for their temerity by imprisonment and other forms of official persecution.

"In this big meeting in Tokyo a few days ago, to mark the celebration of the coming again of Christianity, letters of congratulation were read from the minister of education, the governor and mayor of Tokyo and from many others in high position."—Missionary Herald.

LAYMEN'S MOVEMENT.

The International Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement met in Chicago on June 18th to review its work during the past year and to determine its program for the year ahead. Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer, secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Board of Foreign Missions, was the guest of honor. President John C. Acheson, of St. Paul, Minn., chairman of the executive and former vice-moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, presided.

The report points out that the Laymen's Missionary Movement creates among laymen a consciousness of their personal relation to and responsibility for the world mission of Christianity. The existence of so many women's missionary organizations among all communions and denominations greatly accentuates the need for a missionary movement among men. It is gratifying to learn that the laymen who have been identified with this movement during the past twenty years or more did not find themselves called upon to effect a new organization, but adapted their program so admirably to the present situation that it has been enthusiastically received by both ministers and laymen in every section of the United States.

The report reviews the present missionary situation, faces the difficulties, outlines its task, recommends remedies for overcoming the present problems, and shows how effectively the movement has functioned during the past year.—Missionary Review of the World.

NEWS NOTES.

By Mrs. W. M. Jay.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Holland Christian Church report a most successful year. They have been working hard and will be a standard society when the annual Conference convenes.

The annual "World's Day of Prayer for Missions" was held jointly with the Holy Neck society in March. This was indeed a great service and very uplifting, and both societies felt benefitted for having attended.

On the fifth Sunday night in August, a public missionary program was given under the auspices of this society, with the spiritual life superintendent as leader. The pageant, "Starting Right," was presented, with plenty of special music besides, and was a most enjoyable and profitable evening. Dr. N. G. Newman was the speaker, his subject being, "Why Japan," and this was most instructive and inspiring. Mrs. Charles Daughtrey is the corresponding secretary of this wide-awake society.

Sunday, July 15th, the Willing Workers of the Franklin Christian Church, assisted by the primary department, put on the following program: Prelude, "Spring Song"; processional, "March"; hymn, "'Tis Children's Day"; Scripture, 96th Psalm, Hazel Turner; invocation, pastor; greetings, Thurman Pierce and Shirley Council; song, "Praise Him"; children's day, 12 children; solo, Virginia Gillette; recitation, "Only a Little Christian," Letcher Dick; recitation, Olive Cross, Mildred Keeter; solo, Helen Byrd; recitation, Buster Johnson; recitation, "The Heavenly Father's Flowers"; before primary song: Peggy Beale, Otis Ray Hargrave, Pope Daughtrey, Nan Daughtrey, Katherine Travis, Virginia Council, Olive Cross, Helen Byrd and Dorothy Council; Song, "All Things Bright and Beautiful Change"; recitation, "Children of the World": Ernest Beale, Jack Beale, Dorothy Council, Amos Joyner and Nan Daughtrey; solo; recitation, "I'll Do What I Can," Frances Butler; Garland drill, junior girls; remarks about offering; offertory, Ernest Beale and Amos Joyner; prayer; recessional.

This was indeed a red-letter day in the life of the children of our Church. Each little child doing his part in a very fine way. They were an inspiration to the whole Church, and we were more convinced than ever of the truth of our Saviour's words when He said, "And a little child shall lead them."

A TESTIMONY.

(Handed to Rev. J. W. Patton by one of his Bethlehem Church members.)

Dear Friend:

I had a little thought in my heart last night that I could not give God a little offering. That little thought made me feel unhappy. I prayed to God to take that feeling from my heart. I did not get any relief from that prayer. Then I went again and prayed, and God helped me that time, and I arose praising His holy name. My little children began crying. One of them came up to me and said, "Mamma, I thought you were having a running fit." That dear little girl had not heard God's praises enough to know what it was, for it was the first time He had been in this home.

I am telling this, for I feel that I should tell it, that it may help some one who may feel as I have. Not that I feel that the dear Lord needs the little gift; I am giving it in His name, that it may be a blessing to my soul and my home. I am poor in this world's goods, but I feel that I am blessed with greater riches from my Father in glory. I am willing to eat bread and drink water only if it be necessary to give this little offering that I am giving in the name of the Lord. My prayers go with my offering.

Mary Tickle.

NOTICE.

The Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference will meet with the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., on Friday, October 24, 1930. It is earnestly desired that each society will strive to meet the requirements of the "Standard of Excellence," and make this the banner year of our work. Mrs. Ray Clarke Tillinghast, of New York City, who has just completed a trip around the world, will be the speaker and tell of her contact with the women in foreign lands.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson XIII—September 28, 1930.
(Review.)

The Greatness of the God-Fearing.

Golden Text: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; a good understanding have all they that do His commandments; His praise endureth forever."—Psa. 111:10.

Lesson: Heb. 11:32-40; 12:1, 2.

James, in his epistle, makes the statement that Elijah was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain, and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months. James' object in writing thus was to emphasize the fact that the men and women who move across the pages of the Bible were folks, plain folks, just like the folks to whom he was writing. He was trying to clothe biblical characters in flesh and blood and make his readers think of them as every-day human beings.

Now, this principle needs emphasis today. There is always the danger that when we read or study the Bible, we will think of its characters as far removed from us in physical make-up and in temperament, because they are far removed from us in time. As a matter of fact, the supreme value of the Bible is the fact that it deals with folks, with human nature. The characters of the Bible are not different from people of today. Those who achieved godly character and who rendered large service lived in a world that made it just as difficult for them to be good and to do good as our world makes it difficult to do those things. Those who failed, who fell into evil ways did so because they yielded to the same forces that are operative today and which will just as surely wreck life and make failure in human life today. In other words, the good and godly characters of the Bible give us an example of how to do and to become; the ungodly characters give us an example of how not to do and what not to become.

All this is by way of preparation for this review lesson, for unless the characters which have been the basis for study during the past quarter have been studied in this light, we have missed the point altogether. This review lesson simply calls them up for a brief moment, that, as they pass in review before us, we can learn from them the secret of success and failure. They lived in our kind of world, they lived with folks just like we have to live with, they had to deal with temptations just like we have to deal with, they had their own limitations and their own troubles just like we have. And they succeeded or failed just in proportion to the measure of their ability to make the proper adjustment to the same God with whom we have to deal, and who will be our help as he was their help.

Abraham, with his simple but profound and vital faith in God, is a challenge to us to have faith in God. Jacob illustrates that strange mixture of good and evil which is in each one of us, and shows how God can use even unlikely material for His purposes when it is purged by His cleansing power. Moses stands above us in ability and in achievement, and yet he challenges us to overcome obstacles and handicaps and calls us to follow the light that is within us, which is God in us. Deborah is an example of a godly woman who made her life count, and presents to every woman the possibilities of noble womanhood as an inspiration to men. Naomi and Ruth examplify the wholesome influence of a godly life and the response thereto respectively, and give richer meaning to friendship.

Hannah shows us the place and power of a godly mother. Saul might well stand for the man who might have been, an example of a big man in stature, who because of head-strongness, jalousy, passion and superstition, failed in his high mission. Jonathan and David typify all that is best in friendship and the highest in manhood. Amos shows how God can call men from the humblest walks in life and make them effective ministers and messengers of His. Josiah embodied high ideals and courage in carrying them out in personal life, even though he stood high in authority. He certainly presents a challenge to those in high positions to give personal religion the first place in their lives. Jeremiah as a prophet has, perhaps, little direct contact with us, but as a true patriot, as one who was willing to pay any price for his loyalty to his country, as one who came into an intimate and personal relationship with God through the experiences and events of a long and varied life, he touches us at the place where we live. And Jonah—how close to us all does Jonah come! Not as a prophet or preacher, but as one who wanted to keep the grace of God for himself or for his small circle, as one whose prejudice had blinded him to the worth and capacities of other peoples, as one who lacked the missionary spirit, which is, after all, the spirit of Christianity. Whatsoever things were written about these men and women in the Scriptures were writte nthat we might learn how to come into the measure of the stature of the fullness of Jesus Christ, thoroughly furnished unto every good work.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, September 28, 1930.

Topic: "How Would I Spend $1,000,000 on Missions?"

Devotional.

Hymn: "Brightly Beams Our Father's Mercy."

Matt. 28:18-20 in unison.

Scripture reading: Luke 10:25-37.

Hymn: "O Zion, Haste."

Following the devotional, present an informal play. Have the stage set for a living-room, with a man sitting in an easy chair. Let him ask a friend how he might spend $1,000,000 on missions. As they sit there, have some one representing the various forms of mission activity appear and tell the work of that form.

Industrial missions (see August 31st program) present many needs. Agricultural engineering, forestry, building, utilization of national resources are all in the realm of industrial missions.

The minister's work is of evangelistic nature. He builds up Churches, leads congregations, plans parish activities, and innumerable activities of similar nature.

Medical missions are most important in relieving suffering. Clinics, hospitals, training native workers, evangelism and case work are all part of the medical missionary's task.

The educational missionaries teach, train native leaders, build up schools, and do social work.

In the home field, stress the work of mountain missions, city missions, schools for negroes, and orphans' homes.

Refer to reports of your own Church boards and find out definite facts about the work of your Church.

You will need very little practice and preparation for this program. The representative of each mission group can prepare his or her own part of the program. The preliminary dialogue is brief. This may be suggestive:

Man (hearing knock at door): "Come in. How are you, Jones?"

Jones: "Quite well; rather busy, though. I am trying to find funds to run the mission boards for this year. Funds are so short that I'm afraid some of the work will have to be cut off."

Man: "I have been considering giving money to missions. Please tell me how you could use $1,000,000."

Jones: "I shall call on representatives of the various forms of missions to help me tell you of our work."

(Here have forms of mission work explained.)

Man: "Jones, really I had no idea that so many things could be done with money. Use this, please; may it help some one."

Jones: "I thank you. That which is given in the spirit and service of Jesus is glorified and blessed. It will help to establish His kingdom and speed the gospel."

Hymn: "Jesus Shall Reign."

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION WEEK.

Our Sunday Schools and Churches are invited to join in the observance of "Religious Education Week." Religious education week is an outgrowth of rally day, and can well be ended with a real rally program in our Sunday Schools.

The first observance of religious education week will be this year during the week of September 28th to October 5th. Your Sunday School and Church can be a "charter" observer of this special week if you begin plans now. Program suggestions for the week, which will help you in the observance of the week in your community, in your Church, and in your home, can be secured from the International Council of Religious Education, 22nd floor, 203 N. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill. The price for these suggestions is 10 cents. Order them today.

SUCCESSFUL REVIVALS.

On June 18th, we began our revival meeting in the Mebane Church. All the Churches of Mebane engaged in a simultaneous evangelistic campaign for ten days, with one union service each day for all the Churches, except Sunday. Preaching in every Church each evening by pastor of the Church or visiting minister. We were fortunate to have associated with us in our meeting here Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, who conducted the song service and did part of the preaching. On Sunday morning, June 29th, we dedicated the Mebane Church in a very impressive dedicatory service. Rev. Dollar preached the sermon for the occasion, which was spoken of generally as a very masterly discourse and especially appropriate. Dr. W. M. Jay was also with us and took an important part in the service of dedication, as was also Rev. P. T. Clapp. Letters were read from Dr. W. C. Wicker, Rev. T. Fred Wright, and probably other former pastors of the Church. On the same day, the evening service brought our meeting to a close. The Church was much benefitted, and many pledged themselves anew to the task. Bro. Dollar won for himself many new friends.

The first Sunday in July we were with the good people at New Lebanon Church, Rev. J. W. Knight, pastor, and began the meeting there. It was a source of regret that Bro. Knight was unable to be present on account of serious illness. Good attendance was had throughout the week and splendid interest shown. The Church was revived and appears to be in fine shape to carry on with the work.

On the second Sunday, at the Shallow Ford Church, the revival was begun. Rev. Jesse H. Dollar did the preaching in this meeting. His messages were timely and heart-searching, presenting a high standard of living and plain in condemnation for those in sin. There were a goodly number of conversions, and probably twelve for Church membership. The Shallow Ford folks were delighted to have Bro. Dollar with them in this series of services, and hope to have him return again.

It was the third Sunday in July that we were again in one of our much-beloved Bro. Knight's Churches. This time at Mt. Bethel. Here again we were disappointed by not having Bro. Knight present for the meeting, but his physical condition was not such as would permit his attending, much to the sorrow of the writer and his devoted congregation. Good attendance prevailed throughout the meeting, and we hope and pray that much good was accomplished for the glory of God and the strength of the Church.

Rev. A. W. Andes, of Harrisonburg, Va., arrived early on the morning of July 20th; however, we took no chances, and the night before turned the switch on the alarm clock so that it would not disturb us of our morning rest. It might have been that our conscience caused us to awaken in time to arise and reach the station before Bro. Andes could catch a train back to Virginia. He accepted our alibi and accompanied us to Apples Chapel Church, where on this date our revival began. Early in the week there were those who came to the altar seeking relief from the burden of sin and expressing themselves as desirous of leading a new life in Christian service. Bro. Andes delivered strong sermons, in which he denounced sin and upheld the beauty of the gospel of Christ. Twenty-six found a new experience and gave evidence of a change of heart. The Church was much revived and made happy to have had such an able minister and devout servant of God, such as Bro. Andes has proven, with us. We hope that a taste of the old North State hospitality, the warm Christian friends he made while here, and the enormous amount of watermelon he consumed will be sufficient to induce him to return again.

It was our pleasure to be asscciated with Rev. J. L. Foster at Salem Chapel the first Sunday in August and the week following. It was a delightful experience to be associated with Bro. Foster and his congregation at old Salem Chapel. We were received cordially and entertained royally. We trust that the meeting may have been such as will prove of lasting benefit to all.

The third Sunday in August our meeting began at Hank's Chapel. The pastor had been designated as the preacher. During the meeting several visiting ministers were present and aided in the services. At the close, nineteen new members were received into the Church and the ordinance of baptism administered. There will likely be others who will join later as a result of the meeting.

Our work for the summer has been pleasant, indeed, and the fellowship with our brethren in the ministry has been a source of strength and a great joy. We pray for the work of our dear Lord's earthly kingdom and for every servant of His, that we all may be one in purpose, that the world may know that we are His and that He has sent us forth to the work. To Him be the glory and praise. R. A. WHITTEN.

Reidsville, N. C.

PLEASANT RIDGE.

We started our meeting at Pleasant Ridge the fourth Sunday in August. We had a large congregation at both services that day. The writer preached at 11 o'clock, and Rev. J. L. Neese, of Greensboro, came and preached at 2 o'clock. He did the preaching through the following week. The meeting closed on the fifth Sunday night. There was much interest from start to finish.

Bro. Neese brought us messages that were enjoyed by all who heard them. They were filled with love and simplicity, so all could understand. There were about twenty-five conversions and eight united with the Church. Some more will unite later. The Church was much revived.

Pleasant Ridge people work together and do things for the Lord and His cause. It has in deed and in truth been a good year for the pastor with the people at Pleasant Ridge. May the richest blessings of God be upon the Church and all other good people who work with them is my prayer. JOHN M. ALLRED.

NOTICE.

Any Church or Churches not having called a pastor or contemplating a change and desire my services, I shall be glad to consider the matter. I am open for three Sundays in each month.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

A CLEAR CONSCIENCE.

"We wronged no man, we corrupted no man, we took advantage of no man."—2 Cor. 7:2.

Paul has been warning his people against associations with unbelievers. He says close association with them is like two different oxen under the same yoke. In no way can Christ and the devil agree.

Now the appeal of 6:11, 13 is taken up again: "O Corinthians, enlarge your hearts. Believe what we say. You are in our hearts. Here we are life and soul laid bare. We are void of offense." Paul makes bare his heart in the light of James and in the light of love, and bids the people see for themselves that he has corrupted no man or done no man wrong.

That is a wonderful thing to say. Yet through Jesus it is a reality and a happiness possible to us all. If we realize what damage we do others when we swear or profane in their presence, it is believed that there would be less profanity, vulgarity and unkindness, and more charity and mercy.

Prayer.—Dear Lord our God, hold us every day in the purifying, healing and cleansing light of Jesus. Give us a clean conscience and happy living. Amen.

TUESDAY.

BE SOBER.

"Girding up the loins of your mind, be sober." —Read 1 Pet. 1:3-16.

A newspaper writer pleads once more for a change in men's attire, following the lead of the women in the direction of lighter, more healthful, more varied, and beautiful garments. A man's garments, even in summer, will weigh from eight to ten pounds, while a woman's garments weigh two pounds. This writer would have men exult in rainbow colors and in lovely fabrics, and no two men dressed alike. "In fact," he said, "life ought to be a perpetual costume ball."

No, life ought to be nothing of the kind! Life ought to be just what every wise man makes it—a sensible mingling of use and beauty, of work and play. If we gave so much attention to dress as this writer suggests, our souls would become tailors' dummies, and our ideals would all be tangled up with ribbons. Beauty is fascinating, but a strong and pure spirit will hold it firmly to its place. The senses are alluring, but the Christian knows a higher drawing, a deeper delight.

Prayer.—And so, Thou Lord of life, we fix our gaze upon Thee. We rejoice in all the loveliness Thou hast made, all the comforts and pleasures of the world; but we fix our eyes on Thee. For Thou art the heart of beauty and the soul of joy. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

NEW DISEASES.

"Put away . . . the old man."—Eph. 4:17-24.

The wise men are all the time discovering new diseases. The latest "find" is "California disease," because most of the cases thus far found have been discovered in that most healthful State, though the germ of it was first hunted down in the Argentine Republic. It is a disease much like tuberculosis, and may exist all over the world, being caused by breathing in a fungus or absorbing it through the skin, and its victims often die within four months after they become infected.

Let us rejoice that the doctors are so busy and so skillful in finding new diseases, for our bodies are attacked from many directions. They have a host of foes; and the sooner they are all recognized, the sooner shall we find effective means against them, and all live in health and strength through the span of life God means for us.

But in our spiritual life there is only one essential disease, and all the doctors of divinity have never succeeded in discovering a novel sickness of the soul. We call it by the general name of sin. It is to be recognized at once, though it has a myriad forms, and needs no diagnosis, because God has planted in each one of us a conscience which points it out and sounds the alarm. All we need is to keep our consciences as sensitive as they were when they came from God, and to obey their warnings as soon as they are given. All we need is Christ's help in putting away "the old man," the agent in us of old age and death, and putting on "the new man," the blessed principle of new life and perpetual youth.

Prayer.—Our ever-young Saviour, our ever-powerful Physician, overcome in us the disease of sin, bathe us in the joyful revival of existence. So shall we live in Thee forever. Amen.

THURSDAY.

WHO ARE LEADERS?

"Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature, because I have rejected him; for Jehovah seeth not as man seeth: for man looketh on the outward appearance, but Jehovah looketh on the heart."—1 Sam. 16:7.

A professor in the University of Chicago has studied twenty business men, twenty convicts, and twenty soldiers, and has not found in any one of these men any sign of a trait indicating the possession of ability in the direction of leadership, though every one of the men would seem to be or to have been a leader in his own field. Hence the professor concluded that leadership is an accident, produced by chance circumstances and not by innate powers; that is, that a leader is not born, but may be made by the right environment and stimulus.

We ought to be leaders, masters of men, guides to the right. We can be leaders, whatever the professors may say. And we shall become leaders as we are led by God and walk in His ways.

Prayer.—Lead us in a plain path, our Saviour. Go before us, and we will follow Thee. Go before us, and others will follow us as we follow Thee. We ask it in the name of Thy guiding Spirit. Amen.

FRIDAY.

A DAILY REMINDER.

"I did not mean from out my brimming cup
To spill one bitter drop;
But when I took firm hold to lift it high and drink it up,
It was my hands, and not my spirit, that shook."

—Josephine Johnson.

Some time ago he stumbled upon the poem. He read it and reread it until he felt like it was a part of his daily meditation, and to this day he keeps it on his daily memorandum sheet, where he will be reminded that through the day he will be humble and sincere in spirit and never fail to beg pardon for the errors that may fall.

Prayer.—Dear Father, so teach us to number our days, that we may know that they are short indeed, and that there is no time to lose in making us most useful. Teach us wisdom, that we may know how damaging errors are, and that we may apply our hearts, so we may make as few as possible. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HANNAH'S SONG.

Lesson: 1 Sam. 2:1-10; Luke 11:14-28; Eph. 5:1-21.

The following comment is intended to be a guide to your thoughts as you read the above lessons. Read the first and then turn to the lessons, looking for a special message for you. Beginning with Luke: "If thou wouldst be clear and right in thy inner man, cast out the demons that are in thee, and imitate God as beloved children, and walk in love, as children of understanding, looking carefully how ye walk, redeeming the time from evil, and having no fellowship with the unfaithful works of evil, but rather reprove them." "Blessed are they that hear the word of God and keep it."

Prayer.—Our Father, we are painfully conscious of hundreds of little devils that tempt us and that we easily slip into wrong. Give unto us a baptism of the Holy Spirit, a keep sense of honor in all things, speaking the truth unto all men, and living right. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THOUGHTS FOR TODAY.

Lesson: 1 Sam. 3; Luke 11:37-53; Eph. 6.

Let the following thoughts obsess you before reading the above lessons. Then read believingly and prayerfully and feel God's spirit in thy soul.

Samuel heard and came to know the voice of God by heeding the instructions of Eli and opening his mind in readiness to hear and with a willingness to obey. From that readiness and willingness he understood God, experienced God and became a great spiritual leader.

The voice calling me today is not in special manifestations. But Christ says, "Cleanse the inside of the cup"; "Keep thy heart right." Let thy life be a help to everybody with whom thou dost deal, "knowing that whatsoever good things each one doeth, the same shall he receive again from the Lord" (Eph. 6:7).

Prayer.—O Lord, help me to trust in this more and more and know thee, and help me to be a blessing. Amen.

ligions. Here is his definition of religion: "Religion is a matter of conviction and practice or it is a mere farce, a comedy, a business, or whatever name you choose to give it. We, moreover, do not believe that a man need be a Jew in order that his soul shall be saved."

He believes that any religion will improve a man's morals, if he will but conscientiously and sincerely practice its ethical dictates. The great need of this generation is a religion that matters in conviction and practice which will improve the moral and social consciousness of society and save this generation from the blatant evils of revolt against moral and religious principles which have stood the test of the ages.

THE FUTURE OF THE CHURCH.

By Walter M. White.

"Upon this rock I will build my Church, and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it."—Matt. 16:18.

"Go ye therefore and make disciples of all the nations."—Matt. 28:19.

There are two "senses" in which the future of the Church may be considered. First, its origin and perpetuity. This is the God side. He assures its eternal existence. The other "sense" is the man side. What kind of an institution is this divinely instituted organization to be? It is left to man to determine. The whole responsibility as to the efficiency, or the non-efficiency is man's.

In recognition of this responsibility we seek first of all to discover what is to be the Spirit of the future Church. Christian? Yes, assuredly. But, what do we mean by Christian? The Crusaders understood that to be Christian was to force the acceptance of the Christian faith—as they saw it—upon all men at the point of the bayonet. The early Puritan fathers verily thought themselves to be doing the will of God when they burned at the stake, or tortuously put to death otherwise, those who were supposed to be possessed of an evil spirit.

We do not need to go back so far to find religious bigotry and spiritual intolerance parading itself under the guise of loyalty to Christ. Heresy trials and spiritual crucifixions are not wholly unknown in our own day. Surely it is not that kind of a thing we wish the future Church to be. What then? "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."

The imminent danger which confronts the Church of today is that of bequeathing to the future Church an over-emphasis on the mechanics of religion. What we need and what the Church of tomorrow will need is the true Spirit-mind of Jesus. Love, joy, peace, gentleness, forbearance, and such like; "against such there is no law," for they are the law, the law of the Spirit. These are the things which in large measure go toward making the world a fit place in which to live. It is the business of the Church to plant, cultivate and bring to fruitage those spiritual graces of Christian life, for they are not indigenous to any other soil. These are the paramount things which the Church of today must bequeath to the Church of tomorrow, if we are to have a Church worthy of the name it wears—the name of Christ.

Again let me ask, what do we mean by the "Spirit" of Christianity? Our answer is, its atmosphere! That which it gives off, is as the perfume from the rose. That is the true "spirit of the Christianity of Christ." That must be the life of the future Church. I want this Church to so function in the spiritual life of this city as to cause men and women to walk blocks out of their way in order to pass under the shadow of its walls. Yea, I want the whole Church of our Lord to be so possessed of the "Spirit" of pure and undefiled religion as to radiate an atmosphere of "love divine, all love excelling" as to bring in an age of peace and good will to all mankind.

Furthermore, the future Church must be a throbbing, pulsating, living thing. It must be a Church of service. No other kind of a Church can hope to truly represent Jesus Christ in a world of need.

Immediately upon the very doorstep of our building for the future we are confronted by that most insidious foe to all truly "spiritual" service—and unless the spiritual bulks large in our service there will be no place for our Church in the program of the future—the mechanical tabulating of work done. It is not how many people fed, how many people clothed, how many people housed, how many this or how many that. But, what is the "Spirit" in which this ministry is rendered? The Church of the future must be a "spiritually" serving Church if it is to survive.

Even now there are not a few who are ready to champion the affirmative that dinner clubs and fraternal orders are doing more to bring in that better day than is the Church. We do not like to admit it, we do not believe it to be true. However, the dial indicator seems to be "quivering" in that direction.

Our hope is in a renewed spiritual emphasis. The Church must spiritualize its service. In the name and spirit of Christ her ministry must be rendered. The Church of the future in the midst of a world of need must be both a lighthouse and a harbor.

Again, the Church of the future must be a united Church. Already there are distressing indications of weakness, the direct result of broken and divided ranks. Far too long—for the glory of Christ—has the Church presented to the enemy a shattered and broken line of defense, with but little of the aggressive, heroic, conquering spirit in her. There is a basis of unity. Let's have it. Our Lord's Prayer for his disciples—that they may be one—as He and the Father are one.

I quote from a recent address by Bishop Chas. H. Brent, of the Episcopal Church: "If all the Churches believe in Christ, why cannot they stand together and proclaim Christ with a common voice? Until there is a living unity of Christianity, the nations of the world cannot walk in the light of God's kingdom—that is the amount of it. We can do as a great many people seem to think it is the sole duty of Christianity to do; we can win individuals here and there to a belief in Christ.. We can create a few small-sized saints. But we cannot mold or shape, according to Christian ethics, the life of a country. If I read Scripture right, it was that very thing that Christ enjoined upon His disciples before He ascended to heaven—that they were to go and convert the nations, until the nations of the world became the kingdoms of our Lord."—The Christian Evangelist.

REFLECTIONS.

Many have never seen the grandeur
Of the mountains, the sea and the shore;
They have only heard of the wonders
To be seen in our beautiful world.

Yet, as they watch the heavens
Spread out to their wondering view,
They may see an expanse of beauty
That never was seen before.

The blue of the sky shows an ocean
Untouched by the shores of time,
With white-caps lazily floating
In many and lovely designs.

Or, as they watch the clouds,
Whether gray or snowy white,
The mountains are spread before them,
Ever changing in form and hue.

The winds that blow so refreshing
Are the same on land or sea,
And the soft showers of blessing
Are sent for you and me.

The ocean of His love so boundless,
His mountain strength so free,
Are ever thrown around us
Wherever our abode may be.

So we may find the beauty
God has placed around us here,
E'en though our earthly horizon
Be confined to limited sphere.

Oh, bountiful love of the Father,
Who gives to His children here
A glimpse of the marvelous beauty
Of the home to be over there." "W."

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

I sometimes wonder if the Christian denomination remembers the Christian Orphanage as it should. It was founded and established by the Southern Christian Convention, and is a child of the Convention as much so as any other department of the Convention. It was established for a purpose, and in its work it is trying to carry out that purpose for which it was established. Since its doors opened, January 1, 1907, it has been a haven for 343 children, fatherless and motherless, to enter its doors and share the hospitality the institution has to offer. This year, so far, it has had in its care an average of 108 children. Now, let us figure a little and see how you will answer the first sentence in this letter.

We took enough time while writing this letter to go over our income book from January 1st to this week to see just how much the Christian denomination had sent to us so far this year to feed, clothe, educate and care for 108 children. After we had checked over our books, we found that the books revealed this fact. Our Sunday Schools, Churches and friends in the denomination have sent us up to this date, the sum of $6,138.12. This is $722.16 per month to care for 108 children. This would allow us $6.68 per month per child sent in by our Church folks. This is to feed, clothe, educate and care for the children. If some one can tell the superintendent of the Orphanage how to meet bills on this amount he will be thankful for the advice. Our friends from outside our Church and from endowments have sent us the sum of $6,063.47—practically as much as our own people have. From the two sources we have received $12,201.59. This gives $1,435.50 per month to pay all bills for the care of 108 children. This is $13.28 per month per child, including insurance on buildings, upkeep, all farm expenses.

My dear friends, it cannot be done. It cost us 64 cents per day last year per child. It will cost that much this year. We have been compared with sixteen other orphanages in North Carolina and South Carolina, and find that we are under most of the others on expenses. We do our best to make a dollar go as far as it can be stretched. I give you these calculations to let you answer the question in the first sentence in this letter.

Superintendent.

REV. H. W. ELDER.

Rev. Hilliard Walter Elder departed this life August 30, 1930, at the hospital at Plains, Ga. His body was tenderly laid to rest at Richland, Ga., Sunday, August 31st, just as the sun was sinking behind the western hills, which sad event took place in the midst of a large and sympathizing assembly of people.

The funeral services were held at the Christian Church of Richland, Ga. This writer had charge of the services. The following brethren took part in the funeral: Rev. A. H. Sheppard, in a few words, spoke of Bro. Elder as a Christian; Rev. H. M. Gray spoke of him as a pastor; Rev. J. D. Dollar spoke of him as a Conference leader; Dr. S. L. Beougher spoke of his relation to Piedmont Junior College as the last and perhaps the greatest sacrificial service of his life. It was a very sweet and beautiful service. The active pallbearers were D. S. Hogg, J. H. Abell, J. A. Sanders, J. W. Harbuck, C. R. Rutlege, G. H. Partridge. The ministers above mentioned were honorary pallbearers.

It would consume time and space to mention all the great characteristics of this much-beloved man of God. Bro. Elder was licensed to preach when quite young; he was eminently successful as a preacher and pastor. There are but few Churches in the Georgia and Alabama Conference of the Christian Church that he did not organize. He built and supervised the building of more houses of worship than any other man in the far South. He spent his whole time and gave liberally of his means to carry forward the work of the kingdom. He was for quite a long time an honored and respected member of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention. Almost every day we see some of the evidence of his activities in the Church.

The whole Church in the State of Georgia has at some time depended on his zeal and untiring energy, and through his consecration and unselfish efforts he did a great work. From the day that Bro. Elder gave himself fully to the Lord's work, his noble wife stood firmly and sweetly by his side and gave him every encouragement in her power until the Master called her home some years since.

Bro. Elder organized more than a dozen Churches, and built some twenty or more houses of worship. His last program of building was the administration building of Piedmont Junior College at Wadley, Ala., which building is now nearing completion. Three years ago last April Bro. Elder suffered a stroke of paralysis from the effect of which he lost his speech and was never able to preach since that time. But he rests from his labors and his works do follow him. He leaves three sons and two daughters and some grandchildren to mourn his departure. He also leaves two brothers, J. L. Elder, of Columbus, Ga., and D. P. Elder, of Myron, Ga. Out of a large and influential family, only two are left, and time is swiftly bearing us onward.

Dearest brother, thou hast left us.
Here thy loss we deeply feel.
But it's God who has bereft us;
He can all our sorrows heal.

CHRISTIAN VOCATION. By Frank S. Hickman. Cokesbury; $2.00; pp. 239.

The vocational "guidists" need just such a jolt as this book will give them, but they will not heed it. There is no doubt that vocational guidance has rendered a real service to youth, and is destined to do even more to prevent misfits in the choice of a life-work. But vocational guidance has its limitations. It can deal scientifically with the objective elements and qualifications that have to do with choosing a life-work. It can predict success or failure on the bases of certain principles empirically tested, but it cannot enter the realm of the mystical, that inner sanctuary of the spirit that gives the sense and conviction of divine mission.

It is fitting that a Methodist should write this book, for the Methodists have such a strong leaning toward experiential religion, and that the professor of the psychology of religion in one of their great institutions should be its author. It is fitting, too, that the book should have been prepared as the Belk lectures for the Wesleyan University, another Methodist school. Dr. Hickman has done his work well.

The author believes in the divine rulership of the universe, but keeps his feet on the ground. He would give ear to the inner urge, the mystical call of the Spirit, but he would not hesitate to say to a manifestly unfit candidate, "We cannot approve you," basing his judgment on scientific principles. Being a trained psychologist, he knows how to account for these misinterpretations of the divine call. Not all who essayed to prophesy in ancient Israel could meet the test, and those who did were true children of their age.

Recognizing that every calling should be sacred in which a Christian engages, he yet insists that one type of calling—that of the Church—should be most holy, else "no vocation will be holy at all."

In concluding his gripping discussion, Prof. Hickman says: "We believe that the conviction that one is entering a religious vocation in response to the divine wil lis of the most fundamental importance in recruiting the leadership of the Church." Let us never forget this. It is eternally true, and vocational guidance cannot change it.

Young people who face the issues of deciding their life-work will do well to familiarize themselves with this scholarly book. A man who has had a call from God writes out of the richness of his personal experience for those who are now anxious to know the mind of the Almighty for them. He has done his work well, we repeat. He has made a real contribution, and at a very opportune time.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

By reference to pages 47-49 of the "Proceedings of the Southern Christian Convention," held at Raleigh, N. C., 1930, the Convention "requests the Board of Publications to allot to each Church within the Convention a quota of paid-up subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN," etc. This is understood to mean that the circulation manager notify each Church the number of subscribers expected of it. To carry out the intention of the motion, the circulation manager is writing the pastor or some official of the Church, and a report will be expected from the Church before the annual Conferences yet to meet. In order to bring the matter before the Churches, the pastors can confer with the members of his official board and announce from his pulpit two or more persons who are willing to do the soliciting; subscription price, $2.00 per year.

To find the quota for the Church, simply divide the number of members on roll, or as reported in the "Annual" by 20, and quotient and major fraction will express the number asked from the Church. Thus, if the membership is 85: divide by 20, the quota is 4, the number asked for additional. Pastors of the Valley Central Conference will please take up the matter before their Churches.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE
of the
CONGRETATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CHURCHES IN THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

BRADSHAW.

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. Bessie Speight Bradshaw, whose death occurred August 10, 1930, at Suffolk, Va.; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Mrs. Bradshaw the Church and Woman's Missionary Society at Liberty Spring has lost a consecrated and zealous member, whose daily life at home and abroad beautifully expressed her devotion to the service of God and humanity.

2. That our faith has been strengthened and our lives enriched by our association with such a Christ-like character. We will gratefully cherish her sweet memory and strive to emulate her splendid virtues.

3. While we cannot understand the workings of our Father, we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

4. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and commend them to the one who will comfort them in this trying ordeal and reunite the faithful on the "happy golden shore."

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and another placed on the records of our Woman's Missionary Society.

THE LITTLE BROWN CHURCH.

The 100th anniversary of the birth of the composer of "The Little Brown Church in the Vale" was recently celebrated in the old Congregational Church, Bradford, Mass. The Rev. Wm. S. Pitts, D. The author of that hymn deserves all the honor that any generation may place upon his head.—Ex.

SOLVING CHURCH PROBLEMS.—

Facing the necessity of providing a new Church and community building in a few years' time to meet the rapidly expanding needs of the congregation, one Church has hit upon the following solution: One hundred people in the congregation are taking out insurance policies of $1,000 each, payable in ten years. The prior death of a member of this group will merely bring into the fund treasury earlier than planned the amount of the policy. At the end of the period, the congregation will have $100,000 for building purposes.

HAVE CHILD ATTEND CHURCH.—

Dr. Silas Evans, president of Ripon College, says: "If your child is not strong enough to go to both Sunday School and Church, then hurry and call a doctor, or send for the ambulance!" "If the doctor says the child may attend only one morning service," he continues, "then have the child attend Church. The center of Christianity is to be found in the morning Church service, and even though the words of the pastor are not all understood, the atmosphere and impressions are lasting. Why should we complain that so many young people do not go to Church? They never have gone. A habit of worship is hard to begin at an age when other habits are already formed."

As surely as conduct results in habit-formation, and as surely as habits determine our future conduct, the non-churchgoing children of this generation will become non-churchgoing adults in the next, or all the fundamental conceptions of education are absolutely false.

NARCOTICS.—

In spite of barriers of all kinds and laws regulating the traffic of narcotics, the illicit dealing in all kinds of narcotics continues to increase, according to the statistics given out recently by the League of Nations. Last year that traffic dispensed some fourteen tons of morphine, cocaine, and heroin, which constitutes six hundred and forty million doses. Back of the failure of the league commission to curb the traffic in such drugs is the lack of public sentiment and moral support on the subject. The government neglects to take aggressive action against drug rings and narcotic peddlers unless and only when there is a popular demand for it. Such a demand in most drug-producing and drug-purveying countries now seems to be lacking. Law on all questions is not much stronger than the moral support of the populace. To make the laws of land effective, we must create a strong moral sentiment for their observance and for their execution against offenders.

S. S. TRAINING NON-MISSIONARY.—

One of the great national Sunday School leaders says: "A great majority of American Sunday Schools are training the children of this generation to make no contributions for others. The contributions are made to buy Sunday School helps for themselves." The purchase of Sunday School literature should be taken care of by the Church budget, and every offering in the Sunday School classes should be made an opportunity to teach the spirit of missions, and children should learn the magnitude of the missionary task and enlarge their contributions according to their growing conceptions of the missionary task. This would cause them to become a missionary people and strong supporters of the Church and the kingdom. Have them practice niggardly contributions for the selfish purpose of buying themselves literature during the period of childhood, and "it will follow as the night the day" they will never give liberal support to the kingdom. "Habit is thicker than blood and stronger than heredity."

PROGRESS IN PEACE.—

Recently there met in the Swiss city of Berne sixty delegates, including Christians, Jews, Moslems, Hindus, and Buddhists, to lay plans to mobilize the forces of the world's religions against war. The president of the assembly was Prof. Shaler Mathews, dean of the Divinity School of Chicago University. The most important decision made at the assembly in Berne was that to hold a world conference of religions in Washington, D. C., in November, 1932, in connection with the George Washington bicentenary. Four committees have begun work already on the program for the Washington conference.

All agitation for peace by such representative bodies will result in creating public sentiment against war and mobilize thought for the principles of conciliation among the most influential leaders of all countries. Such movements will be highly beneficial in promoting the spirit of brotherhood among the religious leaders of the world and prepare for the reign of the Prince of Peace.

DIVERSE WORSHIP.—

Dr. Fosdick has officially announced that his Church will offer diversified types of worship this year. Sunday morning there will be study and discussion groups for all ages; at the 11 o'clock hour there will be preaching; in the afternoon an unprogramed service with the Friends, and its opposite, a liturgical service with music; at night the worship service with drama. In his announcement he emphasizes the fact that his Church is to be used primarily for worship. "Too often our Protestant congregations go to Church," he says, "as they go to a lecture—to have somebody talk to them." They should attend Church to do something themselves—to worship, to be carried out of themselves by giving themselves to the worship of something greater than themselves. They should come with an active dedication of themselves to worship, rather than a passive, receptive mood to receive good from what others do. Not what the minister can give them, but rather a worshipful service by co-operative activity in which all the congregation can participate.

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE.—

Every intelligent Filipino cherishes the dream of national independence. For thirty years they have been closely associated with American institutions and have developed a desire to establish such free institutions for themselves. It is likely that the end will one of these days be assured and the islands pass to the status of dominion under the friendly guardianship of the United States. Their economic, social and political progress is steadily going on in the islands, as shown by the annual report of Governor General Dwight F. Davis, which has just been published. He says that the government for the year 1929 has been very satisfactory for the people in general, and also for the United States, under whose authority they have lived. Peace and order were excellent and the country was free from disaster, except that two typhoons swept through the Southern islands. He commends their health conditions, their success in volume of production, the constructive record of their legislature, the intelligence of the press, and the high regard which the Filipino holds for the United States.

DEPRESSION HELPS COLLEGES.—

It is the theory of President G. Bromley Oxnam, of DePauw University, that any financial depression that may exist in the country today should work to the benefit of college and university enrollment. Bearing out his theory, the registrar of DePauw reports that more transcripts of credits have been received from high schools up to date than ever before at this time of the year. The reason is not far to seek, for when there are so many unemployed people, rather than continue unemployed and waste their time they enter school, college, or university and save their time by devoting themselves to study the better to fit themselves for earning capacity when times are better and to qualify themselves for a better salary. When they hold a lucrative position, when times are prosperous, people would have to sacrifice their salaries and have the added expense of entering school and paying the cost. Almost anybody can make financial arrangements to attend school, even in dull times, and they know it is wise to do so and prepare for better times when they come. In spite of financial depression this year more people are going to college.

NOTES-PERSONALS

As your body is clothed in new raiment when you enter the service of your country, so must your heart be clothed in new thought when you enter the service of God.—Selected.

We appeal to the pastors of the various Churches to send in news notes of their activities. The one in this column from Dr. N. G. Newman, this week, is ideal. He says a column full in six or eight lines. Let the other Churches know what yours is doing. It will help you and will help others, too.

The annual revival was held at Holy Neck Church, Nansemond County, Va., September 8th to 13th. Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, of Durham, N. C., was preacher and leader. The congregations were large, the singing spirited, and the preaching of a high order. It was a week of constructive worship and work. There were ten accessions to the Church and nine baptisms.

M. D. Morgan, Decatur, Ala., writes: "I am so well pleased with the paper you sent out to us Congregational people, I want to help get it into as many homes as possible. I feel that it will fill a long-felt need among our people. In fact, it is very near just what we asked our leaders for a few years ago when we got out the Southern Congregationalist." Bro. Morgan backs up his opinion by sending in his subscription and promising to try to secure additional ones for THE SUN. We hope that many others will follow his example.

In the passing of Rev. H. W. Elder, an account of whose demise and funeral appeared in last week's CHRISTIAN SUN, the Christian Church in the far South loses its most widely known and prominent figure, and the Southern Christian Convention is called to mourn a man who wrought mightily to build up the Church and the kingdom of God on earth and who burned his life out with a fervent zeal for a cause he loved. A great and winning preacher of the Word, eager to win souls and have Churches in which the gospel might ever be preached to enlarging numbers, he gave himself as a great pioneer to the cause of building Churches and increasing the number of the houses of worship and places of public prayer. He leaves behind memorials built in more than a score of places, and thousands to testify that here indeed was a man who loved God with all his heart, and his fellow-men like unto himself.

Christianity has become a world religion in the last hundred years. It stands today challenging all other forms of worship. It is commanding the attention of men of all nationalities, races and languages. The human mind is weighing those claims and deciding upon a universal movement in response to its challenge. Christian people are living in an hour when their religion is not only spreading, but commanding influence. Again we see men of all races and of all nationalities and of all languages turning to Christianity, saying, "If the believers in this religion would only consent to do so, they could turn this world into a paradise." We stand at the gates of a new epoch in the world's history. What humanity will become in the new day does not altogether depend on what Christainity does, but we are of the conviction that Christian influence could make this world much better if the teaching of Jesus Christ was placed in daily operation.—Ex.

PISGAH, ALA.

We held our revival service commencing the first Sunday in August and continuing for ten days. Rev. J. D. Dollar, of Lanett, Ala., was with us and did the preaching. Bro. Dollar was certainly at his best and preached with great power. Any Church is fortunate in securing the service of this great evangelist, for indeed I feel Bro. Dollar has grown into a great evangelist. The Church and community were greatly revived and three members were received for baptism.

Soon after our meeting ceased, the Baptists commenced their revival, inviting other Churches of the community to join them, which they readily did. There was a great meeting indeed. Some fifty members were received into the fellowship of this Church and five more into ours.

The drought has been so severe here that water is scarce on this mountaintop. Therefore, we were forced to go some fifteen miles to the Tennessee River to attend the ordinance of baptism. It was a great pleasure, as a mighty throng gathered at the brink of this river to join our good Baptist brother in their service. He baptized thirty-six and we five. The work seems to move well here. J. H. HUGHES.

FIELD NEWS.

We began our revival services July 26th with Rock Stand Church, five miles north of Roanoke, Ala. We had a great time together, with testimonies, prayer and song. The attendance was good and continued to increase, especially at the evening service, until the close of the meeting. Many gave their testimony for the Christ who saves to the uttermost.

Rev. C. G. Dollar assisted in this meeting and did some valuable work with the young people. We received and baptized five members in full fellowship with the Church. We have here a faithful band of workers.

The home-coming service, August 3rd, was the beginning of the revival at Bethany. There were many old friends and neighbors that attended this service. This day reminded us of good old days of long ago. Bethany is my home Church. It was here that I received my earliest impressions for the ministry.

Under the leadership of the late Rev. B. F. Young, I joined this Church at the age of thirteen. Many sweet memories still linger around this sacred place. Rev. C. G. Dollar came to us here Tuesday evening. Bro. Dollar gave us some good gospel sermons. The Church was greatly revived and seven members were added to the Church.

On the second Sunday in August, our meeting began at Antioch. We had fine congregations here, and the music was excellent. Many old saints testified of their untiring efforts in the service of the Lord.

We have here a fine band of young people who rendered their part in song and praise to His matchless name. On account of hindrances, Rev. C. G. Dollar did not get to us here until Tuesday evening.

There was some sickness in the community, and there were some other hindrances, but amid these we had a splendid meeting. Bro. Dollar gave us some splendid gospel sermons. The dear Lord greatly blessed us in this meeting, for which we give Him all praise.

Glenn, Ga. A. H. SHEPPARD.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

GEORGIA CONGREGATIONAL STATE MEETING: The State Conference of Congregational Churches will meet October 27-29 with the Macedonia Church, Hoschton, Ga. A good program is being prepared by the State committee. We are looking for a large representation from the Churches of the State.

MOVES TO SALISBURY: The pastor-at-large, Rev. Milo J. Sweet, moved last week from Raleigh to 226 West Henderson Street, Salisbury, N. C. This change is made desirable on account of Salisbury being more central for the work of pastor-at-large. It will put him into closer touch with a number of our Churches. It will also aid in the unifying of certain Congregational and Christian Churches. A number are considering how a closer relationship can be brought about without loss to any and gains for all.

COMING CONFERENCES: Besides the Georgia State and district meeting mentioned above, the following meetings are listed for the near future: Kentucky State Conference will be held with the Williamsburg Church October 2-4. Tennessee State Conference will be held with Pilgrim Church, Chattanooga, October 7-9. The North Alabama District Association will be held with the Friendship Church at Trinity, September 26-28. The West Florida Association will be held at Cluster Springs, November 7-9. The three Florida associations will be held between October 28th and November 5th, the exact dates and places to be announced later. The Florida Congregational Ministers' Convocation will be held at Daytona Beach, October 6-9th. All of these meetings will greatly strengthen the opening work of the fall.

ROSE HILL CHURCH: On the second Sunday in September, Rev. Neil McQuarrie, of Atlanta, received a unanimous and definite call to serve the Rose Hill Christian Church, Columbus, Ga., as pastor for an indefinite time. Dr. McQuarrie began work June 15th, with the hope of gathering the Congregational group and Christian people into the same Church. The outlook seems to be quite favorable for a number of our Congregational people are attending the Christian Church. The Sunday School and Church services have about doubled in attendance within the past two months. Two new classes have been formed in the Church school and a junior Endeavor Society has been organized. The Church has really been reorganized, with an official Church committee of fourteen members, which is to meet once a month to consider all important Church activities and report to the Church. Already a number of Church repairs have been made, and others are in progress. In the community, both Christian and Congregational forces are rallying to the cause.

COUNTRY LIFE ACADEMY.

On October 1st, Country Life Academy, Star, N. C., will open its doors for students for the twenty-first time under the presidency of Dr. Edward F. Green. During these two decades many young men and women have gone forth better equipped to meet life's duties because of the unusual work done here. From the hills of the Carolinas and from other States these students come for training in the fundamentals of country life. But at the same time they are prepared for college, and students entering North Carolina State College, for example, make enviable records. Aside from those preparing for college, others are preparing for better farming and better farm-homes.

Most of these students come without means of self-support. Funds are gathered mostly from the Congregational constituency, which founded this school and still fosters it. While some funds come from other sources, yet the president says the school could not exist without the backing of the Congregationalists of the North as well as South. Dr. Green, who has been North all summer, will be home to put things in order for opening day. And this year a new feature is added, in that the trustees, twenty-one in number, are going to meet during the first week of school with the faculty present.

Jefferson Canoy, who graduated from the Atlanta Seminary Foundation, Vanderbilt, last June and who has been doing S. S. S. service in Pennsylvania this summer, has accepted a position as teacher and assistant treasurer at Country Life Academy and is already at work as field man.

ROLLINS COLLEGE.

The calendar year for Rollins begins today at Winter Park, Fla. Rollins College is the oldest college in the State and was founded and fostered by the Congregational denomination. The college is now non-sectarian in character and control, as almost all of our Congregational institutions are. The reports are that the college opens with the largest freshman class in the history of the college, the registrations having reached some time ago the limit of seventy-five boys and fifty girls, and there was quite a waiting list.

President Hamilton Holt spent six weeks during the summer in Europe and has since that time been traveling in New England and the North in the interest of the college. He announces several important changes in the faculty. Among the new appointments are Dr. Edwin L. Clarke, formerly of Oberlin College, as professor of sociology, to succeed Dr. Glen E. Carlson; Cecil R. Oldham, Oxford graduate, as associate professor of history, to succeed Dr. Leland H. Jenks; John A. Rice, Lynchburg, S. C., as professor of classical languages; Theodore Dreler, Schenectady, N. Y., as assistant professor of physics; and Harold C. Sproul, formerly of Amherst, as assistant professor of English.

During the summer, two new dormitories for women have been built on the college campus and will be ready for occupancy early in the fall. The two new buildings will take their places as units two and three in the new architectual plan for the college, and are in Mediterranean Spanish style. They are designed to accommodate sixteen students each. Extensive improvements have been made to the college buildings and compus during the summer and a large addition has been built to the college commons. In spite of the business depression, Rollins will continue its effort to raise the remainder of the $2,500,000 endowment fund. Last year approximately $1,000,000 toward the fund was secured.

NOTES.

The Church at Jupiter, Fla., of which Rev. Frederick Held is now pastor, held a very well-attended rally on September 14th. The work of the Church during the summer has progressed very satisfactorily. Mr. Held began his pastorate June 1st.

Rev. Ralph Krout has returned to his Church at New Port Richey, Fla., after a pleasant vacation spent at his old home in Adrian, Mich. Mr. Krout's parents are to spend the winter again with him, coming to New Port Richey about the 1st of November.

Miss Dorothy Allen, of Rollins College and a member of the Congregational Church at Fort Myers, at a recent service in that Church gave a very interesting account of her work as a student summer service worker in Alabama. Miss Allen returns to Rollins College for her senior year.

Rev. Don Henshaw, pastor of the Church at Coral Gables, is to give two courses at the Univresity of Miami—a course in Bible and a course in public speaking.

The Sunday issue of the Florida Times-Union carried a picture of the parents' class of the Latter Day Saints (Mormon) Church, of Jacksonville, and the group consisted of fifty-six adults. This was a surprising indication of the growth of the Mormon Church in this city.

Dr. W. R. Kedzie, secretary of the Congregational Foundation for Education, is to visit Florida early in October. He will preach at Union Congregational Church for his old friend Dr. Fritsch on Sunday, October 5th. He will speak twice at the Ministers' Convocation at Daytona Beach on October 7th, and will then visit Rollins College.

GENERAL BOARD MEETING.

The General Board of the Christian Church will meet in regular annual session Thursday, October 16, 1930, at 9 o'clock A. M., at Dayton, Ohio. There will be an important preliminary meeting of the General Board also on Tuesday, October 14, 1930, at the same hour. All members are requested to be present throughout, as there are many important matters to be considered.

The members of the Board are Revs. F. G. Coffin, Columbus, Ohio; Warren H. Denison, Dayton, Ohio; D. B. Atkinson, Albany, Mo.; W. P. Minton, Dayton, Ohio; McD. Howsare, Dayton, Ohio; E. A. Watkins, Lebanon, Ind.; W. P. Fletcher, Oshawa, Ontario; J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, N. C.; A. G. Caris, Defiance, Ohio; S. L. Beougher, Wadley, Ala.; W. G. Sargent, Providence, R. I.; H. A. Smith, Dayton, Ohio; A. B. Kendall, Hilton, New York; R. C. Helfenstein, Dover, Del.; H. Shelton Smith, New Haven, Conn.; J. N. Dales, Lakemont, N. Y.; W. W. Staley, Suffolk, Va.; A. E. Kemp, Urbana, Ill.; Clarence Defur, Madrid, Iowa; J. H. Lightbourne, Troy, Ohio; W. H. Hainer, Irvington, N. J.; O. S. Thomas, Covington, Ohio; L. E. Smith, Norfolk, Va.; Martyn Summerbell, Lakemont, N. Y.; J. A. Henderson, Franklinton, N. C.; S. Q. Helfenstein, Dayton, Ohio; A. W. Sparks, Dayton, Ohio; H. M. Hainer, New Bedford, Mass.; C. G. Nelson, Oronoque, Kans.; H. H. Short, Hagerstown, Ind.; Jesse M. Kauffman, Clemons, Iowa; E. B. Flory, Dayton, Ohio; R. G. Clark, Piqua, Ohio; W. J. Young, Muncie, Ind.; C. E. Huff, Salina, Kans.; Laymen J. L. Reck, Covington, Ohio; W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.; H. E. Sims, Piqua, Ohio; Roy Rensberger, Goshen, Ind.; O. W. Whitelock, Huntington, Ind.; U. G. Brownell, New Bedford, Mass.; E. E. Duncan, Dayton, Ohio; Netum Rathbun, Dayton, Ohio; A. F. Foor, Everett, Pa.; Hermon Eldredge, Dayton, Ohio; T. B. Radabaugh, West Milton, Ohio; Mrs. Athella M. Howsare, Dayton, Ohio; Mrs. Alice V. Morrill, Defiance, Ohio; Miss Helen R. Stearns, New Haven, Conn.; Miss Lucy M. Eldredge, Dayton, Ohio.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

S. S. Adriatic, June 21, 1930.

We left New York one week ago today, and by the ship's log we are now 2,677 miles out on our voyage and still going good. This is a calm, cool, delightful day, a fine, favorable wind and a friendly sea. The week's voyage has been so restful, so agreeable, so wholesome that one wonders what has become of the days and the hours. Troubles, trials, bending and breaking burdens make time hang heavily, and the days drag slowly; joy and happiness make days speed by like moments. If heaven is as happy as they say it is, eternity will simply flow by like the current of a rapid river.

There is a native and very cultured Indian aboard who, now a convert to Christianity, teaches English in Jaffna College, Ceylon. He is, as such, employed by the American Board (the Foreign Mission Board of the Congregational Church). He tells us the surprising story that a poet lived in India 200 years ago who had never seen a missionary or heard of the Christ, and yet wrote of God as one who made all things and who seeks us. In his poems, this pagan poet begs for God to send to earth a teacher and a revealer of Himself. This poet, as stated, knew nothing of the Christ, and yet was pleading with God to send such person, in some respects, as the Christ was. Why did not this poet's prayers and poems catch fire and evangelize India? For the simple reason that he left out the most essential feature about the Christ of God, namely: service and salvation. Nothing is to be found in this ancient poet who conceived so clearly of God, and begged for a teacher from God, about a teacher who will serve and one who was Saviour and Redeemer. Into India now has gone the missionary, who is telling not only about a teacher who has come from God, but a servant and Saviour as well. This Indian, Prof. J. V. Chelliah, Jaffna College, Ceylon, tells me he is writing a book entitled "The Sonnets of the Earth," in which he seeks to set forth, in part, the lives and writings of poets who, not inspired as were Job and David, nevertheless show evidences of having learned of God so vividly and longed for Him so pleadingly that they evidently felt the urge and the uplift of the divine.

They have turned back the clock, and we have turned back our watches five hours since leaving New York—an hour on each of five nights. We eat breakfast at 8 A. M. Smith says he does not object to eating breakfast at that hour, since the sun is far up in the sky, but the thought that the folks at home are still in bed and that it is only 3 A. M. there does get on his nerve, and seems unfit. But he should bear in mind that tonight when he retires at 10 it will just be 5 P. M. at home and the folks there will not have had their dinners (or suppers). This matter of time is quite a delusion and has no meaning except one of relationship to the sun and the heavenly bodies. No dictionary, no scientist, no philosopher has ever yet defined time for us. I recall now a definition of a noted philosopher who said that "Time is that which in so far as it is, is not; and in so far as it is not, it is." We sometimes say that a preacher or public speaker simply marked time. Well, that is all any time-piece ever has done, or any thing, or any one else. When will time cease and eternity begin? Well, time never has begun, save as a convenience man has mentally devised for himself; and eternity, like this ocean about us, is time with all human limitations taken off.

Sunday, June 22, 1930.

A bright, glorious Sunday morning. I was up at 7:30 and found passengers who had been up for hours to catch the first glimpse of the hills of Ireland. I have enjoyed this ship so much that I was not anxious to see the shore lines. It was so cool as we neared the Irish coast this A. M. that overcoats were welcome on this bright June day—the longest day of all the year. It was light enough out on deck at 10 o'clock last night to see to read in the open without any artificial light, and they tell us it was light enough on deck at 4 A. M. today to do likewise; the day here being eighteen hours long, the night only six. We are in the far North. We sailed due East three days to avoid ice floes, and then turned abruptly northeast.

I am surprised to see the mountains of Ireland pushing themselves abruptly to the very seashore. When mountain and sea bump up against each other, one is reminded of what one was taught in physics about the results of an irresistible force going up against an immovable body. One hardly knows what to expect. Ireland is to our right, Scotland to the left as our ship continues to steer northeast. The Scotch hills are more modest and do not obtrude on the confines of the sea as do the hills of Ireland. The hillsides of Scotland, as they slope toward the sea, are laid off in closely cut, well-planned, symmetrical pastures, fields or gardens, and are beautiful to the eye.

In early afternoon our great ship glides peacefully into the "Firth of Clyde." Now we Americans would call that "the River Clyde"; but the bonnie Scotch are more poetical, and the "Firth of Clyde" has more music in it. In the distance, by the use of glasses, one can see green pastures with shepherds attending their sheep, and one feels like bursting out in song on this happy and holy Sabbath, "Saviour, Like a Shepherd, Lead Us, Lead Us Lest We Go Astray." The cosey villages of Scotland along the shores of the Firth of Clyde are all of stone, and look so snug, so permanent, so abiding. Green fields, planted and hedged forests, snug villages of Scotland along the shore line of our sailing present a perfect panorama of life, beauty and delight.

The day has been so exciting and inspiring to look upon from deck that no services were attempted within, as all were eager to be out and commune with nature and nature's God. At 4:30 P. M. our ship slips silently into the harbor of Greannock, from which passengers for Glasgow are discharged. Those of us for Liverpool have another night and half-day on board; and with the wonders, beauties and glories of a strange day in our vision, we sing praises to Him who rules the sea and the land, and brings us safely into the haven of our dreams if we only trust Him.

HOW WETS AND DRYS SPEND MONEY.

Those who wish prohibition and sobriety should not be deceived by the widespread and increasing propaganda carried on by the wets. Bear in mind that over 50,000 ex-saloonkeepers are in an organization to which they pay one dollar a month the year around to carry on the propaganda for "State rights," "local option," repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and the rest, and that to this number is to be added the Du Ponts and other great manufacturers of alcohol who now get about a dollar or a dollar and a half a gallon for their products, but if the legal sale of liquor can be brought back they would not only get twice that price for their alcohol, but find more ready sale for same. In brief, we should keep in mind who it is, and for what, the opponents of prohibition carry on their incessant clamor that prohibition is a failure. Shall the ex-saloonkeeper and the Du Ponts and their kind lead us, or shall a care and concern for the welfare and sobriety of mankind guide us?

An Associated Press dispatch from Washington, D. C., carried these startling figures September 18th: "Organizations for and against prohibition have reported receipts of $374,810 and expenditures of $434,992 to the clerk of the House during 1930. Organizations opposed to the eighteenth amendment have, from the records on file, taken in $363,188 and disbursed $425,370. The records show receipts of only $11,621 and expenditures of $9,622 for dry organizations.

"Overshadowing all from a fiscal standpoint, are the reports of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, of which Pierre S. du Pont, Wilmington, Del., industralist, is chairman. From January 1st to May 31st, the association reported receipts of $332,839 and expenditures of $385,392. Officials of the association testified before the Senate lobby committee this year that the organization spent $427,213 in 1929, and would need more than $1,000,000 to carry on its work in 1930. The campaign committee of the Anti-Saloon League of America for the period ending September 10th reported receipts of $1,265, with no expenditures."

PROHIBITION.

No word is more used in the papers, in politics, and in ordinary conversation in these days than the word "prohibition." The eighteenth amendment comes in for a popular place in all of these lines of thought and expression. How it is that some men who, in other fields of thinking, seem to be capable of correct conclusions, go so far awry on this subject of prohibition is a problem unanswered. Three things enter into their way of thinking, but there may be some other factor that enters into their conclusions. These three things are appetite, money and position. Appetite is a controlling element in the thinking of many people, and the appetite for strong drink is one of the strongest cravings of the human being. Then money enters into the thought and action of many people. The Bible says that "the love of money is the root of all evil" (1 Tim. 6:10). Position is a third factor that enters into the thought some men take on this question. Ambition is more prevalent in a democracy than in a kingly government, because it opens the way for self-advancement. The ambitious man as a candidate for office is liable to fall into the error of trying to win support by adopting their way of thinking. When the constituency seems to be wet, the candidate for office is liable to violate his own judgment by trying to win others.

These three factors warp the judgment of many people, and they unconsciously misrepresent themselves. The drunkard, the bootlegger, and the over-anxious politician are liable to fall into this rut and violate their own best convictions. This is more likely than willful wrong positions on this subject. No one who knows the history of intoxicating beverages from early wines to distilled liquors can believe in the use of beverage alcohol in any form or strength.

At a special executive committee meeting of the Anti-Saloon League of Virginia, held in Richmond on Tuesday, September 16, 1930, Dr. Francis Scott McBride, general superintendent of the league in America, delivered a very illuminating address, which was more encouraging than discouraging. Among other striking things he said were, "that prohibition at its worst was better than saloons at their best." He related a good story of a man who wanted to go to the Senate, and opposed the eighteenth amendment to please certain voters. He was the father of five children. His wife said to him: "You don't have to go to the Senate, but you do have to provide for these five children." Prohibition, he declared, is a wonderful success. There are four drys to one wet member of the House in Congress, and five drys to one wet in the Senate. Dr. McBride is in a position to know the true situation, and his utterances have weight and value where they are known. The main trouble in this matter of prohibition is that the wrong side is better known than the right side. The press is said to be wet; but there is one great publisher who publishes seventeen dailies, or has published under his ownership, and all of them are dry. His name is Frank E. Gannett, and he tells plainly why he prefers to publish dry newspapers. The Albany Evening News and the Brooklyn Daily Eagle are two of his papers.

It goes without argument that the true members of the Christian Church, in the Southern Christian Convention, are on the dry side and support the eighteenth amendment, and that this can be said of all Protestant denominations; and that means that the eighteenth amendment is safe, and that even now it is better observed than Sabbath laws, traffic laws, and many other laws.

CANADA IN THE LIQUOR BUSINESS

The Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment, promoted and directed by the liquor interests of the country, offers as one of their strongest arguments against prohibition that Canada has solved the problem most satisfactorily by the government taking over and conducting the manufacture and sale of liquor. That organization has sent some of the best newspaper and magazine writers in the country to Canada to investigate and report their findings through the press. They have returned with glowing accounts of how this, our Northern neighbor, has really and truly solved the temperance problem through government control of the sale of liquor. People who read this stuff, so shrewdly and carefully written, and who themselves have not taken the time and trouble to get the facts, may be led to believe that, after all, maybe, we made a mistake when we outlawed the saloon.

Here are the facts and figures (more than a year old) taken from government records in Canada: The Saskatchewan Liquor Board, in their report, in which they are required to give correct figures, says: "Arrests for drunkenness increased 125 per cent during the first eight months of government control." Bear in mind that drunkenness is not a violation of the law in Canada. Only the drunks are arrested who violate the law in some other way.

Police Commissioner C. F. Burton, of Manitoba, says that "If all the drunks were arrested there would be no room for them in the jails." The liquor forces here in the United States argue that the moonshiner and the bootlegger are the products of prohibition, and that if the government took over the liquor business these would have to go out of business. The Alberta Liquor Board, in its report, says: "Our greatest problem is moonshining in the country districts." The Saskatchewan board reports: "Bootlegging increased 111 per cent the first year of government control." The British Columbia Liquor Board reported: "As much liquor sold by bootleggers as is sold by the government stores."

The Montreal Star, in discussing the question some time ago, stated that drunkenness among women had increased 53 per cent. A friend of mine who visited Canada a few weeks ago tells of a drunken orgy on an excursion boat on which he traveled one night in which there were as many drunken women as men.

The Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment and its cohorts argue that if people could get all the light wines and beers they want they would not want any hard liquors. The experiment was tried out in Canada through the opening of attractive beer parlors. The British Columbia Liquor Board, in its first report after these parlors were opened, says: "Since the opening of the beer parlors, the sales of hard liquor have increased 50 per cent."

The Quebec board, in its report for 1924-'25 (five years ago), says: "The sale of hard spirits increased 32,275 gallons in one year." In Saskatchewan the increase was 33 per cent in two years. The claim that light wines and beers (and that's what the liquor forces in the United States are fighting for) will promote temperance is positively silly. Not one person in a thousand can regularly and systematically take even a small amount of alcohol in any form into the system and remain temperate. Too many poor fools have tried that, only to find themselves finally in the gutter.

In Ontario, the figures show that the people spend $1,000,000 per week, $52,000,000 a year, for liquor—enough to keep the entire population, including men, women and children, about half drunk most of the time, if evenly distributed. In Canada there are seven provinces in which liquor is sold by the government. In these seven provinces there is a total population of $10,000,000. These seven provinces spend $160,000,000 a year for drink, or $16 a year for each man, woman and child. In these seven provinces the total sales for one year (1928) almost trebled.

If the sale of liquor in this country is ever legalized so people can go and buy it whenever they want it, life on our highways, with thousands of automobiles at forty-five miles per hour and up, will not be worth a nickle, especially on Sundays and public holidays. The convictions of drunken drivers in Canada increased 1,300 per cent from 1921 to 1929. How any Christian man, the husband of a good wife and the father of innocent children, can conscientiously favor the sale and use of liquor as a beverage is beyond me.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

People have many notions about the relation of different members of society in all of its aspects. This variety embraces business, social life, professional life, educational conditions, Church membership, and political positions. Those in the lower class, in all of these relations, consider their condition and their opportunities limited as comparde with others. But when the whole situation is understood, the differences that separate people and interfere with best results are not so great as usually imagined. When all the angles in human society are considered, it will appear that all have the same opportunity for service and enjoyment. The poor man is concerned to know how he may gain money or position; the man in possession of money or position is concerned about how he can hold in safety his possession. The illiterate is concerned about education; the literate is concerned about his position. The tragic thing about society is the differences that arise by one set looking down upon another and another set holding aloof from service because they imagine they are not wanted. This is especially harmful in the Church where all are welcome and all are needed. The janitor is as necessary as the preacher. The one opens the Church, the other opens the Bible. The listener in the pew is as important as the singer in the choir. It takes both to make worship. The choir never feels as worshipful in their practice as when they have the response of the congregation. Dress separates more people than character. Character brings people together; the lack of it separates them.

What is true of individuals is true of periods in time. One age has as good a time as another. Many think that people could not have had enjoyment before the days of modern conveniences; but they did. They had the best of their day, and people now have the best of our day. The young people who walked together or rode in buggies had just as good time as those who now ride in automobiles. All experiences are both real and relative; and when centuries are compared, they all have their good and bad, their poor and rich, and their small and great. The past centuries had their great men and great women, their great authors, and artists. In fact, the architects, painters and writers have no superiors in this machine age. The ladies of Greece and Rome felt just as important in their costumes as the ladies of France or America in this day of which men boast. Character was just as genuine in Washington's day as in Hoover's. All people in all ages have the same chance to be and to do right. A criminal in our day is as bad as in the time when only Indians roamed the uncut forests of this land, and they enjoyed their hunt as much as gentlemen now enjoy their golf. The women were as beautiful in their day as the women in this day. Worship in the log meeting-house was just as real as in the stone Church. Singing was just as worshipful when the minister read aloud the first line of each stanza as it is today when every worshiper holds a hymn-book that contains the words and the music. We boast of our age, but we forget that past ages made our day possible in schools, Churches, homes and society.

ELON LETTER.

Too great insistence on a particular point of view has brought the Protestant world the diversity of sects, a situation which is today the scandal of Christianity. We would do well to remember the exhortation of Paul to his Philippian brethren when he urged them so to conduct themselves that their moderation would be known to all men. The translators have found difficulty with the word "moderation." Some of them construe it as "forbearance"; others as "self-restraint"; others as "temperance." The particular word need not give us any special concern. The idea is clear, that we shall avoid extremes in every direction of our experience, so that our character will be symmetrical, well-rounded and set in the framework of Christian love like "apples of gold in pictures of silver." Self-restraint, forbearance, temperance, moderation, is of the very essence of the Christian way of life.

This is very different, however, from the principle for the organization of life and conduct suggested by the Greek philosopher Aristotle. Aristotle's teacher, Plato, had taught the subordination of the higher to the lower interests of life. Aristotle felt that what was needed was not the subordination of one realm of experience or interest to another, but symmetrical development in all the realms of human interest and experience. It did not occur to Aristotle, however, that a man might disproportionately develop all his powers in terms of an idealistic conception of life. Aristotle's sense of proportion would not prevent a fanatic or a slothful man from becoming grossly disproportionate, when judged in terms of ultimate values or standards. The Christian view of life is that it not only ought to be moderate, but moderate in the eyes of all good men. The Christian community interprets the Christian way of living as a standard of life, and would, therefore, constantly keep its eyes fastened on this standard in terms of which the moderate life in its judgment should be lived. The sense of proportion, therefore, is the Christian philosophy of life would be a governor preventing it from going to extremes of too violent action or of indolent inaction.

Virtue may become a vice. Men have known this for many ages. It is a good thing, for example, to eat food. A human being cannot subsist very long without sustentation. But gluttony is a vicious sin. It is a good thing to fall in love. I have known the life of an indolent or careless young man to be literally made over again when this happy experience had come to him, but to wear one's heart on the lapel of one's coat and to fall in love with every young lady one meets, that is to debase affection. It is a good thing for a man to pray, but it would be foolish in the extreme to devote all of one's waking hours to prayer-meetings. The application of the Christian principle of moderation in any realm of our experience is a wholesome procedure. It is a touch-stone that never fails to give a wholesome response. It is not without reason, therefore, that the apostle Paul encourages us to let our moderation be known to all men. And in our day, when there is such a widespread disposition to have our fling, to indulge natural inclination, to learn for ourselves by experience just what the consequences of certain lines of conduct are, there is particular need for the exercise and application of this Christian virtue. For college students in particular, there is need for dispassionate thinking, if true moderation and the consistent application of life principles consistent therewith are to exist.

ROSEMONT—BEREA.

These are busy days at Rosemont and Berea Christian Churches. At Rosemont, the old Church is being razed to make place for the new Rosemont, and at the Berea Church special evangelistic meetings are being held. These meetings have been in progress for ten days, and will come to a close tonight (Thursday, September 18th). The meeting was opened on the night of the 8th, with a fine sermon by Dr. C. C. Ryan, in the presence of a large audience, but on account of illness, Dr. Ryan could not remain with us, so on Tuesday night Rev. W. C. Hook came to the assistance of the pastor, and has been doing the preaching to the delight of the fine crowds that have heard him ever since. The attendance has indeed been most encouraging during the entire meeting, and the people are enjoying Bro. Hook very much. Some decisions have been made, and a large number of reconsecrations have been witnessed.

The work on the new Church at Rosemont will be begun as soon as the old buildings are out of the way, and we hope to get in the new Church in the early part of next year. In the meantime, we will have our services in the old Church, which has been moved on a back lot, thus enabling us to continue our work on the same grounds during the erection of the new Church.

The meetings of both the Church and building committee, in the interest of the building program, have all been very pleasant, and at the same time earnest and frank, each one trying to do the very best thing possible for the good of the whole program. In fact, the plans have gone through so lovely that our architect, Mr. B. F. Mitchel, was moved to remark to the pastor, "I have never seen a building program of a Church go through as smoothly in my life."

The following are the members of the building committee: O. F. Smith, A. L. Guynn, W. H. Farrow, J. R. Morrison, Jr., Mrs. O. S. Mills, Mrs. E. H. Cuthrell, Dr. L. C. Ferebee, H. L. Bondurant, and H. R. Morrison. Every one of these have taken a great interest in their task, showing at all times a very fine spirit, even when different opinions prevailed, making the program of our work very pleasant so far, and we feel sure this fine spirit will continue. The special meetings of the Church have also been characterized by the same spirit, and has granted every request the committee has made, and has approved the various reports of the committee from time to time.

Every one seems to be happy that their dream of a better Church is going to be realized, and we hope to be able to make the new Church redound to the glory of Him who "loved the Church and gave Himself for it."

FANCY GAP LETTER.

Miss Jewel Truitt and Miss Lilly Spain, of Waverly, Va., came to Fancy Gap on August 9, 1930, and put on a two-week daily vacation Bible school. The school was conducted as Bible schools elsewhere are conducted. The writer assisted by conducting the worship program. Then a period was devoted to a talk or a story by Miss Truitt, followed by the music period, which was conducted by Miss Spain. Then the children were divided into two classes under the supervision of Miss Truitt and Miss Spain. A recess was given, after which Miss Truitt took the larger girls for a period of domestic work; Miss Spain had the smaller children for a period in which they did handwork, drawing, etc.; the writer took the boys for the same period and we did some manual training. Then the entire school assembled for the closing exercises and drills.

The school was conducted at Elk Spur each morning from 9 to 11:30 o'clock, and at Rocky Ford from 2:30 to 5 P. M. Each school was better represented than of the previous year, and we feel that much good has been accomplished. We extend our appreciation to Miss Truitt and Miss Spain for their faithfulness and services at our Churches at Fancy Gap, Va.

We were very fortunate in having with us Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va., to assist us in a two-week meeting at Elk Spur. The meeting closed September 5, 1930. There were twenty-four confessions and two reconsecrations. At the close of the meeting we had nine additions to the Church. There are others who will unite with our Church later, and some who have expressed their desire to unite with other Churches.

We feel that Rev. and Mrs. Andes have brought a blessing to the community of our Elk Spur Church through their preaching and wonderful leadership. All Mrs. Andes lacks of being a minister is her license. She is a great worker and has a wonderful influence over an audience during a series of meetings. Mr. Andes preached the plain gospel truth, and his sermons had bearing and a convicting influence upon the lives of many. May God bless Bro. Andes in his field of labor.

Those who united with our Church at Fancy Gap were young people of the community. The writer's heart rejoices because some of the young people whom he had been working with and praying for have said by their action that they were going to live a life for Christ. If they will make Christ their ideal in life I am sure that they will do much toward revolutionizing our Church and bringing other lives into the kingdom of God.

May God's blessings be upon these people, and may His Spirit guide and direct their footsteps into paths of righteousness. We shall begin our meeting at Rocky Ford Church September 21st and continue for two weeks. We crave an interest in your prayers.

PALM STREET CHURCH.

The Ladies' Missionary Society met with the secretary, Miss Ophelia Morris, at the White Oak Hotel, September 11, 1930. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. J. E. Smith. Mrs. A. H. Henshaw opened the devotional service by reading a portion of the 22nd chapter of Matthew. The whole class then joined singing "Bless Be the Tie That Binds," after which the secretary led in prayer.

The secretary then read the minutes of the last meeting and called the roll, and each member repeated a verse of Scripture at the call of his or her name. The secretary then gave her report for the year, stating that there was seventeen members on the roll at the present and that there had been an average of nine present at the meeting since the society was organized in January, 1930.

The following program was then carried out: "Faithfulness" was the theme; Mrs. O. D. Taylor gave a reading entitled "The Faithfulness of Dr. Howsaire"; Mrs. W. E. Hinshaw then gave a brief history of Charlotte Hawkins Brown's life and work among her race in North Carolina; the secretary then read a letter which she had written Dr. and Mrs. Matthew J. W. White, Jr., of the Philippines, which was signed by each member of the society.

The following officers were elected to serve during the coming year: president, Mrs. J. E. Smith; vice-president, Mrs. B. T. Oliver; secretary, Miss Ophelia Morris; treasurer, Mrs. A. H. Hinshaw; superintendent of literature, Mrs. D. A. Murchison.

There being no further business, the society adjourned, to meet with Mrs. A. H. Hinshaw for the October meeting. Rev. J. L. Nease offered the closing prayer. The hostess then served fruits, which were enjoyed by all.

MT. CARMEL.

I have been preaching at this Church on the first and third Sundays since March, 1928. For fifteen months pryor to that time I had been recuperating from a breakdown which came to me while preaching at Antioch, Isle of Wight County, Va., Sunday, January 2, 1927. I had been preaching only a short time and was feeling fine when suddenly I was stricken. On April 22nd, the same year, while in Roanoke, Va., visiting in our son's home, I had a second attack which weakened me very much more, greatly impairing my speech also.

One physician said that I would not preach any more. We have often thought that doctors do not always know, and this was one time that I am glad this one didn't know. Anyhow, I am doing what is called preaching and am very thankful to be able to do it.

We have just closed a good meeting with Rev. W. H. Garman doing the preaching. We have had two other splendid revivals since I have had charge of the work here. Rev. O. D. Poythress was with us year before last, and Rev. T. N. Lowe last year. The preaching of all these brethren was well received and very helpful. We have received about fifty members and about a dozen or more have died.

I have the second and fourth Sundays open and would be glad to have them filled for the next year. The Lord has wonderfully restored my strength, and I want to use it in full-time service in preaching the gospel which means so much to me. There is a glory side to affliction. For one thing, you come to realize more the meaning of real friendship.

Again we want to say thank you to all who have given expressions of sympathy or rendered assistance in any way. Brethren, pray for us.

W. D. HARWOOD.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A DAILY PRAYER.

(September.)

Dear Christ of God, through whom God's will is borne to earth, as everywhere so much of doubt and desperation enshroud men's minds, make of Thy Church the agency, and of its members Thy messengers, to carry afar the truth that frees and holds. Thou who gavest the Church, O Master-Friend, through its good offices supply the hunger and want of little children and drive away despair. As unemployment and widespread dearth afflict our nation, Thou who didst multiply the loaves, put into the hands of anguished parents earnings adequate to allay family suffering. Thus may Thy love entwine and enfold even to the fullness of its saving power. Amen.

DOES NOT BELIEVE IN FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The writer was talking with a very cultured and a very charitably inclined lady recently who said emphatically, "I do not believe in foreign missions, and think every dollar spent for that purpose is wasted, literally thrown away. As for myself, I always help the poor, and there are always a plenty of them about us to be helped. I think our Christian duty and obligation of charity is to them."

That good lady was perfectly sincere, I judged, and she is not alone in her decided opinion. The reply of the writer was, "I think I have heard that position stated before, and quite often. In fact, it has been stated, no doubt, since the time when His disciples made almost the identical statement to the Christ. A woman, yes a woman, came to her Lord and just poured out on His head a whole box of very precious and costly perfume. The disciples said, "Now that was money wasted, absolutely thrown away. If she wanted to be charitable and generous and kind, why did she not take that money and give it to the poor? They need it, and there are a plenty of them all around us; and we believe in helping those about us who need help." And so those disciples were very decided in their opinion about what real charity and generosity consisted of.

Now look what the Lord said to those disciples, "Let that woman alone. She has made her offering for my sake, out of sheer love for me. The poor you have always with you. Wheresoever the gospel shall be preached in all the world, what this woman has done shall be told as a memorial of her." Now, what "gospel" was the Lord talking about, and why does He speak of it all of a sudden in world-wide terms? Well, it was the gospel that woman had preached by her act of devotion to her Lord.

And this is the soul, the dynamic, the spirit of foreign missions. Just a work done, a life dedicated, a gift made, not to the poor nor even for the sake of the "heathen," but out of sheer, genuine love to and for our Lord. We no more give our money nor send out missionaries for the sake of the heathen than did this woman who poured her love offering on the head of her Lord. We give our money and send out missionaries out of sheer love to our Lord—all just for His sake. We do not love the "heathen," but our Lord loves the remotest and the most needy in all the work. And He knew there were folks in the world who were in far greater need than the poor about us; for they need, and are perishing in soul for the want of the gospel. Our Lord knew well enough that those who would put first and foremost their love for Him would then care for the poor also.

Time, experience, history have proven and justified the position of our Lord. Who have built most of our homes of charity, supported most of our asylums and institutions of benevolence? Always and every time those who have made their first and larger gifts and dedicated their deepest love and consideration, not to their fellow-man, even the poor, but to their Lord, for His sake, that His saving message might be carried to those who perish without it. J. O. A.

EVANGELICAL CHURCH IN EGYPT.

It may interest the Church at home to have some of the following data concerning the Church in Egypt:

There are 20,200 communicants in the Churches between Alexandria and the Sobat, in the Sudan. There are fully twice that number who gather with these members, so that one may think of this Protestant community in Egypt as being from 50,000 to 60,000. There are 451 centers of preaching, of which 126 are organized congregations and 325 are larger or smaller gatherings for worship, usually without their Church buildings at the present time. Often the meetings are held in private homes, whether in the cities or villages.

The average attendance for the Sabbath morning services in these places shows a total of over 27,000 persons; at the evening meetings during the week the average attendance is 8,550. At the women's meetings during the week the average attendance is 8,200. Some of the congregations show an average attendance of from 300 to almost 900; for example, at Assiut (not including the college or the Pressly Memorial Institute), the average attendance is 880; at Nekhelia it is 600; at El Kom el Akdar it is 410; and at each of two Cairo congregations it is over 400.

There are 117 ordained ministers of whom 103 are pastors of congregations. There are 31 licensed preachers, and over 500 irregular teachers in the Egyptian Church. There are 10 congregations in the city of Cairo which have their own pastors, and of these 5 are entirely self-supporting; 281 Sabbath Schools, with 23,683 pupils and 1,067 teachers; 214 day and boarding-schools identified with this evangelical Church, of which 151 are for boys and 63 for girls, with an attendance of 12,263 boys and young men, and 6,940 girls, i. e., a total of 19,203, of whom 3,974 are Mohammedans. There are 127 young people's organizations, with a membership of 4,474.

The total budget for carrying on all the work conducted by the Church in Egypt amounts to over $420,000. It is true that this includes over $250,000 income from schools and which is not, therefore, to be considered as genuinely given for the support of evangelistic work. Yet there is an expense of $150,000 for the conduct of the Churches, including over $37,000 for the running expenses of the congregations and over $22,000 for the evangelization of districts from these congregations.—Dr. R. S. McClenahan, in United Presbyterian.

WHAT ONE BIBLE DID.

Commissioner Osias, Philippine commissioner at Washington, lists among the most helpful things missionaries have done in the Philippines is that of "translating and popularizing the Bible." A single instance illustrates its penetrating and transforming effect.

Some years ago a patient in the Tagbilaran Hospital was given a Testament. After recovery he took his Testament with him into the distant mountain barrio. Some time later a colporteur of the American Bible Society was trying to sell Bibles in a near-by hill town, but without success. An inhabitant said to him: "If you want to sell that book, why don't you go up into the hills to a certain barrio, for there they are all asking for that book?"

The colporteur went, asked for the leader of the barrio and found he was the man who had been in the hospital at Tagbilaran. This man had been leading his people in Bible study, and later organized them into a congregation and regular worship was being held every Sunday. Said he:

"We had no teacher, so we just stood up and read the Bible before the people and let it be our teacher. We had no preacher, so we just let the Bible speak to us. We had no prayer-book and none of us knew how to pray, so we just closed our eyes and talked to God."

The total circulation of the Bible in the Philippines since the establishment of the American Bible Society in the island in 1899 has been 2,616,757 volumes.—Missionary Review of World.

NEWS ITEMS

By Mrs. W. M. Jay.

The Bertie Rowland Missionary Society of the Holland Church has just completed a most successful year's work. The policy of the organization has always been to raise its apportionments by free-will offerings. The finances have been raised in full and all of the points on the standard of excellence have been met. A pageant was given at Easter under the direction of Mrs. J. R. Darden. Five new members have been added during the year. Mrs. Joe E. Holland is the efficient corresponding secretary of this society.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., held its last meeting of the Conference year Wednesday, September 10, and closed the most successful year of its history. For seven years the society has been divided into groups, meeting twice in the homes and once in a general meeting at the Church each quarter. Next year there will be group meetings each month in the quarter; also one general meeting at the Church. In this way a continuous program can better be carried on. It was voted to use as a basis for the programs "A Cloud of Witnesses," the foreign book suggested by the central committee. Mrs. R. B. Wood, who has served as president so acceptably for seven years, resigned and turned over to the new president, Mrs. C. L. Dawson, a complete organization with all requirements met for the Conference year.

The Willing Workers' Society of the Holland Christian Church is having a most profitable year under the leadership of Mrs. I. H. Luke and Mrs. G. G. Holland. The attendance has been good and eight new members have been added to the roll. A missionary study course has been completed, "Jumping Beans" and "Little Lord Jesus," having been used as the text. On Sunday night preceding Christmas a pageant was given, with special music as an added feature. The Willing Workers have raised their quarterly apportionment each quarter and hope to be a standard society by Conference.

REV. G. D. HUNT'S LETTER.

On Monday after the last third Sunday, I went from Ambrose, Ga., to Brookfield to assist Rev. Carpenter at Vanceville, Ga., in a revival meeting. I stayed with Bro. Carpenter at this Church until after services Friday night. He continued the service, however, until Sunday night following. This was one of the most gracious meetings of the year with me. I met so many of my old friends, and made so many new ones, until it was a joy to me to be there. The people, who are farmers, were so busy gathering their crop that our crowds in the daytime were small, but we had fine crowds at night and good interest was manifested.

The Church was much revived, and rejoiced greatly in the evidence of salvation. Many prayers were made and many testimonies were given by the faithful ones, and the people of God were made to rejoice together. Rev. Carpenter is doing a good work in South Georgia, and the people love him, and I think he is well located in the midst of a prosperous and happy people. Crops are fine in that section of the South. There is a vast difference in the appearance of things there and in our section of our own State.

The year is slowly but surely getting away from us, and Conferences will soon be called to assemble. What shall our answers be? Will it be said of us, "Well done," or will we be content with a knowledge of failure?

Before this letter gets into the columns of THE SUN, your field secretary's report will be read by quite a number of anxious and loyal men and women of our Church, and I trust that we may realize that we are facing a larger program and that we shall do all in our power to put our part of it over.

Drs. Jenkins and Beougher are planning a great rally for Piedmont Junior College on Saturday, the 20th of September, at 2:30 P. M., at which time United States Senator J. Thomas Heflin will be the principal speaker. This is a sufficient guarantee for a large gathering of people. Great plans are being formulated for Piedmont Junior, and here's hoping they may be put over. If there was ever a necessity for such a school among the common people, this is surely a necessity. God bless our Christian schools and colleges.

G. D. HUNT.

Holman Jewel Testament

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4¼ inches x⅜ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3⅜x4½ inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson I—October 5, 1930.

Zacharias and Elizabeth.

Golden Text: "And they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless."—Luke 1:6.

Lesson: 1:5-80.

Good Folks.

Zacharias and Elizabeth were good folks, the type of people who, in a quiet and unassuming way, live a life of righteousness. It is to be noted that the Scripture says, "righteous before God"—they were not pretenders or hypocrites, their religion was sincere and real, God Himself approved of their way of life. There is no substitute for godly character.

A Childless Home.

Here was a home that was childless, not by choice, but by necessity. There was a great yearning in the hearts of this man and this woman for children. What a rebuke they are to so many young married people of this day who do not want children. There are, of course, cases in which it is impossible for people to have children. But one of the factors in modern life that gives promise of being serious is the deliberate avoidance of parenthood on the part of young married couples, either because of what is thought to be economic grounds or because of selfishness and love of ease.

An Ideal Service of Worship.

"And the whole multitude of people were praying without at the time of incense." Here was an occasion when the people were in the spirit of prayer while the minister of religion performed his duties. It is no wonder that there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord. Alas, how comparatively few congregations are in the spirit of prayer during the hour of worship!

A Vision in the Temple.

The atmosphere of prayer and the sincerity of heart paved the way for the vision. Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. The ultimate purpose of worship is to give vision, a vision of God, of man in his finer possibilities, of life in all its glory.

The Penalty of Unbelief.

"Because thou believest not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their season." It is recounted that in one case Jesus Himself could do no mighty works because of unbelief. What a price all of us pay for our unbelief in God and in His promises.

Unanswered Prayer.

Zacharias had undoubtedly been praying a long time for a child, and his prayer had apparently been unanswered. Persistency as well as sincerity is required in prayer.

Obedience Brings the Blessing.

In due season the child was born. But it was not until Zacharias had named the child John, in obedience to the command of the angel, that he was restored to normal hearing and speech. The blessings of God, especially His spiritual blessings, are contingent upon obedience. To obey is better than to sacrifice.

Saved to Serve.

"That we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear." Here is a fundamental principle of the Christian religion. Salvation is not simply an end in itself; it is a means to an end. God redeems, frees, liberates, in order that His children might render the larger service. Service ought to be and is a fruitage of real salvation. In a sense, it is the end of salvation.

Road-Builders for the King.

"Thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare His ways." In a sense, this is what all of us are to do. We are to be road-builders for the King. We are to prepare the way for Him. There are mountains of ignorance and oppression and prejudice and hatred to be leveled down, and there are valleys of despair and sorrow to be leveled up.

Strong in Spirit.

"And the child grew and waxed strong in spirit." His godly parents and His early training, coupled with His innate ability and sturdiness of purpose, were reflected in the spiritual character of the young Prophet.

In the Desert.

"And was in the deserts till the day of his showing unto Israel." Away from the rush and the vice of the towns and cities, with time for reflection and meditation, this young Prophet developed those inner resources which made him, in the estimation of Jesus, the greatest of prophets. Ministers and religious workers, all of us need to get away from things and activities sometimes. We need that solitude about which the psalmist writes when he says, "Be still, and know that I am God."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic: "How May We Help the Folks in Our Community?"

Piano Prelude: "Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone?"

Hymn: "Jesus Calls Us."

Prayer (in unison): "Let the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, my Strength and my Redeemer."

Hymn: "Rescue the Perishing."

Scripture reading: James 1:27.

Topics for Talks on the Lesson.

1. "Whom Should We Help?" A certain lawyer once asked Jesus, "And who is my neighbor?" The story in Luke 10:25-37 gives Jesus' answer. Who are our neighbors? What different nationalities do they include? In what different employments are they found? How do they compare with each other socially? In the eyes of the Master are they all equal? Why, then, do we make such distinctions between so-called "classes" of people? With God as the Father of all, what is our relation to the other people of the world? How should we regard each other?

2. "What Jesus Thought a Christian Should Do for Others." Read Matt. 25:31-46 and Luke 4:16-21. Make a list of the deeds found in these passages which Jesus considered important. What did Jesus spend His life doing?

3. "Who Needs Our Help?" Read Job 29. In what different ways did job help others in his time? Why many of these same ills still burden people today? Compare the two lists you make. What needs arise with the crowding of the masses into the cities? (Think this over in its bearings on the health, wealth, morals and happiness of the people.)

4. "How the Needs are Being Met." (a) People have always been interested in their own health. Why are they now concerned about the health of all others? Tell something about the promotion of public health. Why should a Christian try to better the physical condition of others? In doing that, what is his service to the kingdom of God?

(b) Do the children and young people of our community have good opportunities for wholesome play? What can our society do to improve these opportunities?

(c) How can we help develop a better spirit of fellowship in our community?

(d) Can our society help the underprivileged in our community?

(e) Plan a week-day meeting to discuss some project in community work that your society may undertake. You might provide more books for the library, plan some ways of beautifying the community, plan some way by which children who are talented in music, art, etc., may receive the proper encouragement and training.

Poem: "Love Thyself Last."

"Love thyself last; look near, behold thy duty
To those who walk beside thee down life's road;
Make glad their days by little acts of beauty,
And help them bear the burden of earth's load.

"Love thyself last; look far, and find the stranger
Who staggers 'neath his sin and his despair;
Go, lend a hand and lead him out of danger,
To heights where he may see the world is fair.

"Love thyself last; and thou shalt grow in spirit
To see, to hear, to know, and understand;
The message of the stars, lo, thou shalt hear it,
And all God's joys shall be at thy command."

Discuss in the society the meaning of the following quotations: "Nothing so deadens the sympathies and shrivels the power of enjoyment as the persistent keeping away from the great opportunities for helpfulness and a continual ignoring of the starvation struggle which makes up the life of at least half the race."—Jane Addams.

"Without the advance and improvement of the whole, no man can hope for any lasting improvement in his own moral or material individual condition."—Jane Addams.

COMMUNICATED.

At the recent Virginia Valley Central Conference I procured a copy of the pamphlet issue of the proceedings of 1930 Southern Christian Convention. Last evening (my first opportunity) I read it through, experiencing, for the most part, an appreciative sense of its studied, forward outlook; but not until I reached nearly the end of page 49 did I get the big thrill of the whole resume, viz: the resolution referring to a "promotional agent" or "general secretary." Truly, the resolution is a noble gesture. It points toward a most necessary realization.

Mrs. J. J. Lincoln.

We have received the report of Rev. G. D. Hunt as field secretary of our two most southern Conferences. It shows untiring effort on his part and resultant accomplishments. We will give Sun readers the benefit of this report in an early issue.

DOCTOR DILLARD OF THE JEANES FUND. By Benjamin Brawley. Revell; $1.75; pp. 151.

James Hardy Dillard is one of the rarest spirits of our generation. A ripe scholar, he has always found his chiefest interest in folks. Well do I recall my first meeting with him. We were riding from the far South on the same train. I laid down the book which I was reading and in which my name and address were written to go to the diner. When I returned, the distinguished and kindly gentleman who had been seated opposite me had moved over into my seat and was scanning the book I had been reading.

"Quite an interesting book," he remarked as he introduced himself. But his interest was not in the book. It was in the institution I was connected with and in me. He knew several of our trustees and had often desired to get acquainted with our work on the inside, which he had come to appreciate in its product, many of whom he had met. The remainder of that journey to Greensboro, N. C., where we parted, was an inspiration to me.

Since our initial meeting on the train, I have visited Dr. Dillard in his cultured home under the shadow of the University of Virginia, in his unique and spacious offices on Main Street of Charlottesville, and been thrown in his presence on other occasions. A letter from him is different. I have many of them filed away.

The biographer draws his portrait, and draws it accurately. Coming from one of the aristocratic families of Virginia and North Carolina, educated in the Norfolk Academy, a real educational institution, and in Washington and Lee, sought for as teacher, professor and dean in the South's leading institutions of higher learning, this cavalier scholar became so imbued with the spirit of service to the colored race that he has devoted twenty-five creative years to a crusade of helpfulness on their behalf.

Idealist, Dr. Dillard is also a realist. He has no final solution for the race problem. As president of the Jeanes fund and of the Slater fund, as administrator of the Phelps-Stokes fund, as member of the General Education Board, as member of inter-racial and international commissions, he has always felt that in every situation there could be found a "next best" thing to do. His philosophy will be described by some as opportunistic, but it is based on a wise and sympathetic statesmanship and a firm conviction that ever more light is sure to burst on the race question as men and women of good will honestly seek the immediate next best step in any situation, no matter how tense that situation may be. He has never hesitated to declare his convictions in any crisis and his voice has had the authority of the prophet, for white college and university men and women in particular and also for the colored race.

His program for the colored race has changed with his responsibilities, as is to be expected for one who sees life as a growing and enlarging experience. At first he was content with primary insistence on elementary training for negroes, but in the latter years he has devoted more and more attention to higher and professional leadership, though with no let up in his original interest. A firm believer in State rights, he has yet advocated aid for negro education, because he sees that the whole nation is responsible for the negro's presence here.

Throughout his eventful and fruitful leadership in negro education, Dr. Dillard has insisted on three fundamental things: the acquirement of better homes by negroes, the enlightenment of the negro preachers as to practical religion, and the improvement of their schools. He is not satisfied with what he has been able to achieve, nor does he think this present generation has the ability to settle the race question fully. He is, however, able to see the next step, and he is brave and courageous in taking it. That is all he thinks our day should attempt. He is sure wisdom will not die with us. A saner man never essayed a program of social and racial betterment nor with a finer sense of practical limitations.

It is such a man—optimistic, conservative liberalist, sympathetic, friendly, democratic, believing in fundamentals in everything "from the basic virtues in morals to the first principles in arithmetic," humorous as distinct from witty, tolerant, lover of his fellow-man, whom he would prefer to call his brother-man without reference to the color of their skin, skilled in perceiving the meanings and values of life—it is of such a man that this book tells. Every youth in the land should read this volume, for it will quicken a noble and realistic idealism in any open mind. And every educator, every minister, every public official should read it, for it will serve as an indictment of the conscience for those who would solve racial issues except in Christian terms as well as to point the way for practical statesmanship in the solution of this vital problem.

It is not often that a biographer has so charming a personality to interpret, and it is rarer that the interpretation is done so well as in this instance. Biography can so easily degenerate into petty fault-finding or into sentimental adulation, the Scylla and the Charybdis of clap-trap writing, from both of which this book is singularly free. Read this biography and you will be grateful that our day has produced such a man as James Hardy Dillard and a biographer able to cause him to live through the written page.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

"Let no man despise thy youth."—1 Tim. 4: 6-16.

A remarkable event took place recently on one of the beautiful lakes near Boston. A young man was taking lessons in swimming and life-saving from an athlete, when a woman not far away tried to touch bottom with her feet. She fell into a hole, went down over her head, came up screaming, and then went down again. Instantly the young man dived from his boat, swam to the drowning woman, seized her and swam with her to the shore, where he gave her first-aid treatment which revived her.

That was quick work. That was the proving of the young man's studies. He did not resign the task in favor of his ready and experienced instructor. He did not say to himself, "After I finish this course of lessons I'll be prepared to rescue the drowning." He simply leaped into the water and made use of what he knew.

In that way he set us a good example for our Christian work. Time is short. Pitch in anywhere and at any time!

Prayer.—We would be so zealous in Thy service, dear Lord, that we shall not think of ourselves but only of our opportunity. Quicken our apprehension, we pray, and make our courage prompt and alert, that no soul within our reach may go down in the black waters of sin and death. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD.

"God said, Let there be light; and there was light."—Gen. 1:1-8.

Dr. A. A. Michelson, the Nobel prize-winner, became famous by measuring the speed of light more accurately than it ever was measured before. By sending a beam of light from one mountain to another he determined its speed to be 186,284 miles a second. That value was held to be correct within one part in 100,000, or within less than two miles a second. Not content with that, Michelson now plans a more accurate experiment, using a sheet-iron pipe a yard in diameter and half a mile long. He will pump the air from the pipe so as to remove its resistance, and will send a light beam back and forth through the tube by means of mirrors and a rapidly revolving prism. Thus he expects to reduce the probable error to one part in a million, or less than a fifth of a mile a second.

The mere statement of this stupendous investigation will give us some idea of the vastness of the universe and the marvel of the Creator's work. He who has sent light pulsing through all space at this unbelievable rate is He who in His Son is the Light of the world.

Prayer.—God of the light! Christ of the morning! Forgive our dullness and gloom. Pierce through every cloud that overshadows us. Brighten our lives with the sparkle of Thy happiness. Fill us with Thy radiant cheer. Light of the world, be our light also, as Thou dost long to be. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE DEADLY ARROW.

"Their tongue is a deadly arrow; it speaketh deceit; one speaketh peaceably to his neighbor with his mouth, but in his heart he layeth wait for him."—Jer. 9:1-9.

Many a man whose speech is pleasant, smooth as butter, unctuous and flattering, takes pride in his words, and does not stop to consider how far down they go. How can such peaceable speech be a deadly arrow? Slander is far from him, curses are his abomination, nothing is the matter with his speech but its insincerity; and who, he asks, can discover that? And anyway, if in his heart he hates his neighbor, is it not creditable in him to keep his hatred to himself, hiding it behind a mask of friendly words?

But hatred never can be kept to one's self. Friendly words never serve as a mask. A hypocritical tongue always has a poisoned tip, always is a deadly arrow. No one but the speaker himself is fooled by it—not even the hearer, surely not God!

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, grant that we may trust in nothing but honesty. What we would appear to be, that let us be. Let us take no heed to our speech, but to our nature. Let us love God and man with all our heart, and leave our words to take care of themselves. In Thy name, who art the Truth. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GOD'S DELIGHT.

"A false balance is an abomination to Jehovah; but a just weight is his delight."—Prov. 11:1-9.

Very often in reading the Bible we come across sentences stronger than the utterances of the most vigorous social reformer of the present day. The old Book is still abreast of the time; nay, leagues ahead of it.

Such a sentence is the one just quoted. "God's abomination," "God's delight," those are downright terms; when we see them applied to false balances and just weights we become thoughtful. For all of us, whether we deal out things in a store or not, handle balances and weights. We are all very quick to form opinions even about matters that have perplexed the sages for centuries. And which of us ever hesitates to pass judgment on a man or a woman whom we have known for a few weeks or months? "I don't like him," we say, as if that settled the matter.

Justice in judgment is a much-needed Christian virtue. A modest slowness in forming opinions denotes a really fine and strong character.

Prayer.—Our Father in heaven, we want Thy wisdom. Forbid that by our unconsidered decisions we do wrong to any man, or harm any righteous work. May Thy delight be our joy. Amen.

FRIDAY.

YIELDING A PROFIT.

"When ye shall have done all the things that are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants; we have done that which it was our duty to do."—Luke 17:5-10.

It is a poor and paltry spirit that contents itself with mere duty-doing. What is over and above duty is what counts. That it is which adds the spring and the joy to Christian living. God might have created this world with no beauty of leaf and flower, no color of sunsets, no splendor of the rainbow, no sparkle of the sea, no loveliness of childhood. Only a slight change in the laws of nature would eliminate this charming over-plus of beauty, and the universe would be gray and dull.

The Creator has made it very clear that He wants enthusiastic children, men and women who are not afraid to work overtime, to give more than their share, to praise extravagantly, to throw up their hats, to go the limit and then beyond. The Christian who says, "I won't budge a step till the others get in motion," never walks with Jesus Christ.

Prayer.—Dear Jesus, of whom it was said that Thou wert eaten up with zeal, how cold, how useless, how unrewarding must many of us appear in Thy eyes! With perfect abandon, Thou hast given Thyself to us. We would give ourselves to Thee with equal lavishness. May we know the delight of the super-abundant life. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HIS ARM FOR THEIR LIVES.

"If any man cometh unto me, and hateth not his own . . . life also, he cannot be my disciple." Luke 14:25-35.

One of the greatest heroic acts of recent months took place the day before that on which I am writing. It was in Belgrade, and a lieutenant was lecturing to a class of soldiers. In his hand was a grenade with which he was illustrating his instructions, when the pin dropped out accidentally. Instantly the officer shouted to his pupils to throw themselves on the floor, while he rushed to the window. A glance, however, showed him the yard outside full of soldiers, so he held the grenade in his hands till it exploded, tearing off his right arm.

That is heroism—the spirit which acts instinctively for the safety of others at any and all cost to one's self. There was no time for debate, but the lieutenant had the heroic faculty, which is an inner instinct, a quality of the soul. Instantly to choose the course of brotherhood and self-sacrifice—that is heroism. It is not the product of reason, though reason confirms it and applauds it: it is the result of character.

Prayer.—Now, may the Lord help us to this heroic character, this glorious instinct. May we never throw ourselves behind others for our safety, but before them for this protection. In the name of Him who was the Protector of the world. Amen.

SUNDAY.

SEWAGE POWER.

"From weakness were made strong."—Heb. 11: 32-40.

An inventor has now found a way to utilize gas that is formed in the process of the disposal of sewage. As the sludge is digested in the tanks, being transformed into a useful fertilizer, an enormous amount of gas is produced, which is saved and afterwards used in power engines. The gas burns in an almost colorless flame, which is very hot. In a single sewage plant the value of the gas thus transformed into power is $300 a month.

And so let every soul take courage. You may manufacture strength out of your weakness. Every conquest of sin will make you more heroic. Victory over any temptation will leave you higher in the scale of being. God might have removed temptation from you, but that would have removed from you the chance to strengthen your moral fiber. It was the Holy Spirit that led the Son of God into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil. So cleanse your life of its sewage as to transform it into fruitfulness and power.

Prayer.—Through Thy grace, our Saviour. Not in our own strength, for we are inert, and the gases of sin remain poison gases in us. But the Celestial Engineer shall show us the way out of poison into power.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

Rev. Joseph W. Fix, Preacher.

GREAT CHARACTERS OF OLD TESTAMENT.

By A. C. MacKinney.

Carlyle tells us "that great men, taken up in any way, are profitable company. We cannot look, however imperfectly, upon the great men without gaining something of him."

Abraham.

Almost forty centuries have passed since the "Father of the Faithful" left his birthplace, Ur of the Chaldees, one of the most ancient and progressive of the Chaldean cities, to journey under divine guidance toward a land he knew not of. Abraham today looms as one of the most august characters of history. Jews, Christians, and Mohammedans alike revere and honor him as their benefactor. By the fulfillment of divine promise all of the families of the earth in him have been blessed.

Joseph.

The sale of Joseph into slavery seems a heartless and wicked thing to have done. Subsequent events, however, prove it was but another signal instance of the providence of God working toward great ends. From slavery to sovereignty is a long, long way. Yet Joseph succeeded in traversing it. Joseph's elevation is a tribute to his genius and his character. For a half-century he ruled over a foreign country and a foreign people. The world has not seen a greater executive. Nothing but transcendent talents and services can account for his retention of office and his marked success. Joseph was the first of four foreigners ever to be initiated into the mystic esoteric rites of the Egyptians, Moses, Pythagoras, and Plato being the other three.

Moses.

Moses is one of the colossal figures of world history. What a career did the son of the Hebrew bondwoman lead in the palaces of Memphis, sitting at the monarch's table, feted as a conqueror, adopted as a grandson and perhaps as heir, a proficient in all the learning and arts of the most civilized nation on the earth. But, whether in pleasure or honor, the soul of Moses soars beyond his circumstances, and he seeks to avenge the wrongs of his brethren.

Moses now enters upon the last division of his life, by far the most remarkable. Forty years of trying hardships! How bravely he "endures as seeing him who is invisible." The masterly way in which he led the semi-barbarous people through their myriad experiences pales Xenophon's Anabasis. Greater still is his massive work in molding this people into a nation, thrilled with a national existence, a national consciousness, and a national purpose. In addition to these stupendous labors, he outdoes Hammurabi, Solon, and Lycurgus in giving to his own people a theocratic code and to all the world in all ages the basic principles of jurisprudence. The Ten Commandments have a universal scope and seem destined to endure throughout all time, never to be abrogated, "a direct injunction of the Almighty to the end of time."

David.

David is the greatest of the Hebrew monarchs. "Great in war; great in peace; great in action; great in meditation." He is truly a versatile genius of the first magnitude. He ruled wisely, justly, and well. His throne was secure. His subjects were happy, prosperous, and loyal, and his armies were victorious. He made possible the fame and glory of Solomon. He filled the coffers with gold. He made preparation for the future erection of that great house of God, Solomon's Temple. He was not a perfect man. He was guilty of follies and sins, even adultery and murder. But he was one of the most penitent men that ever lived. When accused by Nathan he prostrated himself before the Almighty, "offering the most memorable instance of contrition recorded in history." Doubtless, this won him recognition as "a man after God's own heart."

David was probably the greatest musician in Israel, and as a poet he has no peer. To be the author of the psalms he wrote, particularly the 23rd, secures his niche forever in the hall of fame. For thirty years David was the nation's idol and its pride. "He was an Achilles and a Ulysses, a Marcus Aurelius and a Theodosius, an Alfred the Great and a St. Louis combined, creating an empire, yet transmitting to posterity a collection of poems identified forever with the spiritual life of individuals and nations."

Isaiah.

Isaiah, statesman, poet, historian, and the greatest of the prophets "in his spiritual discernment and profound insight of the future," was born in Jerusalem about 760 B. C. His father's name was Amos and he seems to have been wealthy and to have belonged to the upper ranks of society. He, no doubt, gave Isaiah every advantage which the times afforded. H. G. Wells rated Isaiah the representative prophet of the Old Testament and classifies his book as one of the twelve greatest in world history. He appears as one of the most eloquent men who ever lived and spoke.

He came in "an age of moral decline with a tendency toward idolatry." The flames once kindled by the eloquent Joel had all but died out and wickedness was abroad in the land. Isaiah, though born in the purple, was an ascetic by nature, possessed of great dignity and wisdom, "He was a retiring, contemplative, rapt, austere man, severe on passing follies, and not sparing in his rebukes of sin in high places, something like Savonarola of Florence, both as preacher and prophet, exercising a commanding influence on political affairs and on the people directly." Although he was honored in four reigns, it is generally held he suffered martyrdom.

In the sixth chapter of Isaiah is found his vision of the Lord's glory. Isaiah was born with a genius for religion, and although at the time of the vision he was but a mere lad, he had perhaps formulated very definite theological conceptions and convictions. Through this vision everything was heightened and intensified. He is overwhelmed with the divine Majesty and deeply impressed with the sinful state of his people. Here his impassioned message, filled with bold and flaming imagery, is born. Here is a message from a burning heart and, as Augustine says, it will set other hearts afire. In majestic description, Isaiah is the peer of Job. He is the towering project of hope and forgiveness and love. Over and over again he tells "of salvation, peace and the glory of Zion." He is the prophet of cheer and optimism.

Two high points stand out with great vividness in his preaching, "the certain judgments of God in view of sin; retribution on all offenders. And, secondly, the mercy and forgiveness of God in case of repentance." He also warns that "national wickedness will be followed by national disaster," which all history certainly substantiates.

At no time does he attain such rapturous heights as when his mighty gaze is turned down through the centuries to behold the coming of the glorious Deliverer, "whose name shall be Wonderful Counselor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." How prophetically wonderful is this prophecy given seven hundred years before the advent of the Messiah!—Christian-Evangelist.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

It is realy interesting to work with children in the home, in the school-room, or in the Orphanage. See them grow and develop. It is interesting to see the difference in ideals, ambitions and goals set. So much difference in children in the same family with same father and mother, same home surroundings and influence. In our Orphanage work we have a splendid opportunity to study children.

It is really amusing to see how they take up new ideas, and how they think out new things. I was walking across the campus a few days ago and saw a little fellow walking on stilts. He had made them long and he was walking much higher than the rest of us. He seemed to be very proud that he had learned to walk on stilts higher than others. In another week quite a number will be walking on stilts—a new thing. Many of the little boys will have to try it out, and some of the little girls will give them a try out, too. Everything goes in a craze. Sometimes it's marbles. Every little fellow will play marbles. Then it's skates, then baseball, and football. The remarkable thing about it is how the little fellows will change from one thing to another so quickly.

But of all the "fads" they have taken up from time to time, there is one that has not struck the Orphanage, though it has invaded so many homes in our country and other countries; that is, "dieting." They all go to the table three times each day, and their appetites seem to be in first-class condition. To feed good, wholesome food to more than 100 children three times each day takes some income to meet bills. Now school has opened, and it's books, pencils and tablets. Then, too, winter is almost here—shoes, clothes, sweaters and caps. Please think of us.

THE SUN LETTER.

The circulation manager of THE CHRISTIAN SUN has apportioned to our Churches in the Southern Christian Convention the number of new subscribers which the Church is requested to furnish in order to get the subscription list of THE CHRISTIAN SUN up to the number that will take care of the financial needs of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, so it will pay its own way and not be a burden on the Convention. This list has been forwarded to the pastors of the several Churches, requesting that they get up their quota between now and when Conference meets and send them in to the circulation manager.

We truly hope that our pastors will either take this matter up with their Church people or get some active person in every Church to work up the list. The number of new subscribers asked for in every Church can be easily gotten if some one will take interest and pride enough to work up this list.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN should be in every home in the Christian denomination, and it is the best medium through which our people can keep in close touch with our Church and what it is doing. Because through our columns we are informed as to the undertakings and accomplishments of our college, the Mission Board, and Orphanage, and other departments of the Church. How can we keep in touch with these institutions and be informed in any better way than through the columns of THE CHRISTIAN SUN?

Fifty-one issues for $2.00 per year; six months for $1.00. Let us do our best for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and see if we cannot get it on a financial basis.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Circulation Manager.

LANETT, ALA.

We are in the midst of our "Loyalty Campaign" with the Christian Church at Lanett. We began on the first Sunday in this month. The attendance and interest have been very gratifying. On the first Sunday, at the 11 o'clock service, we received one member, and on yesterday we had very fine spiritual services at both morning and evening hours, with five additions. At the morning service we preached from the text, "Prepare to Meet Thy God, O Israel"; last night from the text, "Sin, When it is Finished, Bringeth Forth Death." The Lord honored His people with His presence, and it was a great day with us. May His name be praised for all the good that was done.

What all Christians need to learn is a lesson of loyalty to Christ and His kingdom. When we learn it, the cry of hard times and corruption in politics will cease. The religion of Jesus Christ is the salvation for this sin-cursed world. Let every Christian stand in His place 'round about the camp, and Christ will win the victory over the world, the flesh and the devil.

Brethren, pray for us, that the Lord may continue His blessings toward us, and that we may honor His name.

OBITUARIES.

KNIGHT.

Rev. J. W. Knight left us for his spiritual home September 10th, and his body was laid in the cemetery at Mt. Bethel Christian Church September 12th, in the presence of at least fifteen hundred people. Bro. Knight was known and loved by many. He was a faithful and consecrated minister of the gospel for thirty years. He was a man of deep religious convictions and stood by his convictions to the end. He was one of our most consecrated ministers. The large attendance at his funeral was evidence of his standing in his community. He leaves a wife, who stood with him in his official and spiritual life; he also leaves ten children (5 daughters and 5 sons). Here is sympathy for the bereaved family.

There were eight ministers present—Revs. C. H. Rowland and Rice, both of Greensboro; Hill, of Colfax, N. C., of the W. M. E. Church, and J. W. Patton, T. E. Green and the writer, who conducted the service, assisted by Bros. Green and Patton. God bless the bereaved.

P. T. KLAPP.

On the morning of September 10th, Rev. John W. Knight was called from the labors of this life to his eternal reward.

In his going, our Conference (N. C. & Va.) sustains a heavy loss. He has left to us who remain the unfinished task. May we labor with that zeal that ever characterized his noble, Christian life. Burial services were held in his home Church, of which Church he was pastor at the time of his death, Mount Bethel, in charge of Rev. P. T. Klapp, for many years one of Bro. Knight's warmest friends. Bro. Klapp was assisted by Rev. T. J. Green and Rev. J. W. Patton. Present at his funeral were perhaps more than one thousand friends who came to pay a last tribute of respect to this fallen hero.

May God comfort his sorrowing relatives and friends. He stated to the writer a few days before the end came that he was not only willing but anxious to depart and be with Christ, which is far better. His faithful work remains a monument to his memory.

R. A. WHITTEN.

FARMER.

Mrs. Roxie Boyd Farmer, wife of Chas. David Samuel Farmer, of News Ferry, Va., died of pernicious anemia at Watts Hospital, Durham, N. C., September 10, 1930, and was buried at Pleasant Grove, Halifax County, Va., September 12th by her pastor. Sister Farmer was a devoted member of the Church at Pleasant Grove Church from early childhood. She was the daughter of Obediah and Emma Farmer, was married to Charles Farmer November 24, 1882, and to this union were born eight children: Lella Long, Nannie Emma, Wilson Obediah, Mabel Hale, Julia Blanche, Charles Pressley, John Melvin, and Archie David, all of whom are living.

Sister Farmer was a loyal and faithful Christian, a devoted and loving wife, a tender and affectionate mother, a good and true neighbor, highly respected and loved by all who knew her. She was a patron of Elon College for twenty-five years in the aggregate attendance of her children, and was a loyal supporter of all the enterprises and institutions of her Church. She leaves to mourn their loss a devoted husband, eight children, and a host of friends and relatives. Her life was a beautiful exemplification of Christian womanhood, and we commend the sustaining grace of our Heavenly Father to all those who mourn at her departure.

W. C. WICKER.

CUMMINGS.

William Lee Cummings was born December 10, 1862, and departed this life September 16, 1930, with funeral and burial September 17th, at Mt. Bethel Christian Church, in the presence of a large congregation. The service was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. A. Whitten, of Reidsville, N. C.. There were present three other reverend brethren—Tate, of the M. E. Church; Pegg, of the M. P. Church, and Southered, of the C. D. Church.

Bro. Cummings was a consistent member of the Christian Church at Mt. Bethel for twenty-eight years. He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, three sons and one daughter. These children all reside in Greensboro, N. C. He also leaves one sister and one brother. May heaven's blessings rest upon this bereaved family.

ELON COLLEGE

of the

CONGRETATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CHURCHES IN THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

DARDEN.

Whereas, Mrs. Elizabeth Darden departed this life at her home, near Holland, Va., August 17, 1930, in the 80th year of her age; and whereas, Mrs. Darden was one of the oldest members of Holy Neck Church and the Woman's Missionary-Aid Society; be it resolved:

1. That in her death the Church and society and the community have lost a loyal and devoted member and neighbor, and feel a keen sense of loss and regret at her departure.

2. That we are grateful for her long and useful life, and commend her virtues to those who come after her.

3. That we express to her family our sincerest sympathy and pray that our Heavenly Father may comfort and keep them.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy sent to The Christian Sun, and one placed upon the records of the society.

SHEPHERD.

F. R. Shepherd was born January 1, 1856, and departed from this life August 28, 1930. His wife, Helen E. Shepherd, was born September 7, 1858, and died August 26, 1930. Their funeral was conducted at Bethlehem Christian Church by the writer, assisted by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Patton, of Elon College, and Rev. L. W. Gerringer, of Burlington.

Their remains were placed in the same grave in the Church cemetery. Bro. and Sister Shepherd had long been faithful members of Bethlehem Church. About 1,200 persons attended the funeral.

They were married in 1878, having lived together fifty-two years. They reared a family of ten children—five boys and five girls. Two of the girls preceded them to the grave.

This father and mother in Israel lived out their alloted time and lived it well. They finished their work together—what a beautiful finishing! They fought a good fight. They went down to the grave together, and as their bodies go back to dust their spirits have gone back to God, who gave them. May the Lord bless and comfort the loved ones left behind.

SPORTSMANSHIP.—

Washington has recently been entertaining 250 lawyers from Europe, most of them from England. As a body, they refuse to drink while in America. It is just that attitude of good sportsmanship and respect for law which has made Great Britain great and will keep it great.

THE ISLANDS OF THE SEA.—

Rotuma, a small island in the South Seas, has a prohibition law which, according to the tales of seafaring men, is 100 per cent effective. The standard drink of the islands is coconut milk. Christian America should be eually strong in its position on prohibition, and the standard drink here should be pure water.

PASTORS' CONVENTION.—

The Ohio Pastors' Convention will be held in Columbus the week of January 18, 1931, by the Council of Churches. The theme announced is "The Technique of an Efficient Pastor." This is the twelfth annual session of this convention, which will be devoted to the discussion of the problems the pastors meets in his every-day life and work. The program provides for a four-day session, in which numerous addresses and discussions by distinguished speakers will furnish food for thought. Twelve hundred miniters of twenty or more denominations registered in the 1930 convention, the theme of which was "Christian Unity." Wide-awake pastors are ever on the alert to keep abreast of the times by study and self-improvement; the others soon go on the shelf by pernicious anemia or premature senility.

THEY ARE NO LONGER TWAIN.—

Progress continues in the vitalizing of the union of the Christian and Congregational Churches of Ohio into a single homogenious body. The new "Ohio Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches" has created a joint board of trustees on which both former denominations are represented. The former Ohio Congregational News has become the News-Herald, serving both denominations. The alignment of districts of the two groups is being changed with a view to merging them where they overlap. The Woman's Missionary Societies of the two old denominations have a joint committee at work on merging their plans of operation. This spirit of making the merger effective should extend to all parts of the merger until there should be a vital union of the one family of the "Congregational-Christian Church."

WORLD S. S. CONVENTION.—

The World Sunday School Convention will hold its eleventh session of that convention in the city of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in 1932. Dr. Robert M. Hopkins, general sceretary of the World Sunday School Association, has called for Rio de Janeiro to complete plans for the convention. The local arrangements are in the hands of Rev. Herbert S. Harris, secretary of the Brazil Sunday School Union. Churches and conventions which wish to be represented at this world convention should make their plans early to attend. It was the privilege of the writer of these notes to attend the World Sunday School Convention in 1913, at Zurich, Switzerland, where seventy-one countries were represented. It is well worth while to come into contact with the army of Sunday School workers from all parts of the globe. Our united Church should have a full delegation in Rio de Janeiro in 1932.

BIBLE IN SCOTLAND.—

At the annual meeting of the National Bible Society, Principal Rait, of Glasgow University, referred to the waning knowledge of the Bible in Scotland. He says, "When I came to Glasgow, seventeen years ago, I found that any ordinary allusion to the Bible was at once caught up by the audience. In recent years this is not so, and this applies especially to the younger generation. I myself have found this in the classes at the university." He said that one of his colleagues told him that he had once referred in one of his lectures to Ananias and Saphira, and his class looked puzzled, and he asked his students what the allusion meant, and eventually one student replied that it was to the title of an opera. In America, even in some of our denominational colleges, the students would probably have done no better; but they could have told the complete record of the athletic stars. More time is given to athletics, entertainment, and amusement than to the study of the Bible in our Church colleges.

DRY VICTORY IN DELAWARE.—

The daily papers in Delaware flared forth in flaming headlines a wet victory, but in an obscure corner a suppressed statement said that Delaware's wet Democrat had been routed by Josiah Marvel, president of the Bar Association and candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination. The results indicate that the Democratic State platform will contain a pro-prohibition plank. This defeat was accomplished over the opposition of Pierre S. Du Pont and other wealthy members of the brewery-backed Association Against the Eighteenth Amendment. In a similar manner, the account of the defeat administered to the wet forces in Ohio when the Republican minority had gone into the State convention with loud boasts that they would force a wet plank upon it. In the committee their boasts were defeated eighteen to three, and the wet strength was so submerged that they could not bring the question to the floor of the convention. The Christian forces of America, regardless of party affiliation, forever stand with a face of flint against the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

TO MOVE THE MOVIES.—

New Zealand hopes to be rid of the scourge of the movies by increasing the motion-picture tax from twenty-five to thirty-seven and one half per cent. It is announced that the Hays organization, which furnishes ninety per cent of the New Zealand pictures, has advised its agents there to make no more contracts. A dispatch from Lisbon, reported in the Churchman, says that Portugal has turned against the "talkies" and has decided to ban them. From all accounts of the obscene suggestions, salacious hints, nude pictures, and immoral impressions made upon the minds of American youth, and the harvest of impurity, immorality, violation of law, criminal tendencies engendered, and appeal to the lower impulses of unmoralized youth; it would be a great blessing to the American people if many of the movies here could be banished from the screen. Ideas impressed upon the minds of our young people in pictorial form, will find expression in conduct under slight provocation. They are more powerful for evil than all the religious teachings of Church and Sunday School can counteract for good.

PETITION FOR REPEAL.—

Chinese Churches have presented a petition for the repeal of the restrictions against teaching religious education and worship in Church schools, which are now in force in many parts of China. This petition to the nationalistic government of China is signed in behalf of the Church of Christ in China, the Methodist Episcopal Church, the American Baptist Church, the United Lutheran Church, the Swedish Missionary Union, the Evangelical Church, the Church of the Brethren, the Rhenish Missionary Society, the Methodist Protestant Church, the Basel Missionary Society, and the United Methodist Society. Dr. A. R. Kepler, general secretary of the general assembly of the Church of Christ in China, in reporting the presentation of this petition, says, "We do not expect to see this accomplished very much with the ministry of education. Its greatest value will lie in crystalizing the thinking of the widely scattered groups of Christians on this question of religious rights and religious freedom." We have practically such conditions against the teachings of religion in our American public schools and have become so accustomed to the barring of religious teachings that we think little about the result. The Churches of America should make some provision to counteract this want or we shall continue to have the intellectual life of our youth express itself in revolt against religious restraint.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Ask your friend to subscribe for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the price of which is $2.00, and remit to C. D. Johnston, circulation manager, Elon College, N. C.

That is quite a "melon story" coming from Bro. Watson's Sunday School and Rev. T. Fred Wright's Church over at Jonesboro, N. C., but it will at least show how bountiful nature is when all her products are saved and used.

Dr. W. M. Jay, of Elon College, has received a call to, and accepted, the pastorate of Holland Christian Church, Holland, Va. Dr. Jay will but be returning to familiar faces and favors, as well as privileges and opportunities, in going to Holland, having once lived and served there. We congratulate our Holland people in securing the residence and the service not only of Dr. Jay, but of Mrs. Jay as well, who is a true helpmeet in the pastorate, much interested, and a faithful worker in Church and missionary enterprises.

In the passing away of Bro. Eli Daughtrey on September 22, 1930, Nansemond County, Va., loses a worthy and honored citizen; his home and community, a good and beloved man; and our Holland Christian Church, a loyal member and a most faithful deacon. For many years Bro. Daughtrey served his Church well, and at the age of ninety-two passes from the Church militant to the Church triumphant. The family of five—three sons and two daughters—and nineteen grandchildren have the legacy of a life lived in faithful service to God and man.

We are glad to record the inspiring information of successful and happy revivals recently experienced in the pastoral charge of Rev. E. B. White, Windsor, Va. A Norfolk paper, the Virginian-Pilot carries this item from its Suffolk correspondence: "The Rev. E. B. White, pastor of Isle of Wight and Antioch Christian Churches, has just completed a series of revival services at Isle of Wight, and is now preaching at Antioch Christian Church. The Isle of Wight meeting was fruitful in many professions of faith, and in additions to the Church membership. At Antioch, the meetings are well attended, and on Thursday there will be an all-day meeting, with a basket dinner served on the Church grounds."

THE SUN LETTER.

Notices have been mailed to all the pastors, informing them as to the number of new subscribers the Board of Publications expects from their Church or Churches. One pastor has already written us that he was going to put on a campaign in his Church to raise his quota. That is fine!

I wish every pastor would take this to heart and put it across in his Church. This undertaking cannot be a complete success unless each one will do his full duty. It will take each one. We were running a corn-cutter a few weeks ago, and it had a metal chain, composed of many small links, but one link broke and it stopped the entire machine. Each link had its share of the work, and the machine had to stop when just one little link broke. So with this undertaking. Let each one put it across in his Church at once and the job will be done. Just a small task.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

On October 14th our annual Conference will convene at Noonday Church. The meeting-place is some four or five miles northeast of Wedowee, Ala. This will be a united Conference. Our Congregational brethren of Alabama will meet with us, and we are hoping for a good meeting, which, of course, we will have. It will require more time for our meeting, and the joint program provides for services until Thursday noon.

Now, we surely do insist that all Churches be represented, and come to stay until all work is completed. It will be largely an inspirational gathering. We hope to profit by the fellowship of our brethren, and pray that the Lord may open up the way for a closer brotherly interest in kingdom service.

This is the greatest opportunity our Church has had, and it will be surely the largest one. We must adjust ourselves to our larger duties and responsibilities. Come seeking, come trusting, come praying for a larger vision of Christian service.

Yours in hope of a great Conference,

G. D. HUNT.

REMARKABLE WOMANHOOD.

The passing at her Nansemond County home Saturday night of Mrs. Virginia Jones Lee, octogenarian, removes one of Tidewater Virginia's most remarkable women. Though past eighty years of age, Mrs. Lee, up to but a few weeks ago, personally directed her extensive agricultural and business affairs growing out of large farming operations in Nansemond County, and was known to be one of the cleverest of women of her day. Her home was on that beautiful estate known as "Town Point," just to the southwest of the new Nansemond River Bridge, leading out from the Bennett's Creek Highway. In the midst of active life, Mrs. Lee some weeks ago suffered a slight stroke. From this she partially recovered, but her vitalities, previously remarkable, gradually passed, until the end came peacefully Saturday night. The deceased was the widow of the late Willis J. Lee, known for years as one of Virginia's most successful truckers. Her funeral was in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Suffolk. Truly a wonderful woman has passed from among us.—Editorial in the Portsmouth Star.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

Rev. E. C. Gillette, Editor; Rev. F. P. Ensminger, and Rev. M. J. Sweet, Associates.

A CORRECTION: In a recent issue, the remarkable attendance record of Mr. Everett W. Neville was told without stating the Church of which he was a member. It should have been stated that this remarkable record was made at the Church at Chapel Hill, N. C.

REV. H. S. FRITSCH, D. D., pastor of Union Congregational Church, has been seriously ill, but is recovering his health. During his illness the pulpit has been supplied by Rev. Robert G. Harbutt and Rev. Frank J. Brown, both of the Penney Memorial community.

SOUTH GEORGIA DISTRICT ASSOCIATION: This association is to meet with the Union Hill Church, Pearson, Ga., on September 26-28. All of the Churches in the district are expected to attend this meeting or to be represented by regular chosen delegates.

REV. DON G. HENSHAW, pastor of Coral Gables Congregational Church, during the months of August and September, has preached in the evening at the Miami Shores Church while conducting his work in his own Church. The Coral Gables Church has lost a valuable member in the death of Mr. H. F. Batchelor. Mr. Batchelor had been treasurer and also trustee of the Church.

REV. GEO. D. OWEN, with his family, arrived in Ormond on September 18th, after two months' vacation spent in Massachusetts and other places North. Mr. Owen conducted services in the Ormond Church September 21st and is formulating plans for the formal opening of the new Sunday School and social building. The building was completed this summer by the building of the kitchen. The Church now has a very well equipped building for educational and social purposes.

JUPITER, FLA.: This Church is making fine progress under the leadership of Rev. Frederick Held, who became pastor of the Church in June. A special feature has been the work with children and young people. A very largely attended and successful vacation Bible School was held and the attendance in the Sunday School and at all services has greatly increased. The Mayflower Guild of the Church recently gave a "Mad Hatter's Tea." The women who were members of the guild enacted scenes from "Alice in Wonderland." This entertainment was given on the lawn of the home of Mrs. Henry DuBois, which is on the beach at Jupiter.

VACATION READING: In a personal letter, one of the pastors, writing near the end of his vacation, had this to say about his vacation reading, which we consider worth repeating: "I have done an enormous amount of very interesting and very valuable reading. Before coming, I ordered from our Congregational library four books—Hocking's 'The Remaking of Human Nature'; McDougal's 'Abnormal Psychology'; Otto's 'The Idea of the Holy,' and Yellowlee's "Psychology's Defense of the Faith.' Here I picked up Uren's 'Recent Religious Psychology,' Thompson's 'The Problem of Spiritism,' and several other books the authors of which I cannot just now recall. I have given all these a very careful reading and have found much in all of them well worth while."

FACTS OF THE MERGER.

By Herbert D. Rugg.

A total membership of 1,052,924 is reported by the Congregational and Christian Churches in their first united "Year-Book," now ready for distribution. A net increase of 8,110 is shown over the combined memberships of the two denominations for the previous year.

The merger of the National Council of Congregational Churches and the General Convention of the Christian Church was ratified last year. Arrangements are now being made for the first meeting of the new united denominational body, the General Council of the Congregational and Christian Churches, in Seattle, Wash., next July. In the meantime, many steps toward the consummation of the merger have been taken. The foreign mission work and the denominational periodicals were merged last spring. The merger of the "home" or national mission work in this country will become completely effective January 1st. Sectional and State mergers which have been completed include the formation of the Ohio Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches, the Indiana Conference of Congregational and Christian Churches, and the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches representing Churches in eleven States from Delaware to Florida and west to the Mississippi River.

The new "Year-Book" was edited jointly by the Rev. Dr. Charles Emerson Burton, general secretary of the National Congregational Council, and the Rev. Dr. Warren H. Denison, executive secretary of the General Christian Convention, who are both ex-officio secretaries of the new General Council. The total number of Churches listed is 6,560, of which 5,419 are Congregational and 1,151 are Christian. The number of Churches is a decrease of 100 from the combined total reported by both denominations the previous year. A trend toward fewer and stronger Churches has been general among the leading denominations in the United States for a decade and a half. The combined number of Churches reported by the Congregational and Christian denominations fifteen years ago was 7,366, while the combined membership at that time was 699,151.

The total Sunday School enrollment reported in the new "Year-Book" is 789,427, a decrease of 14,093; the total membership in young people's organizations is 161,039, an increase of 3,302. The decrease in Sunday School enrollment and the increase in membership in young people's organizations are also both in accordance with general religious trends of recent years and are commonly held to evidences that Churches are passing through a far-reaching transitional period in the reorganization of religious education activities.

A falling off of one and a quarter per cent in contributions is shown in the financial tables, the statistics covering the calendar year of 1929. Total contributions reported for all purposes were $26,870,774, a decrease of $381,281. The amount contributed for local expenses was $22,593,749, a decrease of $323,192; the amount for missions and other benevolences was $4,277,025, a decrease of $58,089. A gain of $9,212,163 is reported in the value of the edifices, sites and parsonages owned by the Churches, the total valuation being placed at $195,864,939. Legacies amounting to $779,543 were reported received by 344 Churches; these were in addition to legacies bequeathed to mission boards.

The number of Churches with a membership over 1,000 is 105, an increase of three. The five largest Churches are: Central, Brooklyn, N. Y., 3,116 members, the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D. D., pastor; Tompkins Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., 2,818 members, the Rev. J. Percival Huget, D. D., pastor; South, New Britain, Conn., 2,140 members, the Rev. George W. C. Hill, D. D., pastor; Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., 2,007 members, the Rev. William E. Dudley, D. D., pastor; United, Bridgeport, Conn., 2,001 members, the Rev. William Horace Day, D. D., pastor.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

VIII.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

S. S. Adriatic, Monday, June 23, 1930.

From 10 to 11:30 A. M. our good ship was quietly slipping into the harbor and tying up at her docks at Liverpool. This is a smoky city, and is quite in contrast to the sweet, stimulating, pure air out on the seas the past days, as the atmosphere is full of smoke and unsavory odors. Somebody has said, and truly, that the ocean is an immense and self-acting laundry, cleansing and purifying all that is dumped into it, and even the air that floats above it. But for the sea and its power to wash and purge and purify, this whole earth of ours would soon become stagnant and putrefied, and we would all perish from poison, even the poison of our own making. The ocean takes up not only the impurities and refuse of the city, but the impurities and foul gases in the air and sweeps them out on the briny deep and purifies them and makes for us a new air, as fresh and as fragrant as that which Adam and Eve breathed on the first morning in the Garden of Paradise.

Vessels of every kind are skipping about in the harbor like kittens and lambs at play. I guess they are on serious business, but as I look at them from the deck of this great ship they just seem to be hopping and skipping about, busy with fun and frolic. I wonder if we who are so busy, fretting and fussing about our daily worries and work, do not seem much the same way to one who, from a great airplane far above us, looks down upon us and regards only our movements, without knowing our motives. It is different with us, of course, in the mind of our Creator, because, as He looks down, He penetrates the motive and understands all our goings and our comings. I guess it doesn't seem so frivolous and so full of frolic to Him, because beneath the busy activities of those who run hither and yon, there are many heavy and sad hearts who are carrying great burdens, even while they jump about and seem to be chic and cheery.

Little things are made big and all-important the last half-day on board a ship after a long journey at sea. It's positively difficult to do anything. You proceed to misplace vigorously all the little but necessary things you have previously placed during the voyage. One has gathered leaflets from literature, guides for various trips, printed information about places of interest, and they seem all important. But as land looms up and debarkation approaches, one forgets one hundred things that a few hours ago were all-important. As I think of it now, after landing and while writing in my diary, I wonder if this will not be true with us as we begin to shake off this "mortal coil" in preparation for landing in the "haven of eternal rest." Some things that have seemed most weighty, worth while and important through the journey of life, I have a notion we will shake off, or forget, as unimportant in the twinkling of an eye as we disembark on the other shore; that shore of "eternal rest," for which we have been seeking with anxiety through the days of the years of our lives. I noticed today as I landed I could not remember where I had put my landing card, nor my passport, nor my pocketbook, nor my capy, nor my hat. I just could not seem to think or to fix anything. I guess one day, as the veil begins to part and our great Host bids us enter that other house in which there are many, many mansions, I will not be able to think then, but will be overpowered and overjoyed with the changed and blessed scenery of that other world.

Leaving our good ship, we took a special "express" from Liverpool to London. For the first time in my life (because the opportunity had never been afforded me before) I purchased "a third-class ticket." I had my doubts about the wisdom of this, since it sounded quite far from first-class, but I was told to advance and fear no harm. The fact is, third-class coaches here are about equal to and very much like our Pullman cars in America. Seats face each other, with table between, so that one may write or read or talk with traveling companions. I noticed on the train-yards in Liverpool that freight and passenger cars are shifted not by yard engines, like we have in America, but by rope and pulley, thus doing by hand and a few sharp jerks what we do in America by steam and more steadily. Our train shoots under Liverpool through a great tunnel. This tunnel business in a great city seems to me all out of place, but it has come to be the thing now. It does look like our Creator made the earth big enough for us all to travel on the surface of without having to dig out great tunnels beneath it. But this is the way of man, and now the habit in great cities. I remember noticing in New York, for instance, as I came through, that they travel "three deep" there—one railway far under the city, another on the surface along the streets, and a third above the tops of houses by way of the "elevated." Not knowing which was better and having a great deal of curiosity and a little time on my hand in New York, I tried all three—subway, surface and elevated. I liked the subway best, because there seemed to be less danger, fewer obstructions, and nothing to make one dizzy.

Just out of Liverpool, our train dashes along through green fields of oats and barley and grass, and fat cattle everywhere. The season here, of course, is far behind ours, being so much farther north. I guess they haven't anything to build fences with over here, so they grow hedges in stiff, strong, straight rows, which serve to keep the cattle in or out, as the case may be. We Americans have not done this much yet, because steel and wire and wood and trees are so abundant. We haven't time in America. Why not grow a fence instead of build one? We Americans would answer, because you can build one in a few days, and it requires several years to grow one. Our sturdy Scotchmen prefer to take the time and go on in the pursuit of his task, after planting out a tiny little hedge and wait for nature to grow him a fence.

London, Tuesday, June 24, 1930.

At breakfast this morning (my first on land) I felt very feverish and yet quite tired. In order to get myself going, I drank more than two cups of coffee and ate little, as the appetite would not seem to take it. After breakfast, Smith, Helfenstein and I went to Trafalgar Square to see the center of London as well as its history, and to feel the pulse as it throbbed from the heart of the world's most populous city. We go to the White Star Line to arrange our tickets for return in August and to make sure of our shipping. I find myself very strangely tired even before noon of my first day in London. I dropped into a restaurant and called for a soup, some bread, and drank coffee. This does not seem to drive away the feeling of weariness, and, asking Smith and Helfenstein to excuse me, I take a taxi back to the hotel and retire to my room and bed with high fever. I cannot quite understand what this soaring of temperature means, and the weariness and the exhaustion that have come, especially since I have enjoyed so well the journey and the exhilaration of sea travel the last ten days. At 5 P. M. I am jotting down in my diary my experiences and impressions of this day, but since fever is rising and weariness is increasing, I must lay my pencil aside and tell my diary, which has been such a comforting friend to me these past days, a very early good-night and give my mind and body a complete relaxation, indulging the hope that a long night, even with a raging fever to begin with, will prove a blessing and bring sweet rest for tomorrow.

I guess this is no unusual experience in life. When we are at our best and the currents of joy and privilege and pleasure are nigh, and run high, all seems to change, and we have to stop and await the pleasure and the will of Him who doeth all things well. Verily, man proposes and God disposes. This is well, since we are assured in the best of all good books and from the wisest of the world's wisdom, "All things work together for good to them that love the Lord." J. O. A.

LET "THE HEATHEN" ALONE.

The cultured and charitably inclined lady whom the writer quoted last week as being opposed to "foreign missions" said that her second argument for her opposition was that we should let "the heathen" alone; they had their religion and loved it as we love our own; we would not appreciate their coming in and interfering with our religion, and so we should not go in and interfere with theirs. She was emphatic in declaring that foreign mission work was a species of "meddling" and interference, for which there was no justification or excuse. This lady was quite secure, she declared, in her conviction, because there were so many who agreed with her.

This point of opposition to foreign missions is worth considering. Shall we let "the heathen" alone? The Jews in time of the Christ had also their religion, an appalling amount of it in fact. Our Saviour, the Lord Jesus, did not let them alone. The fact is, He stirred them up to such opposition that they nailed Him to the cross, crucified Him. The Gentiles of Rome and Greece and of the world around had their religion, an appalling amount of it, but Paul did not let them alone. In fact, he became so busy preaching the gospel, bearing witness of the crucified Christ, telling the peoples around about him of their false teaching and idolatrous worship that they put Paul in prison and finally had him executed. Martin Luther, in his day, found an immense amount of religion all about him. They were intensely religious and were willing to tie at the stake and burn with madness and religious zeal any man who did not follow their religion and accept their doctrines, but Martin Luther did not let them alone.

When Robert Morrison went to China he found the Chinese with religion in abundance, so much so that they had a decree that any one who should teach any other religion than their own should be executed. Robert Morrison took his life in his hands and for years, without a convert, preached in China. He would not let them alone, but gave them a chance at the gospel of the Son of God. A changed and an ever-changing China, with her thousands of converts to Christianity and a constant modification of her cruel and killing laws, is the answer to the fact that Robert Morrison and Christian missionaries could not consent to let them alone while they perished by the thousands without the knowledge of Him who alone can save.

William Carey could not even go in the ship that bore an English flag to India, for even the English nation, in Parliament assembled, as well as the millions of India, said that India had religion of her own and must not be disturbed. William Carey went at the hazard of his own life; and the hospitals and Churches and Christian colleges and benevolent institutions by the hundreds and thousands throughout India today, dedicated to the sole purpose of relieving human suffering and carrying joy and freedom and release to hundreds of thousands of Indian souls, are the justification of the fact that William Carey could not afford to let the Indians alone.

David Livingstone found in Africa the "open sore of the world." The world outside said let Africa alone. She had a will and a way and a religion of her own. In fact, Africa today is coming into her own, and instead of being the open sore of the world, is making her contributions to the world's wealth as well as to the world's moral and spiritual enrichment. This constitutes the answer to the fact that David Livingstone would not let Africa alone.

Standard Oil can go with its organization of industry and enterprise into all parts of the world today. So can Ford cars and United States steel and the products of our American farmers and factories, but the missionary who would not "let these nations alone" had to blaze the way with the Bible and the preaching of the Word of God before our trade was safe or our flag was respected. Trade and the flag have followed the missionary, and the missionary made them possible. Let them alone? Shall we? The disciples on one occasion saw the multitudes and knew that they were hungry, and they requested that they be let alone, for they had no bread with which to feed so great a throng. Our Lord Christ said to those disciples that which He has been saying to His disciples ever since, "Give ye them to eat."

And again He looked on the multitudes and said, "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few. Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that He will send workers into His vineyard"—not to let them alone, but to give unto them the bread of life. The gospel has made us what we are and brought us untold blessings and benefits. Shall we be selfish about it? Those who need it most will never ask for it. The most needy never do ask. And the best help we will ever render in this life will be to those who do not want us to help them. They do not want us because their want is so great, their need so appalling, that their hands are paralyzed and they cannot stretch them out, and their voices are dumb and they can't speak.

History tells us of a man confined in a dungeon for seven years. There was only one little keyhole that admitted a ray of light to that dark cell, and with this ray his eye looked, and on it his soul feasted day by day. And then one day the prison-keeper came and flung wide open the doors and flooded the dark cell with the glorious rays of a balmy sun. The poor man of the dungeon fell on his face and cried out, "Why did not they let me alone; they have taken away the only light I had." The poor man soon discovered that instead of taking away the little light, they had flooded his body and mind and soul with the full, free light of God's sun and God's love. Why not let "the heathen" alone? Because they need, as we do, the Bread of life, and without this they perish. J. O. A.

EARNING, SAVING AND GIVING.

Whatever may be thought, said, or written about money, it enters into all of life, in all of its relations. Men are usually measured by their earning capacity, though earning is only a part of their value. The matter of saving is related to earning. If one earns and does not save, his earning amounts to little. The true philosophy of life is to begin to save when one begins to earn. No matter how small the earning capacity, save a fraction of it. This principle is implied in the savings accounts in banks. Banks encourage such accounts; parents encourage their children to start such accounts with their birthday and Christmas gifts. It would surprise those who have not even thought of the matter if they could see the vast number of names on bank books with savings accounts. This modern method of saving is increasing all the time.

Saving is just as important as earning. In fact, it requires more thought and purpose to save than to earn. Anybody can earn, but it takes thought to save. Economy is an important element in success. If nobody saved, wealth would be unknown; and if wealth was unknown, great corporations and great philanthropic institutions would not exist. Economy is the cause of all prosperity and all progress. The economist is the producer of prosperity and wealth. The person who begins to save when he begins to earn, and will keep this up through his active life, will have enough to meet his needs when he is old. It is tragic to see one in old age, whose young life had good earning capacity, in a state of poverty. The cause of his dependence is the result of waste or thoughtless expenditure. Thrift is the fruit of economy, and economy is nothing more nor less than saving a little at a time. Speculation is not the basis of wealth, but industry and economy combined. Fortunes may be won in a day, but they are not earned in a day. When one man wins a fortune in a day, it is a fortune that was earned by years of hard work and long-time saving.

Giving is the result of earning and saving. It is the practice of the same kind and period as earning and saving. Giving is the fruit of earning and saving. It has its blossom, its growth, and its maturity. Giving is not a spasm, but the result of the same process as earning and saving. One who earns and saves, if he has interest in the Church and society, will put a reasonable portion of his savings into the channels that benefit others. The Church, as an institution, is the best channel through which gifts can benefit others. This is true because the Church is the source or spring of all benevolent enterprises. God not only made the world and saved it, but He gave it to man and directed him to "subdue the earth and have dominion over every living thing that moveth upon the earth" (Gen. 1:28). Giving is a necessary result of earning and saving. Saving is not for self alone, but for others. Earning is the lowest step, saving is the higher step, and giving is the highest step and the most satisfactory. For "it is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts 20:35). Of course, giving includes more than money, but it does not leave money out, because money is necessary in the home, the State, and the Church. W. W. S.

BIBLES STILL NEEDED.

In America there are still thousands of homes and many thousands of people who have never owned, or handled, or even seen a Bible. Persons who live in older and well-established sections of our country where towns and villages are close together or where the rural areas are evenly populated can hardly comprehend the distances which separate the isolated settlements in our vast Western States.

One of the American Bible Society's colporteurs reports that he found homes where there were sons and daughters twenty-five years of age none of whom had ever heard what the Bible was, didn't even know it was a book, and when they saw it had no idea what it contained. He also found communities that were not only ninety miles from the nearest railroad, but equally as far from the nearest point where religious services occurred. After preaching in some of these settlements and leaving Bibles he was assured that his service "was the best thing that had ever come to town," and was urged to return.

A Little Story from Real Life.

A colporteur of the American Bible Society found a man past forty years of age living alone in a miserable little shack near the railroad tracks in a Midwestern city, who said to him: "Clear out if all you've got to do is peddle Bibles. I never saw one and I don't need one."

"By the looks of things, you haven't gotten very far without the Bible," said the colporteur. "Why not give it a try?" This friendly and completely disarming answer permitted the colporteur to tell him about God and to read from the New Testament. Finally the man said: "Mister, that Book sure sounds good to me. I'll take back what I said, and if your price ain't too high I'll buy it." When told it could be had for five cents he insisted on paying ten.

Two weeks later the colporteur decided to make another call on this man, and was gladly received. They sat and talked about the teachings of Jesus, for the man had faithfully read his Testament. He told the colporteur that he had made up his mind "to get a steady job, cut out the booze, and live like a human should live." He thanked the colporteur for calling, and said that in twenty years no one had taken any interest in helping him to be a better man.—American Bible Society.

The tree that is dead at the root soon dies at the top.

Real tact lies in the ability to understand the things that were left unsaid.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Funerals lead the mind into three periods—the present, the past, and the future; and no other occasion places so much emphasis on these three periods. Oakland Christian Church, in Nansemond County, Va., witnessed such a service on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, September 23, 1930, when William Thomas Newman, son of John Bridges and Hannah Urquhart Newman was buried. He was born in Nansemond County May 9, 1865, and died in Memorial Hospital, in Richmond, on Sunday, September 21, 1930, at the age of 65 years, 4 months, and 12 days. He had been married three times. Five children survive of the first marriage—Oliver W. Newman, Everett H. Newman, Mrs. Vernon Atkinson, Mrs. Preston Atkinson, and Miss Ruth Newman. By the last marriage five children survive—Helen, John, Maurice, Howard and Lyman Newman, of Hopewell, Va., where he and his family made their home. He is also survived by ten grandchildren. His last wife, who was Miss Lura Tyman, also survives him.

He is also survived by two half-sisters, Mrs. Ella Hurst, of Middletown, N. Y., and Mrs. Job Holland, of Nansemond County. Three brothers and two sisters survive him—Dr. J. U. Newman, professor in Elon College, N. C.; Dr. N. G. Newman, pastor of Holy Neck Church; Rev. C. E. Newman, of Virgilina, Va.; Mrs. W. C. Wicker, of Elon College, and Mrs. L. W. Stagg, of Norfolk, Va.

Bro. Newman had been a member of the Christian Church from his boyhood; had served as superintendent of the Oakland Sunday School and as a deacon in the Hopewell Christian Church. He was a churchman of strong convictions, with strong faith and courage that never faltered. He was a "teetotaler" on Bible ground, and lived what he believed on the temperance question. If all members of the Church had believed and stood with him on this question, America would not even need an eighteenth amendment. He loved the Church and stood with the people of God on all great questions for human welfare and progress. He had three outstanding brothers who give their lives to the teaching and living the word of God, and he did not fall behind any of them. He thus, unconsciously, set an example for all laymen to equal the ministry in faith, loyalty and service. His large family can safely "arise up and call him blessed," and his companion may lead in that high honor.

The congregation was large, the floral offerings were many and beautiful, the songs "Face to Face" and the "Sweet By and By" by the choir, and the duet, "Have Thine Own Way," by Mrs. Parker Johnson and Mrs. Butler, added to the fine tribute paid by Dr. I. W. Johnson.

In addition to the large family and the large congregation, ten ministers were present, including the three brothers and one brother-in-law, Dr. W. C. Wicker, editor of the "Observatory" in THE CHRISTIAN SUN; Revs. Leak, of the Baptist Church; Cook, of the Presbyterian Church; Nash, of the Christian Church; Rice, now preaching at the Christian Church, all came from Hopewell; and Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, of Suffolk. Dr. Johnson, pastor of Oakland, had charge of the service, and was assisted by Rev. W. W. Staley.

Bro. Newman had suffered from three or four major operation within the last twenty years, but bore his afflictions with Christian patience and was prepared to go when called from labor to reward. He had "fought a good fight, he had finished his course, he had kept the faith; and there was laid up for him a crown of righteousness" (2 Tim. 4:8). Looking at the present, the past, and the future, there is much to comfort all who mourn.

W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER.

In the Elon Letter of last week, I suggested that the eating of food is a good thing, but that gluttony is sinful. The eating of food is only one of a great variety of experiences in the physical realm of our daily life, though it is typical of them all. Our whole economic system is constructed on the basis of multiplying human wants, and then through mass production satisfying those wants, a vicious circle of wastefulness. We are not taking thought for those who shall come after us. We are exploiting the resources of the world as if human life should be expected to terminate with our passing off the stage. Or we have a sort of bland opinion that our progeny will be able to care for themselves, even though the natural resources of the planet shall have been exploited by us without reference to real needs. It is the philosophy of physical comfort run riot. If men were animals only, there would be nothing to condemn in this orgy of physical satisfaction. But sleek, well-groomed beasts have never yet added anything to the abiding achievements of the race. High thinkers and high livers have somehow not been able to be happily joined in holy wedlock. Plain livers and high thinkers, however, have consorted gloriously together for the improvement of humanity. We are told, and truthfully told, that the common man today has luxuries which 100 years ago kings had not dreamed of. But there is scant evidence that the universalization of physical comforts has added very much to the quality of man as man. Let me, before I leave this point, raise two questions to be thought out: "What is the purpose of life, anyway? Does the multiplication of physical comforts meet its real needs?"

To pass to another realm of experience, we may not forget that a college education has, in the past, been almost exclusively confined to the mental realm, and certainly it is expected that college students will have use for their minds. College professors would be remiss in the performance of their duties if they did not require students to use their minds in pursuing their courses. It is, however, charged that now-a-days most college students do not use their minds sufficiently and that they mistake reports, investigations, the performance of scientific experiments according to manual instructions and the assemblying of information from various sources as the equivalent of thinking. We are told that it is a rare thing when college students have gathered in those small groups, which inevitably occur on any campus, that they ever discuss any of the problems or issues that have arisen as a consequence of their curricular experience. We are told that it is even a rarer thing for a college student to have a period set aside sacred to himself in which he creatively thinks through the problems and issues of life as they have been touched upon during the day's experiences. And yet, if experience teaches anything, it teaches without equivocation that wisdom, the ability to meet situations and cope with them, understanding of the inner meanings and values of life and its experiences, intellectual leadership can come only from such mental seances. Cynics tell us that the reason why college students do not discuss outstanding problems and issues when they gather in voluntary groups is that they have no comprehension of such problems and issues. Being ignorant of such important needs, they are forced to discuss such interesting topics as the weather and the latest baseball scores.

However, there is a type of student on every campus who is just as inordinate in his mental life as those persons whom we have just described. This type of student proceeds as if the only thing that counts is mind. He does not think of his body at all, but only of his head. If you go to a fish hatchery you will find millions of fish, all heads and no bodies. This type of student presents such a human picture, or rather caricature! The book--worm—for this is the popular name for this type of intellectual pendant—is never of much influence during his college days, nor, sad to say, afterwards. He loses a great deal more than he gains by his immoderate devotion to study and thought.

What we need is the golden mean between these two extreme types; St. Paul's moderation, in other words: students who study and think, and yet have time to see life whole: students who are not so absorbed in textbooks or in weather reports as to lose vital touch with the other phases of human experience. Manifestly, we cannot adopt rules by which we may profit most by the college experience. Every individual is under obligation, however, to sense the principles by which he may successfully order his life and invest his interests. Our minds ennoble us, and we should learn to use them effectively during our college days.

REPORT OF FIELD SECRETARY.

Report of field secretary to the joint board:

Dear Brethren,—As you know I began work under this contract November 1, 1929. I have visited and preached to all of our Churches in both Conferences except one in the Alabama Conference and two in the Georgia and Alabama Conference. These I hope to visit before Conference meets. I have made one trip to North Alabama and three trips to South Georgia. In co-operation with the executive committee of the Georgia and Alabama Conference, I have made three or four trips to Rose Hill Church, in Columbus, Ga., last winter and spring. Trouble having arisen among the members of that Church, I was called upon to aid the above-named committee in adjusting same, which I am glad to say was seemingly satisfactorily adjusted and the Church is moving smoothly under the supervision of Dr. Neil McGuirrie as pastor. This Church, as you may know, entertained the united young people's convention last spring, which, to my mind, was the greatest meeting of its kind ever held in our Church in the State.

Our Churches at North Highlands and Beulah have not been visited by your secretary, and I have not the knowledge of their condition to enable me to speak intelligently about their condition or their needs.

Our Church at Shady Grove, in Clay County, Alabama, has been without a pastor this year, as has been the Church at McGuires Chapel Church, in Tallapoosa County, Ala., but the latter is making arrangements to secure a pastor.

Our Churches in and around Cragford are sorely in need of a pastor located in their midst. The logical point of location would be Cragford, as they have good school facilities already provided. In all sections of our Alabama Conference we are sorely in need of a better system of pastoral support. In too many cases we are paying all of our pastors' salaries in expense money; nothing goes to the pastor or his family, and the Church gets inferior service in return. I find, too, brethren, that almost all of our rural Churches are not receiving as much pastoral care as they deserve. My judgment is that, in rural Churches, wherever there is a possibility of doing so, that they should so group themselves into pastorates as to secure better service and the pastors get better pay. My observation leads me to say that unless we can get our people to see the business side of Church life, our country Churches especially will, in the very near future, suffer or go out of business.

I have not made any definite effort to organize new work this year for several reasons, one of which I might mention as not having a place to hold our regular services. In this connection it would be wise for this joint board to provide the next field secretary with a tent for special work. Our work in our territory can be greatly enlarged, at small cost to us, if we have a mind to invest.

I have been almost constantly on the go for the last twelve or thirteen weeks in revival work. Preaching almost every day, and sometimes day and night, I have had some very fine meetings at all places visited and have been cordially received by everybody, and I think that every Church that I have visited has a larger vision of our needs as a Church. I am not censuring our Churches or pastors, but our Churches need better service and our pastors need better pay.

Our work this year has been largely prospective. The work needs to be better organized, and thus relieve the field secretary of so much hard traveling and arduous labor. Our field is large, and in many sections our Churches are badly scattered. What we need is organization, and in that way we can take care of our every interest and be helpful to both Church and pastor.

At the request of Rev. H. W. Elder I have been looking after some Church property in the Georgia and Alabama Conference which has become useless as places of worship, viz: Kite, Ga., a house of worship is there and is not being used. It was decided by the Church, with Bro. Elder's consent, that the property be sold and the proceeds applied to Piedmont Junior College, which I think is a good suggestion. It will be sold just as soon as the demands will justify. The Church at Randall's Crossing is becoming dilapidated and will soon ruin. I have asked the Providence Chapel Church to remove the seats, pulpit and chairs and use them until further orders, in order to keep them from decay. I suggest that this house be sold and the proceeds applied to Bro. Elder. Bro. Elder had secured a lot by donation at Lumber City, Ga., which lot is deeded to the Christian Church and the deed is recorded in McRae, Ga., records of deeds. I have failed to find out anything definite about the lot.

The Church at East LaGrange, Ga., is under a heavy mortgage, and some steps must be taken to pay off the indebtedness. I suggest that this be done at an early date. It is my candid opinion that something should be done to get the matter squarely before our people and either sell the property or pay the debt in some other way.

I have been repeatedly placed on the program of our Congregational associations, but could not attend any of these meetings because of other engagements. Our work needs to be grouped, so that the field worker can reach each group and thus facilitate the work and also be able to attend as many of the Congregational meetings as possible. We will in this manner become better acquainted with each other and be more helpful to each other.

As to the continuation of our field secretary, I have this to say: We are just entering upon a larger program for our Church, and our work for this year has been largely experimental; but it will be utterly impossible for us to fill our part of the program without some one to take special supervision of enterprises and keep our interests before our people, especially along the lines of missions and education. Our field secretary ought to be empowered with the authority to hold missionary and educational rallies in all of our Churches and take special offerings from our people for these enterprises. Our different interests are not supported because they are not brought before our Church. Our people will support our Church calls when they are prayerfully presented.

There may be other things of which I should speak, but suffice to say that I am profoundly grateful for the earnest co-operation of all our pastors and Churches during this the hardest year of our experience. I have done my best, and I now leave with the board my report and prayers, and pledge my earnest support in the attempt to carry out any or all of these suggestions. I have traveled about 4,000 miles and preached 169 sermons and delivered about twenty-five lectures, attended twenty-eight funerals, and have received $872.10 on salary; no expense has been counted since the last board meeting at Roanoke, June 25th.

G. D. HUNT.

POUNDED.

On filling my appointment at Spoons Chapel last Sunday, at the close of the service, the members presented to the pastor flour, sugar, corn, potatoes, peaches and a number of other things that a good housewife can use about the kitchen. These were highly appreciated by the pastor and family. We are glad to say that the good work is progressing nicely at Spoons Chapel, for which we give the Heavenly Father the praise.

B. H. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

NOTICE.

Any Church or Churches not having called a pastor or thinking of making a change would be glad to hear from you. I am open for full time.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

(October.)

Mighty Master of mankind, how marvelous is Thy power to enfold and hold. We thank Thee that human abnegation is strength divine; that looking, leaning, loving, self-loss only is gain. We pray Thee, Father, stay our minds, compel our bodies, seal our beings. O God of mercy, hold us close, keeping Thou our feet to the lowly path by which to grow the soul must strive for others. For Jesus' sake, that the world may live and not die, bring Thou the Church under the suffering of His cross. This day, each day, more burden our plea, more grace, O God, to unburden to Thee. In our Saviour's name. Amen.

BUTLER ON FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Dr. A. J. Brown says that Brigadier General Smedley D. Butler, who for two years commanded the American Marines in China, has a pronounced admiration for the missionaries who stuck to their posts in the war-torn sections of the country, endangering their lives, that their work might go on. In the general's own words we have his view:

"I met a lot of missionaries—probably more than fifty—and I never found one who was disagreeable," the general says. "I learned some things about missionaries out there that made me like them. There was one chap in particular—and there were plenty like him in China—who lived in an unprotected spot outside Shanghai. Perhaps it was ten miles from the city—ten miles of Chinese roads. I met him one day and suggested that he had better come in where we could give him protection. I told him that if the Chinese should burn down his building they would be compelled to pay for it.

"That good old fellow said to me: 'I'm out here spreading the gospel of Christ, and I never heard of Christ needing a bodyguard. If I have to be protected with bayonets in order to preach His gospel, then I am going home.'

"I admired his stand so much that I told him to stay where he was, and if he got into trouble with the Chinese we would come and rescue him. He did not go home. He stuck to the job and, fortunately, there was no trouble. His attitude appealed to me immensely. It would appeal to any marine. There was a man who was willing to place his life in jeopardy for an ideal."—Ex.

NEWS NOTES.

By Mrs. W. M. Jay.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Holy Neck Christian Church has done a splendid work under the leadership of Mrs. E. L. Rawles. They have a small membership, but what they lack in members they have in enthusiasm and zeal. This society is composed of boys and girls, and they are indeed an interested group. On the third Sunday night in August they gave the pageant entitled "The Missionary Clinic" to a crowded house. The appreciation of the audience was evidenced by the large and generous offering which they received. They also served a dinner to the Ruralon Club recently, from which a goodly sum was realized. They are hoping to be a standard society with all requirements.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., has had a successful year. On March 29th they presented their annual play, entitled "The Manhatton Honeymoon." This play proved to be so good that it was repeated at the Blair Junior High School on May 23rd, under the auspices of the Norfolk and Western Railroad Company.

On May 4th this society also gave the pageant entitled "Ruth and Naomi" at a Sunday evening service. All these services show the great interest on the part of these young people to help in the missionary cause they love so well.

MISSIONARY PROGRAMS FOR OCTOBER.

WOMEN'S SOCIETIES.

Service of worship—for a missionary spirit.
Consecration service for new officers.
Outline of woman's work for the coming year.
Introduction of guest-book.
Map talk on Japan.
The Japanese in the United States.
Roll call—facts about Japan.
Closing prayer.

Suggestions for Missionary Programs.

These programs are not based on the inter-denominational study-books. Instead, we suggest an intensive study of these books in mission-study classes. The books suggested are "A Cloud of Witnesses," by Elsie Singmaster; "The Treasure Hunt," by Margaret R. Leebach; "India on the March," by Alden H. Clark; "Trailing to Conquistadors," by Samuel Guy Inman; "West Indian Treasures," by Winifred Hulbert; "Sugar Is Sweet," by Dorothy McConnell.

There has been no provision made in the suggested programs for business. It is hoped that the business of the society will be transacted at the very beginning of the meeting.

There is no disposition to the dictatorial with reference to these programs which are meant to be suggestive only. They were worked out by a group of five presidents of missionary societies and represent the combined thought of the group and not that of any one.

As usual, there has been an envelope of helps prepared, which you may secure from Mrs. Powers, 501 C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio, for 25 cents. This envelope contains six leaflets entitled "Service of Worship," one for each of the six months as suggested in your programs.

Consecration Service.

October begins our new year, presumably with new officers. Have the names of the officers read, and while they stand, let the leader of the service of worship direct prayer in their behalf. To an unusual degree this year, let us seek the guidance and power of the Holy Spirit.

Outline of Woman's Work.

Our woman's work has suffered this year because of uncertainty. We have wondered as to our places as a woman's organization in the merger. After much consultation with Congregational and Christian leaders, it has been decided that the Woman's Mission Board of the Christian Church is a necessary instrument in the consummation of the merger, and to that end must carry on with renewed vigor at least for the coming year. A program has been prepared which is not divisive, but which leads to acquaintance with the enlarged work. Each month we shall study a different country in which we as Congregational-Christians are doing work.

Map Talks.

Our map talks are designed to give us the size, location and something of the character of each country studied. We also desire, through these map talks, to locate the particular work of our united Church. Through the guest-book, we hope to become really acquainted with at least twenty-five or thirty of the men and women of our enlarged family. As the program provides for the "Intraduction of the Guest from China" or Africa, or wherever the guest is from, we shall turn to the map and see the section of God's world that is our particular interest that day. (See map on back of guest-book.)

Roll Call.

Some of us attended a missionary meeting recently when practically every member answered to her name at roll call with facts relative to Africa and her need of the gospel or her response to the gospel message. The responses were brief, just a sentence or two, but in the search for these responses every woman had increased her knowledge of Africa and her interest in that country.

Let us always reach a climax in our monthly programs and separate with the feeling that our thinking together and our fellowship have brought to us the more abundant life which will go with us back to our homes and our many contacts to advance just a little further His kingdom in our midst.

This year we may have for the asking the Congregational-Christian Guest Book which we may invite into our homes. There are well-worked-out plans for distributing these books. The pastors have been sent cards of invitation which may be signed by the families of our Churches. Then each family signing the card will receive a book.

We hope that every missionary group will assist the pastor in the work of distribution. To further our acquaintance with these guests, we suggest that at the October meeting of the missionary society some one appointed to that duty hold before the society the Guest Book of 1930-1931, and explain how we are to meet one guest a day by reading a page a day from this book in our homes. At this October meeting, let her turn to the page on which you find the picture of Rev. E. C. Fry, of Utsunomiya, Japan, and let him speak for himself through the lips of the reader. Then look at the group of Japanese girls pictured in this number of the bulletin, for they are from Mr. Fry's field.

In November, a "guest from China" will be introduced from the Guest Book and will speak through the lips of the one to whom the duty is assigned. Each month this procedure will be followed.

Y. P. AND WILLING WORKERS' SOCIETIES.

We are sorry to say that we do not have the Young People's and Willing Workers' programs to place in print this week, but hope to secure them in time for next week.

INDIA PAPER ONLY—Size 2½x4¼ inches x⅞ inch

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

The GEM TESTAMENT has been steadily growing in popular favor ever since its first appearance.

In size, 3⅜x4½ inches, it is not much larger than the Vest Pocket. It is also the only Testament of its size with large bold type and pronouncing text.

The edition on India paper is ideal, and we know of no better gift at the price than one in the finer bindings.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson II—October 12, 1930.

Mary, the Mother of Jesus.

Golden Text: "Mary kept all these sayings, pondering them in her heart."—Luke 2:19.

Lesson: Luke 2:15-19; John 2:1-5; John 19: 25-27.

It has been said that back of the life of every great man there has been a good woman. This is certainly true of the life of Jesus. It is no reflection, nor is it any irreverence to say that Jesus would not have been who He was if He had not had the mother He had. This is just another way of saying that in His plans for the production and the perfection of a Messiah, God saw to it that there should be a place for a good and godly mother. Because Jesus was human, He was subject to the laws of life, and undoubtedly one of the most vital and powerful forces in His development was the training and the influence of His mother. Her influence and her training prepared Him for those experiences which later came to Him when He entered upon His public ministry.

Little is known about Mary. There are only a few references to her in the Scriptures, but these references indicate that she was a woman of quiet spirit, very meditative, possessing great self-control, deeply pious, loyal and loving to the end. She was undoubtedly acquainted with the Hebrew writings, and although she probably did not understand all the implications of Jesus' Messiahship, she maintained an interest in the whole movement which He initiated, for we find her present in the "upper room" when the Spirit came at Pentecost.

The Things in a Mother's Heart.

The setting and the story of the Nativity are too familiar to need retelling in this connection. For the purpose of this lesson, attention is directed not to the Babe of Bethlehem, but to Mary His mother. The visit of the shepherds, with their strange story of all that they had seen and heard, caused wonder in the minds of all those who heard it. It caused wonder in Mary's heart, too, but she kept all her strange hopes and fears to herself. "Mary kept all these things, pondering them in her heart." How typical of motherhood! What things they keep in their hearts as they look at their new-born babes, as they cuddle them in their arms, as they dream and hope and pray for the amazing bit of humanity that God has given into their care. What dreams they dream and what ideals they cherish as the babes grow on in years! What things they ponder in their hearts, the joys over success, the heartaches over failure, keeping them all in their hearts and never letting others know about all these things. Here, as elsewhere, Mary is the typical mother.

A Mother's Faith.

"Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it." The setting of these words was the marriage feast at Cana of Galilee. The wine which was used as refreshment had run short, and Mary took things in her hands. She instinctively turned to Jesus, and although on the surface of it His remark seemed to be rather discouraging, she unhesitatingly declared her faith in Him by telling the servants to do whatever He told them to do. How typical she is of the faith of our mothers. They believe in us, even when we do not believe in ourselves and when they have no apparent reason for believing in us. This faith of our mothers is one of the most dynamic factors in many a man's life. Many a man has succeeded because he knew that his mother believed in him.

A Mother's Love.

"But there were standing by the cross of Jesus His mother and His mother's sister . . ." That is, of course, the very place that we would expect to find His mother. Her love would go with Him to the bitter end. There is a striking parallel, too, between the cross of Christ and His mother. Both represented sacrificial service and sacrificial love. Both represented the highest in divine and in human love, respectively.

There is a touch of tenderness in the incident when Jesus sees His mother and commends her to John. He was solicitous for her; more solicitous for her than He was for Himself. He wanted her to be taken care of after He was gone. It was an act of thoughtfulness on His part. And it was a tribute to His mother, too. "Behold thy mother" said Jesus. In the humble woman standing there, there was embodied all that was finest and best in motherhood.

It was given to Mary to be the mother of our Lord—a distinction absolutely unique. But to mothers of all time, as to Mary, there comes the blessing of a gracious God as they give themselves to the high calling of motherhood and seek to train up a child in the way that he should go, guiding him in paths of righteousness and helping him to grow in wisdom and in stature and in favor with God and with men.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Miss Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, October 12, 1930.

Topic: "Marks of a Good Citizen."

For this program, arrange your songs, Scripture, prayers, and other materials as you wish. You may want to have a discussion meeting without topics for talks assigned. If so, plan it. The following materials may be suggestive in dealing with this topic.

The Scripture reading for the meeting is James 2:1-17.

In connection with the Scripture, I like the thought in Rudyard Kipling's poem, "If," last stanza. Here it is:

"If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with kings—nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much:
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a man, my son."

A Prayer for Our Country.

"O God, who hast given us our wonderful country, I thank Thee for the flag that stands for freedom and safety, for righteousness and peace. Help me ever to honor that flag, and may the flag ever honor Thee. Guide our nation in the way of Thy truth and make it a blessing among the nations. Make it strong and great in all good things, and may our people be loyal to Thee, our God. For Jesus' sake. Amen."—H. C. Alleman.

A Prayer for the Triumph of the Right.

"O God, who art ever on the side of the right, bless all who are trying to make this a better world. Help all who love Thee to stand for those things which make it easier for all people to do better. But down those who tempt their fellowmen to do wrong. Give us and all others the courage to turn away from those who break the law and try to lead us do the same. Help us to obey the laws of our country, the laws of health, and Thy law as given in the Ten Commandments. For Jesus' sake. Amen."—H. C. Alleman.

The following topics, and others, may be discussed in the meeting:

1. A good citizen and the laws of the nation.

2. A good citizen's use of the Golden Rule.

(a) What is the "royal law"? See Scripture reading.

3. Characteristics of a good citizen.

(a) Tell of the things that help you know a person is a good citizen wherever you see him. Some of them might be: reverence in Church, quiet in public meetings, desire for cleanliness in public buildings and on streets, obeys and respects laws, is honest and deals fairly, etc.

4. A good citizen's politics.

(a) His attitude toward voting.

(b) How he gets others to vote.

(c) His service in political and public offices.

5. A good citizen and community improvements.

(a) Schools, roads and streets, public buildings, clubs, parks and playgrounds, provisions for training in music and art for the children, public sanitation, etc.

The topic for next Sunday is "Christians and Sunday."

Make a poster to announce the meeting as follows: Cut from a magazine a good picture of a Church, and an automobile with people in it (or some other picture that will represent how Sunday is sometimes spent). Paste the Church on one side of the poster, and on the opposite side the picture of the automobile party. Under the pictures print or write, "How Spend Sunday?" "Christian Endeavor, October 19."

HOME-TRAINING OPPORTUNITY.

Volunteer and professional workers in the field of religious education and social service will be interested in the announcement of home-study courses to be offered during 1930-'31 by Boston University School of Religious Education and Social Service.

These courses will include studies in biblical history and literature, psychology, history and principles of religious education, administration, worship, religious drama, Church music, leadership training, and social service.

In addition, the school will undertake to conduct a limited number of problem or project courses intended to assist local groups in the actual solution of concrete problems in their Church or community. These courses will furnish guidance in the study of problems of reorganization, grading, curriculum construction, housing and equipment, social betterment, as these arise in connection with the Church school, young people's and social service activities.

The courses are planned to fit the needs of the following groups:

1. Those who wish a broader cultural training in the general fields ef religious education and social service which will give perspective and an understanding of the origin, the meaning, and the value of the principles and procedures of present-day practice.

2. Volunteer leaders who have at least a high school education or its equivalent and who wish to fit themselves for larger service in the Church, either as paid part-time workers or volunteers.

3. Those who have completed the Standard Leadership Training Courses under denominational, State or International Council auspices and who desire professional training on a collegiate level.

4. Professional workers who wish an opportunity for the serious study of current problems and tendencies in Religious education and social service, or who desire to pursue advanced studies leading to collegiate degrees.

These home study courses will be ready for release to students in October, and may be begun at any time thereafter.

A descriptive bulletin covering all courses and directions for registration may be obtained from Dean Henry H. Meyer, 20 Beacon Street, Boston.

FRANKLIN, VA.

Preparatory to the every-member canvass and presentation of the annual Church budget for the ensuing year, the pastor has delivered a series of sermons on "The Stewardship of Life." On Sunday morning a message was presented on "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, saith the Lord." This sermon emphasized tithing as one of God's fundamental laws of life as manifest in the Old Testament and indorsed by Jesus of Nazareth in the New Testament. This sermon was followed, in the evening, by a presentation of the pageant, "Aunt Tillie Learns to Tithe." About fifteen of the young people in the Christian Endeavor participated in this dramatic portrayal of "Aunt Tillie" as she caught a vision of the importance of tithing as an element in worship. The majority of the young people in the pageant are tithers. Some of them decided to tithe during the hours of rehearsal. They came to realize that if one would preach he must practice what he preaches. They were conscicus of the fact that the best sermons always grow out of experience, and that if they would effectively teach "Aunt Tillie" to tithe, they must be tithers.

A contest between two selected teams is to commence the first Sunday in October and continue for a period of time. Efforts will be made to enroll members in Christian Endeavor and stimulate Church attendance. A gold C. E. pin is to be presented the captain of the winning team by the pastor of the Church. The losing side is to treat the winning s de to a weenie roast at the close of the contest. Indeed, the young people of the Franklin Christian Church are alert and are cooperating with their pastor in a splendid way toward advancing the kingdom of God.

JOSEPH W. FIX.

A VOLUNTARY MELON.

One has often heard of a Church or grave-yard rabbit, but this is the first one about a Church watermelon and has quite a bit of history and has proven to be quite valuable.

This spring, a voluntary watermelon vine came up directly in front of the door of Shallow Well Church, about ten or twelve feet from the steps, in the hard dirt. This vine grew very fast and large without any cultivation or fertilizer or any water except what little rain fell on it.

On this vine grew a beautiful white melon with black stripes that weighed 27¼ pounds, a very large melon, considering the drought, to say nothing about cultivation or fertilizer.

Our pastor, Bro. Wright, claimed that it should be his melon, and we all agreed; but he and his family left on their vacation and failed to deputize any one to look after his melon. Our Sunday School picnic came on, and the Ladies' Aid and Missionary Society decided to carry it to the picnic and sell to the highest bidder, who was Mr. Doyle McFarland, for $1.75; but the ladies excepted the seed and rind. They preserved the rind and sold the preserves to a lady in New Orleans for $2.00.

The melon had, by actual count, 741 seeds, which they are selling for 10 cents. These seeds have gone into a number of North Carolina towns and into South Carolina, Texas, Virginia, and New York.

Mr. Jack Campbell, who lives near the Church, thinking that probably the vine might take second growth and produce another melon, bought the vine for 50 cents.

If the ladies sell all of the seed, they will receive from the vine and its contents the following: Melon, $1.75; preserves, $2.00; vine, 50c; seed, $74.10. Any one desiring one or any amount of these seeds may send 10 cents per seed, plus postage, to Mrs. Doyle McFarland, Jonesboro, N. C.

The writer was invited to take part in the slicing and eating of the melon, which was enjoyed very much.

Not all the forces of earth or hell can keep the "Whosoever Wills" out of heaven, and not all these forces can get the "Whosoever Won'ts" in.

AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLES.

Authorized and Edited by American Revision Committee, and Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons.

These Bibles contain the Concise Bible Dictionary which forms the helps to these Teachers' Bibles. It supplies, in the most condensed and convenient form, all the latest information about the Bible, its writers, its language, the various versions, complete chronology, life of Christ, with harmony of the Gospels, life and travels of St. Paul, etc. The illustrations are reproduced from recent photographs, and truly illustrate the articles. The Combined Concordance is entirely new, and has been made expressly for the American Standard Version. FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE

One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

JUST TO BE A CHRISTIAN.

"Only fear the Lord and serve Him in truth with all your heart . . ."—1 Sam. 12:24.

When reading this there are two other passages we think of. One of them is Micah 6:8, "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with thy Lord." The other one is James 1:27, "Pure religion and undefiled before our God and Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions, and to keep thyself unspotted from the world."

These passages are the grandest utterances of the Scriptures, and the clearest statements of what God demands of His children. They are altogether more meaningful to us when we understand that they are the words of God to the prophet in answer to the demand of the people as to what the Lord required of them in the way of offerings and sacrifices.

Thus, we know what the Lord requires of us. The right way has been revealed to the humblest child, even in the love of justice and mercy, and the humble walk with God.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, we bow before Thee this morning, seeking to do so in all humbleness of spirit, and to know Thy way for us every step of our way. Forgive us of all our sins, and be our companion today to give us Thy fellowship and lead us in a righteous path. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WHO, THEN, SHALL BE SAVED?

"Are they few that are saved?"—Luke 13:23.

The question which was asked our Lord is akin to the question which is still being asked all over the world today, "Is salvation only for a privileged few?" Jesus refuses the answer. For instance, He does not foreclose St. Paul's optimistic hope that " all Israel shall be saved." He does point out the way, and that that way is open to all, though it is a difficult and sometimes an unattractive way. He does point out that mere familiarity with Him does not secure salvation, nor does it avail anything to plead descent from a noble family. In the kingdom, priority of the privileged counts as nought. Christian character which is bound up in individual righteousness and humble living is the chief foundation-stone for salvation's house, and this is an experience which is obtained only by each one finding it for himself.

Prayer.—Dear Father of love, Thy kingdom is love. We crave this love and to dwell in such a house of Thine forever. May we find it today. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

HELPING OTHERS TO BE CHRISTIANS.

"Admonishing every man and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ."—Col. 1:28.

The glory of Christian living is the Christian message as it emanates from individual living and example. The supreme ideal of every Christian person should extend to those outside the covenant, for whom divine love is given as well as for us. The possibility to do this consists in our own union with Christ, only the reality of this union guarantees it. As Christians, we are His messengers to proclaim His love, mercy and salvation not only to a privileged few, as if salvation were intended for a class, but to every living soul with whom we come in contact. To do this, we need not display our religion. All we need to do is to live right, and make the goal of our labors that of setting forth the reality of God in our living. It is hard work, but it is a happy life, the real force of which lies only in the divine power working within us.

Prayer.—Dear Father, the Giver of all grace, grant unto us the presence and power of the Holy Spirit, to make us winners of the lost to Him. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE FIRST BLESSING.

"Be it known unto you, therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins: and by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses."—Acts 13:38, 39.

No man can be justified by the law, and no sin can be taken away by the law. In Jesus only is the remission of sin. Law demands punishment. Christ has borne the punishment and grants mercy.

One of the first experiences of a Christian is that, whatever sin one may be guilty of, he is washed and made clean and he knows that Christ has bestowed in his heart a remedy for every evil.

Resolve to come to him with everything that oppresses you. Christ suffered, bled and died upon the cross, that you might do just that, and have everlasting life. So come, and beware, lest you should miss His love, tread upon His grace, and reap a terrible judgment.

Prayer.—Merciful God, make us to see our sin. Draw us to Thee. Give us forgiveness and communion with Thee and make us righteous and holy. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE WAY OF THE LORD.

"Incline your ear unto me and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live."—Isa. 55:1-5.

In the way of the Lord is to be had everything the soul needs. Mistake not this promise for "life needs." It is "soul needs." So, then, if we thirst for God, we get God. To wish forgiveness, we get it. If we want to be righteous and loving; if we seek peace, here it is. If one is weak, weary and ill, in Him is rest. If one is faint, in Him he will "mount upon the wings of an eagle, run and not be weary, walk and not faint." If in sorrow, in Him is comfort and joy all that one needs or can bear. If discouraged, in him is the courage to keep on and fight the good fight of faith. If you do not know, there is in His word sufficient truth for the nourishment of the inner life that you may grow in the knowledge of God and in heavenly wisdom. If you would be right with your fellow-men, there is in Him an increase in charity and fitness for that which is good.

All this is to be had for nothing but the price of seeking. If you hear this message, you may taste the love, grace and peace of God and have eternal life.

Prayer.—Give us grace to do this, merciful God. We confess that we are hard of hearing and want to do our way very much. But, dear Lord, have mercy on us, that we may turn Satan and self behind us, and may open our lives to Thee and receive strength of the abundance. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE FIRST CURSE.

"Seeing ye put it (the word) from you—Acts 13:44-49.

The Jews of Antioch "put from themselves the word of God," and therefore they were rejected by God. This is one of the first steps away from God, and it offers one of the reasons why men are lost. Pooh! pooh! the idea that some are known to be saved and others to be lost. If any are lost, it is for the reason that they themselves put Him from their lives. If any are saved, it is because they have taken Him as the source of their strength and hope. To be a Christian is for "whosoever will may come" and fill the place at the heavenly feast, for which he is already chosen. Such a one, no man shall be able to separate from God and His love.

Prayer.—Lord, teach us to believe, and to build our hopes on Thee, that we may grow in grace and obtain strength to stand and never turn from Thee, but obtain the victory in every temptation. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE WAY TO REPENTANCE AND CONTRITION.

Lesson: Luke 15: 1-10.

What difference does it make to God if He should lose one of us? We are not much! His riches would not be reduced. The heavenly host would not miss us. Would the celestial choir be incomplete without our voices? Yet, we are told that He cares. He cares for even a sparrow—and how much more for us! The fact is, we are in His image. We are His creation and handiwork. We are to make up His family. We are His dwelling-place—His temple. Therefore, He, like a good shepherd, leaves the ninety and nine sheep and goes into the wilderness after the one that is lost until He finds it.

So He is looking for us when we stray. If we are penitent, He accepts us. But why make Him seek us? Should we rather not run to Him, like frightened sheep pursued by death and the devil, and throw ourselves into His arms, which are outstretched to save us?

Prayer.—Lord Jesus, we are so blind and unworthy. Draw us to Thee and make us see Thy love. Overcome, meet and heal our souls for Thee. Amen.

HE LOVES THEM ALL.

With Him there is no red or black,
No Chinese, French or Dutch,
For all are His dear children
And He loves us all so much.
The boys and girls in Africa
And the little ones in Spain
Are all just "loved ones" in His sight,
For to Him we're all the same.
So we who would like Jesus grow
May do our part, though small,
In helping make a happy world
By being kind to all.

THE MARKS OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST.

"I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus Christ."—Gal. 6:17.

In all official positions men wear badges as marks of distinction. These signify that they are parts of the profession, such as police, Red Cross nurse, Boy Scout, army and Salvation Army. Scouts wear badges indicating that he is prepared and is efficient in the work of first aid and cooking, etc.

It is an honor to wear a badge, such as mentioned above, for it is a medal or any emblem signifying work well done, or it may mean bravery. These proficiency badges tell of one's bravery and loyalty as well as merit and sacrifice. It is not only an honor to wear a badge, but a mark of service, indicating that one is in work for good or for public service.

Wearing badges are marks of discipline, and is the meaning that one is expected to do good. There are other badges of merit we may wear or other medals we may possess; there are those which, when once stamped upon us, will never disappear—badges that mark us, just as in the early days of our country the cattle all were marked, so we are followers of the Lord Jesus, and should bear in our bodies the marks of the Lord Jesus. By this he implied that his body and life corresponded to that of the Master, and was proud of it. Just as cattle were marked to show to whom they belonged, so was Paul marked as one who wore the marks of discipleship, suffering, service, courage, baptism, character, cheerfulness, courtesy, determination, devotion, duty, election, frankness, gratitude, discipline, humility, patience, sacrifice, soul winning, transformation, truth and usefulness. Some hold that Paul actually received marks of the cross. It is true that Frances Assisi meditated on crucifixion so closely that he had marks in his hands and feet.

Paul was proud of the marks that came from suffering; hence his courage in standing forth in the midst of battle. When Paul was called on to witness for his Lord he had the courage to go forth and he stood against evil as did likewise Christ, for in his days he discouraged such things as hypocrisy and double-mindness on the part of leaders and called them an evil generation, and vipers, and wolves in sheep clothing.

Jesus offended many people for the way He interpreted the meaning of the Sabbath Day. Jesus received the message that Herod was plotting against His life, but went His way unconcerned, and said, "Why will you plot to kill me?" Yet He knew He would meet it at Jerusalem, and to that end set His face to Jerusalem.

As Jesus came into the world to minister unto all people, irrespective of person, of age, nationality or race; so Paul, after his conversion, became a world Christian, and as we see him in the pages of Holy Writ, he exemplifies world brotherhood. There is no difference between the Jew and Greek, for the same Lord is over all and is rich to all who call on His name. For whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

Paul's love for all men made him wear the badge of universal brotherhood. Following Jesus led him to know that the biggest experience in Christian religion was not a matter of here and there. Paul saw in a vision a man of Macedonia, saying, "Come over and help us." He responded; and to you and to me he asks the question, "How shall they call on the Lord, who is their Saviour, lest they hear of Him, and how shall they hear?"

With Paul, the world was becoming closely knit together—there was himself, other folks, and God. Paul began to realize the growing expanding of self when he thought of these outside of himself. His world horizons expanded, and he began to know for certain that God had made of one blood all nations to dwell together on the face of the earth, and that they should seek Him and find Him, for He is not far from them; for each one should live and move and have His being in Him.

Jesus commenced His ministry by calling the twelve to share it with Him, and then sending them forth to carry it on. Then Paul found Jesus had gone forth to preach and win others to help Him.

THE CALLS OF CHRIST.

When Jesus walked the shores of Galilee calling to the fishermen to follow Him, a momentous choice was made by many that we know nothing about. The writers of the gospels only speak of the fishermen who answered the call and followed Jesus, but we believe that there were others who refused to follow Jesus when He called, even as they refuse today. To those who answered the call of Jesus and followed is given a place in the New Testament which has lived throughout the centuries and will live as long as this world stands. While those who refused to follow are unknown, their deeds not worth recording.

When we answer the call of Jesus and follow Him, the call keeps sounding, each one being a call to a greater surrender, and therefore to a greater service in His kingdom. Each day a choice must be made, whether we shall follow or no.

One of the greatest of the calls of Christ is the call to humanity—the lesson all must learn if they wish to be used in the work of the kingdom. So many of us want the high places in the kingdom work; want to be seen of men and to hear the applause of the world. But that was not Christ's way. He walked in the humble paths and did the menial tasks to teach the great lesson of humility.

A Christian worker, going into a home where the mother was sick in bed with no one to care for the house or the little ones, did some of the menial tasks that she could see that had to be done. Another worker, in telling about the incident, said: "She had to sweep the floor and wash the dishes," seeming to think that it was degrading; that it was beneath her dignity as a Christian worker. What greater work can we do for the Master than to wash the faces of dear little children and get the snarls out of their hair! Or any of the many things that go undone when the mother cannot do them. How hard it is for the world to understand the love of Christ when His children try to follow in His footsteps and do the things that He would have them to do. Where Christ calls one to a high service for Him, He calls many to a lowly service—and they are the same in His sight. The world alone shows the preference. What is done for God will never die, whether it be great or small.

Shall we leave undone the little services which we might do because they may not be known; that we might not get the credit for doing them? Ah, we lose the blessing when we look for honor from the world in doing the things "for Jesus' sake." Today the call comes to each one of us, and we choose whether we will follow the acclaim of the world with all of its allurements and its promises of worldly fame which will live but a day, or will we follow Jesus in the humble paths of service which the world scorns, doing deeds that will live throughout eternity.

All through the Bible we read of men who chose the path which they would follow, and we see the results of their choice. Shall we profit by their triumphs and their failures? Shall we listen to the voice of Jesus each day as He calls us to service for Him, doing the little things, or shall we be blind to them, ever looking for some great thing to do?

If we do what our hand findeth to do, and do it in His name and for His sake, He will take care of all the results. A little clipping, author unknown, is worth pondering over: "Sometimes when we bring to God offerings of fairest flowers, He sees but worthless weeds. And when we mourn because we have but weeds to offer, He sees them fragrant blossoms. Whatever, to the eye of man, the hand may hold, God sees therein the bouquet of the heart's intention." "W."

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

Your superintendent had the pleasure of attending the State meeting of orphanage superintendents and orphanage workers of North Carolina, which met in Raleigh, N. C., September 26th. Practically all the orphanages in North Carolina were represented. Rev. C. K. Proctor, of the Oxford Orphanage, was president of the association. He had planned his program well, and the association was honored with the presence of the following speakers: His Excellency Hon. O. Max Gardner, Governor of North Carolina; Dr. Albert Anderson, superintendent of the State hospital; Dr. Frank Hickman, of Duke University; Dr. W. S. Rankin, of the Duke Foundation; Mrs. Tom Bosh, commissioner of State public welfare; Hon. Josephus Daniels, ex-Secretary of the Navy.

After a hard year's work, it is refreshing and inspiring to sit and listen to such able speakers. Then, too, it is encouraging to those who are engaged in this work of love and charity to have those who hold such high positions in Church and State to speak to us and let us know that they are interested in the work in which we are engaged, and that we have their sympathy and support.

The orphanages in North Carolina are taking care of something like 3,500 children. All are crowded to the limit, and many applications on file. And that is not the most serious problem we are facing. The economic conditions are going to force many widows, who have been doing their best to hold home together and keep their children with them, to apply to the orphanages for help. It's hard to say no when we know that the appeal is worthy and the need great. This is one year that will call for real sacrifice on the part of those who are able to give. Who knows but the existing conditions today is the Lord's way of testing us, to bring us to a sense of our duty!

Let us not forget the widows and fatherless in their affliction. Don't forget your Christian Orphanage, its 110 children, and its financial distress. It cannot pay bills with an empty bank account.

Superintendent.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

Reviewed by

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

HOW SHALL I LEARN TO TEACH RELIGION? By Blanche Carrier. Harper & Bros.; $1.50; pp. 216.

The theory that supports modern religious educational techniques is thoroughly scientific, being based on a sound psychology and supported by an equally sound philosophy. Miss Blanche Carrier, for many years the director of religious education in the week-day schools of Dayton, Ohio, and now instructor in religious education in the University of Pittsburgh, is thoroughly imbued with the modern viewpoint and has ably discussed this viewpoint in this book. Miss Carrier believes that the most effective teaching is found through utilizing the experience of the pupil, and she makes it very clear throughout the ten chapters of this discussion how we should utilize for religious motivation any experience that may arise in the group.

The book is very tactful and trustworthy in discussing why we need a new method of teaching, how we learn, how the habits of character and religion are formed, and the objectives of religious education. It is doubtful if any book dealing with the newer religious education techniques has more succinctly and clearly defined the meaning of the experience-centered curriculum than Miss Carrier does in chapter five of this book.

She makes it very clear in her discussion that busy work is not to be dignified by calling it an activity, or labeling it handwork. If such work is to be profitable, it must be integrated with the issues that are being resolved in terms of Christian outcomes, and is not something to be superimposed upon the child, but must arise as naturally out of experience as the odor does out of the rose. Similarly, she deals with memory work, which a great many teachers of children in the field of religion have made into a sort of fetish. Memory work is not advocated except as it is related directly and experientially to the problems with which the group is confronted for solution.

The book has two weaknesses, and they are serious ones. In the first place, Miss Carrier is, of course, acquainted with the scientific instruments by which we may know the experience through which any group is passing, and so be able to formulate the problems which offer us our finest opportunity in religiously motivating conduct, but she nowhere mentions them.

Of course, the use of these scientific instruments by which we bring into the field of conscious realization the group problems and issues that require religious motivation, does not in any way preclude the grasping of opportunities that situations in the immediate field of experience bring to light. But to confine our experience-centered curriculum to such opportunistic situations or to such issues as some course of study may suggest as interesting problems, is seriously to handicap our success as effective teachers in the field of religion.

In the second place, Miss Carrier does not make clear the type of curriculum which will yield us the best result in the problem-situation approach to life. Miss Carrier knows that the curriculum of religious education is bound to become a manual of citation to source materials dealing with specific typical problems on certain age levels, but there is no reference to this matter in her book.

It is passing strange, too, that in citing the books which the reader may profitably utilize in the further study of the experience-centered curriculum, no reference is made to the writings of the outstanding exponent of this view of religious education. I refer to the writings of Dr. W. C. Bower, who is esteemed to be the most representative advocate and exponent of experience as the basis of the curriculum of religious education.

Despite these two weaknesses and this omission, however, this book will take its rank as a most valuable addition to the literature of religious education not only as to method, but as to principles as well.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGRETATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CHURCHES IN THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

OBITUARIES.

PAYNE.

John Thomas Payne was born in Caswell County, N. C., January 8, 1860, and died at his home, near Apple's Chapel, August 25, 1930. He was married to Miss Jessie Guinn, and to them were born ten children. Nine of the children, the mother, one brother, and twenty-nine grandchildren, and other relatives survive.

In 1912, Bro. Payne professed faith in Christ and became a member of Apple's Chapel and proved a loyal member and a consistent Christian. For more than four years he had been a sufferer of serious afflictions through which he seemed drawn nearer the Lord, and up to the end manifested great faith in his Saviour.

Burial services were held in the Church August 27th by the writer and the following brethren: Revs. C. A. Brown, J. F. Apple and J. H. Dollar. So many of the deceased's friends came to pay a last tribute of respect that many were not able to find room in the Church during the services.

His body rests near the spot where the old Church building stood and in which he confessed Christ as his personal Saviour. His loved ones and friends mourn his going, but all who knew him during recent years cannot but be inspired to a larger faith, and one day we expect to see him again where sickness and sorrow come not, and where tears never dim the eye. Until then may God strengthen each one and keep us faithful.

R. A. WHITTEN.

HUTCHENS.

Martha C. Hutchens was born July 28, 1875, and died August 25, 1930; age 55 years, 27 days; a daughter of the late Jacob and Elizabeth Caudle. She professed faith in the Lord and joined the Friends Church in early life, from which she remained faithful till death. She was a loving wife, mother and grandmother. The deceased is survived by her husband, Lee Hutchens; one daughter, two sons, and seven grandchildren. Two brothers and a sister also survive.

The funeral services were held at Pleasant Union Christian Church by the writer, and the body was placed beneath a beautiful covering of flowers. May the Heavenly Father comfort the bereaved family.

THE SUN'S OBSERVATORY

By Dr. W. C. Wicker.

FOREMOST RELIGIOUS LEADERS.—

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, was requested by the Seven Arts feature syndicate to compile a list of the ten foremost religious leaders of America, according to his opinion. This is his list, as published: Dr. John Hayes Holmes, Dr. H. E. Fosdick, Father John A. Ryan, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, Washington, D. C.; Prof. Harry F. Ward, Dr. Graham Taylor, Mr. Sherwood Eddy, Prof. Rufus M. Jones, and Rabbi Henry Cohen, of Galveston, Texas.

There might be a difference of opinion about this list, but there are some great men of thought and service represented here, and the selection of such a list of distinguished Americans will tend to inspire the appreciation of greatness of great leaders on the part of the American people. Whom would you select as a substitute for any one of these men? Make your choice.

WHY SOME FARMERS FAIL.—

A survey of the farm community in Wisconsin, recently made by the Federal Reserve Bank, where bank failures have been heaviest, revealed the fact that 51 per cent of men who moved on farms had no previous experience. Thirty per cent had no capital to start with. They represented sixty-three occupations prior to going on the farm. They included two circus musicians, a paperhanger, two wrestlers, two barbers, a cigar-maker, a bricklayer, an undertaker, a deep-sea diver, six spinsters, a milliner, and a professional gambler. No wonder they failed! Such people would fail in any business or profession which they might enter. As long as the farmer undertakes to organize and recognize such a motley class of unprepared people as farmers, they will fail to succeed in farming and marketing. For the good of farmers in production and marketing, they should not recognize people as members of their organizations without sufficient qualification to be classified as good members of their business.

RUSSIA'S NEW RELIGION.—

This year all eyes are turned toward Russia. Moscow, Leningrad, and the collective farms reveal a miracle in Russia; and the slow Slav temperament has been fired with holy enthusiasm. They are drunk, not with intoxicants, but with enthusiasm over Lenin's interpretation of Karl Marx. They are made about the five-year plan. They mean to reach the objective in four instead of five years. A recent visitor in Russia said that he had visited a number of the Russian Churches and found them attended by good congregations and the singing was heavenly, but the young people wear atheistic badges in protest against the pagan Church of the past. They are tired of the Church which sold out to the tsars. They are through with superstition. They have their museums of anti-religious things. It is a good thing to expose superstition, the rain-maker gods, and all the rest of the deceptive devices. Truth and honesty demand it, and any nation or people will be benefitted by turning on the light of truth in religion as well as in science.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION IN CHINA.—

Mention has been made before concerning the stringent orders of the ministry of education with reference to the offering of religious courses in any schools in China below middle schools, and the holding of public religious worship in educational institutions below junior middle schools.

Representatives of fifteen Christian bodies petitioned the ministry for rescinding the order. This petition has been very brusquely and finally rejected. Bishop White, of the Canadian Anglican Church, has ordered not only that all Christian schools of his Church be closed, but also that the buildings be razed. Many say that any such action would simply produce the very result desired by the sponsors of such anti-religious mandates. This action strikes at the root of religious liberty in China. There is no rule of the kuomintang forbidding the teaching of religion in mission schools. In fact, Dr. Sun himself was a Church member, and always was in favor of religious toleration. It is a well-known fact that many prominent leaders of the government are Christians, and that the Nationalist movement receives its strongest support in Chinese Christian circles.

CHAIN OF BEHAVIOR.—

A college recently established a chair of behavior which the president is trying to fill, but the students, in their own language, said, "It is no soft job for us."

The ground covered by this department takes the students into the realms of morals, politeness, reverence, common every-day honesty and decency, obligations to law and order, loyalty to institutions like the State, home and the Church. The chair of behavior deals with international relations, and takes up subjects like race prejudice and national jealousies. In fact, the president says that the course in behavior touches every phase of human conduct, and before the student is through the study, he has been obliged to ask himself about all the vital questions that can be asked about his proper relations to the society into which he is born.

It looks to us that this department is more important than higher mathematics or metaphysics, or theories of evolution. For, after all, the manner in which people behave is more important for the world's happiness than a knowledge of the distance from the earth to the newly discovered planet, or the ability to discuss the relativity of space.

CRISIS IN GERMANY.—

There is a political crisis in Germany. On the one hand, there are one and a half million Communists, whom nobody fears; on the other, there is a strong monarchistic party, which is not too serious. Germany is tired of paying reparations, and it seems that she is getting ready to repudiate the whole business. Convinced that she was by no means alone in causing the war, she refuses much longer to bear all of the burden of reparations. Hindenburg seems as strong as ever. In spite of his more than eighty years, he towers high above all rivals. Germany has about as many unemployed as England. The dole system is applied there also, and it is cutting heavily into public revenues. There is a fair measure of prosperity; the mills of Essen are running and agriculture flourishes. The Germans are a sturdy race and cannot be kept down. Her educational system, her military tendency, her agricultural drift, her manufacturing skill, her thrift, her intellectual proclivities, her inborn persistence, and her native tendencies will assert themselves in some progressive movement for good or ill that will attract the attention of the rest of the world.

CAUSE OF BUSINESS DEPRESSION.—

Some say business depression is due to menial causes. This may or may not be true, but it is safe to say that the cure, if not purely mental, would likely lie within the mental possibilities of both the individual and the mass. Society evidently has a subconscious complex of fear of poverty and business depression. A little psycho-analysis of the mental trouble in society and a little psycho-therapeutics to disabuse the public mind of such fear would greatly relieve the situation. The greatest trouble is due to the fact that business is getting back down to the normal level it occupied before the war, and it causes some nervous prostrations in the body politic. If people quit talking hard times and spend their time and energy in normal thinking about a return to conditions in business before the World War, the economic situation will soon find its normal level. As long as manufacturers and merchants hold their prices up to war conditions and farmers and laborers have to offer their products at pre-war conditions, manufacturers and merchants will have an oversupply and farmers and laborers will suffer from low prices and unemployment; but patient waiting for sufficient time will make the lower prices of the producers buy as much goods from the merchants and manufacturers as before the inflated prices since the war. Mental optimism will win.

NOTES-PERSONALS

Rev. W. D. Harward, Windsor, Va., who for some months past has been not in the best of health, has improved wonderfully and hopes now to give the full strength of his restored health to the service of the Church he loves and to his Lord who has so abundantly blessed him.

For the past two weeks, Rev. Hermon C. Caviness, pastor of First Church, Portsmouth, Va., has been engaged in a series of meetings at New Lebanon Christian Church, Surry County, Va. Bro. Caviness is an evangelist of great spirit and power, and we are sure that much good will come of his work there.

Rev. Joe French, who for two years has served the Rockingham County pastorate, Broadway, Va., is now in Vanderbilt Divinity School, Nashville, Tenn., working on his B. D. degree. Bro. French is one of our very consecrated and promising young ministers, who feels that in order to meet the demands of the pulpit he must make thorough preparation.

We are glad to learn that Mrs. W. A. Harper, who suffered a compound fracture of her ankle early in the summer, is able to walk with the aid of crutches. We hope that it will not be long now before she is completely restored to health. While the physical suffering has been hers, we realize that the mental anguish has been quite as great for Dr. Harper as for herself.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Carlton and Miss Sadie Boyd were visitors in the home of Mrs. Dora E. Pierce and with other relatives and friends in Richmond during the past week. These loyal members of the Christian Church here have been greatly missed since they moved to the old Carlton estate, near Paces, Va., last spring, and they are always welcome "home."

Rev. G. D. Hunt changes his address from Wadley to Roanoke, Ala. Bro. Hunt writes: "I have moved to Roanoke, Ala., and will become pastor of First Church here October 15th, and also for Richland, Ga., and Providence Chapel, which is nearby. This will consume the greater portion of my time. I am impressed with the possibilities of our work at Alexander City and hope that I may give this point some time and effort the coming year."

Rev. J. F. Apple reports in THE SUN elsewhere the organization of a new Church. We congratulate Bro. Apple and wish for the new organization long life and faithful service. We often wonder why more new Churches are not organized and reports thereof sent in through THE SUN. So many pastors seem to be perfectly content with the field they have, ignoring the fact that there are vast numbers of people here in the homeland who haven't a Church of their choice convenient.

An interesting letter is that from Rev. John A. Blanton, Surrency, Ga. Our good brother in south Georgia is full of good works as well as rich years of experience, and his comment on "Christian Character, the Test," seems to make him one of us. If his letter represents the spirit of his Church and brethren in south Georgia, then the Christians and the Freewill Baptists of that region ought to quit calling themselves by different names and get together in one fellowship.

Several times recently notices have been sent to THE SUN office for publication in the current issue and have been received after the paper was on the press. In one instance the press was stopped and a very important notice appeared that week in part of the papers. If a notice is of enough importance to be printed, it is worth while to get it in on time. That means that such notice should reach the Richmond office not later than noon of Tuesday preceding the date of publication. And due allowance should be made for delay in the mails.

The following item from the pen of ex-President Coolidge is a calm appraisal of a very serious and disturbing situation: "The waste that results from motor vehicle accidents in the United States has reached appalling proportions. During last year 31,000 persons were killed and 1,000,000 injured. This reads like the fatalities and casualties of a battlefield. A particularly discouraging feature was the 10 3-10 per cent increase, which exceeds the increase in the number of registrations. Deaths have doubled since 1922. The economic loss is estimated at $850,000,000, which is $350,000,000 above the previous year."

Rev. J. U. Fogleman was an agreeable visitor at THE SUN office recently and reports a very interesting and successful revival at Providence-Memorial Church, Graham, of which he is pastor, beginning September 8th and concluding September 17th. Rev. J. M. Allred was the preacher during the revival and gave exceedingly fruitful and helpful gospel messages that reached the heart and stirred the soul of the large audiencs that attended. Bro. Allred is a faithful preacher of the Word of God and a strong defender of "the faith once for all delivered to the saints." Among the results of the meeting the Church was greatly revived and built up spiritually, with many reconsecrations and professions of renewed faith. There were some twenty-seven confessions and seventeen united with the Church; others to be received later. The pastor was made to rejoice as well as his people by the manifestation of the presence of the Holy Spirit and the power of our Lord in the saving of souls. There is nothing that so inspires a faithful pastor as a successful, soulful revival among his members and an increased interest in the work of the Church.

THE SUN LETTER.

We recently mailed out 1,500 letters, asking for renewals for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. While we have had a favorable response to quite a number, we still hope to hear from many more. Every home should want a copy of THE CHRISTIAN SUN in it. THE SUN needs the subscriptions; the home needs THE SUN. But we cannot reach Church members who do not take THE SUN by this letter because they have no opportunity to read it. But how is THE SUN to still visit our homes unless our people support it? No government can exist and keep going if the people do not pay their taxes to support it. Neither can THE CHRISTIAN SUN keep making its weekly visits to our homes unless we give it better support. Ask your neighbors and friends to support it by mailing in their subscriptions—$2.00 a year, $1.00 six months.

COMMITTEE REPORT.

Rev. W. C. Hook has served the Holland Christian Church as pastor for three consecutive years, and having brought his work to a close by resigning our pastorate, is, therefore, open for work elsewhere.

Mr. Hook is a man of gifted talents, an earnest preacher of the gospel, and a pleasing speaker of real ability. His fine personality and forceful expression place him above the average and give him a good appearance in any pulpit.

The work and interests of young people have always demanded much of Mr. Hook's time and attention. This is attested by his appointment as pastor-counselor for our Eastern Virginia young people in their Youth Congress plans, programs and annual assembly.

During his pastorate, Mr. Hook has spent much time in visiting the members of our Church. His records show more than one thousand pastoral calls for the year just closing. This speaks eloquently of his activity as a pastor, and he leaves Holland with the sincere good wishes of our people for success in any field where he may choose to serve.

Done on behalf of the Church and with every good wish personally.

CHURCH ORGANIZED.

The third Sunday in September, 1930, we went over to Carolina, a little village about three miles out from Burlington, to organize a Church. At the close of the service a Church was organized, with thirteen charter members. The necessary officers were selected, and two deacons are to be ordained at the next service. The prospects are good for a fine organization. There is a splendid Sunday School, with from sixty to seventy-five pupils. Bro. Royal Councilman is the superintendent. The Church is to be called Carolina Christian Church. J. F. APPLE.
Elon College, N. C.

NOTICE.

The Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference will meet with the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., on Friday, October 24, 1930. It is earnestly desired that each society will strive to meet the requirements of the "Standard of Excellence," and make this the banner year of our work. Mrs. Ray Clarke Tillinghast, of New York City, who has just completed a trip around the world, will be the speaker and tell of her contact with the women in foreign lands.

MRS. L. W. STAGG, Sec'y.

CONFERENCES MEET.

Alabama Conference will meet with the Church at Noon Day, Tuesday, 10 A. M., after second Sunday in October, 1930.

Eastern Virginia Conference will meet with the Church at South Norfolk, Va., Wednesday before the first Sunday in November, 1930, at 10 A. M.

North Carolina and Virginia Conference will meet on Tuesday after the second Sunday in November, 1930, at 10 A. M., at Long's Chapel, Alamance County, N. C.

Western North Carolina Conference will meet Wednesday after the first Sunday in November, 1930, 10:30 A. M., with Hank's Chapel.

Eastern North Carolina Conference will meet with the Catawba Springs Christian Church, Wake County, N. C., on Tuesday after the third Sunday in November, 1930, at 10:30 A. M.

CONGREGATIONAL NEWS

REV. E. C. GILLETTE, Editor; REV. F. P. ENSMINGER, and REV. M. J. SWEET, Associates.

MINISTERS' CONVOCATION: There has been a large registration for the Florida Ministers' Convocation, which is being held this week at the Seaside Inn, Daytona Beach. A full account of this meeting will be given in our next week's issue.

REV. WILLIAM PENN has recently concluded a fine sereis of meetings in his son's Church at Albemarle. Rev. George Penn, the son, is having a fine pastorate in this splendid city. His Sunday School ranks high and prospects are very bright.

REV. FRED R. MARSH, D. D., pastor of the Church at Tavares, Fla., has sufficiently recovered from an operation performed in July to undertake his Church work again, beginning October 1st. Dr. Marsh has been pastor of this Church, and also, during the winter season, at the Church at Tangerine during the past ten years.

SPIES, N. C.: A great home-coming and rally day is planned for Providence Chapel, Spies, N. C., October 11th, at 2:30 P. M. Besides the program of the Sunday School and the singing, there will be a sermon by Rev. Milo J. Sweet, the pastor-at-large. This Sunday School sympathizes with its young secretary, Miss Monnie Sanders, who is nursing a broken arm.

DR. LEWIS H. KELLER, with Mrs. Keller, has returned to Atlanta after three months spent at Madison, Wis. Dr. and Mrs. Keller took an apartment near their married daughter and close to the university campus. Dr. Keller reports a very happy three months, and also reports that he is in good health again, as he says, "equal to one man's task, but not that of two men, as in the past."

MISS DORA BRACKIN, full-time extension worker, after a most strenuous and effective summer's work in middle and south Georgia, retired to her home in Headland, Ala., for a two weeks' vacation and a much-needed and deserved rest. October 1st she returned to her work, with headquarters for a brief time at Waycross. She will be present at the South Georgia Association October 1st to 5th, inclusive.

COUNTRY LIFE ACADEMY: A very important meeting of the trustees of Country Life Academy will be held in the academy building Saturday, October 11th, at 1 P. M. At this time all the faculty will meet the trustees, and subsequently all will assemble in the chapel to meet with the student body. This promises to be one of the most interesting and telling days of the opening of the school year. Monthly Sunday services the academy opening, with Rev. S. M Penn in charge.

KEY WEST: The Congregational Church had a float in the Labor Day parade in this city, and the float was awarded second place by the judges. The pastor, Rev. E. Richard Evans, writes, "So Congregationalism in Key West is not only in the parade, but up pretty close to the band-wagon." Mrs. Evans has trained a very effective junior choir, which recently gave a sacred concert which was largely attended and very enthusiastically received.

MISS ANNIE CAMPBELL, on October 1st, passed from work as a student summer service worker to full-time extension work in south Georgia. She will have general charge of Church matters in this interesting and growing field. Her first work in this new role was at the Whitehall Church, where she met with the women for organization and also assisted in promoting a new Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society. She was also active in the South Georgia Association at Pearson, October 3rd to 5th.

MISS PATTIE LEE COGHILL returned to the Jacksonville office on September 30th, after an absence of three months. Two months were spent in service in North Carolina, and the month of September was spent as a vacation at her home in Henderson, N. C. Miss Coghill has already a very busy program arranged for the coming months, especially acting as Congregational representative in a series of interdenominational leadership-training institutes in several of the Florida cities. She was cordially welcomed back to the Florida office and the Florida work.

REV. EDGAR S. ROTHROCK, D. D., for a number of years superintendent of the Congregational Conference of Ohio, and now emeritus-superintendent, has accepted the invitation of the Holly Hill Church, in Florida, to serve as pastor of the Church during the coming season. Dr. Rothrock and his family will arrive in Holly Hill October 16th, and will remain with the Church until in May. Dr. Rothrock has been one of the leaders in Congregationalism and was especially a great factor in the merging of the Congregational and Christian forces in the State of Ohio. The Holly Hill Church is most fortunate in securing his leadership for the coming months.

WEST TAMPA: The Church day school of Pilgrim Latin Congregational Church, West Tampa, is beginning this school year with much encouragement. On account of the hard times and the difficulty of having the tuition money it was feared that fewer parents would send their children to the Church day school this year. But on the first day there were twenty-one more pupils enrolled than the first day last year. One hundred and two are now enrolled. The four new teachers are taking hold of the Church work with splendid faith and enthusiasm. Miss Mattie Lou Davis, of Meridian, Miss., and Miss Gladys V. Hall, of Wheaton, Ill., are both graduates of Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill. Miss Naomi P. Jordan and Miss Lona A. Ward, of St. Louis, Miss., are both graduates of Nyack Missionary Institute, Nyack, N. Y.

REV. WILLIAM T. SCOTT, of Salisbury United Church, is putting on an unusually fine program for this Church. September 8th he and the men of his Church put on an every-member canvass covering the whole territory and both the local and benevolent budgets. A new Christian Endeavor Society is being organized, Boy Scout and Girl Scout troops are coming on, the choir led by the minister with Mrs. Scott, an accomplished musician, at the piano, is doing helpful and creditable work in leading public worship. The Church itself is considering the sale of the present property with the purpose of moving from a crowded business district to a fine residence part of the city. With this aggressive program on, there is little wonder that Mr. Scott refused the flattering offer from Holland, Va., to take charge of that fine parish, with a Church membership of four to five hundred members. Salisbury rejoices that Bro. Scott sticks.

PASTOR-AT-LARGE: Rev. Milo J. Sweet, pastor-at-large, was working in south Georgia the last of September and for a few days in October. He preached at Antioch Church, near Bristol and Baxley, Ga., Sunday, September 28th, and attended the home-coming at Friendship Church, Baxley, the same day. Rev. G. N. Smith organized these Churches about forty years ago. He is still acting pastor at Friendship Church, while Rev. W. C. Carpenter is the very able pastor of Antioch Church. Mr. Sweet also preached at Whitehall September 30th and shared in the meeting of the South Georgia Association. He preached at Friendship Church, Baxley, October 5th, in the morning, where he assisted in organizing a Sunday School. He will drive to Columbia, S. C., in the afternoon and share in the evening service with the pastor, Rev. E. H. Sparrow. Monday he engaged in Conference business of a very important nature, and then returned to his new home in Salisbury.

THORSBY INSTITUTE.

Thorsby Institute opened September 10th with appropriate exercises in the auditorium of Helen Jenkins Hall. An out-of-town speaker was Dr. Fred P. Ensminger, who, as a newly elected trustee, gave a short address.

All of last year's teachers returned except Miss Mary Ella Gerald, who resigned last spring on account of her health. Miss Gerald is in better health now and has a position with the Census Bureau, in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Clyde B. King, a graduate of North Central College, Ill., is a new teacher this year, and Miss Lillian McKee, a Thorsby Institute graduate and also a Piedmont College graduate, is doing some teaching and assists in various ways.

The enrollment is a little larger than last year. Two sons of Rev. C. W. Smith, Phoenix City, Ala.; a son of Rev. N. Long, Midland City, Ala., and a daughter of Rev. A. C. Nelson, East View, Ala., are in the boarding-department of Thorsby Institute this year.

On September 26th the Ladies' Guild, a band of Thorsby ladies that has raised money for the school ever since it started, gave their annual reception to the faculty, the trustees and wives, the pupils and parents. The room where the reception was held was sectioned off by chairs into months. People whose birthdays came in January sat in the January section, etc. Each section gave a program of not more than ten minutes in length. Refreshments were served. A very enjoyable evening was spent.

WELCOME TO THE GUESTS.

All over this country Congregationalists will begin using the 1930 Guest Book and welcome to their homes those guests whose messages are contained therein. The Congregationalists never issued more popular missionary literature than the Guest Book of last year, and it is certain that all those Churches who welcomed them last year will welcome with greater zeal the guests of this year.

Most of the Churches of the country will be using the Guest Books from October 12th to November 9th. Some Churches, however, will have their Guest Book month a little later. This is true, especially of Churches in Florida. If your Church has not entered into the Guest Book program, be sure to do so at once and order the books and arrange for their common use at as early period as possible.

Use the Guest Book in your home, that the children and all may receive the inspiration and cultivate the interest which these living, vital servants of Christ bring.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

(2) Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

(3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

(4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership.

(5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible, the associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cesae to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to commune or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

LEAVES FROM MY DIARY.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

IX.

29 Tavistock Square,
London, Monday, July 7, 1930.

They permitted me to sit up in my room an hour today. This means that I can again use my pencil and spend a little while with my dear diary. The last entry was June 24th. During the interval from that date till this, others and not I myself have had charge of me. My fever kept soaring, and Dr. L. E. Smith sought out one of the best physicians to be found in London, who had me immediately removed from the Royal Hotel, where I was stopping, to a nursing home, known in America as a hospital. Special nurses were called in, who tell me today that they had nursed me through a case of pneumonia, from which I was now very happily recovering. These nurses and my good doctor have been exceedingly kind and very attentive. Evidently there are good people in all parts of this world, and those who are dedicating their lives to the relief of human suffering. Fact is, there is more kindness in the world and in the human heart than any of us estimate.

Yesterday (Sunday) I was greatly disappointed and shocked to learn at 7 P. M. that my daughter, who was booked for her vacation in Europe, had given up all her plans at the last moment because of the illness of her dear aunt, Mrs. M. J. Lee. The lady in charge of the party in which my daughter was to travel called at the hospital to tell me that our dear aunt had had a stroke of paralysis and was too ill for Mary D. to leave. May our dear Lord support and bless this wonderful and dear soul, who is such a blessing and a benediction to all who know her, and their number is legion.

It has been rather lonesome in the London hospital in spite of all that nurses and doctors could do; no face I had ever seen before coming to my room for nine days. However, there was a friend who seemed to tarry by day and by night, and who from time to time would seem to say, "Fear not; I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." And there was no fear and no dread, for it never occurred to me that I was very sick, though I find considerable weakness now as I try to handle this pencil and jot down these items in my diary. Dr. F. G. Coffin called in Saturday P. M., on his way to preach at some place in London Sunday. He called again early Monday morning, reporting a delightful day of service and worship with a large London Congregational Church.

Tuesday, July 8, 1930.

They certainly bring you in funny-looking traps in this nursing home. I guess custom prevails and presents what seems to be a rather ludicrous outfit. For instance, on the tray at lunch today was a soup, a meat, a vegetable plate and a pudding; and as an equipment with which to serve myself from this tray, there was a table spoon of usual size, two knives, two forks, two small spoons and one extra big table spoon with which a host of hungry folks might be fed. I am wondering why this great table spoon on a tray for a sick man, unless it be to encourage him with the hope that some day he can sit around a family table and see such an implement in use. At breakfast this morning they brought in an egg in the shell upright in the daintiest little cup. The nurse cut the top off the egg and left me to eat it out of the shell with a little baby spoon. With the breakfast of one egg, a toast and a marmelade, they brought me two ferocious-looking knives, one a huge yellow-handled weapon and another of silver. There are also two large spoons besides the small teaspoon. It is a wonderful lay-out with which to negotiate such a modest meal. I play at eating that egg out of the shell, ensconced as it is in a beautiful little white cup with a green rim, almost as high as the egg is long. It is fine. I'll tell my doctor today when he arrives that I shall now soon be well, since I get into the egg before the chick arrives, and the process, as well as the food, seems to give me strength. There is vitality in an egg properly served, whether that vitality goes into the human frame or develops a chick, all depending, of course, on who gets hold of the egg first and extracts its vitality. One certainly can have a good time when sick and in a hospital. My doctor is a charm. He is immaculate in dress, and his manner is gentle, suave and easy. He says little, but one can see from the glance of his keen eye that he takes in situations. I haven't heard him speak once of my ailment, nor of giving any directions as to medicine and treatment. He seems to tell the nurses or the police or somebody all about that. He is red-headed and tells me that he is an Australian. He has brought two other physicians with him, I presume, to keep him company and for special examination from the way they thumped around and listened and pommeled me about. He let me sit up two hours today and said nothing about where I might sit. So I proceeded to walk down two flights of stairs and explore the house in which I am a guest for the time being. They have no parlor or sitting-room, since it is a "nursing home" for immediate intake and use. It is a very neatly kept sort of place, and I would not be ashamed for my friends to call on me. It is now 6 P. M. The sun is two hours up in the western sky, but for comfort and convenience I shall now "turn in" and lay me down to sleep. I read a book today of two or three hundred pages, a sort of exciting, horroring detective story, I presume, entitled "Lady Barbarity." The lady was barbarous all right, but her escapades and worthy motives kept me excited and interested. I presume that is why I feel like retiring at an early hour, though I have "been retired" considerably of late. One certainly can find many interesting things in a hospital to enjoy and while the time away.

I am greatly enjoying Weymouth's translation of the New Testament. I would not care to use it in public worship, but it certainly is a fine effort to preserve all that is sweet and sacred in the Scriptures, and gives one many suggestions about the holy things which are so familiar in the authorized version.

Thursday, July 10, 1930.

I enjoyed my "poor health" in bed all day yesterday. Possibly did too much "exploring" about this house the day before. One's curiosity sometimes outdoes one's strength, but today I am sitting out on the balcony in the sunshine at 12:20. The sun is warm and mellow and sweet. They have allowed my special nurses to go, and I am enjoying the freedom of looking after myself. Had a sweet night's sleep and breakfast at 8 A. M. Of course, being in England, they brought me tea at 7, and then at 8 they bring in the regular breakfast of tea, one egg in the shell, toast, and a baked tomato. At 10:30 today my heart was made to rejoice as they brought into my room two and a half dozens of pink rosebuds, with stems eighteen inches long, with a card which said: "With prayers and best wishes of your Congregational brethren." These rosebuds filled three large vases and flooded my erstwhile sick-room with color and fragrance—God's rich and glorious kiss and color. It has taken months of tender care to grow these roses, and God's bounty and beauty are so manifest in them that I see the love of man and the goodness of God blended, and both brought in to cheer, to comfort and to make me glad. I am grateful and do not know to whom thanks should be extended; so I guess I will just love a little better all those Congregational brethren I met coming over on the Adriatic.

Today, about 10, a band came by, stopped under my window and struck up on that lively patriotic melody, "'Way Down South in Dixie." My heart bounded for joy. How unselfish, indeed, is music and musicians. That band knew nothing of me, that I was there even, or that any one was about who was ever in the South, nor could I let them know my appreciation. Dr. W. W. Staley says that the other arts had their origin on earth, but the art of music originated in heaven and has no earthly origin. This will account for the universal language of music and also for its utter unselfishness. A Scotch bagpipe came by today. In fact, much music and many other things come by to interest one in a city hospital. Each morning there comes along a person with a musical, doleful, appealing word. I learn from the nurse that the man is a chimney-sweep, who has learned the art of saying "sweep" in a musical tone that is taking. If the chimney-sweep can be happy and full of song and good cheer as he walks the streets begging for the privilege of cleaning out the chimneys, how happy ought the rest of us to be!

At 3 P. M. today they allowed me to cross the street and sit for an hour in a beautiful flower garden of Tavistock Square. This garden is adorned with shade trees and aglow with purple and red colors. The lawn and flower-beds are kept in perfect condition and is protected by an iron fence seven feet high. You gain admittance by securing a key from the house in which you are a guest, and all the houses surrounding the square that compose the garden are permitted to enjoy the fragrance and the beauty of the flowers. It is a wonderful arrangement, these squares of flower gardens dotting the whole city of London and giving beauty and fragrance. It has been a wonderful and a glorious day. Ralph Waldo Emerson truly says: "Here is compensation in life," and there is. Whatever one's condition or circumstances, one may find very, very much to be happy over and thankful for, for truly "God is good, His wonders, His majesty and His love being unspeakable, and His ways past finding out."

A FEDERAL JUDGE ON PROHIBITION.

One judge, as well as many others, in the Federal courts rings true on prohibition. In delivering his charge to the grand jury for the September term of United States Court, sitting at Elizabeth City, N. C., September 23, Federal Judge I. M. Meekins reviewed the prohibition law in all of its phases and scouted the repeal of the eighteenth amendment as being "too remote for even the most optimistic of the proponents of the idea to envision success." Judge Meekins told a crowded courtroom that there was less drinking in North Carolina today than there was before the Volstead law; that enforcement is getting stricter every day, and that there is a growing sentiment for enforcement. Judge Meekins further said that a report had come to him that in eastern North Carolina, within thirty miles of where court was sitting, a man was carrying on the most extensive operations of manufacturing and distributing whiskey to all parts of the State. "If I were a prohibition officer in this territory, I would either bring this man into court or resign," declared the judge.

Because the wets are carrying on such intensive and extensive propaganda, and spending millions of money in that propaganda, many get the idea that the courts and the newspapers soft-pedal the whole prohibition idea, or are opposed to the Volstead act. The fact is, by a recent study, a majority of the daily newspapers of the country are shown to be dry in editorial policy and fair in their treatment of the prohibition issue. Recently the Board of Temperance of the Methodist Episcopal Church gave to the press this statement: "This board finds that 56 per cent of the 1,438 of the daily papers studied by it favor prohibition editorially, while 36 per cent are wet, and the other 8 per cent are neutral or non-committal." The board further declares: "That, in general, the policy of the daily newspapers follow local sentiment—in the Northern States the large dailies are usually wet. Those in smaller communities are about 50 per cent dry; in the Southern States the dry percentage is 62; in the Middle West, 56 per cent, and the Far West, 56 per cent."

Prohibition is not doing all that its advocates hoped; neither is any other law of recent or even ancient enactment. Even the law against murder, coming down to us from ancient times, does not prevent many heinous crimes in cold blood. If prohibition law is to be altered, it should be done, and likely will be, by its friends, and not by its foes. The wet propaganda carried on today originates from those who care more for profits than for human beings, and have little or no concern for the welfare of their fellow-man. J. O. A.

LOCAL CHURCHES AND INSTITUTIONS.

The implications of a local Church embrace all the institutions of the denomination. A Church can no more live to itself than an individual; and the Bible says, "None of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself" (Rom. 14:7). The hermit never succeeded in improving religious character or usefulness." "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is" (Heb. 10:25). Human beings are social in their nature and religious association is essential to the best life. Local Churches are units in a greater body; individuals in an organization. This is illustrated in the Bible by the body. There are many members, but one body. "The eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee; nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you. Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary" (1 Cor. 12:21, 22. The Church is the body of Christ and local Churches are members of that body. The institutions of the Church constitute the Church, and local Churches are members of the Church.

Now, examine the relation of the local Church to the institutions of the Church. The Church could not exist without its institutions. Take, for example, the missionary work of the Church. That is a divinely appointed institution. That was the main command of Jesus that the disciples "go and teach all nations" (Matt. 29:9). There can be no real Church that neglects missions, and no denomination could send missionaries to foreign lands unless supported by local Churches. Those Churches "which seem to be more feeble" are necessary. All the members of the body are necessary for the existence and useful service of the body. Of course, if one arm is lost, the other arm must do the work of both; but while both arms remain attached to the body, each one must do its part. Some local Churches plead poverty and seem to feel justified in doing nothing except for themselves; but the Bible requires the poorest as well as the richest to do their part. This obligation is implied in the very existence of a Church. The apostles gave the Churches in Greece an opportunity to send help to the poor saints in Jerusalem; and charity has been a part of the work of the Church from Paul's day until our day. No member of a local Church can be a good member unless he supports the Church by attendance, contributions, and faithful living. That means to go where you can, pay when you can, and do the will of God in daily living.

The government could not exist without the loyalty and support of the States; and the State could not exist without the loyalty and support of the counties. The Church institutions cannot continue to exist and do their work without the loyalty and support of the local Churches; and that means missions, publications, colleges, orphanages in the Christian Church. INDIA'S CALL TO PRAYER.

The National Christian Council of India has published an outline of intercession, as follows:

Let us seek for a missionary spirit—that the Church may see the whole world's need of Christ and may be ready for any sacrifice in order to make Him known to all mankind.

Let us give thanks for the Church of India, remembering that it is part of the Church catholic, which is the body of Christ.

Let us thank God for the manifestation of the desire for unity in the Church of India, and for the scheme of union proposed in South India.

Let us seek a spirit of prayer—that Christian people may learn to pray as Christ prayed and taught the disciples to pray; and that an ever-increasing number of intercederes may be raised up, until the whole Church is awakened to prayer.

Let us seek a spirit of sacrifice and of unity—that the Church may be willing, at whatever cost, to follow and bear witness to the way of Christ as she learns it; that the whole Church of Christ may desire and experience a new unity in Christ.

Let us seek for the gift of interpretation—that the Church may learn to preach the gospel by word and life in terms that the men and women of this age will understand.

Let us seek for courageous witness in moral questions—that the witness of the Church in moral questions of our day may truly reflect the mind of God and may be known and felt throughout the world.

Medical Work.

Let us thank God for those Christian men and women who give their lives in the service of the sick and the suffering.

Let us thank God for the increased efforts put forth by the State and by public bodies for the prevention of disease.

Let us seek for a spirit of service—that a great number of men and women may offer themselves unreservedly to do Christ's work at home and abroad in our generation.

Let us seek for the completion of our own conversion, praying for the removal of all hindrances in our lives to the manifestation of God's redeeming love and power.—Review of the Churches.

We Americans could well imitate such a call to intercession. J. O. A.

WORLD OPEN TO CHRISTIANITY.

Never were the doors of entry into other lands so wide open to Christianity as at present, Dr. John R. Mott told the evangelism group of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which met at East Northfield in June. Having recently returned from a trip around the world, Dr. Mott told of the spirit of inquiry which was creating conditions ripe for the message of Christ. Even the Mohammedan world is open to evangelization, he said.

Dr. Mott gave a most encouraging outline of conditions in other countries from the point of view of the Christian work. As an illustration, he told of the resolve of Mr. Chang Singyee, speaking in behalf of the native Church of China, that within five years the Christian Church of China was to be doubled, and this in the face of the cataclysmic conditions prevailing in China now. In India, Dr. Mott said, Christianity is on the threshold of a most far-reaching influence.

"I have never been so impressed before by the tide of inquiry that is sweeping over all countries." Dr. Mott said. "We in America think there is a flood of literature abroad, but we have nothing in comparison with other lands. Tokyo, for example, has miles of bookshops. The press is reaching millions today that never knew anything beyond the borders of their own little communities only a few years ago. All this means that the doors of opportunity for Christ are equally wide open. The barriers of age-old custom and prejudice against the foreigner are now down. Faith and expectation on the part of the Christian Church are all that is necessary for the evangelization of the world."

General Chang Chih Chiang, one of the leaders of the Chinese government, visited the Central Conference of the Methodist Church at Nanking and addressed the delegates with the energy and insight of a prophet. The China Christian Advocate describes it as "the thrill of the Conference." He and his wife brought their two children to the Sunday morning service, where they were christened Mary and Samuel.—Christian Advocate.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

In the Suffolk Letter account of the funeral services of Mrs. Jennet Lee, two important survivors were omitted from the immediate family. On September 30, 1884, her father married a third time, Miss Sue Turner, of North Carolina, and she was the mother of one daughter, Ruth, who is now Mrs. R. J. Kernodle. Her stepmother and half-sister now reside in Durham, N. C.

There is a Sunday School teacher-training school going on in the Suffolk Christian Church from September 28th to October 3rd, sponsored by the Methodist, Presbyterian and Christian Churches of Suffolk. The enrollment is nearly a hundred, and the interest is fine, and visitors increase the number.

The faculty is composed of Miss Jane McDonald, of Columbia, S. C., who teaches workers in the intermediate department; Mrs. J. C. Goode, of Richmond, Va., who teaches in the junior department; Mrs. O. V. Woosley, of Winston-Salem, N. C., who teaches the beginners' workers; and Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church, who teaches the course in New Testament. The classes meet for a service of worship in the main Sunday School room and then repair to departments for class-work, with two periods each evening. The increase in Sunday School attendance and work, and training for such work show a growing progress in this department of Church life. It is a long step since 1780, when Robert Raikes started a Sunday School in Gloucester, England, to teach poor ignorant children to read and to repeat the catechism. Great progress has been made in 150 years in Sunday School work. Robert Raikes' father was owner and printer of the Gloucester Journal, and Robert succeeded his father and kept up the Journal till 1802—twenty-two years. Printing was done in China many centuries before it was known in Europe. Even movable type was used in China in the twelfth or thirteenth century. The art of printing from movable types was invented in Europe in the fifteenth century. The progress of printing has been marvelous, and the papers, magazines, and books now turned off from the press amaze the thinking man. The progress of the Sunday School, over the same period of years, has been as wonderful as printing. As the printing press has wandered from the best path and is filled with harmful things in this present age, so the Sunday School is in danger of leaving the main purpose of training the young for serving God and righteous living, and neglect the Church, which is the mother who nourishes and loves her child—the Sunday School.

The greatest problem to be solved is how to prevent a decline in Church attendance on the part of those who attend Sunday School. That is a question for Sunday School leaders to solve before it goes too far. There is already a tendency that is alarming thoughtful Christians when they see the Sunday School closed and a big majority leaving the Church and not going to the regular Church service. The Sunday School should be trained to remain for the Church service. The best Sunday School is the Sunday School that attends Church.

W. W. Staley.

ELON LETTER.

In continuing the discussion of the past two weeks, let it be said that in a coeducational college there is a great temptation for a certain type of young man or young woman to go to the extreme in social matters. I think we ought to appear as well as we can personally. The charm and attractiveness that go with good dressing are not matters of small importance. I do not even condemn a moderate use of cosmetics, but, after all, the beauty that really abides and the charm that does not fade are not put on from the outside. Like William Howard Taft's smile, they do not come off because they are not put on. Social butterflies and scintillating sheiks are parodies of the genuine article on our present-day college campuses. It is a great mistake, it seems to me, for a young man to form a friendship with only one young lady during his college days in a coeducational setting; and even more unfortunate for a young woman to limit her social horizon by one infatuation. Good fellowship is a basic quality of human experience. Social graces are real embellishments for successful life. Moderately indulged, there is no more exhilatating experience than social intercourse among social peers. But those who come to college in order to enjoy the social activities that inevitably are associated with the college experience on a coeducational campus and who subordinate every other interest and concern to the achievement of a social career may shine for the brief span of four years, but eventually the night of disappointment will come and the gloom of darkness will settle down upon them as a thick cloud.

In the choice days of college life we should enjoy the social fellowship of our fellow-students and of faculty alike, and during these days we should acquire, through the practice of the social conventionalities, a genuine appreciation of life and become habituated in moving as cultured men and women in any social circle. But it goes without saying that we cannot achieve this worthy end if we aspire only to social enjoyment. We must keep in mind the whole of life; we must participate in social enjoyment as a balanced experience in a unified and consistently developed life program.

In a former Elon Letter I have intimated that the practice of spiritual virtues is a most desirable custom. We cannot, if we would, separate ourselves from spiritual experience during our college days. Spirituality is a quality of the total life experience. No matter what we undertake to do, whether we work or play or study or enjoy ourselves in a social way, our total personality is involved. This means that the spiritual flavor seasons each situation. It is conceivable that we could make ourselves ridiculous by always parading our interest in spiritual matters, just as we could make ourselves ridiculous by insisting that we have no interest in spiritual things. We should certainly form the habit of thinking through in terms of ultimate values and standards, which means Christian values and standards every issue and problem that presents itself to us. With the expection of informing ourselves as to what Christian values and standards are, we should elect to pursue courses in college that have particularly to do with religion. And then we should apply the norms, ideals and principles which we have learned from these courses in religion to the problems and situations that constantly arise in our other courses of study and in our daily life on the campus. It is not necessary that we should make ourselves offensive in presenting our Christian conclusions, but we should make it our habit to weigh our conduct and evaluate our choices in terms of Christian idealism. We will make mistakes, it is true, but the wise man never makes the same mistake twice. In our cultivation of the spiritual life and our application of Christian life principles to our experience, we should keep in mind Paul's injunction to let our moderation be known unto all men. W. A. Harper.

NOTICE.

To the Churches of the Eastern Virginia Conference:

In just two months the Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference will assemble for its annual session, and we are wondering what preparation individual Churches are making therefor. Will it be a preparation which culminates in that goal as will glorify God and bring glory to Jesus Christ with no attendant shame occasioned by individual failure?

Our additional apportionments necessitate our bending every energy toward making this the best year our association has ever had in it's history, and I believe that the sacrifices which this will entail will contribute to that very end. The things which cost us most we appreciate more, and the measure of our gifts to God are determined by the extent of sacrifice entailed. The widow's mite was small in monetary value, but large because of its sacrifice. She gave "all her living." Her memory is eternally perpetuated because of this by the Lord Jesus (Luke 21:1-4). Lowell once said, "Do not put your trust in money, but put your money in trust," which was but a paraphrase of the direction of the Lord Jesus, who said: "Sell that you have and give alms; provide yourselves with bags which wax not old, a treasure to the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approached, neither moth corrupteth, for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also" (Luke 12:33-34).

Martin Luther once said, "The things which I have kept in my own hands are gone; those I placed in the hands of God, He holds for me." One reason why we are not as much interested in heaven and the kingdom of God is because we have invested so little therein.

We want to urge first, that every Church in the Conference make this matter one of prayer. It was after a prayer-meeting in the first Church that the "place was shaken where they were assembled together," and there was no lack in the treasury (Acts 4th ch.). Let us deny ourselves, secondly, in making our contribution greater than we have ever made it. Jesus said, "He who would come after me, let Him deny himself." Let every Church, thirdly, in the Convention become a part of this association, taking at least one membership, the memberships costing, for Church, only $10.00 a year; for male members, $10.00 a year; for the ladies and young people, only $5.00 a year.

The moneys of this association are expended for missionary purposes among the people of the Eastern Virginia Conference, a purely home missionary institution, and the results which have come through this organization have been marvelously blessed of God.

Lastly, we appeal to every pastor in the Convention to use every medium within his power to enlarge the capacities of this association, to increase its mission among us, and to secure every Church as a member, to increase the individual memberships among the Churches already subscribing.

Again permit us to urge: make the Missionary Association a matter of prayer from day to day, to the end that the great objective of Christ Jesus may be realized in greater measure than ever before (Luke 18:1). In His service,

H. C. Caviness.

Pres. E. Va. Missionary Association.

AWAKE—CHRISTIAN AMERICA!

It took America's Churches seventy-five years to destroy the legalized liquor traffic. Today the wets boast that it will take only ten years to restore that traffic to "good standing." They count on it that the crusading spirit has gone out of the Christian Church.

They may be right.

It may be that the Church of today is too weak or too indifferent to the issues of righteousness to maintain the moral reform that the Church of yesterday made possible. It may be that organized Christianity in this land will be forced to make way for a triumphant return of the liquor business. It may be that America, once again, will enshrine the liquor shop on its street corners, legalize liquor corruption in its political life and fasten again all the ancient miseries of liquor upon America's homes. If that happens, we will stand ready to agree that the crusading spirit has gone out of the Christian Church. For only the unconcerned of the Christian Church could allow that to happen.

If this outlawed business comes again under the shelter of the American flag, its social stench and viciousness will stand as a symbol of the impotence of the Christian Church, as proof that the professed zeal of Christians is exhausted in the profession.

But we will not concede that America's Church people will allow this to happen. We do not believe that the fires kindled by Lyman Beecher, Frances Willard, John B. Gough and the generation of yesterday's prophets have entirely burned out. We do believe that the old flame can be stirred again and spread with the old passion for Christian righteousness until the menace of liquor to our national life is finally destroyed.

Liquor's fight, now as always, is against the Christian Church. The answer to that challenge must be provided by you, the individual Church member, and your Church. Your Church is called, in this crisis, to awaken; to shake off its lethargy; to go out again, pulpit and pew united, to a new drive to uphold the century's greatest moral reform.

A Christian crusade outlawed the legalized liquor traffic. Only a Christian crusade can prevent its return.

The moment to launch that crusade is upon us. Will you, by your indifference, restore the liquor traffic? Or will you choose, now, to march with the forces of righteousness against this new threat of the Church's ancient enemy?—Stanley High, in Christian Herald.

MISSIONS

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Mighty Master of mankind, how marvelous is Thy power to enfold and hold. We thank Thee that human abnegation is strength divine; that looking, leaning, loving, self-loss only is gain. We pray Thee, Father, stay our minds, compel our bodies, seal our beings. O God of mercy, hold us close, keeping Thou our feet to the lowly path by which to grow the soul must strive for others. For Jesus' sake, that the world may live and not die, bring Thou the Church under the suffering of His cross. This day, each day, more burden our plea, more grace, O God, to unburden to Thee. In our Saviour's name. Amen.

NEWS ITEMS

By Mrs. W. M. Jay.

News comes from the Holy Neck Missionary Society of the most successful year since the organization, fourteen years ago. The attendance has been good and the contributions splendid. They attribute most of their success to the untiring work of their spiritual life superintendent, Mrs. N. G. Newman, who has had full charge of the devotional period. They have laid special emphasis on the members being on time and getting the full benefit of these devotionals. This has created a spiritual atmosphere that has been felt.

The annual cradle roll rally was held recently, with a good attendance and a well-prepared program. This was indeed a great meeting and mothers and babies were given especial notice. Light refreshments were served and a general good time is reported. Mrs. David Howell is the superintendent of this department.

All the children's societies have reached their goals and are looking forward to a better year next year.

The Willing Workers' Society of Holy Neck Christian Church have just completed the year, with all requirements met. They have twenty-five members on role and they are an interested group of children. In July they gave the pageant, "Won't You Walk Into My Parlor?" and a nice sum was realized through a silver offering. Mrs. J. H. Harrell has been the superintendent for the year, and she will be succeeded by Mrs. N. G. Newman for the new year.

The Liberty Spring young people report a good year, with Mrs. Y. C. Byrd as superintendent. They have had a public program every third Sunday night at the Church, with good attendance. They also gave the pageant entitled, "When Aunt Tillie Learned to Tithe," and a neat sum was realized through a free-will offering. Once a month they met in the homes for their mission-study and business. These meetings have been well attended, and these young people are proud that they have reached the standard required.

The Liberty Spring Woman's Missionary Society report that they have met all the requirements on the standard of excellence for this year. All dues and additional fees have been paid and they have raised their apportionment of $120, plus 10 per cent. They completed their study books and have fifty-nine members on their roll. Mrs. W. H. Rountree and Mrs. N. H. Bradshaw, loyal and devoted members of this society, have been claimed by death during the past year, and the society feels their loss keenly.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Old Zion Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., was organized in January of this year. Though this is a new society, they have done a wonderful work. They have had ten meetings, read one mission book, held a public Mothers' Day service, and furnished the parsonage at Ducat, Va. They are fostering all the children's societies, and these are doing a good work also. Mrs. Nellie M. Bromble is the president of this society.

The Burton's Grove Young People's Society has had a good year, having held twelve meetings, with the best attendance in its history. They received a thankoffering, sent a box to the Orphanage for Easter, and held a public program under the leadership of their spiritual life superintendent. Reports have been sent in quarterly in full, and they expect to add the 10 per cent increase which has been asked. Mrs. Payton N. Gay is secretary of this society.

Suggestions for Missionary Programs.

These programs are not based on the inter-denominational study-books. Instead, we suggest an intensive study of these books in mission-study classes. The books suggested are "A Cloud of Witnesses," by Elsie Singmaster; "The Treasure Hunt," by Margaret R. Leebach; "India on the March," by Alden H. Clark; "Trailing to Conquistadors," by Samuel Guy Inman; "West Indian Treasures," by Winifred Hulbert; "Sugar Is Sweet," by Dorothy McConnell.

There has been no provision made in the suggested programs for business. It is hoped that the business of the society will be transacted at the very beginning of the meeting.

There is no disposition to the dictatorial with reference to these programs which are meant to be suggestive only. They were worked out by a group of five presidents of missionary societies and represent the combined thought of the group and not that of any one.

As usual, there has been an envelope of helps prepared, which you may secure from Mrs. Powers, 501 C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio, for 25 cents. This envelope contains six leaflets entitled "Service of Worship," one for each of the six months as suggested in your programs.

Consecration Service.

October begins our new year, presumably with new officers. Have the names of the officers read, and while they stand, let the leader of the service of worship direct prayer in their behalf. To an unusual degree this year, let us seek the guidance and power of the Holy Spirit.

Outline of Woman's Work.

Our woman's work has suffered this year because of uncertainty. We have wondered as to our places as a woman's organization in the merger. After much consultation with Congregational and Christian leaders, it has been decided that the Woman's Mission Board of the Christian Church is a necessary instrument in the consummation of the merger, and to that end must carry on with renewed vigor at least for the coming year. A program has been prepared which is not divisive, but which leads to acquaintance with the enlarged work. Each month we shall study a different country in which we as Congregational-Christians are doing work.

Map Talks.

Our map talks are designed to give us the size, location and something of the character of each country studied. We also desire, through these map talks, to locate the particular work of our united Church. Through the guest-book, we hope to become really acquainted with at least twenty-five or thirty of the men and women of our enlarged family. As the program provides for the "Intraduction of the Guest from China" or Africa, or wherever the guest is from, we shall turn to the map and see the section of God's world that is our particular interest that day. (See map on back of guest-book.)

Roll Call.

Some of us attended a missionary meeting recently when practically every member answered to her name at roll call with facts relative to Africa and her need of the gospel or her response to the gospel message. The responses were brief, just a sentence or two, but in the search for these responses every woman had increased her knowledge of Africa and her interest in that country.

Let us always reach a climax in our monthly programs and separate with the feeling that our thinking together and our fellowship have brought to us the more abundant life which will go with us back to our homes and our many contacts to advance just a little further His kingdom in our midst.

This year we may have for the asking the Congregational-Christian Guest Book which we may invite into our homes. There are well-worked-out plans for distributing these books. The pastors have been sent cards of invitation which may be signed by the families of our Churches. Then each family signing the card will receive a book.

We hope that every missionary group will assist the pastor in the work of distribution. To further our acquaintance with these guests, we suggest that at the October meeting of the missionary society some one appointed to that duty hold before the society the Guest Book of 1930-1931, and explain how we are to meet one guest a day by reading a page a day from this book in our homes. At this October meeting, let her turn to the page on which you find the picture of Rev. E. C. Fry, of Utsunomiya, Japan, and let him speak for himself through the lips of the reader. Then look at the group of Japanese girls pictured in this number of the bulletin, for they are from Mr. Fry's field.

In November, a "guest from China" will be introduced from the Guest Book and will speak through the lips of the one to whom the duty is assigned. Each month this procedure will be followed.

NOTICE.

Young People and Willing Workers.

In last week's SUN I promised to have the programs for October in this week. I wrote to Mrs. Emma S. Powers, Dayton, Ohio, asking her about these programs, and she informs me that the Woman's Mission Board is not preparing programs for the young people and juniors. The following is a list of books which will be helpful, and may be secured from the Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio, C. P. A. Building:

"A Cloud of Witnesses," by Elsie Singmaster (paper, 50c). This is for young people and contains biographical sketches of India and other countries.

"The Treasure Hunt," by Margaret R. Seeback (paper, 50c), for Willing Workers or juniors.

There are several other good books which are not off the press, but if each superintendent will send for the leaflet, "Missionary Education Material" for 1930-'31, they will be able to choose just what they would like. Consult the literature table at the Woman's Conference, and there you will find help also. MRS. W. M. J.

NOTICE.

The North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference meets with the Liberty Vance Christian Church on Friday, October 17, 1930. It is desired that there be representatives of every Church in the Conference. All the ministers are invited to be present. Program will appear next week.

The JEWEL is the latest and most attractive Pocket Testament made.

The TYPE is black, bold and larger than that in the famous Vest Pocket edition, and the book itself is smaller.

It is printed exclusively on the famous Holman India paper, noted for its opaque quality and unusual tensile strength.

One advantage of this India paper is that the leaves do not cling together.

The size, 2½x4¼ inches, is so small that the book practically fits the palm of the hand.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By Rev. H. S. Hardcastle.

Lesson III—October 19, 1930.

Simeon and Anna.

Golden Text: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."—Matt. 5:8.

Lesson: Luke 2:25-39.

Jesus' parents brought Him into the temple, that they might do concerning Him after the custom of the law. They wanted to give recognition to God's rights in the Child, to give public acknowledgment of gratitude to the Author and Giver of life for this added joy, to bear testimony to the open acceptance of the welcome afforded to this little life into their fellowship. It was done under the form of ritual, which was the custom of that day. It was altogether fitting and proper that they should do this. The coming of a little child into the home not only brings new joy into the home and new meaning into life; it brings new responsibilities which ought to give impulse to a seeking after the help of God in the nurture of the child. A Christening ceremony or service ought to be one of the high lights of every parent's life and religious experience. Alas, that so many parents fail to live up to its fair promises and its high ideals.

There was living in Jerusalem an old man named Simeon; a man who was righteous and devout; a man well advanced in age. The secret of the Lord is with them that hear Him. Into the heart of this saint of God there had come the assurance that he was to see the Lord's Christ, the Anointed, the one who should come. It was no mere coincidence, then, that as Joseph and Mary came into the temple to fulfill the ceremonial law, Simeon met them. Almost instinctively the aged saint of God took the Child in his arms and gave expression to the joy of his soul, and to a prophetic utterance that found literal fulfillment. What a picture this is—age, with its face turned to the West, and yet expectant; and infancy, with its face turned to the East, the place of beginning. It is a picture of ripened experience and untried promise. And by faith he who had finished life's course saw in this wee Babe the fulfillment of all his hopes and his dreams.

His words are prophetic. Christ was indeed the "salvation" which God had prepared before the face of all peoples. He was a light for revelation to the Gentiles, or, as another version gives it, a light to lighten the Gentiles. He was the glory of Israel, altogether lovely, the fairest among ten thousand. His words were prophetic, too, in regard to Mary. Christ was to be set for the rising and falling of many in Israel. "The effect of His truth was to put down some of the mighty from their seats and to exalt them of low degree. In the moral rearrangement under the eye of one who looks not on the outward appearance, but on the heart, the first will find himself last and the last be promoted to first."

"Yea, and a sword shall pierce through thine own soul." These words also found fulfillment all through Christ's life as Mary shared the shame and the sorrow, but especially as she stood by and saw her Son crucified, being numbered with the transgressors.

"That thoughts out of many hearts may be revealed." Christ does just this. There is nothing hid from Him. He makes the secret things to be known. Christ is the great Revealer.

There was also another saint of God, a woman over a hundred years of age it seems, one who was very devout. She, too, saw the Child Jesus, and she, too, gave thanks and invoked her blessing upon Him. Her religious instinct saw in Him the one who should bring redemption to Israel.

It is significant that both of these saints of God were lingering in the temple when they had the fulfillment of their hope for the coming Messiah. They were in the place, the atmosphere of which would induce the mood and the attitude which would enable them to be susceptible to the impulses of God from within. It is thus in most cases. The most logical place to induce and to produce that spirit which sees the things that are otherwise hidden is in the sanctuary. This was never more true than today. In this day of distraction and rush and stress and strain, one needs to put himself in that place and to prepare in himself that mood which will enable him to see the King in all His glory.

"They returned unto Galilee to their own city, Nazareth." Nazareth was not, by any means, an ideal place in which to bring up a boy. As a matter of fact, it was so unsavory in reputation that when Jesus was referred to later as being from Nazareth, one who after became His disciple said with a sneer, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" It is to be noted, too, that Jesus' parents evidently were in very ordinary circumstances, for they could not present the lamb which was the usual gift to accompany the presentation in the temple, but instead they presented a pair of turtledoves. Let us seek material possession in the right way. And let us make environment as good as possible. But let us not think that they can ever be substitutes for godly influence and inner resources of character. Here and there in our modern Nazareths there are many young people from humble homes who are going to be benedictions and blessings to the world because they have sterling character and because they are getting wholesome religious training.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

By Jewel Truitt.

Sunday, October 19, 1930.

Topic: "Christians and Sunday."

Piano prelude: "Break, Thou, the Bread of Life."

Call to worship.

Leader: "This is the day which Jehovah hath made."

Response: "We will rejoice and be glad in it."—Psa. 18:24.

Hymn: "O Day of Rest and Gladness."

Opening prayer: (A prayer for greater understanding of the need of better Sunday observance.)

Poem: "The Earth is Hushed in Silence."

"The earth is hushed in silence,
Its cares now flee away;
Let all things bow in reverence
On this the Lord's own day.

"The bells are sweetly ringing,
Their clear-toned voices say:
'Ye people, come and worship
On this the Lord's own day.'

"O call of love and duty!
Who would not praise and pray,
And thank the Lord of heaven
On this His chosen day?

"He cheers the weary-hearted,
He shows the heavenly way
To those who kneel before Him
On this His holy day.

"Come, all ye thankful people;
Why should our hearts delay
To greet the Lord of heaven
On this His holy day?" —Anon.

Leader's talk: "Nations have come and nations have gone, and all that perished have desecrated the Sabbath Day. Ancient prophets long foretold their downfall, and later Jesus said: 'I come not to destroy the law, but to fulfill.' But from the beginning the people had not attempted to fulfill the law the great Moses gave to them—the Ten Commandments received from Jehovah—the Fourth Commandment being, 'Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy.' But his wrath was kindled to find his people early forsaking God's law. Generation after generation the prophets spoke, but the people did as Nehemiah found them doing in Jerusalem. (Read Nehemiah 13:15-18.) Modern prophets have declared the same warnings. Abraham Lincoln said: 'As we keep or break the Sabbath, we nobly save or meanly lose the last hope by which humanity rises.' Emerson called the Sabbath 'the core of civilization.' Sir Walter Scott said, 'Give the world one-half of Sunday, and you will soon find that religion has no stronghold on the other half.' What shall our nation do? What shall we do with the Lord's Day?"—G. B. Stacy.

Scripture reading: Matt. 12:1-8.

Hymn: "Take Time to Be Holy."

Offertory: "Abide With Me."

Silent prayer: (Pray that we may examine our hearts and know if we are loyal to God's law. Pray that we may better observe the Lord's Day.)

Quartet: Sing refrain of "Day is Dying in the West," unannounced, after the silent prayer.

Discussion of the Topic.

Ask two members of the society to talk three minutes each on the question, "Should Sunday be different from other days?"

Ask two other members to be prepared to discuss, "Why do we have a day of rest?" (a) Bible commands it; (b) custom; (c) necessary for health.

Ask two members to discuss: Laws for Sunday observance in our town (or State). Should there be more or less of them? What would happen if there were less? What others would you add? How much buying and selling do you think is necessary?

Ask a group to plan a Sunday schedule for a young person. Let it include hours for sleep, meals, Church, work that is permissible (mention it), time to be spent with friends, letter-writing, etc. Let the society discuss this report.

Lead the group in a discussion of what Sunday should do for a person.

Discuss ways of making Sunday happy and useful: (a) Sleeping; (b) hiking; (c) staying at home; (d) visiting; (e) catching up with work or study; (f) letter-writing; (g) autoing; (h) attending movies or other commercial forms of entertainment.

In all the discussion, be frank. Be sure that the group is trying to discuss what to do, and is not trying to defend what we really do.

For our next two meetings we have especially interesting topics. They are: "Making America Christian" and "Why Support the Eighteenth Amendment? How?" Begin making your plans for these two meetings. Appoint the leaders, if this has not been done already, and they will be looking for helpful articles in current magazines and newspapers.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS

W. A. HARPER, BOOK EDITOR.

(Any book reviewed in this Department may be had of The Christian Sun at the publisher's price.)

THE PASTOR AND RELIGIOUS EDUCATION. By Harry C. Munro. Abingdon; $2; pp. 227.

In this book, as in his "The Church as a School" and his "The Director of Religious Education," the author consistently maintains that religious education is "the basic method by which the Church undertakes to realize any of its legitimate and worthy aims," and that the Church's "educational program is so intimately related to its total program that the two become indistinguishable."

There is, therefore, only one program for the modern Church—a program of education, whether the specific aim be worship, evangelism, benevolent giving or any other activity, the building of Christian character in the constituency, the clarifying of their intellectual or other viewpoints, or what not. There is no element in the program of the Church which is not educational in content and procedure.

The minister must, therefore, understand educational procedure, whether he actively administers his Church school or not, and his every activity or procedure should square with the demands of a consistent educational aim or objective. When he makes pastoral calls, he is a religious educator as well as comforter of souls or social functionaire. Seminaries, as well as graduate schools of religion and denominational colleges, should recognize this need and produce this type of minister. He will be a better preacher for being a religious educator.

Shall the Church employ a director of religious education? If it is able and the minister is anxious to team with such an officer, yes; but if it is financially weak or if the minister has the one-man complex for his Church, no. It is better to have a pastor's assistant or an assistant pastor, to whom the pastor may delegate such duties as in his judgment are wise.

But for the vast majority of Churches, not even an assistant can be employed. The minister must be his own director of religious education, training, organizing, supervising a sound educational program. He should do this not grudgingly nor apologetically, but whole-heartedly and from the conviction that herein lies his field of largest ministry.

The term counseling is preferred to supervising for two reasons—supervision, in the public school parlance, is limited to the improvement of classroom technique and savors of authoritativeness. The minister's attitude is to be that of co-operative helpfulness. He will endeavor to get the teacher or officer to suggest his or her own program of improvement.

When the Church thus becomes a school in Christian living and the pastor becomes the radiating center of stimulation in its local setting, adults will attend Church, young people will "rah-rah" for the pastor, and the children will love him with tender devotion. Such is the consummations the educational-minded pastor, thinks the author, may hopefully expect. The idea will revoluticnize the Church, and it may greatly offset the auto, the radio, and the talkie in their present baneful influence on Church attendance. Something must be done. "The foolishness of preaching," to borrow a scriptural phrase, has demonstrated its futility, except in a few cases. Why not give religious education a chance? This book is valuable as suggesting this remedy and as pleading its cause.

THE DIRECTOR OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION. By Harry C. Munro. The Westminster Press; $1.50; pp. 214.

It is doubtful if any one has a more consistent understanding of the delicate relationships of the director of religious education and the pastor than Harry C. Munro, and he has clearly described them in this book. It is entirely true that the work of religious supervision must work its way out to the weaker Churches, and not be a luxury for the stronger Churches. The author outlines the practical methods by which this may be accomplished. In his central position that the Church is a school in Christian living, he is thoroughly consistent, though many will disagree with him. The book, is weak in that practical measures are not adequately exemplified in keeping with this new emphasis. However, those who would undertake the work of the supervision of religious education would do well to acquaint themselves with this book.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
One of our Chaplains in the U. S. Navy.

"If thou wilt make the Almighty thy treasure . . . then shalt thou delight thyself in the Almighty . . . and thou shalt make thy prayer unto Him and He will hear thee."—Job 22: 25-27.

MONDAY.

THE GOD OF AFFLICTION.

"Before I was afflicted I went astray, but now I observe Thy word."—Psa. 119:67.

It is a good thing to have a heavy hand laid upon us sometimes, though it may seem to bring sorrow, for under it pride and self-confidence die, the sober and humble spirit is preserved, faith increases, humility thrives, the spirit looks to God, and brotherly love for others is strengthened. This is the God of all grace who calls us to be partakers of His salvation and who is diligent to prepare and fashion us for His glory.

Prayer.—Dear God of all grace, keep us from pride and carnal self-confidence. Give us vigilant, humble and pious hearts. Strengthen us in suffering and establish us in Thy faith and fellowship. Amen.

TUESDAY.

APOSTATE CHRISTIANS.

"Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me . . . and (he) wasted his substance with riotous living."—Luke 16:12-13.

When we contemplate what he gives up, it is strange and it is sad that a man will discard the faith, the Church, the Christian living, and the glory which he knew as a child and which he had as a child of God, and choose instead the wretched pleasures of the world. He wastes all that he had of heavenly riches; he throws away his peace and joy in the Lord; he loses the life of love in God; the Spirit of God deserts him; the light of his understanding is put out, and he walks in darkness. He casts away his trust in God, and he loses the privilege and comfort of the Heavenly Father, the gracious gift of prayer and the precious right to ask of the Lord and expect to receive. Songs of praise become hollow mockery, and he comes to ridicule divine services and the communion of the saints. It is a complete forsaking of holiness and a loss of desire for that which is pure and true—in short, it casts away everything which the child of God possesseth. He wastes his substance and he finds nothing in his course that satisfies.

Love is the only thing that satisfies the soul's cravings, and the world does not have that love. Without God and that love, even amidst riches and splendor, life appears to be wretched. Watch then, fellow-Christians, young people, and forsake not God in His holy place. Never let the world deceive you.

Prayer.—Faithful God, do not let us go away from Thee. Preserve us in the state of grace and keep us from evil. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WAKING UP.

"And when he came to himself."—Luke 15:17.

The prodigal son came to himself and he remembered. He remembered the good things of his early life. He remembered his innocency and happiness in his father's house. He remembered everything good about it all, all of which he had forsaken, and he resolves to go back home and find the happiness which he had sought all the while and which he had not found since he left home.

He who comes to see himself as he is, comes to see his own sins and acknowledges them. He comes to see his own unworthiness and repents. He humbles himself and turns to God. He confesses his faults and offers a bodily sacrifice for service. Then his happiness begins again. Without these two things there is no conversion and there is no enduring happiness.

Yet this is not the principal lesson which the Lord teaches in this parable. The principal lesson is that God receives the penitent sinner with open heart and arms, pardons him, re-establishes him in his house, clothes him with righteousness, makes him feel that he is a child of God, and then the angels of heaven rejoice. This is raising the dead to life. This is the happiness eternal.

Prayer.—Heavenly Father, most merciful God, draw to Thee them that are afar off and keep them with Thee forever. Amen.

THURSDAY.

PARABLE CORRECTS PRIDE.

Lesson: Luke 15:25-32.

We are still with the parable of the prodigal son. It will be remembered that this parable was addressed to the Pharisees, who had found fault of Jesus because He had received sinners; and the reply of Jesus is intended to correct their pride and self-righteousness, for they were His children as well as the disciples were. But these Pharisees were folks who were walking in the dark. They could not understand how Jesus loved sinners.

There are still some Pharisees in the world. They are those who admit that they are sinners, to be sure, but they add that they are not doing anybody any harm; that they pay their honest debts and try to live peaceably with all men. They lean back and, with an air of gusto, assert that they are not so bad; certainly not so bad as other men are.

The sad thing about this is that none of them will admit that he is the fellow whom Jesus is talking about in the text. How slow we are to know ourselves! How far from God some experienced Christians are found to be, without being aware of it! Yet, how true it is that God is so close to all at all times. His bountiful table is spread before our eyes, and we have full permission to eat of it and be happy.

Prayer.—Merciful God, forbid that our eyes shall be beholden, so that we shall not see Thee and all that Thou hast for us. Enlighten us by Thy Spirit, that we may know ourselves, our sins, and the joys of Thy bounties. Save us to Thee every day, and give us hearts to rejoice with sinners who are or who may be saved. Amen.

FRIDAY.

SURROUNDED WITH MERCY.

"As the heavens are high above the earth, so great is His mercy toward them that fear Him."—Psa. 103:8-14.

The Lord wishes to force upon us the truth that He is the God of tender mercies. It is His will that this truth shall fill our souls in order that our sins may be covered and our lamentations may be turned into praise, and our sighs into songs.

For example, when Moses went up to Sinai the second time, which was after the sins of the people in turning away from God to idols, God declared Himself "merciful and gracious, longsuffering and abundant in goodness and truth . . . forgiving iniquity, transgressions and sins." It is in the light of this blessing from our God that sins shrink away into nothingness.

Prayer.—Dear Lord, Thou friend of all who come to Thee, draw us all unto Thee. Fill Thou our souls with holy joy. Make us glad on account of Thy love and mercy, and draw us therein all the way of life. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HOW FAR IS IT FROM EAST TO WEST?

"As far as the East is from the West, so far hath He removed our transgressions from us."—Psa. 103:12.

It is as far as it is from earth to heaven. It is as far as it is from infinity to infinity. And the distance is the same from the highest mountain-top as it is from the deepest valley. Though one's sins may be as big as a mountain, the grace of God takes them all away as easily as it takes the smallest sin from the holiest saint. In Jesus and His mercy, the power of men, angels or devils amounts to nothing. And if the text means anything, it is that within this power He removes our sins so far from us that they can never more harm us. The only condition laid down for this blessing is that we "cast our burdens upon Him, for He cares for you."

Prayer.—Lord God, our Heavenly Father, how shall we thank Thee for Thy love and mercy? Teach us to believe in Thee, to love Thee, and to live for and praise Thee forever. Amen.

SUNDAY.

MERCY EXTENDED.

"Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep."—Luke 6:36-42.

As God is merciful to us, so are we to be toward others. He tells us that there are four ways of doing this.

1. Judge not. But be kind to one another in every thought, word and deed. As He is lenient toward us, we are to interpret everything as leniently as possible. We are to put the most charitable construction upon the actions of others. Jesus rarely judged any one. He was Saviour, and He worked to save. There is no more striking example of this than His liberal attitude toward the woman who was brought to Him charged with adultery. This liberality is His will for us. Be clear-eyed to see the good and the beautiful where others do not, and to lead the erring ones in the right way where others would not.

2. Condemn not. If everything which bewails the number and the misery of the wicked were but genuine mercy, things would be greatly different among us.

5. Forgive. If we harbor hate and revenge in our souls, we are no longer in the kingdom. With revenge in our hearts, we cannot find our way to Him. If we forgive, then we are imitating Him, and His love and mercy prevails.

4. Give. "Give and it shall be given unto you, etc."

Do these things, then shall each passing day bring to us a clearer understanding of our Lord's way, and we shall make progress in grace and gather strength and knowledge of the Lord.

Prayer.—Heavenly Father, give us, we heartily beseech Thee, a clear-eye soul and a merciful heart. Let it be seen in every act that we are Thy children. Amen.

THE GENTLENESS OF GOD.

By Rev. C. J. Harrell.

"Thy gentleness hath made me great."—Psa. 18:35.

Gentleness is a charming grace. One who possesses it in manner is called a "gentleman" or a "gentlewoman." Gentleness is also a most effectual grace. It is able to lead and lift where sterner virtues utterly fail. The writer remembers to have seen a father playing ball with his young son. He delivered the ball gently, so that the little lad could hold it, and by so doing he was gently leading him into the art of the game. A great teacher puts herself on the level of her pupil's understanding, and gently, step by step, leads him into the broader ways of knowledge. She stoops to conquer. All of this is the soul of gentleness—graciously to put one's self in another's place and to deal with him understandingly, sympathetically. The most far-reaching influences in our lives are the gentle ministries of those who have so dealt with us.

We are helped to greatness by the great, who stoop to lift us. Gentleness is the most potential of all means for inspiring man. Overbearing authority crushes the spirit. Coercion makes slaves. But gentleness worketh otherwise. It gives to goodness a wholesome winsomeness; it breaks down prejudices, overcomes opposition, and finds a door to the heart. It inspires self-confidence and gives birth to new aspirations.

The gentleness of God is not mentioned among the divine attributes commonly listed in our books on theology. The psalmist was deeply conscious of it. It was not a theory with him; it was an experience. "Thy gentleness hath made me great," he sang with manifest feeling. The word "gentleness," as it is here used, carries with it the idea of condescension. God does not hold Himself aloof. The most compelling fact of the gospel is how he, through His Son, has identified Himself with mankind; "who, existing in the form of God, counted not the being on an equality with God a thing to be grasped, but emptied Himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of man." As the considerate father delivered the ball gently, according to his little son's ability, so, "God suits to human strength His mercy sweet."

"As a father has compassion on his children, Jehovah has compassion on them that fear Him." "He will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able to bear" (1 Cor. 10:13). He does not coerce, but gently stoops to lead the trusting heart one step at a time. In the hardest places, His patience encourages the soul to "press with vigor on." In the darkest places we feel the gentle touch of His hand. The terrors of night are dispelled, as when the sympathetic touch of our mother's hand relieved our childish fears. Thy gentleness, O Lord, hath enlarged our souls! Thy gentleness hath made us great!

THE GREAT "EXCEPT."

Of all commentaries on the Word of God, human experience is often the best. Take, for instance, the words of the Master to Nicodemus: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Every day we see the truth of this statement. Only those who have been spiritually renewed appreciate spiritual things and overcome temptation. There is a world of meaning in the word "except" as Jesus used it here. Nothing but the second birth, regeneration, conversion—call it what you may—can give the habitual sinner victory over sin. We have seen men fall into all sorts of trouble and painful affliction on account of sinful habits, and we have said, "That will be a lesson to them; now they will reform." But in almost every case, as soon as they were temporarily relieved of their suffering they continued in their wayward course. Habitual drunkards, filled with remorse because their evil conduct has brought death to members of their own households, in the hour of grief have sworn to renounce their evil ways; but their well-meant resolutions were soon forgotten and they returned to the old life of sin. Neither sorrow, nor suffering, nor the loss of property, nor the death of loved ones was sufficient to bring deliverance from the besetting sin. Nothing will bring deliverance in such cases except the great "except"—"Except a man be born again."

In the old days of dissipation, Samuel H. Hadley tells us that for fifteen years he rarely went to bed sober. One night, while in a saloon, he was filled with disgust and remorse because of the life he was living—for he came from a good family—and determined to break away from the sinful past, and—but let him tell it: "I have always believed I got a view of eternity right there in that gin-mill. I believe I saw what every poor st sinner will see when he stands unrepentant and unforgiven at the bar of God. It filled me with an unspeakable terror. I supposed I was dying and this was a premonition. I believe others in the saloon thought that I was dying, but I cared very little then what people thought of me. I got down from the whiskey barrel with but one desire, and that was to fly from the place.

"A saloon is an awful place to die in if one has had a praying mother. I walked up to the bar and pounded it with my fist until I made the glasses rattle. Those near by who were drinking looked on with scornful curiosity. I said: 'Boys, listen to me. I am dying, but I will die in the street before I will ever take another drink'—and I felt as though this would happen before morning. A voice said to me: 'If you want to keep that promise, go and have yourself locked up.' There was no place on earth I dreaded more than a police station, for I was living in daily dread of arrest; but I went to the police station in East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street, near Lexington Avenue, and asked the captain to lock me up.

" 'Why do you want to be locked up?' asked he, as I gave him an assumed name. 'Because,' said I, 'I want to be placed somewhere so I can die before I can get another drink of whiskey.' They locked me up in a narrow cell, No. 10, in the back corridor. That has become a famous cell to me since. For twenty years I have visited that same cell on the anniversary of that awful night of darkness, and have had sweet communion there with Jesus.

"It seemed that all the demons that could find room came in that place with me that night. They were not all the company I had, either. No, praise the Lord, the dear Saviour who came to me in the saloon was present, and said, 'Pray.' I did fall on my knees on that stone floor, and said, 'God be merciful to me, a sinner.' "

He was released from prison, went to the Jerry McAuley mission, made a full surrender to Christ and was thoroughly converted. His work at the Water Street Mission is well known. Hundreds of outcasts, such as he had been, were saved through his ministry. It is said that when Hadley was dying, he was seen struggling to say something. When some one bent over him to hear the faint whisper they heard him say, "Oh, who will care for my poor bums now?" No wonder Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman said Hadley was one of the most Christ-like men he ever knew.

But to return to the great "except." Here was a man who had tried to break away from a sinful habit, but with utter failure. So weak did he appear in the presence of temptation that he asked to be locked up in a cell, as the only means of being saved from yielding. But in that cell he tells us he met his Deliverer. He comes out a changed man. Ten thousand saloons have no temptation for him now. So complete is his deliverance from evil habit that he goes out as a rescuer of others. So grateful is he for his wonderful deliverance from sin that he goes back to the cell annually to spend an hour of praise and thanksgiving for his conversion. What else but the gospel of Christ can save such men? If space would allow, we could cite hundreds and thousands of similar cases. "Humanism" was an almost unknown word a few years ago, but men have tried all that humanism stands for, but when it came to deliverance from evil habit it availed them nothing.—H. H. Smith.

Christian Orphanage

Dear Friends:

We had a real picnic last Saturday. The cotton field was white, and looked so clean and inviting that our little folks just begged for the opportunity to get in it. We carried sixty boys and little girls to the field and we went with them and stayed with them all the afternoon. The field was some distance from the town and too far away to disturb any one and we gave them permission to sing if they wanted to; hollo if they chose, and make all the noise they wanted to make, with the understanding they were to pick cotton all the time. Not many of the children had ever picked cotton before, but they picked cotton from 1 to 4:30 o'clock. They sang, they holloed, some picked fast, some slow, some better than others, but all picked, from the little three-and a-half-year-old baby to the largest boy; but it was a cotton-picking picnic—who ever heard of one before! The superintendent of the Orphanage was the general instructor and had not picked any cotton in thirty-five years. But we find you pick it now just like it was picked thirty-five years ago. Not much improvement on the method of picking. It was really gratifying to see how the little fellows stuck to it all the afternoon. It was more interesting than a football game to us. We had a grand picnic picking cotton, and when the sun was sinking in the West and the evening shades wagon and truck come for us and we all piled on and rejoiced that a good afternoon, clear and cool, had been spent so happily together. Two things made it more joyful for the children. One was to get the ride on the long wagon to and from the field, and another was the picture show at the college, and all who picked cotton had a ticket to attend.

When we weighed up the cotton, the little baby girl had picked three pound, and our best boy picker had picked sixty-five pounds. All of us picked 935 pounds in the one afternoon. Don't you think that pretty good for a class of cotton pickers taking their first lesson under a teacher who had not picked any cotton in thirty-five years? And these were our small children; the large boys and girls had other work to do.

Don't forget that Thanksgiving is drawing near. We must raise ten thousand dollars. Make up your mind that you want to do your part, and that you want your Church and Sunday School to do its part this year.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

OBITUARIES.

BRILL.

Mr. Howard Brill was born July 6, 1868; died August 25, 1930. He had been a member of Timber Ridge Church for many years, leaving a cherished testimony of his faith in his Saviour. Surviving are the widow, two brothers, Elias and Aljourn Brill; a sister, Mrs. Lydia Spaid; a son, Leyburn R. Brill; a daughters, Mrs. Lacie V. Seldon.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. A. W. Andes, the funeral service was conducted by the writer, from Timber Ridge Church, on August 26th, in the presence of a large congregation of sympathetic friends. May the Lord's blessings be with the bereaved.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

PIERSON.

On September 14th, Mrs. Sarah Pierson was called home, at the age of 52 years, 7 months and 8 days. For years she had been a great sufferer, and we feel that death came as a sweet relief. She had for a number of years been a member of Winchester Christian Church, and though since the writer has been pastor of the Church she was unable to attend, she still expressed her interest in the Church and her faith in her Saviour.

Funeral services were conducted from the home, and were attended by many sympathizing friends. She is survived by two sisters, five brothers and one daughter, Mrs. T. R. Pierce, with whom she lived. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

WALTERS.

George W. Walters departed this life on the 4th day of August of the present year, his death being due to fatal injury received by accident on his train the day before. He was born and reared in the Burlington community, being a member of a well-known and highly esteemed family of this section. A quiet, unassuming man, a good citizen, a devoted son, and a faithful brother. As a boy, he professed faith in Christ and united with the Burlington Church and remained a faithful member throughout his life. He supported the Church with his presence and his means.

The funeral was held from the home of his brother, Dr. C. M. Walters, a leading physician of Alamance County and of the city of Burlington, his pastor, the writer, being in charge. His place among his fellow-railroad-men was attested by the large number who were present for his funeral. The Lord bless and comfort his loved ones, especially his aged mother, to whom he was so devoted, and may we live to meet him in heaven.

G. O. LANKFORD.

TURRENTINE.

Captain William Holt Turrentine was born in Alamance County, N. C., September 14, 1840, and passed quietly to the other life September 8, 1930. Had he lived six days longer, he would have been ninety years old. It was on February 2nd of this year, or just a little more than seven months before his death, that he lost his faithful and devoted companion of more than sixty-two years. Since that time, he had been very lonely, but bore his sorrow bravely.

He was a member of one of the most prominent families of this section of his native State, and numbered his friends among a wide circle of those who have had much to do in shaping the affairs of the county and the State. A man of strong mind, practical insight, keen perception and tenacious purpose, he made himself felt in whatever circle in which he moved. It was in the early years of his life that he became a Christian and united with Providence Christian Church, Graham, N. C. When the Burlington Christian Church was organized, he became a charter member. He was senior deacon and chairman of the board of deacons for many years. He was faithful to the Church, a pillar of strength, and a great power for good. In his going, a landmark in the Church and community is removed.

The funeral was held in the Church of which he was a member by his pastor, the writer, assisted by Dr. S. B. Turrentine, of Greensboro, N. C.; Dr. P. H. Fleming, a former pastor, and Dr. W. R. Potter, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Burlington. Interment in Pine Hill Cemetery. As he rests in peace, his works follow him. We shall look forward to fellowship with him again in the land where no shadows fall and sorrow is unknown.

G. O. LANKFORD.

ELON COLLEGE

AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE

of the

CONGRETATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CHURCHES IN THE SOUTHEAST

ELON was founded to train Christian leaders for the New South.

ELON has done its task well—one graduate in seven being in the Christian ministry. The other six express Christian leadership in the various professions and vocations. Experience teaches that spiritual leadership must be indigenous.

The South is now a New South ready for an inclusive Church, the type of Church for which Elon has stood for forty years and for which she is prepared to produce capable leadership.

With no Church in the community, save the College Auditorium, ELON has practiced Christian Union for faculty, students, and community for four decades.

Its contribution to Christian Education is nationally known and approved.

Its Christian Education Building, providing laboratory facilities for religious leadership training, is unique and is the first college building of its type in the world.

ELON confines itself to undergraduate liberal arts work with that religious emphasis which befits the Christian College.

In ELON the Congregational-Christian Church has an asset of marvelous hopefulness.

The South needs her Yale, her Oberlin, her Carleton, her Pomona for the intellectual leadership of the United Church. Many regard ELON as strategically located and spiritually endowed to become such a center of illumination and leadership training.

BAILEY.

On Saturday, August 2, 1930, at his home in Smithfield, Va., the silver cord which bound the immortal spirit was broken and Robert L. Bailey passed from this life to dwell in the "building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." He was 76 years, 10 months, and 28 days of age. Until his affliction, about three years ago, he was a constant, a faithful and beloved member of Mt. Carmel Christian Church for more than forty years. In his last days he suffered quite a great deal. He was confined to his rolling-chair and bed a greater part of the time. He often expressed the desire to pass out of this life to a better one beyond.

He leaves to mourn their loss a devoted widow, who before her marriage was Miss Sarah E. Ballard, of Isle of Wight County; two daughters, Mrs. J. E. Mitchell, of Kinston, N. C., and Mrs. C. M. Beale, of Smithfield, Va.; one son, R. L. Bailey, Jr., Suffolk, Va., and four grandchildren, many relatives, and a host of friends. His funeral was conducted at his home Church, Mt. Carmel, on August 4, 1930, and services were conducted by his pastor, Dr. W. D. Harward. His body was gently laid to rest in the Church cemetery beneath banks of beautiful flowers.

A FRIEND.

PERRY.

Died at his home in Union Christian Church community, Alamance County, N. C., Mr. Joe E. Perry, September 24, 1930, in his fifty-ninth year. His death was sudden and a great shock to his family and the community. He retired on the night of September 23rd in his usual health, and next morning was found dead in bed. Apparently there was no struggle; just a falling asleep in death. He leaves a wife and two children, a number of relatives, and many friends who mourn his death and deeply sympathize with his loved ones.

Bro. Perry confessed Christ about five years ago and united with Union Christian Church. He was modest and unassuming, a good neighbor and citizen. His family, Church and community will miss him. Funeral services were conducted from the Church, by the writer, in the presence of a large audience, and his body was laid to rest in the Church cemetery, where it awaits the resurrection call.

RICHARD H. EDMONDS.—

In the passing of Richard H. Edmonds on October 4th, the South lost a great son and a great benefactor. Founder of the Manufacturers' Record, and for 45 years its editor, his life was given in a successful effort to help develop his beloved Southland. He has gone, but his work will live.

CARE FOR LEPERS.—

"In spite of the economic depression, which a prominent Filipino recently said is more severe than anything experienced here since the American occupation, the anti-leprosy campaign has collected more than $15,000 for the rehabilitation of the cured lepers. Rev. Paul D. Eddy, pastor of the Central Student Church (Methodist), who has had charge of the drive, is unfortunately being compelled to return to America soon for reasons of health." Such eleemosynary will do more to emphasize the spirit of Christianity and convert the Filipinos to Christ than abstract preaching without the application of Christianity to human needs. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

SANTO DOMINGO MISSION.—

The Christian Century reports that S. G. Inman, secretary of the Board for Christian Work in Santo Domingo, passes on a message received from the superintendent of Santo Domingo mission: "The number of wounded is almost unimaginable—well over 15,000, I think. Many are dying of gangrene. We will never know how many dead there are. We are feeding an average of 600 babies daily in the old hospital." Checks for the aid of this critical relief work may be sent to Dwight H. Day, Room 1701, 419 Fourth Avenue, New York City. This is an alarming situation, and affords an opportunity for Christian charity to those who wish to help in a needy cause.

TWO PRINCES TO PRINCETON.—

Dr. Andrew W. Blackwood, for several years professor of English Bible at the Presbyterian Seminary, Louisville, Ky., was installed this autumn as professor of homiletics at Princeton Seminary. He is the second new professor installed since the reorganization of the institution. Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer became professor of missions October 1st, this year. With these two great men in their respective departments, students for the ministry will be fortunate to have their instruction. One of the most illuminating addresses I ever heard was delivered by Dr. Zwemer at the World's Sunday School Convention, in 1913, at Zurich, Switzerland, on "Missions Among the Mohammedans."

FORUM ON SCIENCE.—

The subject for weekly discussion at the Sunday noon forum of Evanston, Ill., will be the question, "Do American Men of Science Believe in God?" The discussions will be in charge of Prof. Edward L. Schaub, head of the department of philosophy at Northwestern University. The forum had its first session September 28th at First Congregational Church, Evanston, with a discussion of the distinction between the God of religion and the god of metaphisics. The trend of theology is toward the study of religion as an empirical science which will tend to discover that the God of religion and the god of science are identical, and it is hoped that this forum will be able to find that identity.

SALVATION ARMY.—

The Salvation Army in Chicago is endeavoring to raise $379,491 as their annual budget. When we remember how the army was once sneered at by some, pelted with stones by others, and given a few pennies as a tipsy generosity by others, it seems like a miracle to read of a banquet held in the Hotel Sherman—attended by 800 persons, among whom were many of the "400—in which the drive for the 1930-'31 budget was got under way. The budget includes $88,000 for Chicago central relief department, medical clinic, free employment, and anti-suicide bureau; $47,000 for evangelistic programs; $36,000 for women's home and hospital; $63,000 for young women's home for working girls, and so on. "Pure and undefiled religion before God and the Father is this."
